MIAMI (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Deltona Corporation (NYSE: DLT) today

announced that its lenders have agreed to extend the temporary waiver of May 8, 1990, and to waive, through June 30, 1990, compliance with certain provisions of the company's $42.5 million loan agreement. The temporary waiver includes a deferral of interest for the two month period of approximataely $800,000.

Though the immediate severity of Deltona's previously reported liquidity crisis has been reduced by the temporary waiver, as well as by overhead reductions implemented by the company and the receipt by Deltona of a $350,000 loan from Empire of Carolina, Inc., it is important that the company successfully negotiate more liberal terms in its loan agreement in order to stabilize its liquidity situation.

If the company is successful in such negotiations, Empire, which holds 35.52 percent of Deltona's common stock, has conditionally agreed, subject to Empire's sole discretion, Deltona achieving appropriate overhead reductions sufficient to eliminate its operating cash shortfall and Empire receiving the full cooperation of Deltona's management, to loan Deltona up to an additional $4.65 million over the next 19 months. Empire has not yet determined whether or not the conditions of the commitment can be met or whether or when any additional funds might be advanced to Deltona by Empire.

HARTFORD, CT (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company announced today that it will automatically provide a "living benefits" rider on most permanent in-force life insurance policies.

The rider, once approved by the individual states, will be made available on nearly one million policies when proposed federal tax legislation passes making the benefit tax-free. The federal legislation is expected to pass in the fall of this year.

The feature provides life insurance payments to terminally ill policyholders. This payment can be used to defray the high costs associated with medical care and other related non-medical expenses. However, the company will not restrict the use of the payment. The rider is designed to meet the needs of Connecticut Mutual policyholders. The company also plans to make it available on new business in every state in which it has been approved.

"Connecticut Mutual believes that the federal tax legislation is a critical factor in making the rider automatically available," said Executive Vice President Donald H. Pond, CLU.

"The amount of a policy that could be lost to federal taxes would significantly lessen the benefit of the rider. The legislation also removes any unfavorable tax consequences in force policies could incur upon addition of this rider.

"This legislation would not have been possible," Pond emphasized, "had Senator Joseph Lieberman (D-Conn.) and Representative Barbara Kennelly (D-Conn.) not responded so positively to our request for legislative assistance in regard to the tax issue.

"Research has shown that the majority of Americans want to be able to access their life insurance death benefits for such emergencies," continued Pond. "We feel that this type of policy feature can provide better quality care for the terminally ill. We are all aware of the high cost of caring for the terminally ill, and this product enhancement can help ease the burden of those costs. This rider also adds value to the purchase of this type of life insurance."

The company is also implementing a communications effort to its over 4,000 general agents, career agents, career agents and brokers. This will include a complete information package explaining the features of the rider in detail. The information will allow each agent the opportunity to promptly and accurately answer policyholder questions on this issue.

MIAMI (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - John M. Lindsey has been named senior vice president for corporate affairs of Pan American World Airways and will be relocated from the airline's New York office to Miami, Thomas G. Plaskett, Pan Am's chairman, president and chief executive officer, announced today.

Lindsey was previously senior vice president for legal and corporate affairs of Pan Am Corporation and its principal subsidiary, Pan American World Airways.

In his new position, Lindsey will coordinate government and community liaison activities in the state of Florida, reporting directly to chairman Plaskett.

"Lindsey's appointment continues Pan Am's substantial expansion efforts into Miami and Florida," Plaskett said. "Assigning a senior level corporate officer to Miami is indicative of our commitment to Florida and reflects our serious intentions to maintain and grow our presence there."

Prior to joining Pan Am five years ago, Lindsey was senior vice president-administration and legal for Southeast Bank, Miami. He joined Southeast in early 1980 after a 17-year career with Miami-based National Airlines, where he was General Counsel and Secretary.

Before joining National, Lindsey was an attorney with the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) in Washington, D.C.

Lindsey, 60, earned a bachelor's degree from Duke University and his law degree from the University of Denver. He and his wife Doris currently are residents of New York City, but will relocate to the Miami area.

Beginning September 1989, Pan Am initiated an agressive expansion effort in Miami. Pan Am departures out of Miami International Airport (MIA) now total 66, the most of any air carrier operating there. Pan Am also has initiated approxiamtely $10 million in new construction and equipment at MIA.

On May 15, Pan Am Express began operations in Florida with 25 flights daily between Miami and Key West, Fort Myers, Sarasota/Bradenton, Melbourne and West Palm Beach. The new service connects with Pan Am's Miami departures, providing direct service to 30 destinations in Europe, South America and the Caribbean, and 15 destinations in the United States.

"Pan Am plans to continue significant expansion into Miami and Florida over the next five years," Plaskett said. "Through Miami, we can best take advantage of the traffic flow to our Caribbean and Latin American system."

Pan Am currently employs approximately 6,900 people in Miami.

NESS-ZIONA, ISRAEL (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - InterPharm Laboratories Limited (NASDAQ: IPLLF) today reported net sales of $4.7 million for the first quarter of 1990, a 30 percent increase over the comparable quarter for 1989. However, the financial results of the quarter showed a net loss of $0.4 million compared with net income of $0.1 million in the corresponding quarter of 1989, resulting from higher cost of sales for beta native interferon and increased research and development expenses.

Sales of beta native interferon amounted to $2.7 million, slightly below the $3.0 million level reported during the first quarter of last year, whereas sales of human growth hormone (hGH) increased from $0.3 million in the first quarter of 1989 to $1.6 million this quarter. However, in view of the penetration of recombinant hGH in the market, a decrease in sales of natural human growth hormone has to be forseen for the future.

Gross research and development expenditures rose significantly. During the past three months, the company invested $1.2 million in R&D, compared with $0.9 million in the corresponding quarter of 1989. "During the first three months of this year, we added several scientists to our R&D staff and purchased $0.8 million worth of new equipment," said Dr. Yoram Karmon, president and chief executive officer. "Construction of our pilot plant for the production of recombinant cytokines requires this kind of investment, and we are committed to devote the financial resources to keep pace with our scientific progress," said Dr. Karmon.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - In a ceremony today at the Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Company Ltd. (IHI) shipyard in Kure, Japan, Rosemary Young christened Chevron Corporation's newest tanker, the John Young, named for her husband, who is a director of Chevron Corporation.

The new ship, which brings the Chevron fleet to 41 tankers, will trade primarily between Indonesia and the U.S. West Coast. It is equipped with heating coils to handle very waxy crude oil from Indonesia. The John Young has a deadweight of 149,995 long tons and will carry approximately 1,160,000 barrels of crude oil on each voyage to California.

It is the first of four identical tankers to be built for Chevron by IHI and its Brazilian affiliate, Ishibras, over the next two years. These new vessels will replace older tankers of approximately comparable capacities that have been or will be retired from the Chevron fleet.

With a 21,000-horsepower direct-drive diesel power plant, the new tanker is considered to be an extremely efficient fuel user. In addition, the ship is equipped with state-of-the-art navigation and communication equipment and meets U.S. Coast Guard lifesaving and firefighting requirements.

John Young, a resident of Portola Valley, Calif., joined Chevron's board of directors in 1985. He is president, director, and chief executive officer of Hewlett-Packard Company, which manufactures electronic equipment. Young is also a director of Wells Fargo Bank and Wells Fargo Company and a member of the Business Council and the Business Roundtable.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Stephen A. Van Dyck, chairman of Maritrans GP Inc., the managing general partner of Maritrans Partners L.P. (NYSE: TUG), and Heyward H. Coleman, executive vice president-sales/marketing of Maritrans GP Inc., announced jointly today that Coleman was leaving the marine transportation company effective June 30, 1990, to pursue other interests. Coleman is currently assigned to the Tampa office and will attempt to complete the projects he is working on before his departure.

Van Dyck stated that Coleman, who served as executive vice president-sales/marketing of Maritrans since it began operation in April 1987, was a "valued member of Maritrans' management team.

"Heyward Coleman introduced the corporate planning function here at Maritrans' predecessor entity in 1981 and was instrumental in accomplishing the 1987 spinoff of Maritrans from Sonat Inc., its former parent corporation." Coleman remarked that he "wished his associates and friends at Maritrans continued success in the future."

Prior to accepting his position at Maritrans, Coleman served as vice president-finance & administration and vice president of planning for Sonat Marine. Prior to that time, Coleman served in various executive capacities with Sonat Inc. No replacement for Coleman was announced; however, Van Dyck pointed out that Maritrans has an experienced sales/marketing team in place.

Maritrans Partners L.P. is a master limited partnership formed in 1987 to purchase and operate, through Maritrans Operating Partners L.P., a fleet of tugboats and oceangoing tank barges along the U.S. Gulf and Atlantic coasts.

Maritrans is the largest independent U.S. flag transporter of petroleum products in the U.S. coastal trade. Maritrans Partners L.P. limited partnership units are listed on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol "TUG."

MANCHESTER, NH (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Public Service of New Hampshire (PSNH) today informed the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) of significant losses during the past two years in one of PSNH's three pension plan investment portfolios. The portfolio and its investments were terminated in May 1990.

Despite the losses, the pension plan's assets remain more than sufficient to fund all of the vested obligations to current employees and retirees. SEC notification was made today in PSNH's 8-K report.

The losses in the portfolio total about $24 million. They have been mostly offset by gains in PSNH's other pension portfolios. PSNH's overall pension plan has assets of about $100 million.

"We want to assure employees that their pension plan is sufficiently funded today to more than cover the accumulated benefits they are due," said James Nevins, PSNH vice president. "They should have absolutely no question about the integrity of thier pension plan."

Nevins noted, however, that PSNH will have to pay more into the fund in future years to keep up the asset level. If no recoveries are made, PSNH's anual pension expense is estimated to increase by $1 million annually. The additional expense is not expected to have any impact on customer bills.

All of the investments that resulted in the losses preceeded April 30, 1990, the date Northeast Utilities began overseeing PSNH's day-to-day operations under a management services agreement.

Nevins said that PSNH has initiated a review of the investments that resulted in the losses and is evaluating whether any of the losses are insured and whether any additional remedies are available to recover the losses. PSNH is also reviewing the plan's procedures and controls.

FAIRFAX, VA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - British Telecom is providing a satellite link today for the two-way video finale of an ambitious six-month project between a Fairfax, Va. County elementary school and the pupils of a similar school in Wales.

As a result of the project, children from Timberlane School in Virginia will come face-to-face with their opposite numbers in Wales via a TV link to the Cardiff television studios of HTV, the main network station in Wales.

Additionally, the transmission is accessible live, to any other school in America. The hour-long program - which will feature presentations by the school children in both locations about their respective communities - will also include a brief, specially recorded message from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The unique exchange involves 150 pupils from Gendros Primary School in Swansea, Wales and pupils of the Timberlane School in Fairfax. In preparation, video tapes, photographs, and written material tracing the history of Wales and Virginia were exchanged.

At the same time, different classes in the schools prepared materials on various aspects of their local communities, e.g., people and places, local government, castles, language, and the work of the police.

Since the beginning of the project, a great many groups and individuals have become enthusiastic supporters. At the U.K. end, these include the Community Service Station of South Wales police in Swansea and M.P. Alan Williams, who has taken a party of the Gendros children on a guided tour of the Houses of Parliament.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corporation and Alex. Brown & Sons Incorporated, as co- managers of the underwriting group, announced today the initial public offering of 2,200,000 shares of common stock of Digital Systems International, Inc. (NASDAQ: DGTL), at a price of $18.00 per share. Of the 2,200,000 shares being offered, 1,410,000 shares are being sold by the company and 790,000 shares are being sold by certain selling shareholders. In addition, certain of the selling shareholders have granted to the underwriters an option to purchase up to an additional 330,000 shares of common stock solely to cover over-allotments, if any.

Digital Systems designs, manufactures, markets and supports outbound call processing systems. The company is a leading provider of these systems and related services that enhance the productivity, efficiency and revenue generating capabilities of organizations which make high volumes of outbound telephone calls to large populations of customers and prospects. Digital Systems' sophisticated Voicelink computer systems substantially automate and synchronize in real time the many functions required of an outbound calling program. Voicelink systems screen and sort databases to select and order calls based on calling program objectives, place calls, filter unproductive responses such as busy signals, no answers, operator intercepts and answering machines, and route calls to operators only if a person has answered the call. Since 1986, Digital Systems has shipped over 200 Voicelink Systems and provided systems and services to more than 110 customers.

A registration statement relating to the securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and has become effective. The offering of the company's common stock is made only by means of the prospectus. KNOXVILLE, TN (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Knoxville News- Sentinel, owned by The E.W. Scripps Company, and The Knoxville Journal, owned by Persis Corporation, announced today that they had reached an agreement in principle to terminate their joint operating agreement (JOA) by the end of December 1991. The parties expect to sign a definitive agreement by June 21, 1990, following notice to the Department of Justice.

Under the JOA, The News-Sentinel, a seven-day morning publication, provides sales, production and distribution for The Journal, published Monday through Friday in the afternoon and on Saturday mornings. After the agreement ends, The Journal intends to publish separately and in competition with The News-Sentinel.

The agreement will also terminate litigation between the parties brought by The News-Sentinel after Persis purchased The Daily Times in Maryville, Tenn., an area near Knoxville. Under the termination agreement Persis remains free to operate The Daily Times.

As part of the termination arrangement, The News-Sentinel will pay Persis $40 million in two $20 million installments in lieu of payments The Journal would have received under the joint operating agreement from Dec.

31, 1991 through Dec. 31, 2005. The News-Sentinel's agreement to pay Persis $40 million will result in a charge to The E.W. Scripps Company's second-quarter 1990 net income of approximately $23 million, or 30 cents per share.

Both owners described the termination as an amicable parting and stated that they believe the agreement is in the best interests of the newspapers and the community.

Lawrence A. Leser, president and CEO of The E.W. Scripps Company, said, "This one-time payment is less than the expected amount The News- Sentinel would have paid in distributions to The Journal had joint operations continued through 2005." He added, "We look foward to hardy economic competition in addition to the fierce editorial competition that has existed between the two newspapers for many years."

Thurston Twigg-Smith, president and CEO of Persis Corporation, said, "We are pleased with the agreement. Once we concluded that it was unlikely that the JOA would be extended beyond 2005, we wanted to begin separate publication at a time when The Journal was a strong and vital part of the Knoxville community. We look forward to the challenges ahead of us as we continue to serve our readers and advertisers."

Until termination in late 1991, The News-Sentinel will continue to act as agent on certain business matters for The Journal under special interim operating guidelines which are designed to provide The Journal "reasonable prospects for ongoing economic viability" after the JOA terminates.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Advanced Medical Technologies Inc. (AMEX: AMA) today announced a net loss of $2,479,000 for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990. This compares to a loss of $2,208,000 for the first quarter of 1989.

On a quarter to quarter basis, the loss per share was 31 cents for the first quarter 1990 compared to 75 cents in the like quarter in 1989. The weighted number of common shares outstanding increased from 2,972,000 in the first quarter 1989 to 10,497,000 in the first quarter 1990.

"The loss was in line with expectations and was primarily due to our continuing aggressive acquisition strategy," according to Richard D. Propper, Advanced Medical's chief executive officer. "With the recent acquisition of IMED now behind us, we anticipate being profitable in the second half of the year.

"In addition, not included in the quarterly results, were claim settlements in favor of our Fidata subsidiary in connection with its action against Lion Capital that netted us $3.8 million."

OAKLAND, CA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Alfred D. Bolden, 50, vice president and manager of human resources and external affairs for Kaiser Permanente's Southern California region has been promoted to vice president, human resources programs for Kaiser Foundation Health Plan Inc. and Kaiser Foundation Hospitals at the health care program's central offices in Oakland.

In his new role, Bolden will be responsible for the coordination and direction of programwide activities involving compensation, labor relations, employee benefits, personnel administration, and human resources systems, according to Jim Vohs, chairman and president of health plan and hospitals. In its 12 administrative regions, Kaiser Permanente currently has 66,000 administrative, technical, and clerical employees.

Bolden joined the program in 1972 working in personnel management and salary administration at its Oakland headquarters. Two years later he became employee relations manager of the Northwest region where he administered the region's human resources activities as well as its labor relations. In 1978, Bolden transferred to the Southern California region. In 1981, he was promoted to manager of human resources and external affairs, a position which gave him responsibility for the region's personnel activities, as well as all its external affairs services, including public relations and government affairs. In 1984, Bolden was named a vice president.

Bolden is a graduate of California State University at San Francisco. In 1982, he completed an executive management program at Stanford University.

Kaiser Permanente is the nation's largest group practice prepayment health maintenance organization (HMO), serving 6.4 million members in 16 states and the District of Columbia. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan and Hospitals are nonprofit organizations responsible for the business administration of the health care program. Medical services in the program are provided by the Permanente Medical Groups, professional corporations which include 7,700 physicians of all specialties who devote all their professional time to serving Kaiser Permanente members.

MURRAY HILL, NJ (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The David J. Craig Conference Center, the new wing of the BOC Group's technical center, opened today in the company's research facility here in Murray Hill. The BOC Group's chairman and chief executive officer, Richard V. Giordano, officially dedicated the center at a ceremony honoring David Craig, the BOC Group's managing director-engineering and technology, who retires in September after a 36-year career with Airco and the BOC Group.

Craig, 65, has responsibility for the Group Technical Center (GTC) in Murray Hill, which employs more than 300 scientists, engineers and technicians engaged in gases and health care research. The GTC serves the research needs of the BOC Group worldwide.

Craig joined Airco, Inc. in 1956 as a research supervisor. He held various management positions in the welding and industrial gases divisions where he became executive vice president in 1966. He was appointed a group vice president of Airco in 1971 and deputy group managing director of the BOC Group in 1979. He was named a managing director of the BOC Group in October 1983 with special responsibilities for engineering and technology.

Under Craig's direction, the GTC has undergone a $20 million facility expansion and modernization program over the past six years, and has more than doubled its scientific staff. "David Craig has served as the architect of the BOC Group's worldwide technology program," said Giordano, "and is largely responsible for establishing the technical centers of excellence in BOC companies around the world. His influence and leadership will be felt for many years to come."

The new GTC multi-media conference center, named in honor of Craig, will be used to host technical and academic conferences on the advanced research underway at the company's laboratory.

The BOC Group is one of the world's leading companies in industrial gases, health care products and services and high-vacuum technology. The company operates in some 50 countries and employs nearly 40,000 people. The annual sales exceed $4.5 billion. The main centers of technical activity are in the United States, U.K., Japan, Australia and South Africa.

AKRON, OH (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - First Family Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: FFAM) today reported a net loss of $60 thousand, or $.02 per share, for the quarter ended April 30, 1990 compared to a net loss of $309 thousand, or $.09 per share, for the quarter ended April 30, 1989.

Net sales for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 were $15.3 million, a decrease of approximately 3 percent from sales of $15.7 million for the comparable first quarter one year ago.

"Continuing industry trends, of weak consumer demand in primarily all categories of major appliances and home electronics, resulted in flat sales for the first quarter of fiscal 1991," according to Michael A. Tallal, chief executive officer of First Family. "Net results, however, did improve from those of the April 1989 quarter and we are pleased with the degree of improvement," added Tallal.

HAMPTON, NH (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Henley Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: HENG) has modified its proposal to reorganize and spin off its largest operating units as separate companies, in response to recent developments in the financial markets.

Under the revised plan, expected to be submitted to shareholders for approval in the third quarter of this year (as previously announced), Henley will distribute 35 percent of the shares of Pneumo Abex rather than 100 percent. Instead of changing Pneumo Abex's operations and financial structure, Henley intends to dividend 35 percent of Pneumo Abex as it now exists, leaving all existing indebtedness, including the reset notes, outstanding. These revisions in the reorganization plan are designed to benefit Henley shareholders by simplifying it.

The proposed distribution of all the shares of Fisher International Inc. will not be affected. Henley expects to file a preliminary proxy statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission on June 19.

OAKBROOK TERRACE, IL (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Telesphere (AMEX: TSP), a national long-distance telephone company and leader in interactive 900 services, today commented that while second-quarter results were favorable relative to second-quarter 1989, revenues were anticipated to be 4 percent to 6 percent lower than the first quarter, and that earnings would be less than projected.

Harry Thompson, chairman, identified three underlying factors: blocking procedures instituted to comply with RBOC billing policies which offset new program and new account minutes in the 900 area, recent rate reductions on one plus services, and a longer-than-anticipated process in arriving at a definitive agreement to acquire NTS; one of the terms of which was conversion of traffic to the Telesphere network.

However, Thompson went on to say, "The blocking issue has been relieved, preliminary implementation of the NTS consolidation is proceeding nicely, our new carrier program is developing minutes in advance of projections and our 900 corporate account and new IP programs and new network service offerings are demonstrating real progress. Contingent on a continuation of these trends, we are looking forward to a strong third quarter."

DEARBORN, MI (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS) announced today that the Michigan Court of Appeals has acted to permit the Midland Cogeneration Venture (MCV) sale and leaseback transaction by June 15, 1990.

It did so by granting a stay of a May 23, 1990, order of the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) that would have effectively prevented the sale and leaseback. Today's action removed the final legal impediment to completing the sale and leaseback. The stay requires Consumers Power Company to file a $450 million bond as security for potential refunds. The bond must be guaranteed by CMS Energy. Consumers Power plans to file the bond in order to allow the sale and leaseback to close by June 15,

In related orders issued today, the Court of Appeals determined not to review the question of the MPSC's jurisdiction to restrict the transfer or use of CMS Energy's debt and equity interests in the MCV at this time, but will review the question under normal appellate procedures. CMS Energy will pursue resolution of this issue in this appeal and in related Circuit Court proceedings.

CMS Energy Corporation is a $3 billion (sales) diversified energy company with businesses engaged in the distribution of electricity and natural gas interstate storage and transmission of natural gas, oil and gas exploration and production, independent power generation and utility services. DENVER (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - First Interstate Bank of Denver today announced an aggressive marketing campaign to boost consumer lending.

The bank is making it easier for customers to apply for a loan either over the telephone or by filling out a loan application that has been reduced from two pages to one half page.

"We are very excited to announce that we are changing our approach in consumer lending to develop more personal and consumer loan business," explains Ron Nelson, manager of Retail Lending.

"Our main focus is convenience, via the loan-by-phone application process, or the completion of our brand new, shortened mail-in application. Both application processes only take a few minutes."

Nelson said that since the loan-by-phone application was first tested several weeks ago, the bank has enjoyed a 33 percent increase in the number of applications it has received. Not only does the bank offer fast and easy ways to apply for a loan, but it has a bank representative respond to the request in 24 hours.

The advertising campaign promoting the streamlined loan application process begins Sunday, June 10. Advertisements will appear in both the Sunday and Tuesday daily newspapers, and ads will be heard on 800 radio spots on various radio stations. Look for billboards on RTD buses, statement stuffers, bank lobby displays and a banner on the front of the bank.

"We want to be heavily involved in consumer lending," Nelson adds. "This aggressive sales and marketing program will help us get the word out that First Interstate Bank of Denver is here to help people with their borrowing needs in a fast and friendly manner."

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Iroquois Brands, Ltd. (NYSE: IBL) announced today that its net loss for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 will be approximately $22.4 million as compared to a loss of $9.2 million for the prior year. This number is subject to final adjustments by Iroquois' independent auditors.

The total net loss equates to a per share loss of approximately $11.50. Iroquois also estimates that its 1989 annual report, when issued, will reflect an overall net worth of approximately $5.6 million at Dec. 31, 1989, as compared to a $10.9 million net worth at Dec. 31, 1988, or a pro forma combined net worth at Dec. 31, 1988 of $28 million, which assumes the February 1989 merger with Bio International Inc.

Iroquois' results for 1989 were impacted by a variety of one-time charges including losses on disposal of two subsidiaries, Schiff Products Inc. and Pharmacaps, Inc., start-up costs at an existing subsidiary, write-down of assets acquired in Iroquois' merger with Bio International in February of 1989, and overhead costs associated with this merger.

Iroquois' results were also impacted by significant ongoing operating costs particularly interest and debt discount expense associated with Iroquois' outstanding subordinated debentures.

In announced its results of operation, a spokesman for Iroquois stated that the company anticipates that its annual report on Form 10-K will be filed before the end of June.

The spokesman noted that the delay, both in reporting year-end results and in finalizing its annual report, has been caused by the complexity and materiality of the recent acquisitions of Benzole Oil (UK) Ltd. and Benzole Homes Ltd., which are subject to separate press releases being issued today.

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Iroquois Brands, Ltd. (AMEX: IBL) announced today the acquisition of Benzole Homes, Ltd., the wholly owned subsidiary of Benzole Oil (U.K.) Ltd. The company is engaged in the construction and sale of family homes. Iroquois has agreed to acquire the construction firm as managing partner, in joint partnership with a London-based merchant bank.

The venture's first project, Sandilands, near Sutton On Sea, has approximately 20 homes completed, with additional structures in various stages of completion. Total current debt of Benzole Homes is $8 million. Iroquois will guarantee repayment of the first $3.3 million of the debt. This $3.3 million will be satisfied through current operations of the property which has been independently valued at $3.5 million.

The remaining $4.7 million of debt, held by the merchant bank, will be satisfied only through proceeds from operations. Once the balance of the debt is satisfied proceeds will be equally divided between Iroquois and the merchant bank.

The merchant bank guarantees a continuous working capital line of $1 million. Several phases of construction are anticipated over the next several years, beyond phase one, which is now substantially completed.

The acquisition of Benzole Homes is consistent with Iroquois interest of expanding its general business in the light industrial, gasoline and real estate markets.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Air Line Pilots Association issued the following statement after Eastern Airlines this morning withdrew its lawsuit in the bankruptcy court in New York that had asked for a restraining order against any union activity that might be construed as financially harmful to the bankrupt airline:

ALPA is pleased that cooler heads prevailed in Eastern management. The restraining order was vague, overly broad, and violated labor law and the pilots' constitutional rights. Management fears that the pilots would try to push the company into economic ruin are completely unfounded because all parties recognize the precarious financial position of the airline and are working to save it, not to destroy it.

The company's thinly veiled hint that it wanted the court to order a stop to ongoing pilot contract negotiations would have been extremely counterproductive to this goal. A protracted court battle over the restraining order would have only focused more negative publicity on a company that can ill afford it.

One of Eastern's main priorities at this point must be to bring labor peace to the property. The only clear path to that objective is to conclude labor agreements with its unions.

One of ALPA's primary concerns is protecting the rights of the formerly striking Eastern pilots. The current recall of returning pilots being discussed by the company is flawed. At the ongoing talks that will resume at the National Mediation Board, ALPA will continue to press for a back-to-work agreement that gives fair and equitable treatment to all pilots. We hope that this morning's action in the bankruptcy court indicates that management now understands both the nature of the problem and its solution. We look forward to further actions by the company to resolve these difference so that we all can move on to the job of rebuilding Eastern.

NORWOOD, MA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Microcom, Inc. (NASDAQ: MNPI) announced today that revenue and earnings for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 would be below analysts' expectations principally due to overstocking by key domestic distributors of their software and Protocol Modem(tm) products. The company expects revenues for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 to be approximately $14 million and a loss per share in the range of between 15 cents to 20 cents.

"We have reviewed the current inventory levels of all of our key North American software and data communications distributors and determined that it is unlikely that they will require significant additional product shipments from Microcom prior to June 30, 1990," said James M. Dow, president and CEO of Microcom. "Management believes that the sell thru activity of our products from distributors to dealers, VARs and EndUsers is in line with the company's business projections."

James Dow and Peter Minihane will be available for analysts' questions from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Friday, June 8, 1990; 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. on Saturday, June 9, 1990; and 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. on Monday, June 11, 1990.

Microcom is a workstation connectivity company headquartered in Norwood, Mass.; with offices in Danbury, Conn.; Wilmington, Del.; Durham, N.C.; Caguas, Puerto Rico; and international offices in France, Hong Kong, and the U.K. Principal product lines include Protocol Modems; LAN bridging products; Carbon Copy(tm), RELAY Gold(R) and Virex(R) communications software packages, and ISDN products.

SAVANNAH, GA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Environmental concerns have led Allen E. Paulson, CEO/chairman of the board of Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., to invent and patent a device that can reduce jet aircraft take- off noise up to 25 percent.

Paulson's invention also makes a jet aircraft engine 20 to 25 percent more efficient, which reduces the amount of fuel needed. This double environmental benefit comes at a time when governments all over the world are tightening airport noise restrictions. Many well-known models of airliners and business jets could be grounded by the growing number of restrictions.

Aircraft such as the Boeing 727s and 737s; McDonnell Douglas DC-9s; Rolls-Royce equipped Fokker F-28s, British Aerospace BAC 111s and Gulfstreams IIs and IIIs are faced with the costly process of replacing their jet engines unless steps can be taken to reduce their engine noise levels.

Paulson states that his invention will do the job at a cost far less than the price of more quiet engines. Reducing fuel use is a significant bonus. Together, the noise reduction and the fuel reduction will meet environmental goals and increase the value of the jet aircraft.

Paulson noted that the new device is being studied for adaptation to many other jet-powered aircraft. Initially the silencer will be made for the Gulfstream IIs and IIIs. The first units are expected to be available in 18 to 24 months. The system is being developed by Gulfstream Aerospace in collaboration with Williams International.

Allen E. Paulson is well known for his entrepreneurial successes in aviation. He began his business career during the 1950s improving airline engines. He holds several patents for aircraft component improvements.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) officials, saying the FBI's backlog of unprocessed fingerprint files has reached a crisis point, will pump $185 million into building a new West Virginia facility around a sophisticated automated fingerprint handling system, according to a story published in the June 11 issue of Federal Computer Week.

"The national identification system is falling apart and is in a crisis state," with 700,000 fingerprint cards and 2 million other criminal files sitting unprocessed and unavailable, Stanley Klein, deputy assistant director of the FBI's Identification Division, said in the article written by Leigh Rivenbark, a senior reporter for the newspaper.

"Say one of the people on those (fingerprint) cards is a killer," Klein said. "By the time we get information back to the state, he's killed again."

The Identification Division will use the $185 million to move out of the FBI's Pennsylvania Avenue headquarters in Washington, D.C., and into a custom-built facility in Clarksburg, W. Va., by June 1995. The facility's centerpiece will be a system capable of handling a fingerprint image database of 25 million images and possibly giving states two-hour turnaround on print identification, Klein said.

States send fingerprint cards and other information to the FBI for processing on the FBI's existing Automated Identification System. About 35,000 to 39,000 cards a day arrive at FBI headquarters, and the FBI estimates that it will receive 9 million cards this year.

Many states have their own automated fingerprint information systems, generically called AFIS, but states usually cannot exchange information electronically with each other or with the FBI.

"Our nation needs one single fingerprint repository," FBI Deputy Director Floyd Clarke said. "The United States has a highly mobile society. Criminals are even more mobile.

"A child molester in Hawaii must not be licensed for day care in Florida just because a national fingerprint search could not be conducted," Clarke told the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) Advisory Policy Board at its meeting last week in Alexandria, Va.

CHICAGO (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Public Counsel today recommended to a Department of Transportation (DOT) administrative law judge that Chicago receive one of the three new U.S.-Tokyo routes to be awarded in the 1990 U.S.-Japan Gateways Proceeding currently under review by the DOT. Public Counsel went on to recommend that a carrier other than United be selected to provide the service.

''While United is encouraged that Public Counsel recognizes the need for additional non-stop service between Chicago and Tokyo, today's recommendation fails to recognize the important and unique benefits United's vast Asian route structure could bring to the interior region of the United States, and apparently ignores overwhelming civic support for United's application throughout the region,'' said Stephen M. Wolf, chairman and president.

United's proposal would link its hubs at Washington, D.C., Chicago and Tokyo using state-of-the-art Boeing 747-400 aircraft. Public Counsel plays a limited advisory role in the regulatory proceedings before the DOT.

DENVER (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Manville Corp. (NYSE: MVL) today said it could no longer remain silent while Carlos Lucero attacks the company and integrity of its 18,000 employees with innuendo and untruthful statements for his personal gain.

"To accuse Manville of being a major environmental polluter shows he knows little or nothing about today's Manville," said Patricia Bergeron, company spokesperson. "Manville has been a leader in its industries in waste minimization, environmental control technology and research. Manville also has been recognized for its leadership in product and employee safety and testing. Our directors -- nearly all of whom are new in the last two years -- have taken a bold step to designate a permanent committee on health, safety and environment, one of the very few corporations to do so."

"Lucero's charge that Manville is cutting the rain forest also is totally incorrect. Our forest plantations are 2000 miles from the rain forest, and we plant the trees we cut. We have played a significant role in the economy of the area," she said.

"Lucero has not contacted Manville at all to learn anything about the company as it is today," Bergeron said. "We urge him -- or any other politician -- to get educated before providing misleading information to the public. Manville has enjoyed an excellent working relationship with all members of the Colorado congressional delegation, all of who call often to learn about company issues first hand. It is a disservice to our employees."

"Manville, as a company, is neutral in this political election," she concluded.

Founded in 1858, Manville is an international manufacturing and natural resources company with businesses in paper and wood products, fiber glass, roofing systems and filtration and minerals. Headquartered in Denver, Manville employs more than 17,000 people at 50 facilities and four mines worldwide.

JACKSONVILLE, FL (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Barnett Banks Inc. (NYSE: BBI) today announced that the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) has transferred the insured deposits of three insolvent Florida savings and loan associations to several Barnett Banks as of the close of business today.

The RTC is the government agency charged with the responsibility to manage and resolve insolvent thrift institutions.

The RTC transferred a total of approximately $897 million in insured deposits from First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Largo, Lincoln Savings and Loan Association in Miami and Royal Palm Federal Savings and Loan Association in West Palm Beach.

"Since the U.S. Congress charged the RTC with responsibility for resolving the large number of insolvent thrifts and the related burden on taxpayers, Barnett and other financial institutions are being urged to step into situations like this to take over insured accounts and continue providing service to the customers of these institutions," said Charles E. Rice, chairman of Barnett.

"Customer deposits will now be supported by the strength and solvency of Florida's largest banking organization, with more than $2 billion in capital. The former thrift customers automatically become Barnett customers, with access to Barnett's products and services," Rice said.

Royal Palm has seven offices and approximately $356 million in deposits. Lincoln has five offices and approximately $191 million in deposits. Largo has 10 offices and approximately $350 million in deposits.

Beginning Monday, June 11, all of the savings and loan offices will be open for business as Barnett offices on a temporary basis. All of the transferred deposits will continue to be insured by the FDIC. Customers should continue to use their checks and transact business at their former thrift offices in the usual way.

Barnett's purchase premium was $1.5 million. In addition, Barnett has an option to purchase or lease offices, which are now owned by the RTC, and an option to acquire mortgage and consumer loans and certain other assets.

Due to the close proximity of many of the thrift branches to Barnett offices, customer accounts will be transferred during the next several months from many of the thrift branches to Barnett offices with no interruption of service.

Barnett is a 113-year-old company with assets with more than $30 billion and offices in Florida and Georgia. Its stock (BBI) is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Increases in both volume and value of shares traded contributed to a break-even year for the Vancouver Stock Exchange in 1989 and 1990, the exchange reported today.

Excluding business development expenses of $800,000, primarily for computer upgrading, expenses of $31,544,000 were matched by revenues. This compares with a deficit of $1.8 million in 1988 and 1989, which also excluded business development expenditures.

The exchange's cash and short term investments increased by more than $1 million over the previous year to $8.4 million.

In releasing the annual report, VSE Chairman Martin J. Reynolds observed that Vancouver markets "generally reflected the performances of other world exchanges. Throughout the fiscal year, the VSE followed the same market trends experienced world-wide; a year marked by the continued absence of the retail investor."

Reynolds also pointed to "certain local factors which marginally improved year-end results."

"The significant interest generated by extensive gold exploration in northwestern British Columbia increased the volume and values on the exchange. The impact in the last quarter of the British Columbia government's investment diversification program helped as well."

VSE volume, at four billion shares, increased 13 percent over the previous fiscal year while value, at $3.9 billion, increased 21 percent.

After posting the high for the year of 847.91 in September and the low of 686.65 in May, the VSE Index closed the year at 777.33.

The average price per share was 96 cents, compared to 90 cents in 1988 and 1989. Financings, at $535.2 million, were down 43 percent from the previous year. This decline was due in part to changes in federal legislation reducing the benefits of flow through financing.

Vancouver's share of the Canadian equity market declined slightly to 30.9 percent of total volume, but increased marginally to 3.6 percent of total value.

In 1989 North American standings, Vancouver retained its position behind New York and Toronto in terms of the number of shares traded.

1989 and 1990 saw the exchange implement several significant initiatives to improve and strengthen its operations. The state-of-the-art Vancouver Computerized Trading System (VCT) was fully implemented. Comprehensive listings regulations, initiated last year, were introduced. West Canada Clearing Corporation and West Canada Depository Trust Company developed programs to expand membership and enhance international links.

Among other highlights of the year: - Establishment of the business development committee of the board of governors. - Enhanced regulatory ties with the United States and United Kingdom. - An executive reorganization resulting in the creation of three new positions -- executive vice president and vice presidents for compliance and public affairs. - Key computer upgrades. A total of 166 new listings were added during 1989 and 1990. VSE listed companies numbered 2,248 at year end. Exchange membership on March 31 stood at 46 brokerage firms holding a total of 70 Seats.

The Vancouver Stock Exchange was incorporated on April 25, 1907 and has completed its 83rd year of uninterrupted operation.

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - United Savings Association of the Southwest FSB has entered the Dallas/Fort Worth market with today's acquisition of approximately $1.15 billion in deposits and 19 branches of Dallas-based Murray Federal Savings and Loan Association.

In the transaction, there was no loss to any depositor whose funds exceeded the insured limit. Deposits will continue to be federally insured to the maximum allowed by law.

United Savings Chairman Lewis S. Ranieri commented, "The Murray Savings acquisition is truly significant for us. It moves us into one of Texas' most vital markets and nearly doubles the number of branches in the United Savings family of institutions."

Company President Kenneth H. Thorn added, "With the increasing strength and diversity of the Dallas/Fort Worth area, it is an important market for us. Since Murray Savings had a substantial presence in the Metroplex area with 17 branches there, United Savings can now enter the market by serving a very high-quality customer base."

Thorn noted that Murray Federal was attractive to United Savings because of the size and stability of its deposit base as well as its well-located branch network. "In addition, Murray has consistently ranked among the top savings and loans in the Metroplex," he said.

United Savings of the Southwest acquired all of the deposits, some of the assets and the option to purchase other assets of the federal mutual association in the transaction. The action came immediately after Murray Federal was placed in receivership by the Resolution Trust Corp., the federal agency responsible for the disposition of troubled U.S. thrifts.

Services to Murray Savings' former customers will continue without interruption. All of Murray's former banking offices will reopen tomorrow or Monday, according to their regular schedules, as branches of United Savings of the Southwest. Customers can transact their business normally, and checks written on Murray Savings accounts will be honored.

Seventeen of the former Murray Savings locations are in the Dallas/Fort Worth area: nine in Dallas, two in Fort Worth and one each in Bedford, Carrollton, Duncanville, Garland, Plano and Richardson. The other two branches are in Austin and San Antonio.

The Murray Savings transaction is the second acquisition in as many months for United Savings of the Southwest, which was established in May 1990 to acquire Ameriway Savings Association, a Houston-based thrift with four locations. With the two acquisitions, United Savings of the Southwest now has 23 branches.

United Savings of the Southwest is wholly owned by USAT Holdings Inc., a holding company that also owns Houston-based United Savings Association of Texas FSB. United Savings of Texas is a separate, independently operated savings institution with $3.5 billion in assets, $2.6 billion in deposits and 19 branches, most of which are located in Houston area.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (JUNE 8) UPI - Launch of the shuttle Columbia, crippled by an elusive fuel leak, will be delayed until at least mid-August, clearing the way for its sistership Atlantis to take off next month on a military flight, NASA said.

''The initial reaction is disappointment because we were ready to go,'' said astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman, a member of Columbia's seven-man crew. ''On the other hand, who wants to fly with a leaky orbiter?''

Shuttle program director Robert Crippen said Thursday that Columbia will be hauled off launch pad 39A next week and taken back to the Vehicle Assembly Building at the Kennedy Space Center so engineers can remove the spaceplane from its external tank for repairs.

Atlantis, scheduled to be rolled from its hangar to the VAB Friday morning for attachment to a set of boosters and a fuel tank, will be moved to pad 39A next Friday for blastoff around July 13 to ferry a military payload into orbit.

''What we will do is fly the DOD flight in mid July,'' Crippen said in Washington at a news conference broadcast to NASA field centers across the nation. ''The flight of (Columbia) will be in the mid-August time frame.''

As a result of the schedule revision, NASA will only launch eight shuttle missions this year instead of nine as originally planned because a flight that had been set for December has been pushed into 1991.

Columbia's ''roll back'' to the VAB was unavoidable after a test Wednesday confirmed the presence of a hydrogen leak in a cavity where the ship's 17-inch-wide fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter. The only way to fix a problem in that area is to remove the shuttle from its external tank.

''Since we're going to have to take the orbiter off to go evaluate the problem ... from a scheduling standpoint the obvious thing for us to do is to go ahead and proceed with the (Atlantis) mission,'' Crippen said.

''The current schedule would have that ready to come out of the VAB on the 15th of next week, and we will proceed with the launch of (Atlantis), which would be scheduled for the mid-July time frame.''

A Spacelab life science mission originally set for September using Columbia will be delayed until after the Oct. 5 launch of the Ulysses solar probe aboard the shuttle Discovery, a high-priority mission that must get off the ground by Oct. 23 to avoid a 13-month delay because of planetary alignments.

The cavernous VAB only has two shuttle processing stalls and both are now occupied. One houses Atlantis's boosters and tank, and the other shelters a single booster that had been scheduled for use by Columbia in September.

Engineers plan to haul the single booster from the VAB to launch pad 39B Monday to make room for Columbia. Preliminary schedules show Columbia's roll back beginning the next day.

How long it will take to repair Columbia will not be known until the spaceship is removed from its external tank, giving engineers access to the 17-inch ''quick disconnect'' fitting in the belly of the orbiter.

Crippen said a new external fuel tank will be substituted for the one now in use, eliminating any concern about possible leakage from valve systems on the tank side of the disconnect fitting.

If the leak is inside the orbiter, the flight likely would be delayed past mid-August because of the work required to replace the faulty equipment.

Columbia originally was scheduled for launch May 9, but the flight was delayed to May 30 because of problems launching the shuttle Discovery and because of a technical glitches.

The May 30 launch then was put on hold indefinitely after hydrogen gas spewed into Columbia's engine room during fuel loading the night before the planned launching.

(JUNE 8) UPI - A judge has ordered a high school in Downington, Pennsylvania, to cancel its plans for a prayer service at its graduation ceremony Friday. Two graduating students filed suit, charging the benediction makes NON-Christians feel like ''second-class citizens.'' School officials would NOT say what they plan to do.

Sources say a Titan-4 rocket is ready to leap skyward from Cape Canaveral before dawn to put a secret military spy satellite into orbit. Sources report the satellite is designed to intercept data from Soviet rocket tests and other forms of communication.

General Motors announced Thursday it has signed a one-BILLION-dollar agreement to provide anti-pollution equipment to the leading vehicle manufacturer in the Soviet Union. The agreement will make G-M the first American auto manufacturer in modern times to work with the Soviet auto industry.

The father-in-law of an actor stabbed to death by convict-author Jack Henry Abbott testified Thursday that lawful Americans live in ''the belly of the beast.'' The witness used the title of Abbott's own book derisively to say Americans now know that killers can get out of prison early only to kill again.

Quebec's premier says he will NO longer participate in talks involving the ''distinct society'' clause that lets Quebec promote the French language and culture. Provincial leaders plan to resume talks in Ottawa Friday to try to keep Quebec a part of Canada. But it's clear the negotiations are in jeopardy.

(JUNE 8) UPI - In Cambridge, Massachusetts, a woman who initially blamed a satanic cult for letting her toddler starve to death pleaded guilty Thursday to manslaughter and drug charges. A book on cults was found in the woman's apartment, but prosecutors said they had NO reason to believe it was connected to the case.

A federal jury in Chicago Thursday found Century Broadcasting discriminated against three former employees because of their ages and ordered the company to pay 230-thousand dollars. The company had fired the announcers, contending they did NOT fit their radio station's new adult contemporary format, and replaced them with announcers under the age of 40.

A number of tornadoes blew through Kansas and Missouri Thursday, ripping up homes and businesses, and injuring 16 people in Emporia, Kansas, three critically. Rain, high winds and hail the size of golfballs hit the area.

President Bush told a group of school children Thursday he likes being president, but ''it's full-time work.'' Bush read a story to 45 young children in a working-class neighborhood of Chicago. Bush also helped raise one-Million dollars for the Republican candidate for governor of Illinois, Jim Edgar.

AUBURN HILLS, MI (JUNE 8) UPI - Clyde Drexler, criticized in the past for failing in the clutch, came through for the Portland Trail Blazers when it mattered most.

Drexler forced his way toward the basket, was fouled and sank 2 free throws with 2.1 seconds remaining in overtime Thursday night, enabling Portland to even the NBA Finals at one game apiece with a 106-105 triumph over the Detroit Pistons.

''For anybody who thinks he's not a money player just look at the film tonight,'' Trail Blazers Coach Rick Adelman said. ''Look at the plays he made tonight with the guys we had on the bench.''

Drexler made 13 of 20 shots and scored 8 of his 33 points in overtime. Portland played most of the extra session without starters Kevin Duckworth and Jerome Kersey, who had both fouled out.

Drexler's game-winning effort came after Bill Laimbeer had tied a Finals record with his sixth 3-pointer of the game, putting the Pistons ahead 105-104 with 4.1 seconds left.

''The final play was designed to go to me, to see what I had or to see what was open,'' Drexler said. ''(Dennis Rodman) definitely blocked me, it was pretty obvious. It was a great call (by referee Jack Madden).''

Portland recovered from its fourth-quarter fold in the opener to wrest the home-court advantage from the defending league champions and hand Detroit its first playoff loss in 11 home games this year.

With the next three games set for Portland's Memorial Coliseum - Game 3 is Sunday afternoon - the Trail Blazers suddenly are in control of the best-of-seven series.

Portland is 9-0 at home in the playoffs, and Detroit has lost its last 20 games on the Trail Blazers' court since 1974. Three more losses would give Portland its first NBA title in 13 years.

''Right now we're sitting pretty, we've got the next three games at home '' said Terry Porter, who set a Finals record by making 15 of 15 foul shots. ''We've got to feel good.''

The second of Laimbeer's three 3-pointers in overtime with 1:28 left had given Detroit a 102-98 lead. However, Porter hit 2 free throws and Drexler nailed a tying jumper with 50.7 seconds left.

Porter missed a difficult jumper but Buck Williams, while struggling to control the rebound, was fouled by Joe Dumars with 9.6 seconds left. Williams, a 70 percent free-throw shooter in the regular season, made both for a 104-102 lead.

Laimbeer, who had 19 of his 26 points after the third quarter, then canned his final long-range basket but Drexler answered with his decisive free throws.

''After I hit the shot I looked at the clock and still saw four seconds, which is an eternity in the NBA,'' Laimbeer said.

Detroit still had hope when the Trail Blazers, with a foul to give, grabbed James Edwards on an inbounds play. That set up another inbounds play with 1.5 seconds to go but Edwards missed a fadeaway jumper at the buzzer.

The overtime was the first in the Finals since 1984, when Boston beat the Los Angeles Lakers.

Porter added 21 points and 10 assists, and Williams grabbed 12 rebounds in 46 minutes for Portland. Edwards had 26 points for the Pistons and Isiah Thomas 23.

The Trail Blazers, 3-6 on the road in the playoffs, sent the game into overtime when Porter made 2 free throws to make it 94-94 with 10.2 seconds left. Thomas missed a jumper at the buzzer.

Trailing 86-81 with 5:37 remaining, the Pistons scored 8 straight points. Laimbeer hit a 3-pointer to tie the score with 3:38 to go, then struck for another 36 seconds later for Detroit's 89-86 edge - its first lead in the second half.

''I was the hot man,'' he said.

Portland had just four field goals in the third quarter but sank 14 of 18 foul shots and took a 75-69 lead into the final period.

The Trail Blazers stole a page from the Detroit playbook in the second quarter, choking off penetration on defense and getting superb production from their reserves in taking a 53-45 halftime lead.

Portland outscored the Pistons 30-15 in the period, limiting the hosts to 6-of-19 shooting (31.5 percent) while forcing 9 turnovers.

Before a sellout crowd that included Vice President Dan Quayle, Tommy Hearns, Aretha Franklin and Jack Nicklaus, the Pistons led 30-19 with 1:53 left in the first period.

The Portland bench, ineffective in Game 1, scored 11 points in a 19-3 run that provided a 38-33 lead with 7:14 left in the second quarter. Cliff Robinson had 5 points in the burst while the bumbling Pistons missed 7 of 8 shots and committed 5 turnovers.

The Trail Blazers then built their advantage to 53-41 on Drexler's jumper.

Edwards took the Pistons' first 5 shots and made them all en route to 12 first-period points. However, Duckworth countered by making 4 of 5 shots on his way to 11 points in the quarter.

Thomas' 3-pointer gave Detroit its 11th field goal in 15 tries and highlighted an 18-5 spurt that produced the 30-19 lead before the Pistons' shooting soon soured.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (JUNE 8) UPI - Turning night into day, a shuttle-class Air Force Titan 4 rocket successfully boosted a military spy satellite into space Friday after a secret countdown in a spectacular flight visible for miles around.

The towering 174-foot rocket's two solid-fuel boosters, each one as tall as a 10-story building, flashed to life at 1:22 a.m. EDT - six minutes behind schedule - shattering the overnight calm with a gush of fire and a crackling roar that shook the ground like a pile driver.

It was the first launch of a $173 million Titan 4 since the problem-plagued $7.1 billion rocket program's maiden flight a year ago this month and the first conducted at night.

Sources said the rocket was carrying an electronic signals intelligence satellite, or ELINT, designed to intercept data from Soviet rocket tests and to eavesdrop on other forms of communication.

The Air Force will not discuss such military payloads but a spokesman said ''We believe the launch was successful.''

The spectacular nighttime launching was visible for hundreds of miles along Florida's ''space coast,'' thrilling area residents and reporters as the fiery rocket thundered toward space through a hazy sky. The ascent looked normal and two minutes after liftoff, the solid-fuel boosters fell away as planned.

''It was gorgeous! The plume was lit up by the moon,'' said an area resident who watched the not-so-secret launch near the entrance to the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station. ''There was a huge crowd here, we figured about 50 cars. It looked like a drive-in theater. There was cheering when it went off.''

The rocket was launched on a sharply northeasterly trajectory toward an orbit inclined 52 degrees to the equator, according to an Air Force statement.

The ''high inclination'' orbit appeared to confirm suspicions the Titan 4 was carrying a spy satellite rather than an infrared early warning spacecraft, but that could not be positively confirmed. As it is, the satellite launched Friday will fly over every point on the globe between 52 degrees north and south latitude.

''This was an important launch for America's space program,'' Martin Faga, assistant secretary of the Air Force for space, said in a prepared statement. ''The Titan 4 is the largest booster ever launched by the Air Force and is the backbone of our space booster family.''

The Air Force told reporters ahead of time about the maiden flight of a Titan 4 last June but this time military officials decided to reinstate a strict no-comment policy, refusing to disclose the launch date, time or details about the hush-hush payload.

As usual with such missions, however, the launch date and time were widely known by area residents and reporters. Photographers and reporters from local newspapers and three television stations were on hand to witness the fiery blastoff.

But it was not immediately possible to confirm any details about the status of the satellite payload or when it was scheduled to be deployed into orbit, a maneuver that typically occurs within an hour of liftoff.

Capable of placing 10,000-pound payloads into the high orbits favored by strategic reconnaissance satellites, the 1.9-million-pound Titan 4, built by Martin Marietta Space Launch Systems of Denver, is the most powerful unmanned booster in the U.S. inventory, second only to NASA's manned space shuttle in sheer power.

Martin Marietta has contracts valued at $7.1 billion to build 41 Titan 4s with options for eight more, the centerpiece of an unprecedented military space buildup to eliminate Pentagon reliance on the shuttle for launching heavy military payloads.

But the program has been bedeviled by technical snags and, according to the General Accounting Office, mismanagement that resulted in cost overruns of more than $207 million.

But Air Force officials say the program is back on track. By 1995, up to nine Titan 4s will be launched a year from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station or from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., where payloads weighing up to 32,000 pounds can be boosted into low-Earth polar orbits.

Getting the Titan 4 program up and running marks a major milestone in the nation's recovery from the 1986 Challenger shuttle disaster and back-to-back failures of less-powerful Titan 34D rockets in 1985 and 1986.

Between 1983 and 1988, the Air Force budgeted $685 million for unmanned expendable launch vehicles. Between 1988 and 1994, the figure is projected to be at least $14.1 billion, half of which is earmarked for the Titan 4 program.

(JUNE 8) UPI - The anti-crime bill has one more chance. Senate leaders agreed Thursday night to take a look at a new version of the legislation offered by Republicans. The latest proposal would drop two main provisions. One provision would have allowed the introduction of evidence obtained in ''good faith'' searches by police. The other called for the creation of a new drug and crime division in the Justice Department. The proposal allows amendments to knock out a ban on nine military-style assault weapons.

The F-B-I says a former U-S Army soldier was arrested and charged with espionage in Tampa, Florida, Thursday. The soldier had served under a former sergeant who was sentenced to life in prison in West Germany earlier this week. The judge ruled the sergeant sold military secrets to communist governments for more than one-Million dollars, endangering U-S and West German troops.

Government health officials say tests to screen the nation's blood supply for AIDS are wrong up to two-point-two percent of the time. The national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said a four-year study of the effectiveness of the two most common AIDS blood screening tests confirms smaller previous studies. The author of the study says the accuracy of AIDS tests of at least 97-point-eight percent is ''excellent.''

Museums nationwide mounted a protest Thursday in hopes of keeping UNrestricted funding for the National Endowment for the Arts. The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York used black cloth to cover art works acquired by the funding. In Richmond, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts closed two galleries by stringing yellow warning tape across their entrances. Conservatives are trying to restrict or eliminate the endowment for its funding of art some view as obscene.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - After almost giving up on passing any anti-crime bill, Senate leaders are trying one more time - exploring a new compromise that would retain some, but not all, parts of the original package.

''My gut tells me that something will break here and we'll get a bill,'' Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del, said Thursday. ''I put it as better than 50-50.''

''We are negotiating,'' Biden said. ''We are attempting to revive the process here and Republicans, after having killed the bill, have come back with what I consider a serious offer.''

But Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole, as well as others who participated in a late-evening meeting, said there was no agreement.

''We explicitly agreed there is no agreement on anything,'' Biden said after the session.

Earlier, the Senate's failure for the second time to kill the filibuster powered by the gun lobby appeared to doom the legislation and left Democrats and Republicans blaming each other for the defeat.

Mitchell was prepared to forget the bill until Republicans, who contacted Biden, presented him and other top Democrats with a new proposal.

The new plan would include an expansion of the federal death penalty to cover 30 crimes, an expedited court process that would mean swifter execution for death row inmates, a ban on nine military-style assault weapons and a section dealing with reporting of money laundering.

The Republican proposal dropped two major provisions of the bill: a new law allowing the introduction of evidence obtained in ''good faith'' searches by police and the creation of a new drug and crime division in the Justice Department.

The section dealing with evidence was deleted at the insistence of Biden who, in turn, agreed to drop the Justice Department reorganization proposal.

In addition, the GOP proposal would allow Republicans and Democrats each to offer 12 amendments of their choosing - virtually assuring an attempt to knock out or modify the assault weapon ban.

''We're making progress,'' Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said. ''We'll see what we can do.''

The proposal must first be accepted by Democratic leaders and then by the entire Senate before an agreement can be reached. No decision was expected until next week.

The Senate voted 57-37, three short of the 60 required, for so-called cloture and left hanging what some supporters called the most important anti-crime bill in more than a decade.

''It is not the majority leader who is taking this bill down,'' Mitchell said. ''It is the Senate and, specifically, the senators who voted against cloture. Let there be no mistake or misunderstanding where the cause lies for no crime bill.''

On the 57-37 vote 46 Democrats and 10 Republicans voted to shut off debate and 30 Republicans and 7 Democrats refused. Six senators were absent.

Some senators voted against cloture because they oppose the death penalty but the overwhelming bulk of the opposition came from those who voted against the ban on assault weapons.

Immediately after the vote, the debate erupted in partisan finger pointing with Democrats and Republicans blaming each other for making it impossible to reach final passage of an anti-crime bill.

''We've been waiting a year for this bill,'' Senate Republican leader Robert Dole said. ''Cloture - it's in the bag if you want a bill. We want a crime bill. If the majority wants a crime bill, it's within their reach.''

Mitchell replied, ''Democrats want a crime bill. We didn't just want one, we voted for one.''

He added, ''We're told cloture is in the bag. That's what I was told yesterday. That's what I was told this morning. Cloture is not in the bag.''

''Every senator understood this vote was it,'' Mitchell said. ''How many times do we have to say this vote is it. I don't know how it could have been made more clear.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - White House budget director Richard Darman said there is an ''implicit consensus'' among White House and congressional budget negotiators to cut the deficit by $45 billion to $60 billion next year.

Darman made his comments Thursday after negotiators ended a sometimes frustrating daylong discussion about possible cuts in entitlement programs such as Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and federal payments to veterans, farmers and civil servants.

That discussion - which participants described as an information session, not a bargaining session - produced no agreements on possible cuts and prompted two Republican negotiators to complain about apparant reluctance of Democratic lawmakers to make any cuts in entitlement programs.

Darman said the chairmen of committees or subcommittees dealing with benefit programs who made presentations to the group ''weren't actually proposing to cut the deficit.'' Others said they argued about why their areas can't be cut.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., gave what one negotiator called ''a Harvard lecture'' about his proposal to cut Social Security payroll taxes from their current 6.2 percent to 5.1 percent.

Moynihan's payroll tax cut would eat up the current Social Security trust fund surplus and prevent the administration from using the surplus to help pay for government operations, while at the same time masking the true size of the budget deficit.

While it did not appear Moynihan's talk changed the minds of any opponents of his six-month-old proposal, Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., predicted to the negotiating group it would pass the Senate and House if brought up for a vote.

But Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., ranking Republican on the Senate budget panel, and Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said after Moynihan's talk that they felt it might get only 30 votes in the 100-member Senate.

Darman said it was his belief the bipartisan negotiating group of congressmen and White House officials had pretty much agreed on how much deficit reduction they will seek in fiscal year 1991, which starts Oct. 1. Negotiators hope to agree on a five-year deficit reduction plan.

''There is an implicit consensus that the first year (cut) is in the 45 to 60 (billion dollar) range,'' Darman said, adding that the group also seems to agree that the amount of savings in subsequent years should grow, not shrink.

Congress and the White House have never agreed on more than about $25 billion in deficit reductions in past years, so the package the group is considering for fiscal 1991 would be about twice as big as any previous plan.

Also, in past budget summits, because many of the deficit savings in the first year were considered one-time ''gimmicks,'' savings in later years fell off sharply from first year savings levels.

Negotiators are trying to find a way to meet the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law's $64 billion deficit reduction target for fiscal 1991. If they fail, the law would require severe, automatic, across-the-board spending cuts split evenly between defense and domestic programs.

Some estimates have the deficit running as high as $250 billion next year, meaning a package of deficit savings totalling up to $60 billion would still miss the Gramm-Rudman target of $64 billion by a wide margin. Darman said if negotiators can agree on savings of up to $60 billion, they would take care of the accounting problems later.

Negotiators are scheduled to meet for the seventh time on Wednesday.

(JUNE 8) UPI - In Randy Johnson's first start since his no-hit performance, the left-hander couldn't provide the same drama but he proved to be just as effective.

This time out, the White Sox reached him for a single in the first inning, ending any speculation of a repeat performance Thursday afternoon in Seattle's 2-1 victory over Chicago.

''My stuff was comparable to the no-hitter,'' said Johnson, who worked 6 2-3 innings while striking out 10. ''I just wanted to keep us in the game. The Sox were up for facing me after the no-hitter.''

Last Saturday, Johnson hurled his masterpiece, the first in Seattle's history, and the first solo no-hitter of the season.

Robin Ventura lined a single with one out in the first, but Johnson returned to his no-hit form, retiring the last 20 batters to shut down Chicago.

Pitcher Barry Jones' errant pickoff allowed ex-White Sox Brian Giles to score the winning run in the eighth inning, as Johnson improved to 5-3 on the year.

Giles opened the eighth inning with a single off Donn Pall, 0-1, and advanced to second on Harold Reynolds' sacrifice bunt. Pinch hitter Henry Cotto followed with a checked-swing single, then Giles scored when Jones' low throw eluded first baseman Carlos Martinez for an error.

''A double play was in order, so I wanted to keep the runner close,'' said Jones. ''Those things happen. It was my fault.''

After Johnson survived a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the second inning, he made the rest look easy. Carlton Fisk and Martinez singled and Scott Fletcher walked, but Johnson retired Lance Johnson on a fielder's choice ground out via the plate, then fanned Ozzie Guillen and Sammy Sosa.

''It wasn't a no-hitter, but it was just as impressive,'' said Mariners Manager Jim Lefebvre. ''He has an ability to dominate a game.''

''We couldn't do much with the big guy,'' said Sox skipper Jeff Torborg. ''It was a well-pitched game. Unfortunately, it came down to one play.''

Elsewhere in the American League, California edged Kansas City 2-1, Baltimore topped Milwaukee 5-2, Boston blanked New York 3-0, Toronto trounced Minnesota 10-3, Detroit whitewashed Cleveland 8-0, and Texas downed Oakland 3-1.

In the NL, it was: Montreal 3, St. Louis 2; Pittsburgh 5, New York 4; Philadelphia 3, Chicago 1 and Cincinnati 6, Houston 1.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Angels 2, Royals 1

At Kansas City, Mo., Chuck Finley scattered four hits over eight innings to help California move over the .500 mark for the first time since May 18. Finley, 8-3, struck out seven batters and Mark Eichhorn worked the ninth for his 12th save. Bret Saberhagen, 5-4, suffered the loss despite striking out a season-high 12.

Orioles 5, Brewers 2

At Milwaukee, Dave Johnson and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter to lead Baltimore. Johnson, 5-3, took a shutout into the eighth inning before giving up a two-run homer to Paul Molitor. Gregg Olson pitched the ninth for his 14th save. Paul Mirabella, 2-1, suffered the loss.

Red Sox 3, Yankees 0

At Boston, Greg Harris allowed just one hit over eight innings, sending Boston to a sweep of the four-game series. Harris, 5-3, gave up only a fifth-inning single to Jesse Barfield while striking out seven without yielding a walk. Tim Leary, 3-7, took the loss.

Blue Jays 10, Twins 3

At Toronto, Kelly Gruber, Fred McGriff and George Bell paced a 16-hit attack with home runs and Toronto set a club record with eight doubles. Gruber and McGriff each provided two-run blasts and Bell added a solo shot as the Blue Jays amassed 11 extra-base hits. Todd Stottlemyre, 4-5, allowed seven hits over eight innings and Kevin Tapani, 6-4, took the loss.

Tigers 8, Indians 0

At Cleveland, Cecil Fielder drove in two runs, Gary Ward hit a solo home run and Tony Phillips highlighted a five-run eighth with a two-run double, giving Detroit a three-game series sweep. Brian DuBois, 3-3, allowed four hits over eight innings, his longest career outing. Bud Black, 4-3, took the loss.

Rangers 3, Athletics 1

At Arlington, Texas, Pete Incaviglia belted a two-run homer and Bobby Witt limited Oakland to six hits over eight innings. Witt, 3-7, struck out a season-high 11 and walked three and Kenny Rogers worked the ninth for his second save. Mike Moore, 4-6, absorbed the loss, giving up eight hits in eight innings.

(JUNE 8) UPI - Fearful of a possible big inning, Chicago Manager Don Zimmer decided to show no fear toward the major league's best hitter, Len Dykstra.

Zimmer might be more timid next time.

Dykstra extended his hitting streak to 20 games with a tie-breaking RBI double Thursday night to lift the Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Ken Howell, 7-3, tossed a five-hitter, notching only the second complete game of his career. He struck out eight and walked three to win his fourth straight decision.

''It was necessary,'' Howell said of his complete game. ''Those guys in the bullpen have been doing the job. They needed a break.''

Mike Bielecki, 3-4, took the loss for the Cubs, who have lost five straight, giving up six hits over 6 1-3 innings. He walked three and struck out three.

Dykstra, whose .414 average leads the majors, is batting .447 during the streak (38 for 85) - the longest in the majors this year.

''He (Dykstra) knows when he comes to the ballpark, he's going to play. He's in high heaven now,'' Phillies Manager Nick Leyva said.

Dykstra drew a walk in the third, and was intentionally walked with two outsin the fifth, only the second free pass he's been issued this season.

But Zimmer decided not to walk Dykstra in the seventh, when the Phillies snapped a 1-1 tie.

Darren Daulton singled to lead off and advanced on a wild pitch by Bielecki. Howell then sacrificed, and Dykstra hit the first pitch down the right field line, scoring Daulton.

''I didn't want to run into the chance that they would score three runs in the eighth,'' Zimmer said, explaining his strategy.

''No, I wouldn't have thought so,'' Dykstra said, when asked if he expected another free pass.

''He's to the point now where he has so much confidence in each at-bat,'' Leyva said. ''He goes up there thinking he can get a base hit. I knew I had the right man at the plate.''

It was Dykstra's 17th double, which ranks among the league leaders.

The Phillies added another run in the eighth on Charlie Hayes' RBI single off reliever Les Lancaster, driving in pinch runner Sil Campusano.

The start of the game was delayed 51 minutes because of rain.

Andre Dawson hit his 15th homer of the season to open the Cubs second, sending a 2-0 pitch from Howell into the left field bleachers. It was Dawson's 10th homer in his last 29 games.

The Phillies tied the score 1-1 in the fifth. Charlie Hayes doubled to lead off, only the second hit given up by Bielecki. Dickie Thon singled, advancing Hayes, who then scored on Darren Daulton's sacrifice fly to left.

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal topped St. Louis 3-2, Pittsburgh squeezed by New York 5-4 and Cincinnati pummeled Houston 6-1.

In the AL, it was: Seattle 2, Chicago 1; Baltimore 5, Milwaukee 2; California 2, Kansas City 1; Boston 3, New York 0; Toronto 10, Minnesota 3; Detroit 8, Cleveland 0 and Texas 3, Oakland 1.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Expos 3, Cardinals 2

At Montreal, Tim Wallach doubled in Tim Raines to cap a two-run rally in the sixth inning, lifting Montreal. Zane Smith, 3-3, went seven innings, allowing two runs and eight hits and Dave Schmidt notched his third save. Jose DeLeon fell to 5-4.

Pirates 5, Mets 4

At New York, Barry Bonds doubled home Bobby Bonilla with the go-ahead run in the eighth inning. Scott Ruskin, 1-1, the third Pirates pitcher, picked up the win with relief help from Bob Kipper, who earned his first save. Jeff Musselman, 0-1, took the loss.

Reds 6, Astros 1

At Houston, Jose Rijo allowed one hit through seven innings and Mariano Duncan hit a solo home run, as Cincinnati handed Houston its seventh straight loss. Rijo, 4-1, won his fourth straight decision, allowing no runs, while walking one and striking out four. Bill Gullickson suffered the defeat, dropping to 3-4.

OTTAWA (JUNE 8) UPI - Talks aimed at keeping Quebec part of Canada limped toward a sixth day Friday, reeling after the province's premier said he would no longer participate in discussions of a ''distinct society'' clause empowering Quebec to promote the French language and culture.

''Can it be possible we will destroy this country with legal niceties?'' Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said to reporters after releasing a statement saying he would no longer participate in talks ''that directly or indirectly touch on the distinct society clause.''

Bourassa left the talks after 12 hours, bringing Thursday's negotiations to an abrupt halt. The provincial leaders planned to resume their talks Friday.

Bourassa's move, after the fifth straight day of negotiations involving Mulroney and leaders of 10 provinces, threatened to bring this week's round of talks to a halt. Bourassa refused to explain why he would no longer address the issue when the distinct society clause has been discussed by political leaders for two days.

The amendment recognizes that Quebec constitutes within Canada a ''distinct society'' and gives it powers to promote that distinctiveness. The measure is at the heart of the highly charged negotiations that began Sunday.

The amendment was drafted three years ago by Mulroney and the provincial leaders after Quebec refused to sign the 1982 constitution on grounds it did not recognize the province's French-speaking population.

Outside the conference center, several hundred people watching nervously as leaders left the building began singing the national anthem.

''We had a long and very hard day,'' Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said. ''Today was a tough day. My hope is we can resolve some of the outstanding concerns that have been expressed.''

He said the talks must end soon. ''We're getting pretty close to having to fish or cut bait. What is at stake is the future, ... the well-being of Canada.''

Bourassa said he was willing to discuss other elements of the constitutional amendment, formally called the Meech Lake Accord. He said Quebec would discuss the distinct society clause in a second round of constitutional talks, but only after all provinces have approved the Meech Lake Accord.

Several premiers begged reporters to focus on the unity of the country.

''We must succeed in the interests of the country,'' Nova Scotia Premier John Buchanan said.

British Columbia Premier Bill Vander Zalm said: ''Canada is at the crossroads, and tomorrow we choose the road we take.''

The accord becomes void June 23 unless approved by all 10 provinces. Quebec has threatened it will consider seceding if the Meech Lake Accord is not approved or is altered in any way.

But opponents to the amendment, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Newfoundland, have argued that Quebec will use the proposed powers to pass laws that promote the French language and culture while violating the rights of English-speaking and other ethnic minorities.

Opponents want a so-called ''Canada clause'' inserted in the constitution that confirms the supremacy of the nation's Charter of Rights and Freedoms while providing a measure of protection to linguistic minorities in all provinces.

Bourassa has been under strong pressure from Quebec newspapers and his main political opponent, the separatist Parti Quebecois, to abandon the negotiations rather than make any concessions.

The constitutional talks have preoccupied Canadians for months. Opinion polls indicate that the majority of those outside Quebec oppose the Meech Lake accord because it gives the province a special status. Most Canadians believe Quebec will separate regardless of what happens to the Meech Lake accord.

Quebec opinion polls confirm that sentiment, with the majority of Francophones, including the business community, supporting secession.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - The Soviet Union and East European nations that have been giving aid to the Cambodian government intend to halt most of their economic assistance to Phnom Penh, The Washington Post reported Friday.

In a dispatch from Paris, the Post said the Vietnamese-backed government in Phnom Penh was told in the past month that as of January 1991 aid from Warsaw Pact countries will largely be replaced by pay-as-you-go commercial exchanges.

The story was based on a confidential report the Post said it obtained.

The report, commissioned by Western non-governmental charities operating in Cambodia, also said that an outstanding loan to the Soviet Union estimated at 250 million rubles - $400 million at the official exchange rate - will come due at the same time in hard currency, the Post said.

East European diplomats in Phnom Penh told the report's author, a former Belgian Senate foreign affairs adviser, that the aid cut was necessary for the Warsaw Pact nations to gain membership in the International Monetary Fund, the Post reported.

IMF membership is seen as a key element in leading East European nations toward financial stability.

''When adding up all the factors,'' report author Roaul Jennar wrote in the study, ''one must seriously question whether (the Cambodian government) can survive longer than six or 18 months.''

Replacing Warsaw Pact aid would be difficult for the Cambodian government. Non-communist governments and China have had no economic relations with Phnom Penh since 1979, when Vietnam invaded Cambodia and established the current leadership.

A cease-fire agreement was signed this week in Tokyo between Phnom Penh and two of the three resistance factions that have been waging civil war in the Southeast Asian nation. But the rebel Khmer Rouge, the most powerful of the resistance groups, refused to sign the document and the fighting has continued.

The Post said that once Phnom Penh received notice of the planned cut in aid, according to the report and independent sources, the government had to lay off 56,000 workers - one-fourth of its civil servants - and sell gold reserves to meet civilian and military needs.

(JUNE 8) UPI - South African President de Klerk ended a four-year state of emergency yesterday but retained special powers to deal with violence in the Natal province. The A-N-C called the move a ''half-measure'' and demanded the emergency also be lifted in the strife-torn province of Natal.

ROME (JUNE 8) UPI - Rome Friday became the ninth Italian city and fifth in three days to impose an alcohol ban during the World Cup.

The Roman prefect said all establishments in the province are prohibited from selling alcohol on match days. Rome will stage six games, including Saturday's match between Italy and Austria and the July 8 final. Other match dates are June 14, 19 and 25. The ban will last from 7 a.m. until midnight.

Italian Interior Minister Antonio Gava has strongly recommended all World Cup cities impose alcohol bans in an effort to keep drunken fans in check.

Other cities to announce sanctions are: Milan, Cagliari, Palermo, Turin, Florence, Verona, Bologna and Bari. Udine and Naples are the only World Cup cities not to announce bans.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (JUNE 8) UPI - A 4-year-old nationwide state of emergency lapsed Friday but the government reimposed emergency rules in strife-torn Natal province, where two policemen died in violence.

The end of the state of emergency, which gave the white government draconian powers of arrest and censorship and provoked international sanctions against South Africa, followed an announcement Thursday by President Frederik de Klerk that he was lifting the measure as part of his racial reform program.

Unknown gunmen shot and killed two policeman, one in a black township in Natal, in politically motivated violence only hours before an announcement in Friday's Government Gazette announced De Klerk was renewing the emergency in that Indian-Ocean province.

A police sergeant was killed in Ntuzuma, near the province's Indian Ocean port city of Durban, and another policeman died and one was hurt at Kagiso west of Johannesburg, when attackers sprayed their vehicle with machine-gun fire, police said in their official ''unrest'' report.

The nationwide emergency was first imposed on June 12, 1986, by De Klerk's predecessor, Pieter W. Botha, following black township uprisings. Botha renewed it annually, citing a ''revolutionary climate'' and ''unacceptably high'' levels of violence.

The Natal violence, which flared between rival Zulu factions in 1987, has since claimed some 3,000 lives despite sweeping powers of arrest the emergency has given police and tough curbs it placed on media coverage of rioting.

De Klerk said in his proclamation Friday he was declaring the fifth successive Natal emergency because ''circumstances have arisen ... which seriously threaten the safety of the public and the maintenance of public order, and that the ordinary law of the land is inadequate.''

De Klerk Thursday told a special sitting of the racially segregated three-chamber parliament, from which the black majority is excluded, lifting most of the emergency removed one of the ''major stumbling'' blocks to full power-sharing negotiations with blacks.

He called on the African National Congress to demonstrate its ''commitment to peace'' but received a mixed response from ANC leadership, which contrasted with a warm welcome of his action from Western leaders.

The movement's deputy president, Nelson Mandela, welcomed the announcement from Paris, where he was on the second stop of a 45-day tour of Europe, North America and several African nations. But in Johannesburg, ANC Internal Leader Walter Sisulu scorned the announcement as a ''half measure.''

The ANC demands an end to the emergency, the release of some 3,000 prisoners held for politically motivated crimes, and the safe return of about 20,000 political exiles as major conditions to talks with the government over a post-apartheid constitution.

Since taking office last September, De Klerk has started reforms that include legalizing black opposition, releasing Mandela and promising to phase out discriminatory laws but he is facing a growing right-wing backlash.

The white-supremacist Afrikaner Resistance Movement ''deplored'' the measure and said it indicated the government was unable to resist ''communist demands.''

The ruling National Party, which came to power in 1948, barely retained a parliamentary seat against a tough Conservative Party challenge Wednesday in its first test of white support for apartheid reform.

De Klerk also announced Thursday the release of 48 political prisoners and a review early next year of discriminatory laws covering land ownership and segregated residential areas.

The Bush administration welcomed the move and expressed hope the action would open the way for reform in the minority white-controlled nation.

White House spokeswoman Alixe Glen said the ''senseless killing in Natal must end'' but noted de Klerk's government ''has moved to meet almost all the opposition's requirements to enter into negotiations.''

''This is another significant step toward creating a climate conducive to negotiations that will lead to a democratic, nonracial South Africa. ... We are encouraged by the remarkable progress that has been made in recent months.''

In London, the British Foreign Office said in a statement that Britain warmly welcomed the ''further positive steps to help clear the way to negotiations.''

Foreign Minister Botha said de Klerk had not moved on the emergency to appease foreign governments, but because the security situation warranted it.

Pretoria now expects the world to display ''good faith,'' Botha said, in reference to the tough trade sanctions sparked by the emergency that Western governments imposed on South Africa in 1986.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 8) UPI - Exxon declared Alaska's coastline is recovering quickly from the nation's largest oil spill, but environmental leaders returned from touring oily beaches to condemn Exxon in strong language for leaving ''cleaned'' beaches oily.

''What amazed me was, you just flip over a rock and there's oil,'' singer John Denver said angrily after stepping off a helicopter late Thursday with state and private environmental officials carrying bags of oily rocks.

''I was very disappointed,'' Denver said, calling the Exxon cleanup far from finished despite the $2 billion the company has spent on the March 24 1989 spill, now in its second year of cleanup.

Denver said Exxon had removed most surface oil, giving beaches an appearance of being clean. But he said one beach was dirtier than when he saw it last year, and on others, ''If you dig down a few inches, there's oil everywhere.''

While Denver and environmentalists were following state officials around to beaches hit by last year's 11-million-gallon Exxon Valdez oil spill, Exxon was releasing reports from scientists it hired who said, ''Recovery is well under way on even the most severely impacted beaches.''

British researchers working for Exxon, Jenifer Baker, Robert Clark and Paul Kingston, said that ''the overall impact of the oil spill on the environment in Prince William Sound and Gulf of Alaska is likely to be short-lived.''

They said they found little oil and abundant plant and animal life.

Exxon paraded the team and its findings before a meeting of Coast Guard and federal agencies working on the spill in a presentation that occurred while state scientists and environmental officials were in Prince William Sound.

The rosy findings were based on ''field observations,'' not scientific study, said Gary Hayden, a state Department of Environmental Conservation official who dismissed the findings as ''insulting'' coming from ''somebody flying in from Great Britain, looking around'' and declaring everything OK.

Dennis Kelso, the DEC commissioner, said the reports appeared to be public relations, not science.

Exxon spokesman Karsten Rodvik acknowledged that the optimistic reports were based on observations and impressions, not scientific studies, but said they came from experienced oil spill researchers ''who look at this through different eyes'' and have a more valid assessment than observers like John Denver, state officials or environmentalists.

Denver said he believed Exxon was trying to deceive the American public. ''I don't trust Exxon,'' he added. I don't believe a thing they say.''

Jay Hair, president of the National Wildlife Federation, the country's largest conservation group, said the oily goo and grimy black rocks he picked up on beaches with Denver ought to be enough to refute the Exxon reports.

Hair pulled out a rock, clean on one side, oily on the other, and called the cleanup ''superficial, skin-deep.''

Hair said Exxon Corp. chairman Lawrence Rawl earlier in the day had turned down an invitation by Hair to privately tour oiled beaches together.

''The reason he's not coming,'' Hair said, ''is because he's going to see what we saw and the enormous amount of work left to do.''

If Rawl had visited beaches with them, Denver said, ''He would be humiliated and embarrassed'' by how much oil remains.

Hair and John Adams, director of the Natural Resource Defense Council, said the attitude of Rawl and Exxon made them even more intent on aggressively pursuing the $1 billion lawsuit their groups filed against Exxon in U.S. District Court after the spill, seeking an environmental restoration fund.

If what they saw was on the beaches of California, Massachusetts or Kennebunkport, Maine, Denver said, ''I'd say it would be news every day in America until it was cleaned up.''

The remoteness of Alaska beaches has put the spill out of mind and given Exxon the chance to ''pull the wool over the eyes of the American public '' Denver said.

''I'm taking a hard line against Exxon,'' Denver said, explaining that he was making his third trip to oily shores because ''I need to back it up with hard evidence.''

''I'm going to talk and sing about it all over the world,'' Denver said before leaving Alaska for a Friday night concert in Los Angeles.

Denver also said his Prince William Sound visit included a stop in the tiny native village of Chenega - inhabited by Aleuts who depend on hunting and fishing for survival and fear for their future after the spill - where he complied with a request to sing Rocky Mountain High.

(JUNE 8) UPI - Tornadoes in Kansas injure 18 people... President Bush continues politicking in the Midwest... Checkpoint Charlie at the Berlin Wall will become a museum piece... Those stories and more, coming up next from U-PI.

More severe weather battered parts of the Midwest yesterday. Authorities say at least 18 people were injured when several tornadoes ripped through Emporia, Kansas.

Hospital officials say a 24-year-old man and his infant daughter suffered serious injuries when a twister struck their home. 14 others were injured. But authorities do NOT report any fatalities from the storms.

Police say at least four tornadoes were confirmed to have touched down and lifted up in and around the western and southern parts of Emporia. One resident of a trailer park, Catherine Castorena, says she never experienced a tornado before and was particulary fearful because her children were in the mobile home when the twister hit.

Castorena adds she saw the powerful winds pick up an empty car and drop it on a building.

Besides the tornadoes, the National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning for four Kansas counties- western Douglas, northern Lyon, northern Osage and southeastern Shawnee.

President Bush continues his campaign swing through the Midwest today when he speaks at a fund-raiser in Iowa for two-term Governor Terry Branstad. Bush is pressing the success of his meeting with President Gorbachev, saying new grain agreements will give an economic boost to farmers.

Aides say the president will continue to tout the success of the summit when he travels on to Nebraska later today to speak on behalf of U-S Senate candidate Hal Daub before returning to Washington.

In Illinois, yesterday, Bush spoke at a one-Million-dollar fund-raiser for Jim Edgar, who hopes to succeed 14-year Republican Governor Jim Thompson. The president also was in Wisconsin to stump for incumbent G-O-P Governor Tommy Thompson.

When Bush returns to Washington later today, he'll help celebrate the 65th birthday of first lady Barbara Bush. A spokeswoman for Mrs. Bush says the first lady will spend a quiet birthday weekend at Camp David with the president.

(JUNE 8) UPI - NATO foreign ministers are completing a two-day summit in Scotland today... while Warsaw Pact leaders in Moscow have agreed to reshape their alliance.

The status of a unified Germany's alliance status was the critical issue for the 16 NATO foreign ministers. Secretary of State Baker told his counterparts that Soviet President Gorbachev probably realizes that a united Germany will freely choose its own military alliance.

The status of a united Germany was unresolved at last weekend's summit in Washington between Gorbachev and President Bush.

The two-day session ends today with a closing statement pointing to the July 5th and 6th summit of NATO heads of state in London.

In Moscow, Warsaw Pact leaders ended their first meeting since the democracy revolution swept Eastern Europe. They agreed on the need to reform their alliance to stress political rather than military issues.

In Prague, Czechoslovakian President Havel says members approved in principle a draft proposal that eventually would create a new security confederation in Europe. In it, the East and West military alliances would merge.

The Air Force successfully launched a spy satellite early this morning the old-fashioned way... on top of a rocket and NOT from a space shuttle.

Sources say the Air Force Titan-4 rocket was carrying an electronic signals intelligence satellite... called ELINT... which is designed to intercept data from Soviet rocket tests and to eavesdrop on other communication.

The seven-BILLION-dollar Titan-4 program is the centerpiece of a military space buildup to eliminate Pentagon reliance on the shuttle for launching heavy military payloads. The Titan-4 can place 10-thousand-pound payloads into the high orbits favored by strategic reconnaissance satellites.

The military suffered a severe backlog of satellite launches after the destruction of the shuttle Challenger in January 1986.

The Titan-4 program has been plagued by technical snags and... according to government auditors... mismanagement that resulted in cost overruns.

Air Force officials say the program is back on track. By 1995, up to nine Titan-4's will be launched a year from sites in Florida and California.

(JUNE 8) UPI - The first mate of an oil tanker that ran aground and leaked 260-thousand gallons of heavy fuel oil in a New Jersey waterway yesterday has been arrested.

Authorities say 52-year-old Geoffrey Frederick Gregory of England is charged with operating a vessel while under the influence of alcohol and unlawful discharge of a pollutant into a waterway. Gregory was ''spotting'' when the British tanker ran aground. That means he was the one looking for any obstruction in front of the ship.

The accident in the Kill Van Kull forced Coast Guard officials to close the channel, one of the busiest waterways in the world. It separates Staten Island and New Jersey and connects Upper New York Bay with Newark Bay.

New York state environmental officials say some oil has drifted to shore and threatens wildlife on Prall's and Shooter's Island. A spokesman for the New York Environmental Conservation Department calls the spill ''significant.''

But a Coast Guard spokesman says the particular type of oil is the easiest to contain because it's thick.

One of the most famous focal points of the Cold War... Berlin's Checkpoint Charlie... soon will be little more than a memory.

The checkpoint was established soon after Communist East Germany built the wall in 1961 to separate the eastern part of the city from the western.

Military policemen have stopped conducting check-in procedures for British French and American soldiers wishing to head to the eastern half of the city.

U-S Embassy spokesman Tony Sariti said- quoting here- ''The Checkpoint Charlie role is now over as far as we are concerned.''

U-S officials in Berlin say the Allied guardhouses on the west side of the checkpoint will be removed soon and will be offered to a nearby museum depicting the wall's history.

Checkpoint Charlie has seen some of the more ingenious escapes from East Berlin. In one instance, several East Germans boldly marched through the checkpoint dressed in American military uniforms that had been smuggled to them in the east.

(JUNE 8) UPI - A wave of thunderstorms that unleashed tornadoes, high winds and heavy rain on the central Plains rolled eastward early Friday, while storms caused flooding in the Midwest and cooler air pressed toward the West Coast.

The National Weather Service said strong thunderstorms with winds gusting to 60 mph were reported Friday in southern Iowa. Dense fog settled in southeast Nebraska, where visibility at the Lincoln airport fell to 1/16th of a mile.

Flash flood warnings in Kansas were canceled Friday as a powerful storm front rolled east and lost some of its momentum, but residents were advised to be on the lookout for standing water in low-lying areas.

The storm front produced a series of tornadoes Thursday that raked Emporia Kan., tossing cars, flattening buildings and injuring at least 18 people. Four others went to hospitals because of chest pains or other stress-related complications but no deaths were reported, officials said.

One of the four tornadoes reported in Emporia carved a path three blocks wide and eight blocks long through the east-central Kansas city of 25,000, said police Capt. Bob Rodriguez.

Catherine Castorena, 31, who lives in a mobile home park in southwestern Emporia, said a twister soared over her trailer and then picked up a car.

''It sounded like a lion roaring,'' she said.

After the tornado passed over, Castorena said, ''I saw tin, wheels, and a car (in the twister). The car was in an empty lot and the tornado picked it up to a distance of about 100 feet in the air and dropped it on a building.''

National Guardsmen patrolled the western edge of the city, where the tornado cut a swath through a 40-square-block area on the eve of the anniversary of a June 8, 1974, twister that killed five people in about the same area.

Other parts of east-central and northeast Kansas were hit by funnel clouds hail, and strong winds Thursday evening but no injuries were reported.

A tornado destroyed 10 small planes Thursday at Spirit of St. Louis Airport, about 20 miles west of St. Louis. The roof was torn off a hangar, small planes were strewn about the runway, tossed upside down and driven nose-first into the tarmac. A $13,000 Cessna sailed 100 feet past four other planes before crashing to the ground.

The same storm system blew the polyester bubble roof from an ice arena in Jefferson City and a barn was blown onto a highway with a cow still inside south of the city, authorites said.

A severe thunderstorm moved through far northeastern Oklahoma late Thursday, as 70-mph winds were reported north of the town of Copan, a few miles from the Kansas border. The NWS said although there was still scattered thunderstorm activity Friday along the border, the storm had lost much of its punch.

In the Midwest, storms were active in southern and central Illinois early Friday. Heavy rainfall, lightning and hail were reported throughout the area, but no significant damage was reported.

Kentucky also saw four tornadoes Thursday around Louisville. Indiana had flooding along the Little Blue River, the NWS said.

A flash flood warning was posted Friday in Madison and Hamilton counties in Indiana, and the NWS reported 3.75 inches of rain in about three hours in the Town of Sheridan in Hamilton County, 25 miles north of Indianapolis.

Strong thunderstorms with gusty winds were reported in the Indianapolis area and east into Ohio, just north of Dayton.

Weather was kinder in the South, where it was hot and humid with scattered thundershowers. Temperatures early Friday ranged from 71 in Knoxville, Tenn., to 78 in Charleston, S.C., and 81 in Miami.

Skies were fair overnight in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, with patches of fog in the early morning hours. West Virginia had some showers and thunderstorms, while it was partly cloudy in Maryland, with lows in the 60s.

Balmy weather predominated in New England Friday. Skies were generally clear and temperatures were in the 50s and 60s early Friday.

The West, warmed to record temperatures this week by sunny weather and clear skies, was expected to cool over the weekend as an unseasonably brisk Pacific front pushed cool, wet weather into the region, forecasters

#90159u0684 06/08/1990 ~United Press International
(JUNE 8) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed lower Friday in moderate trading as investors worried over sagging futures and bond prices.

The blue-chip Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues, which surged 239.00 points Thursday, fell 199.21 points to end the week at 32,993.29.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all listed issues lost 16.66 points to 2,411.78.

An estimated 700 million shares changed hands, compared with 661 million shares on Thursday.

Declines outnumbered advances 558 to 398 while 178 issues remained unchanged.

Analysts said the market fell in part because the spread between futures index and the Nikkei narrowed unexpectedly, and some investors thought a bearish trend was upcoming.

''The spread traded high on Thursday at 1050 points over the Nikkei Average, but it narrowed to between 700 and 800 points during the day,'' said Kevin Parker, head of futures and arbitrage at Morgan Stanley International in Tokyo.

''Actually, that's about fair value. But a lot of people had been expecting a buy market, and they found a sell market.''

A Japanese securities dealer said confidence eroded after a brief morning rally when investors trying to bid up futures prices failed.

But Parker said a rise in the yield of government bonds and expectations of a higher U.S. dollar next week also drove the market down.

''People expected the bond yield to go down to the 6.75 range, but instead it closed over 7 percent for the first time in weeks,'' Parker said.

The yield on the 10-year benchmark government bond closed at 7.02 percent.

A rising yield, caused by a drop in bond prices on the secondary market, tends to attract investment away from stocks.

Parker said that market players, ''for whatever reason,'' concluded the U.S. dollar would strengthen next week, leading them to fear a pullback on the stock market.

On the trading floor, banking, shipbuilding, construction and high-tech issues all eased.

Housing issues, such as Misawa Home and Sekisui House, managed small gains.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices closed broadly higher in heavy trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange, as early weakness was overwhelmed by brisk buying in property stocks.

The closely-watched Hang Seng Index, which lost 27.19 points Thursday, climbed 29.03 points or 1 percent to end the week at 3,174.33.

Among the narrower indexes, utilities inched up 1.93, financials gained 11.41,industrials climbed 14.85 and properties surged 109.39 points.

An estimated 2.18 billion shares changed hands, up slightly from the 2.10 billion shares on Thursday.

''The market just refuses to lie down and play dead,'' said Howard Gorges, an analyst with South China Securities.

''We have had a very mild consolidation over the past few days, but stocks began to break out during the day in very good volume. ''The blue chips led the index on strong overseas buying, but a lot of secondary issues also had a good showing,'' Gorges said.

Stocks opened lower and sank almost 10 points before a midday rally.

In Singapore, stock prices closed higher in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange for the third consecutive session, sparking hopes for a revival of interest in the market.

The key Straits Times Industrial Index, which gained 2.17 points Thursday, rose 14.97 points to 1568.07. The narrower All Singapore Index gained 2.52 points to 438.46.

An estimated 80.20 million shares changed hands, compared with 58.8 million shares on Thursday.

Analysts said the gain was heartening after a streak of listless performances, with institutional interest evident in banking stocks.

The market's short-term direction continued to remain hazy however in the absence of fresh incentives.

''If there is further upward movement, we might see a slight recovery,'' one analysts said.

On the trading floor, Fraser and Neave ordinary shares paced the advancing issues followed by Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. rights (foreign shares), Singapore Land, Development Bank of Singapore and Magnum Corp.

Isetan Corp. led the declining issues followed by Singapore Land warrants, Asia Pacific Brewing, Overseas United Enterprises and National Iron.

In Manila, stock prices closed higher in moderate trading on the Manila Stock Exchange, buoyed by bargain-hunting late in the session.

The closely-watched Manila Composite Stock Index of 25 selected blue-chip issues, which climbed 24.22 points or 3.26 percent Thursday, added 7.62 points to end the week at 764.53.

Analysts said the worries that another coup attempt could occur during the weekend or early next week kept most large institutional sidelined.

Market watchers blame acting chief of staff Major General Rodelfo Biazon, who recently warned that a coup attempt could be launched by rebel soliders around the Independence Day holiday on June 12.

On the trading floor, mining and oil stocks were among the market highlights, ending with modest gains.

In Australia, stock prices closed lower in moderate trading on the Sydney Sharemarket, although there was a partial recovery in late in the session.

The blue-chip All Ordinaries Index, which plunged 17.7 points on Thursday, lost 5.1 points to 1,504.1. The index had been off 14 points earlier in the session.

The closely-watched Gold Index fell 41.7 points or 3 percent to 1,309.2 as the value of gold bullion fell to its lowest level in 4 years on the spot market.

An estimated 138.3 million shares chnaged hands, compred with 98.7 million shares on Thursday.

Declines led advances 148 to 107, while 204 stocks remained unchanged.

Analysts said the late recovery followed the release of revised jobless figures which revealed that the April unemployment number was 6.5 percent, not 6.8 percent as previously reported.

The higher unemployment number fueled hopes that the government would now see its way clear to cut interest rates, analysts said.

On the trading floor, in a weak banking sector, ANZ Bank trading ex-dividend, fell 5 cents to $4.65.

Elders IXL lost 5 cents to $1.85 after announcing that it was delaying its capital repayment.

News Corp. gained 15 cents to $10.65 after the company announced it planned to float 49 percent of the South China Morning Post on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange.

DES MOINES (JUNE 8) UPI - President Bush pressed a high-stakes political swing through the Midwest Friday with the promise that trade agreements signed at his superpower summit with Mikhail Gorbachev are "nothing but good news" for farmers.

Continuing to tout the recently completed talks with the Soviet president as he began a second day of top-dollar fund-raising, Bush again praised the new superpower rapport and pointed to the 1959 visit of former Soviet Chairman Nikita Khrushchev to an Iowa farm. "How amazed Chairman Khrushchev would have been," Bush said in remarks prepared for a morning fund-raiser on behalf of two-term Gov. Terry Branstad.

As he did at a $1 million fund-raiser Thursday night in Chicago for Jim Edgar, who hopes to succeed 14-year Republican Gov. Jim Thompson, Bush predicted far-reaching benefits from the accords signed last week.

"An improved trade relationship between our two countries means expanded markets for American goods and services - and expanded markets for Iowa corn and soybeans," Bush said. "That's nothing but good news for Iowa farmers." The speech on Branstad's behalf was Bush's third at a political event in less than 24 hours.

However, in praising the governor, who supported Ronald Reagan over Bush in 1980, the president sidestepped the controversial question of abortion rights that threatens to polarize the election this fall.

Iowa is one of several states where the anti-abortion movement first flexed political muscle in 1978 and where it will be tested in November. With the National Abortion Rights Action League backing Don Avenson, the Democratic speaker of the Iowa House, against staunch abortion foe Branstad, clear battle lines have been drawn.

Bush, who also threw his weight behind Gov. Tommy Thompson in Wisconsin Thursday, also stopped short of pronouncing a complete thaw in superpower relations.

"These agreements, we hope, represent the beginning of the end of the Cold War - and a new relationship of enduring cooperation between the Soviet and American peoples," Bush said.

He planned to consult privately with members of the National Pork Producers Council in Des Moines before heading to Omaha, Neb., for another campaign appearance for underdog Senate candidate Hal Daub.

Bush was expected to raise an estimated $2 million on the 32-hour swing for the GOP candidates in the four Midwest states. Last year, aides said he raised an estimated $25 million, and so far this year, has tallied some $20 million.

Though noting superpower disputes remain over Lithuania's drive for independence and the future military status of Germany, Bush said Thursday that his summit with Gorbachev should be measured by the working relationship it fostered. "I believe last week's summit can alter history " he said. "Our many hours of talk led to, frankly, a much better understanding."

Bush resumes his summit follow-up talks upon his return Friday evening over dinner with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and on Monday with East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere.

The summit agreement committing the Soviets to buy more U.S. grain over the next five years paved the way in the Farm Belt for a warm reception, especially in Iowa and Illinois, top grain-producing states.

Midwesterners also hope to gain from a new U.S.-Soviet trade agreement that Bush said will mean "expanded markets for American goods and services." That agreement is contingent on the Soviets liberalizing their emigration laws.

The Soviets agreed to the grain deal, which could mean billions for American farmers, only after Bush decided to not hold the trade pact hostage to concern about the Soviet economic squeeze of Lithuania. Terming the grain agreement as one that will bring "business to farmers," he pledged, "I'm not going to let food be used as a political weapon."

LONDON (JUNE 8) UPI - Stock prices were lower at midday Friday in thin trading on the London International stock exchange as the current two-week trading account drew to a close.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which climbed 19.9 points Thursday, was off 10.6 points to 2,367.3. The narrower top 30 industrial average was off 8.1 points to 1,895.9.

Volume amounted to around 258 million shares compared with 338 million shares traded during the same period Thursday.

Market watchers, noting the low trading activity, said many large institutional investors seemed reluctant to take out new positions before the start of the new trading account next week.

Analysts also noted the lack of fresh economic news in which to trade. Early next week the British government is expected to issue its latest estimates on retail sales, unemployment and average earnings for workers.

Among the most widely traded stocks, B.A.T Industries eased 3 cents to $10.45, Imperial Chemical Industries lost 11 cents to $19.48, Barclays Bank PLC lost 3 cents to $6.40 and British Petroleum remained unchanged at $5.08.

CHICAGO (JUNE 8) UPI - A one-time Watergate prosecutor and the first woman to lead the American Bar Association has resigned to pursue other opportunities. Jill Wine-Banks, in a letter to the ABA board of governors, said Thursday she will step down as chief operating officer of the 360,000-member ABA "to explore several other exciting opportunities awaiting me." Wine-Banks refused to elaborate.

Wine-Banks, 47, drew raised eyebrows when she wore mini-skirts to court during the 1970s Watergate hearings in Washington. Her tenure as chief operating officer of the largest voluntary professional organization in the world was also not without controversy.

Wine-Banks was accused of using her clout to persuade the state attorney general to prosecute her dog's veterinarian after the pet died after eating a tampon. Veterinarian Mell Wostoupal was suspended after being charged with mistreating Wine-Banks dog, Finnegan. Wine-Banks also was criticized for spending ABA money by riding in a limousine equipped with a television.

"The dog was easily explainable - that was her business," said L. Stanley Chauvin Jr., ABA president. "And the car was easily explainable." He said Wine-Banks and the bar reached an agreement about providing her with a car and the limo she rented was cheaper than buying a vehicle. When the criticizm started she bought a car.

The Finnegan incident had "nothing to do with" Wine-Banks resignation, said Dick Collins, an ABA spokesman, who also denied Wine-Banks departure was related to her salary.

The ABA board expressed its displeasure with Wine-Banks recently by refusing to aprove a salary raise she requested. Wine-Banks was making more than $200,000, said Thomas Greene, an association board member who defended Wine-Banks. "What she did, she did with real class," Greene said. "She did things with a flair."

George Bushnell Jr., head of the bar's House of Delegates, said Wine-Banks was criticized because of "culture shock." "The ABA has, until the last five years, been an organization of staid and conservative male lawyers," Bushnell said. "Jill was neither staid nor conservative nor male. She caused a lot of discomfort simply because she represented radical change."

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Prices opened higher Friday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues, bouncing back from Thursday's decline.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 14.32 Thursday, was up 6.55 to 2903.88 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 443-396 among the 1,379 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 12,000,000 shares.

Stocks closed lower in moderate trading Thursday, pressured by profit taking after the market's surge to record highs and by computerized program selling.

Prices opened higher and tried to rally after falling Tuesday and Wednesday. But profit taking after the record highs of the past few weeks cut short a bid for a rally. The market rebounded to modestly higher levels before profit taking resurfaced and prices turned lower.

Program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, exacerbated the decline.

Jim Andrews, first vice president in charge of institutional trading at Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia, said bargain-hunting after the profit taking cushioned the decline.

He said the market was simply consolidating its gains and pointed out the end of the second quarter is coming and money on the sidelines is going to start coming into the market for ''window-dressing'' purposes.

Institutional money managers typically seek to invest at the end of the quarter, when they are judged on their performance, and seek to avoid having a surplus of uninvested cash.

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) UPI - A team of scientists has produced what it claims are the nation's first genetically engineered calves in work that could lead to healthier cattle that produce leaner meat. The oldest of the experimental cattle, a 15-month-old bull, even carries a human gene, researchers said Thursday.

The three bulls and one hiefer are being raised at a Leon County ranch owned by Granada BioSciences of Houston. The calves were given an extra gene while still embryos with the goal of using such genetic engineering to produce cattle with leaner meat and cows that produce more milk.

While the bull's growth has been less than hoped for, the technique could lead to the breeding of strong, healthy cattle without the use of steroids said David Eller, Granada chairman and chief executive officer.

"The purpose of these kinds of things is to prevent disease, make animals more immune to particular kinds of diseases," Eller said. "In the broad analysis, it's to make food-producing animals more economical for producers to grow and more healthy for the diet-conscious, health-conscious consumers of today."

Genetic engineering has been conducted successfully on chickens, pigs, sheep, and laboratory animals. But Granada said its work is the first known use of such procedures on cattle in the United States.

The work was done by researchers from Granada, Houston's Baylor College of Medicine and Dallas' Howard Hughes Medical Institute. Granada has another 60 to 70 cows pregnant with genetically engineered fetuses.

To produce their first genetically engineered bull, scientists used a gene that originally came from a human cell. The gene was reproduced in the laboratory in a bacteria culture.

The scientists used an estrogen receptor gene, which promotes growth. The hope was that an animal carrying the extra estrogen gene would enjoy the same benefits steroids provide without the health risks.

Two years ago, the scientists injected a solution containing the gene into the embryo when it was stil a single cell. The embryo then was implanted in a surrogate cow. As the cell multiplied, the extra gene was multiplied with it and incorporated into each of the bull's cells. The three remaining calves were given extra bovine genes.

The genetic engineering method is left to chance in one respect, scientists said, because they have no way of controlling where the gene will land on a cell's chromosome chain. If it does not fall on the proper spot, it will not function.

"We cannot say, and I'm not willing to say, any of the animals we have produced or those we're about to produce will have commerical value," said Granada scientist Ken Bondioli. "This is research in its infancy. There's a lot of potential there. We don't think we have all the answers."

PHNOM PENH, CAMBODIA (JUNE 8) UPI - Cambodia's Vietnamese-backed government has detained six senior officials, including a Cabinet minister for secretly setting up a political party to compete with the ruling Communist Party, government sources said Friday.

The six officials are being held in a government guest house for questioning about possible connections between their party, called the Social Democrat Liberal Party, and the three-party resistance coalition fighting the government in Phnom Penh, said a government source who asked not to be identified.

''There are two possibilities: if this organization has no connection with the rebels, they will be released,'' the source said. ''But if there is a connection they must go to trial because it is an attempt to destabilize the government.''

The party was said to have tried to recruit members from among mid-level government officials.

Earlier Khieu Kanharith, editor in chief of the state-owned Kampuchea weekly newspaper, confirmed the detentions in a telephone interview, but denied reports that there had been an attempted coup detat.

''This is not a big matter because only a few people are involved,'' he said.

He also said it was not strictly illegal to form a political organization, but was against government policy.

''First they should have sought government agreement,'' he said. ''It has been government policy that all political organizations should wait until there is an end to the fighting.''

The editor, who often acts as an unofficial government spokesman, confirmed that one of those arrested was Ung Phan, the minister of communications, transport and posts, but declined to name the others.

Dissident sources in Bangkok said those arrested included Nou Sakoun, head of planning for the communications ministry, Khay Matouvy, head of construction for the Ministry of National Defense, and Mom Savay, director of the Institute of Sociology.

The others were identified as another defense ministry official and an assistant departmental head in the ministry of foreign affairs.

Official sources described Ung Phan, 42, who has been a minister since 1979 and in charge of communications since 1985, as a confidant of Prime Minister Hun Sen.

''He is close friends with Hun Sen and (National Assembly President) Chea

Sim,'' said one official. ''They were together in the anti-American movement from 1970 to 1975.''

A colleague said Ung Phan was known for being open-minded and courageous.

''Last year when the Khmer Rouge (guerrillas) blew up a bridge near Battambang (Cambodia's second-largest city) and the militia couldn't handle the situation, he went there himself and stayed for more than a month, sleeping in the fields until they had rebuilt the bridge,'' the colleague said.

The arrests occurred shortly before the latest round of peace talks on Cambodia, which last week resulted in a vague agreement on a ceasefire that has not slowed fighting.

The continued fighting and increasing corruption among government officials have left the government of Hun Sen politically vulnerable.

Some government officials have called for a multi-party system for Cambodia, but Hun Sen has said there would be no point in having such a system until there was a peace agreement with the three-party resistance.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 8) UPI - Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus said Friday the government will allow 101 Vietnamese refugees rescued by a U.S. ship last month to disembark on Philippine soil if Washington guarantees they will be resettled within six months.

''I have decided today that they can disembark if we can get a guarantee from the Americans,'' Manglapus told reporters. ''We are waiting for the U.S. government to guarantee that they will be removed from the Philippines within six months.''

U.S. officials could not be immediately contacted for comment but an American refugee official was quoted in Pacific Stars and Stripes, the U.S. military newspaper, as saying that resettlement cannot be done in six months ''because 3,000 other boat people are in line ahead of them.''

The salvage ship USS Beaufort rescued the refugees at sea last May 24 and 26. They are now being sheltered in the combat stores ship USS White Plains docked at the American-run Subic Bay Naval Base, 60 miles northest of Manila.

Representatives from the U.N. High Commission for Refugees and Manila Archbishop Jaime Sin have appealed to the Philippine government to reconsider its decision on humanitarian grounds, but the officials remain steadfast.

''They will not die in the U.S. ship,'' Manglapus said. ''The food there is very good.''

The hardline Philippine action followed an endorsement last month of a resolution adopted at a U.N.-sponsored workshop in Manila urging the forced repatriation of boat people deemed economic, not political, refugees.

The United States and Vietnam oppose the measure for humanitarian reasons.

But Hong Kong and countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations - Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines, Singapore and Brunei - have complained that the indefinite presence of the refugees is straining their economies.

''I am glad that Secretary Manglapus has decided to uphold our position,'' said Ambassador Romualdo Ong, Philippine director general for Asian and Pacific affairs.

''We cannot allow this to continue. We have 25,000 refugees now. If they do not qualify as refugees, they become a burden to the host country. Why don't they send them to Guam or to Hawaii?''

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 8) UPI - The families of at least 210 U.S. servicemen in the Philippines want to return to the United States early following recent killings of American soldiers, a U.S. official said Friday.

Late Thursday, the Senate passed a bill sought by President Corazon Aquino setting stiff penalties for leaders of anti-government coups. Aquino has survived six coup attempts since she took office four years ago.

Lt. Col. Ronald Rand, a spokesman at U.S. Clark Air Base, said 150 families in the facility had responded to an early departure program survey saying they would leave the Philippines before the end of the regular tour of duty of the soldiers.

Rand said those desiring to go back comprised 3 percent of the families of servicemen at Clark, the largest U.S. air base in Asia.

He said 60 families at the nearby Subic Bay Naval complex, the logistics and repair center for the 7th fleet of the U.S. Navy, also wanted to leave. That would be 2 percent of dependents stationed at Subic, he said.

The U.S. Pacific command in Hawaii offered an early departure program for dependents of American soldiers last week, saying the move was ''in reaction to the continuing and increased threat to Americans'' in the Philippines.

Three American servicemen were killed outside Clark and Subic last month in attacks blamed on communist guerrillas, bringing to 11 the number of U.S. nationals slain in politically motivated incidents in the past three years.

The 19,000-member communist New People's Army has said it will continue killing Americans unless Washington dismantles its six milites.

U.S. basing rights expire in September 1991. Philippine and U.S. officials are negotiating an extension of the lease covering the bases.

There are 9,209 U.S. troops, 10,478 dependents and 620 civilian employees stationed at Clark.

Rand said the departures would begin ''in the next couple of weeks.'' He said the program was ''open ended'' and the number of those leaving could possibly increase.

The Pentagon Thursday said it had shortened the length of U.S. military tours of duty in the Philippines as part of a series of measures it has taken to protect U.S. nationals assigned in the country.

The tour of single servicemen and servicewomen has been cut from 24 months to 18 months and to 24 months from 36 months for those who have families.

The Senate voted 20-0 Thursday to pass a bill setting the punishment for convicted coup leaders from the government or military at up to 40 years in prison. Civilian plotters would face up to 30 years.

The bill, which the House of Representatives must approve before Aquino signs it into law, also raises the penalty for rebellion to 30 years imprisonment and makes it a non-bail offense. Under existing law, rebellion carries a penalty of from six to 12 years in jail and allows bail.

The vote came one day before limited emergency powers granted to Aquino by Congress in January to deal with the economic impact of the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt expired.

At least 119 people were killed and more than 500 were wounded in the December uprising, the sixth since Aquino took power in 1986.

The lower chamber has been debating two bills on rebellion, one making it a capital crime punishable by death and the other establishing a penalty of life imprisonment. The House version also makes a coup attempt a crime.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (JUNE 8) UPI - Thousands of Moslem separatists marched from an Islamic holy site toward a U.N. office in Srinagar Friday but were dispersed by Indian security forces who fired tear gas and beat demonstrators.

There was no reliable count of the number of people injured in the confrontation. Police sources said four people were taken to hospital by Kashmiri authorities, but witnesses said at least 50 were injured, some of them hit by tear gas cannisters.

The march by an estimated 20,000 people came after more than 100,000 Kashmiri Moslems staged a rally at Hazratbal, Islam's holiest site in the Kashmir Valley, where tradition holds that a hair from the prophet Mohammed's beard is preserved.

Kashmiri militants, who are demanding independence from predominantly Hindu India, addressed the crowd, repeating their demands for freedom and threatening to spread their violent campaign of secession to other parts of the country.

"If police atrocities on Kashmiris don't stop, we will send death squads to other states in India for creating terrorism there," said one young man his face covered with a blue and white scarf.

The demonstration came less than 24 hours after militant Kashmiris forced their way into a home in Bijbehara, 25 miles south of Srinagar, and assassinated the uncle of Indian Home Minister Mufti Mohammed Sayeed.

Sayeed traveled Friday from New Delhi to Bijbehara, his hometown, after learning of the assassination of his maternal uncle, Ghulam Hassan Shah, 80. After attending his uncle's funeral, Sayeed embarked upon a two-day tour of the troubled Kashmir region, where the pro-independence uprising gained momentum in mid-January after at least 35 people were killed in a clash between demonstrators and security forces.

Authorities also discovered the body of a man hanging from a tree Friday in Julgam village near the Indo-Pakistan border. The man apparently was killed by militants who suspected him of being a police informant. A note found on the body said, "We killed him for his sins." It was signed by the Hizb ul Mujahideen, a Moslem fundamentalist group.

The mass rally in Srinagar began shortly after weekly Friday prayers. After hearing a number of militant speakers, about 20,000 people, most of them young men, left the holy site and continued the protest.

The crowd marched toward the headquarters of the U.N. observation team, which monitors the 1949 cease-fire line that divides the disputed Kashmir region between India and Pakistan, and were confronted to Indian security forces. The security forces dispersed the marchers by firing tear gas and advancing on the crowd with truncheons.

Kashmiris believe their collective interests have been consistently ignored by successive Hindu-dominated New Delhi administrations. They also complain that New Delhi reneged on a promise to hold a plebiscite so Kashmiris could decide if they want to remain a part of India or join Pakistan.

FORT WORTH, Texas (JUNE 8) UPI - General Dynamics plans to make its largest round of employee cuts so far this year with elimination of up to 800 jobs in coming weeks, company spokesmen said Friday in a published report.

The cutbacks are the latest in a series of work force reductions at the company which builds military jets, the Dallas Times Herald reported. The company announced long-term plans in April to eliminate up to 7,000 employees from a work force that numbered about 32,000.

About 450 General Dynamics workers have been laid off since company Vice President and General Manager Charles Anderson said the shrinking defense budget would necessitate long-term cuts in the work force.

''This situation is the unhappy result of changing business and world conditions,'' Anderson wrote in a newsletter to employees Wednesday. ''It is unfortunate that our industry and employees must bear the brunt of these changes. It is the price we in this industry will pay for enhanced peace and stability.''

The company expected to notify 500 to 800 employees of layoffs in coming weeks, spokesman Joe Stout said. The cutbacks will affect both salaried and hourly workers.

Stout said none of the layoffs would occur this week, but would happen before the end of the month.

The company said it planned to open a career-transition center, which provides clerical help and other assistance for laid-off workers as they search for new jobs.

Even after the planned layoffs, with more than 30,000 workers remaining, General Dynamics still would be the largest employer in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

General Dynamics makes a variety of military aircraft. Its primary production project is the F-16 fighter plane. The company expects additional layoffs as production of the F-16 for the U.S. Air Force falls to 150 planes a year from its previous level of 180 planes annually.

The Fort Worth plant is under contract to make 600 of the F-16 planes during the next four years. However, even that reduced level of production may be cut further, Anderson has said in past interviews.

GENEVA (JUNE 8) UPI - Black South Africa leader Nelson Mandela, still in the first week of a gruelling 14-nation tour, cut back on appointments

Friday because of general weariness but insisted he felt ''good.''

Mandela, 71, said more changes were being considered in the remainder of his six-week trip, which includes a seven-city tour of the United States and a meeting with President Bush in Washington.

''A cutback is quite possible,'' he told reporters after arriving 45 minutes late at the World Council of Churches and cutting his visit there from two hours to one hour.

Mandela, appearing on the day the nationwide state of emergency expired in his homeland, looked somewhat tired but walked straight and talked firmly.

''I don't know how I look but I feel good,'' the tall Mandela said. ''We have a doctor on our team and he hasn't given me any instructions. He didn't even take my blood pressure this morning.''

All the same, Mandela's doctor cited ''medical reasons but mainly tiredness'' in telephoning the International Committee of the Red Cross to postpone a 30-minute visit. Mandela wanted to thank the neutral humanitarian agency for its visits over the years to political prisoners in South Africa.

Mandela was released in February after 27 years in prison and last week underwent minor surgery for a non-malignant cyst on the bladder.

''He is tired and a cutback in the schedule is likely for the whole trip '' said Jay Naidoo, the influential leader of the black Congress of South African Trade Unions and a Mandela delegation member.

''His own people organized a gruelling non-stop schedule and it has to be cut back,'' a South African diplomat said privately. ''We don't want him to die, for heaven's sake.''

Mandela's main objectives on the trip were to push for continued sanctions against Pretoria until there is black majority rule, outline his ideas on a non-racist democracy, and thank those who have helped combat apartheid.

He began his tour this week in Botswana and then spent two hectic days in Paris, being rushed from one ceremony to another.

He goes to West Germany on Monday and after that to Strasbourg back in France, then to West Germany, Italy, Canada, and the United States. He then is back in Europe to visit Britain and Ireland, and returns home via the Africa states of Uganda, Ethiopia, Kenya and Mozambique.

In the United States, Mandela was to be greeted with a ticker tape parade in New York on June 20, later visiting Boston, Washington, Atlanta, Miami, Detroit and Los Angeles.

After arriving in Geneva from Paris Friday morning, Mandela addressed cheering International Labor Organization annual assembly delegates, telling them his people ''are confident that victory is in sight.''

Guest of honor at the U.N. labor agency's annual assembly, Mandela thanked the group for its years-long support of the African National Congress in its fight against the white minority apartheid system.

''Despite the thickness of the prison walls, all of us could hear your voices very clearly,'' he said.

''It seems clear today that the road we still have to travel is not too long. Our people are confident that victory is in sight.

''Today we speak with hope about ending the apartheid system,'' Mandela said.

South Africa withdrew from the International Labor Organization in 1965 when the then-automatic Third World-Communist majority was about to have it expelled. Since then the U.N. specialized agency has actively supported the black trade union and other majority movements.

Mandela later told a news conference that although he welcomed the partial lifting Thursday of the state of emergency and the release of more prisoners, ''the main pillars of apartheid are still in place.''

''Sanctions must be maintained until there is one man one vote,'' he said.

Mandela's Thursday agenda also included an appearance before the protestant World Council of Churches, a helicopter trip to Bern, Switzerland, where he asked the government to restrict trade with Pretoria until equal rights are achieved.

ASUNCION, PARAGUAY (JUNE 8) UPI - Nicaraguan has asked the Organization of American States to keep arms control observers in Nicaragua to monitor the surrender of arms by Contra guerrillas.

Roberto Urroz, Nicaragua's permanent representative to the OAS, told the General Assembly Thursday night his government ''is asking that the organization remain in the zone, to certify the effective demobilization of the Contras.''

Joao Baena Soares, secretary general of the OAS, told United Press International he thought the Contras would comply with an agreement signed with newly elected President Violeta Chamorro to disarm and disband their forces by June 10.

Baena Soares said 5,500 Contras would have laid down their weapons by Sunday, a number he said was ''practically total.''

The Contras fought a 9-year civil war, financed mostly by the United States, aimed at overthrowing Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, which handed over power to Chamorro after losing February's national elections.

Earlier Thursday, Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez and Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez signed a joint declaration in Madrid expressing ''serious concern'' that demobilization would not be completed by June 10.

Commenting on that document, Baena Soares said, ''I wouldn't use such strong language. There is expectation that the demobilization will be completed in the time agreed upon.

The demobilized Contras receive civilian clothing, food assistance for one month, tools to repair homes if they have them, and seeds for farms in exchange for turning in their weapons, Baena Soares said.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 8) UPI - A bankruptcy judge approved an amended reorganization plan for Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. that is supported by all major players except company employees and could pave the way for a new union contract.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Warren Bentz said Thursday he will sign an order that determines the agreement complies with federal law. He said the plan could lead to confirmation hearings by August.

''I think this is a milestone if we get it going, get it moving,'' Bentz said.

The agreement comes five years and four months after the company filed for Chapter 11 protection in Pittsburgh bankruptcy court. The company has relocated its corporate offices from Pittsburgh to Wheeling, W.Va.

The agreement sets the stage for the last major phase of the case, the negotiation of a new labor contract with the United Steelworkers of America and settlement of employee claims.

But Paul Whitehead, an attorney for the USW, objected to a provision that would allow ''substantial fees and expenses'' incurred by one of the company's largest stockholders to be paid for by the company's estate.

The agreement resolves disputes among Goldman Sachs & Co., a New York investment firm that owns 34 percent of Wheeling-Pittburgh common stock, an investor group led by New York financier Ronald LaBow, and major creditors.

The amended plan was developed by LaBow interests. It improves the position of Goldman Sachs and other stockholders from previous plans submitted in December 1988 and March 1989, Bentz said.

Whitehead told the court the union believes Goldman Sachs will try to recover fees and expenses totaling up to $4.7 million. He called the group's investment a speculative attempt to take control of a reorganized steelmaker solely for the benefit of the investment firm.

''It was in pursuit of this venture that Goldman Sachs spent on professional and advisory fees and expenses an amount that, if in the vicinity of $4.7 million, can only be characterized as enormous,'' Whitehead said.

That amount would be 10 percent of all the fees in the case and more than one-third of Goldman Sachs' investment in the company. It also represents on an annual basis almost 50 cents an hour worked by every steelworker employed by Wheeling-Pittsburgh, he said.

Goldman Sachs entered the case last January after buying a $13.98 million block of stock from former Wheeling-Pittsburgh chairman Lloyd Lubinsky. The LaBow group bought $304 million in bank debt in 1987.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Stock prices headed lower in moderate trading early Friday, depressed by the profit taking that has pressured the market all week after its record high Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 14.32 Thursday, was down 9.22 to 2888.11 at 11 a.m. EDT.

Declines led advances 762-410 among the 1,700 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Volume amounted to about 49,110,000 shares at 11 a.m., compared with 53,740,000 in the same period Thursday.

Continued profit taking after the market's most recent record high Monday and program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock index futures, kept prices under pressure, analysts said.

The market tried to rebound from three straight sessions of profit taking at the opening, but the selling quickly wiped out those gains.

The market was especially vulnerable to the computerized selling, analysts said, since many players are on the sidelines before the weekend and next week's spate of economic data. That data includes two inflation reports, the producer price index and consumer price index.

On the trading floor, Newscorp was the most active issue, up 1/2 to 17 1/4.

Genentech followed, up 3/4 to 27. Eastman Kodak was third, unchanged at 42 1/2. The compnay has not commented this week on the heavy trading of the stock, but analysts say it has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting interest.

Also active was The Gap, down 2 7/8 to 55 5/8. The trendy retailer reported sales up 6 percent in the most recent period, but the increase was far below the 15 percent gain of a year ago.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down 1/4 to 42 5/8, IBM was down 1/2 to 120, Merck fell 1 to 80 1/2, Boeing lost 1 1/4 to 82 5/8, Philip Morris was down 3/8 to 44 1/2 and McDonald's was down 1/2 to 34 7/8.

Prices were lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

B.A.T Industries led the Amex issues, up 1/8 to 11 3/16.

Neither actions will interupt services at the thrifts.

The Indiana thrift, found to be tangibly insolvent, had assets of about $68.6 million and $57.7 million in deposit accounts.

The Massachusetts institution reported assets of about $235.5 million with $240.8 million in deposit accounts.

The Resolution Trust Corp. was appointed receiver for both institutions. New federal mutual savings associations will take the place of the troubled thrifts.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (JUNE 8) UPI - Friends, students and colleagues of U.S. hostage Thomas Sutherland gathered at the American University of Beirut Friday to mark his fifth anniversary in captivity.

''We are gathered here for Tom,'' said Sutherland's wife, Jean, in an address to students and professors gathered at the auditorium of the Agriculture School. ''It is something very special to him and people who come out from where he is said that Tom speaks and thinks always of AUB and wants to come back.

''If they say he is crazy, he is no crazier than he was before and to me it says he has not changed,'' Mrs. Sutherland said. ''Let's not this day be a time of sadness, rather a time of gladness. We have life and love and we have friends.''

Sutherland, 59, was dean of the Agriculture School at the American Univeristy of Beirut when he was kidnapped June 9, 1985. The fundamentalist Islamic Jihad Organization claimed responsibility for his abduction.

He is among 16 Westerners still believed held hostage in Lebanon by pro-Iranian fundamentalist groups.

Mrs. Sutherland said her husband ''chose to come to Beirut, he chose to stay and chose to come back on June 9, 1985, because he loves you students and you are worth it, AUB is worth it and Lebanon is worth it.''

''The only thing we hope is that his release will be a positive release that if he comes out it means reconciliation. It means that people are not divided and that people will find a way to work together in harmony,'' she said.

Sutherland said she would wait for her husband's release while continuing to work as an English teacher at the university.

A message from AUB President Frederic Herter, who lives in New York, was read. Herter expressed hope that Sutherland will once again be reunited with his family.

Deputy President Dr. Ibrahim Salti called for a quick release of Sutherland and two of his colleagues, American Joseph Cicippio and Irishman Brian Keenan.

Cicippio, AUB's deputy comptroller, was kidnapped September 12, 1986, in Beirut. Two groups, the Arab Revolutionary Cells - Forces of Omar Al Mukhtar and Revolutionary Justice Organization - claimed responsibility.

Keenan, an English teacher at AUB, disappeared April 11, 1986, in Moslem west Beirut. No one claimed responsibility.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - Retiring Air Force Chief of Staff Larry Welch defended the B-2 bomber Friday and also forecast a significantly smaller Air Force will emerge in the coming years.

Welch, who will be succeeded in July by Gen. Michael Dugan, now heading Air Force operations in Europe, made his comments at a breakfast meeting with defense writers.

The B-2 bomber, in trouble on Capitol Hill because of its cost - now estimated at $61.1 billion for 75 aircraft - is designed to be hard to find by radar. Welch earlier this week said the bomber will reflect as much radar energy as would bounce off a reflective surface the size of an insect.

Welch argued that the B-2, which can carry up to 20 gravity bombs or attack missiles, could accomplish with a single warhead what would require two missile warheads.

''The B-2 gives you tremendous leverage in target coverage,'' he said, adding that there are still targets the B-2 could handle better than the B-1B or missiles beyond the 75 planes the Air Force now seeks.

Asked what the Air Force will look like five years from now, Welch speculated it will have 28 or 29 wings of tactical aircraft, each typically with about 72 aircraft. In the early 1980s the Air Force was striving for 44 wings, but that goal was dropped to 38 in 1988 and at the moment there are 36 wings.

He forecast that the service, which had 607,000 personnel in 1986 and is expected to drop to at least 530,000 in fiscal 1991, would further decline to about 460,000 to 470,000 in five years.

Welch also termed his decision on the MX and Midgetman missiles a ''drastic shift on my part.''

He and the Air Force proposed scrapping the program to take the 10-warhead MX out of silos and put it on railroad cars, and put the one-warhead Midgetman missile now being designed for a truck mount into silos instead.

If the Pentagon adopts that proposal, he said, it could provide a pause while a second set of talks on reducing strategic nuclear weapons decides what additional constraints will be put on missiles.

Many have argued that the way to win arms control concessions is to spend money to build a system and then agree to dismantle it, but Welch said, ''I've never been a fan of bargaining chips.''

He acknowledged that ''there is a lot of blood on the floor that I have shed over rail garrison, and I am now saying ... looking at the world we live in, the pressures we have, where we're likely to go, we ought to at least look at the option of pausing.''

Welch was publicly rebuked by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney a week after Cheney took office last year for Welch's negotiations with Congress on the MX and Midgetman issues. At that point Welch was trying to end an impasse over the missiles and was suggesting putting the MX on rail cars and building 300 Midgetmen missiles.

Before this incident, it was believed Welch had a good chance to succeed Navy Adm. William Crowe as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The Navy had held the post for four years and, before that, the Army had the top spot for three years with Gen. John Vessey Jr. The job eventually went to Army Gen. Colin Powell.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - The stock market was lower at midday Friday in moderate trading, pressured by profit taking that has been the trend all week after Monday's record highs.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 14.32 Thursday, was off 10.92 to 2886.41 at noon EDT.

Declines led advances 831-413 among the 1,804 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Volume amounted to about 68,000,000 shares at noon, compared with 78,840,000 in the same period Thursday.

Continued profit taking after the market's most recent record high Monday and program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock index futures, kept prices under pressure, analysts said.

The market tried to rebound from three straight sessions of profit taking at the opening, but the selling quickly wiped out those gains.

The market was especially vulnerable to the computerized selling, analysts said, since many players were on the sidelines before the weekend and next week's spate of economic data. That data includes two inflation reports, the producer price index and consumer price index.

On the trading floor, Newscorp was the most active issue, up 1/2 to 17 1/4.

Alexander & Alexander Services followed, down 1 3/8 to 26 1/2. Genentech was third, up 3/4 to 27.

Eastman Kodak was also active, off 1/8 at 42 3/8. The company has not commented this week on the heavy trading of the stock, but analysts say it has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting interest.

Elsewhere, The Gap was down 2 5/8 to 55 7/8. The trendy retailer reported sales up 6 percent in the most recent period, but the increase was far below the 15 percent gain of a year ago.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down 1/4 to 42 5/8, IBM was down 3/8 to 120 1/8, Merck fell 1 to 80 1/2, Boeing lost 1 1/8 to 82 3/4, Philip Morris was down 3/8 to 44 1/2 and McDonald's was down 5/8 to 34 3/4.

Prices were lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

B.A.T Industries led the Amex issues, up 1/8 to 11 3/16.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (JUNE 8) UPI - Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Ranariddh said Friday U.S.-sponsored changes to a planned cease-fire agreement alienated the Khmer Rouge guerrillas and sank chances to end the killing in Cambodia.

''Everybody drank champagne after the signing, but now we go back to the battlefield,'' Ranariddh said of a stillborn peace accord signed by the Cambodian government and two of the three rebel factions in Tokyo last week.

Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan had come to the Tokyo peace talks having already initialed the text of a cease-fire agreement. Ranariddh said Samphan backed off after U.S., Thai and Japanese officials tried to add new measures to the agreement reducing Khmer Rouge influence.

He said the exclusion from the accord of the Khmer Rouge, the most powerful of the three resistance groups, meant that the fighting would continue.

Ranariddh - commander of a guerrilla army in the resistance group loyal to his father, Prince Norodom Sihanouk - said U.S. officials pushed some of the changes by working through the Thai delegation to the talks. He said Washington wanted to link the cease-fire to the formation of a Supreme National Council and to make the Khmer Rouge only a secondary signatory of the agreement.

Efforts to alter the original text of the agreement continued even though Khieu Samphan made it clear he could not and would not accept any changes.

''I cannot understand the Americans who say the Khmer Rouge should not be included,'' Ranariddh said.

The U.S. government has said it opposes any leading role for the Khmer Rouge in a Cambodian settlement because of their brutal rule from 1975-1979, which left more than 1 million people dead.

''We must distinguish between moralism and realism,'' Ranariddh said.

He said Khmer Rouge demands to be equal signatories of the original agreement should have received more support from the Thai and Japanese officials mediating the talks because the Khmer Rouge were doing most of the fighting.

He said the original text, worked out by Thai Deputy Prime Minister Gen. Chavalit Yongchaiyudh, represented a major step forward because it committed the Khmer Rouge to a cease-fire and it brought the all the guerrillas and the Vietnamese-backed government together for the first time.

''The isolation of the Khmer Rouge is not really a solution,'' he said.

Ranariddh said resistance forces were stepping up military pressure on the Phnom Penh government.

He said 16 district towns have already fallen to resistance attacks and roads to the western province capital of Siem Reap have been completely cut.

(JUNE 8) UPI - With the signing of coalition agreements Friday, Israel's political crisis appeared on the verge of ending. A chronology of the highlights of Israeli political events and the widening rift between the Labor and Likud parties over the peace process follows.

November 1988: Elections provide nearly even number of seats in the Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, for Likud (40) and Labor (39). Smaller

Dec. 14, 1988: In Geneva, Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat declares recognition of Israel and renounces terrorism. United States subsequently begins dialogue with PLO.

Dec. 22, 1988: Knesset approves new ''national unity'' Likud-Labor government, led by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Labor Party leader Shimon Peres heads Finance Ministry. In addition to Likud and Labor, coalition members are ultra-Orthodox parties, Shas and Agudat Israel, and the National Religious Party.

May 14, 1989: Shamir unveils Israel's peace initiative, which includes proposal for elections in the occupied territories for Palestinians to select representatives who will negotiate with Israel on limited autonomy.

July 5, 1989: Likud Central Committee adopts resolution calling for continued Jewish settlement in occupied territories and vetoing participation of East Jerusalem Arabs in elections proposed in Israeli peace initiative. Labor warns coalition government may be in jeopardy because of hard-line Likud stance.

October 1989: Secretary of State James Baker presents five points aimed at achieving Palestinian-Israeli talks on the basis of Israeli government initiative.

Nov. 6, 1989: Israeli inner Cabinet fails to give clear-cut answer to Baker framework and seeks clarifications.

Dec. 31, 1989: In widening split over direction of peace process, Shamir dismisses Labor Minister of Science and Technology Ezer Weizman from Inner Cabinet, saying he was undermining government policy by holding contacts with the PLO.

Feb. 12, 1990: In dispute over peace process, hard-line Trade and Industry Minister Ariel Sharon resigns from Cabinet at chaotic meeting of right-wing Likud Central Committee, sending party into turmoil.

Feb. 21: Labor Party lays groundwork for government crisis by giving coalition partner Likud two-week deadline to advance the peace process.

March 11: Israeli inner Cabinet fails to reach decision on Baker peace proposal, edging coalition government to brink of collapse. Labor ministers walk out of meeting after Shamir refuses request by Peres to bring the U.S. proposal to a vote.

March 13: Shamir fires Peres as vice premier and finance minister because he said the Labor leader ''acted to bring about the dissolution of the national unity government and has undermined its existence.'' Peres' fellow Labor ministers resign. Israel's second Likud-Labor coalition collapses. Shamir remains caretaker prime minister.

March 15: Labor orchestrates vote of no confidence against Shamir government in Knesset. Shamir government toppled in 60-55 vote, with Shas Party members failing to vote.

March 20: President Chaim Herzog picks Peres to try to form next government. He is given a 21-day mandate.

April 4: Peres informs Herzog he has necessary support to form government. Three days later, estimated 100,000 Israelis demonstrate in Israel for electoral reform, angered by involvement of ultra-orthodox spiritual leaders in politics and demands of politicians in exchange of support for Peres.

April 11: Peres' plans to form government dashed when two members of ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel party refuse at last minute to support Labor Party-led coalition. Peres receives 15 more days to form government, but tells Herzod April 26 he has failed.

April 27: Shamir accepts 21-day presidential mandate and seeks extension three weeks later.

June 8: Within hours of midnight deadline, Shamir informs Herzog he has support for Knesset approval of Likud-led government. Coalition guidelines and agreement signed. Supporters of Likud are right-wing Tehiya, Moledet and Tzomet parties, ultra-orthodox Shas and Degel HaTorah, National Religious Party and two Knesset members who left the Labor and Agudat Israel parties.

OTTAWA (JUNE 8) UPI - Desperate efforts to salvage crumbling constitutional talks aimed at keeping Quebec in Canada were further imperiled Friday when the premier of Newfoundland said he was fed with up the secretiveness of the talks and threatened to abandon the negotiations.

Political leaders resumed discussions for a marathon sixth day Friday with Quebec still refusing to discuss a controversial measure recognizing its distinct French-speaking society and giving it powers to promote its French language and culture.

The future of the constitutional amendment, known as the Meech Lake accord was further threatened when Newfoundland Premier Clyde Wells said he was fed up with the secretiveness of the meetings and pressure tactics and was close to abandoning negotiations.

''We are being pressured into having to accept constitutional propositions that, as a matter of principle, we think are wrong for this country on the basis that failure to do so is going to cause some kind of disastrous consequence,'' an angry Wells told reporters before entering Friday's session.

''I'm going to put an end to it today,'' Wells added.

The constitutional amendment would recognize that Quebec constitutes within Canada a ''distinct society'' and give it powers to promote that distinctiveness. The measure is at the heart of the highly charged negotiations that began Sunday.

The amendment was drafted three years ago by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and the provincial leaders after Quebec refused to sign the 1982 constitution on grounds it did not recognize the province's French-speaking population.

The amendment must be approved by the legislatures of all 10 provinces by June 23 or it becomes void, but Manitoba, Newfoundland and New Brunswick have refused to approve it.

Wells, who opposes special powers for Quebec, said he could no longer be a part of such pressured discussions, ''because you get into a position where you can't make sensible judgments.'' Wells was unclear as to when he would leave the meeting.

Late Thursday, Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa issued a statement saying he would no longer participate in talks ''that directly or indirectly touch on the distinct society clause.''

Speaking to reporters, Bourassa said: ''Can it be possible we will destroy this country with legal niceties?''

Bourassa's move, after the fifth straight day of negotiations involving Mulroney and leaders of the 10 provinces, threatened to bring this week's round of talks to a halt. Bourassa refused to explain why he would no longer address the issue when the distinct society clause has been discussed by political leaders for two days.

Federal government officials said leaders had reached agreement on a way to deal with the distinct society provision, including subjecting it to public hearings this summer.

But the deal collapsed when Manitoba Premier Gary Filmon, another opponent of the Meech Lake accord, took the proposal to Manitoba's opposition leaders for their endorsement. Filmon has only a minority of seats in his legislature, making it imperative that any deal struck this week have the support of the Liberals and left-wing New Democrats in the provincial legislature.

Bourassa rejected the government's version of events Thursday, saying he had never agreed to anything on the distinct society clause.

''We had a long and very hard day,'' Mulroney said late Thursday. ''Today was a tough day. My hope is we can resolve some of the outstanding concerns that have been expressed.''

He said the talks must end soon.

''We're getting pretty close to having to fish or cut bait,'' he said. ''What is at stake is the future ... the well-being of Canada.''

Opponents of Meech Lake want a so-called ''Canada clause'' inserted in the constitution that confirms the supremacy of the nation's Charter of Rights and Freedoms, while providing a measure of protection to linguistic minorities in all provinces.

PEORIA, IL (JUNE 8) UPI - The father of a man kidnapped in Ecuador said Friday the family has collected the $60,000 in donations they need to ransom their son from his abductors.

Roy Heimdal said by mid-Friday morning representatives of a Peoria bank told him the money had been deposited and was being transferred to an unnamed family intermediary in South America.

Heimdal said he hoped his son, Scott, 27, who had worked for a mining company in South America, could be freed within a week by members of the People's Liberation Army.

''The money is on its way,'' Heimdal said. ''It makes me feel very humble.''

Heimdal said any funds raised over the ransom demand and expenses will be donated to charity.

''You want it to happen so badly you don't dare let yourself believe it could happen,'' Heimdal said. ''After seeing the response the first couple of days I just became very convinced we were going to make it.

''Now it's up to the team of negotiators down there to correctly handle the situation.''

Scott Heimdal was kidnapped April 28 while he was traveling by motorized canoe on the River Bermejan near the Ecuadoran border with Colombia. A member of Heimdal's party was slain and three others were released.

The Heimdal family had said the ransom needed to be in hand by noon Friday for it to be wired to a co-worker of Scott's in Ecuador, who is serving as an intermediary in the negotiations.

A steady stream of family friends and national news media trooped through the Heimdal's small rented home while Peoria Mayor Jim Maloof sat at the couple's kitchen table helping them field calls and collect money.

''Here's a family that said, 'We're gonna help save our son whatever it takes.' They started this huge fire, this avalanche of caring,'' Maloof said.

The kidnappers had threatened to kill their captive unless they had the cash in hand by Monday. Originally they demanded more than $1 million but reduced the amount after learning the family was not wealthy and the mining company for which Scott Heimdal worked shut down in his absence.

The People's Liberation Army, described by the government as a Maoist group, has previously kidnapped two Americans. One was later released and one died of a heart attack while in captivity.

RANGOON, BURMA (JUNE 8) UPI - The Burmese military government Friday warned government officials against showing favoritism to followers of the opposition National League for Democracy, which won last month's national elections.

Government spokesman Col. Aung Thein said civil servants should ignore rumors that they will be penalized by the next government if they show too rigid an adherence to rules and regulations.

''These rumors are designed to intimidate government servants into inaction, or into acts not in full conformity with the law,'' Aung Thein said.

Aung Thein did not explain why the warning had to be given, but it appeared the military is worried that the opposition victory in May 27 elections might dispose some judges to be more lenient towards political activists currently on trial.

Hundreds of opposition activists were arrested in the year leading up to the elections.

Aung Thien said one rumor has it that government servants who displease opposition leaders now will be dismissed when those leaders take office. The military has said the election winners may take office only after a new constitution is drafted, a process of uncertain length.

He referred to judicial courts as an example of where intimidation could lead to decisions other than those strictly according to law.

The military government, meanwhile, will welcome 750 Burmese nationals expelled from Thailand Thursday and provide them with assistance, another government spokesman said Friday.

Government information committee leader Kyaw Sann said Burmese nationals pushed back from Thailand by Thai authorities will be welcomed and looked after by the Burmese government.

''Thailand has the right to expel illegal immigrants from its territory, but the number so expelled is only about 750 and not in thousands as reported in the Bangkok Post,'' he said, waving a copy of the newspaper.

Earlier, Thai government officials said about 1,000 illegal immigrants had been rounded up and sent back across the border to Burma.

''Not only these people who had gone over to Thailand in search of jobs, but also students and youths who joined insurgents at the Thai-Burmese border and have become insurgents themselves will be welcomed back by the government,'' Kyaw Sann said.

''What is important is that these students and youths see the error of their ways and renounce the way of armed revolt,'' he said.

Thai officials, however, said they were careful not to return anyone to Burma who might be at risk for their political opposition to the Rangoon government.

Kyaw Sann said an employment and resettlement committee has been formed under the Ministry of Agriculture and Forests to help the immigrants.

''Special villages will be set up for these people, and land will be provided for agriculture and livestock breeding,'' he said.

Reasonable monetary assistance will also be given for their short-term as well as long-term benefit, he said.

DES MOINES, IA (JUNE 8) UPI - President Bush, condemning ''all the violence in the Middle East,'' said Friday he has been discussing breaking off the U.S. dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization but no decision has been made.

At the same time, Bush declined substantial comment on the emergence of a new right-wing governing coalition in Israel and repeated the U.S. call for ''peace talks to begin.''

The president, on a Midwest campaign swing, was asked about reports the administration is considering halting its 18-month dialogue with the PLO because of an attempt guerrilla attack on Israel.

''There has been no decision on that, but that it has been a subject of discussion,'' Bush told reporters aboard Air Force One as he flew to Omaha Neb, from Des Moines.

''I'm not prepared to make an announcement on policy at this point,'' Bush said.

Asked if he were disappointed that PLO leader Yasser Arafat had not spoken out against last week's incident, Bush said, ''I'd like to see Mr. Arafat speak out. ... Our dialogue is predicated on a renunciation of terror. In my view this is sheer terror.

''I've expressed my outrage about the attack,'' Bush added. ''Maybe I can take this opportunity to express my outrage about all of the violence in the Middle East.''

The United States entered talks with the PLO after Arafat renounced violence and said he recognized the state of Israel. But an aborted raid on a Tel Aviv beach last week, which Arafat has not directly condemned, prompted U.S. diplomats in the region to say they believed the talks in Tunis could be in danger.

Bush also said, in response to a question, the political maneuvering in Israel is ''an internal matter.''

''Israel can do what it wants with its government and I'll work with whomever that country puts forward as their government. But they know the policy of the United States on peace talks,'' Bush said.

''U.S. policy is firm. We want the peace talks to begin,'' he said.

On a related matter, Bush said, ''I am still outraged about the holding of American hostages (in Lebanon). ... It's on my mind all the time and all of these things have a way of coming together.''

In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his Likud Party secured the support of six right-wing and religious parties Friday and formed one of the most right-wing governing coalitions in Israel's history.

In Israel, the term ''right wing'' generally refers to those opposing negotiations with the PLO and the return of occupied territories, rather than the tradition conservative or anti-socialist.

WARSAW, Poland (JUNE 8) UPI - The architect of Poland's economic reforms announced price increases on gas and electricity Friday and ruled out any immediate improvement of living standards.

Deputy Prime Minister Leszek Balcerowicz, assessing five months of his economic plan during a question-and-answer session with reporters, said its biggest success was the easing of inflation, which dropped from 78 percent in January to 3 percent in May.

He pointed to positive results such as the improvement of supplies on store shelves but admitted to the negative impact of the transition to a market economy such as the emergence of 443,000 unemployed workers.

His plan has been described by economic experts as the most aggressive free market economic policy in Eastern Europe. The transition has resulted in the plummeting of the living standards of the people throughout the region.

There had been no significant social protests against the austerity measures until May when Poland railroad workers staged a weeklong walkout demanding wage hikes by 110 percent. The strike was suspended when Solidarity founder Lech Walesa promised the workers unsepecified wage increases by June 13.

Balcerowicz said Friday that in order to maintain tough financial discipline, he could not promise the wage hikes.

Instead of the wage hikes, Balcerowicz announced new price hikes of electricity, gas, water and heating costs. The announcement was preceded five months ago by a series of high price increses of various commodities, including gas and electricity.

Balcerowicz did not say when the latest increases will take effect.

He also refused to speculate when living conditions will improve for Poles.

''I cannot make easy promises,'' he said. ''Concrete effects will be seen but not immediately.''

The deputy prime minister said more companies will become privatized at a faster pace. He said about 100 large factories will have become private by the end of this year, and 300 are scheduled to become private next year.

His announcement came after three bombs exploded Thursday in the Solidarity stronghold of Gdansk after a day of bitter wrangling among union leaders, one of whom accused Walesa of acting like a monarch.

Polish radio said no one was injured when the homemade pipe bombs exploded at a Gdansk railway station and at the offices of a former Communist newspaper and the Polish LOT airlines. It was not immediately known who was responsible for the explosions, which were being investigated.

Walesa is trying to have presidential elections held under the old Parliament this fall instead of waiting for election of a new Parliament next spring.

TURNBERRY, SCOTLAND (JUNE 8) UPI - NATO foreign ministers, welcoming sweeping changes in the Warsaw Pact, agreed Friday to expanded force-reduction talks and other steps aimed at easing Soviet fears over the presence of a united Germany in the Western alliance.

NATO gave its negotiators new ''flexibility'' in the stalled conventional forces in Europe talks, and agreed to ''follow-on negotiations to further enhance security and stability in Europe'' once an initial pact is reached.

The current conventional forces talks in Vienna focus only on U.S. and Soviet troops in central Europe, along with conventional hardware, but the Soviets seek troop limits on a unified Germany in follow-up talks.

''We seek no unilateral advantage from German unity and are prepared to demonstrate this, taking into account legitimate Soviet security interests '' the 16 NATO foreign ministers said in a communique at the close of a two-day session on the Scottish seashore.

Secretary of State James Baker, who met in Copenhagen on Tuesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, said he was ''generally more positive'' that a compromise solution to the German question could be found.

Other NATO foreign ministers also voiced optimism a breakthrough was near.

The Soviets, seeking a non-aligned Germany, have balked at NATO insistence that a unified Germany be a full member of the alliance.

NATO foreign ministers said they ''welcome'' the seven-nation Warsaw Pact's declaration, in Moscow on Thursday, of an intent to change from a military machine dominated by the Soviets to a political grouping of sovereign states.

''We are encouraged by the positive spirit conveyed in this declaration and, in particular, by the readiness on the part of the countries issuing it for constructive cooperation,'' the communique said. ''We extend to the Soviet Union and to all other European countries the hand of friendship and cooperation.''

Asked whether any recently democratized Warsaw Pact nations might join NATO, Secretary-General Manfred Woerner said: ''It's their choice. We have not received any membership applications.''

The foreign ministers endorsed a nine-point plan, outlined by President Bush to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Washington last week, to reassure the Soviet Union on German NATO membership.

The plan includes an enhanced role for a pan-European security system, early talks on strategic nuclear forces and the crucial commitment to advance negotiations on reducing all troop levels in central Europe.

The proposal also specifies that NATO forces will not be extended, for an unspecified time, to the current territory of East Germany, and calls for a key transition period for Soviet forces leaving East Germany. The Soviets have about 380,000 troops there, but lack jobs or housing for them back home.

The foreign ministers, intent on reaching a conventional-forces agreement this year, granted its negotiators ''additional flexibility'' on aircraft, armor and verification, said Woerner, who declined to elaborate on any concessions NATO would offer.

Baker said the Soviet Union indicated in Copenhagen earlier this week it will offer ''new proposals'' on aircraft levels, the critical issue at the Vienna talks. The Soviets have sought aircraft levels far higher than NATO's position.

''I came away from that meeting more encouraged on the potential for completing a CFE agreement this year,'' Baker said of his talks with Shevardnadze at the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

NATO, which holds a summit in London next month, seeks to persuade the Soviets that the Western alliance has changed its orientation from a military to a political focus.

''We needed to send signals to the Soviet Union that they are not a victim'' of the past year's dramatic upheavals in Eastern Europe, a senior alliance official said.

''The issue for the Soviets is Germany in NATO, yes, but it's really more NATO than Germany,'' the official said.

The Soviet Union seeks an enhanced role for the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, and NATO agreed it should be ''strengthened and given effective institutional form.''

A watershed CSCE summit will be held in Paris this year if a conventional-forces agreement is reached. The NATO foreign ministers said they hope ''two-plus-four'' talks on German unification are completed before the summit is held. The two-plus-four talks include the two Germanys and World War II allies Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union. Foreign ministers from the six countries next meet on June 22 in East Berlin.

NATO also announced creation of a permanent arms-control verification staff, and called for stepped-up efforts toward a worldwide chemical weapons ban.

WATSON, LA (JUNE 8) UPI - Two high school seniors charged in a criminal complaint with throwing paper airplanes during graduation ceremonies will not be prosecuted because they have apologized.

Live Oak High School Principal Owen Norgress and Assistant Principal Frances LaFleur filed a complaint with the Livingston Parish sheriff's office alleging Jared Vicknair and David Wallace had thrown the paper planes. The youths were charged last week with criminal mischief and posted $500 property bonds.

A sheriff's office spokesman said three other seniors also threw paper planes during the commencement exercise but they were on class trips and were not arrested.

Norgress said Thursday he decided to drop charges after the youths apologized for the incident.

''The thing is settled and we want it to end,'' the principal said. ''It has hurt the community and the school.''

SEATTLE (JUNE 8) UPI - Officer Ralph Whitney was sitting in the Seattle Police Department's north precinct when a prisoner dropped in on him. Literally.

Whitney said a 31-year-old prisoner broke through the ceiling above the office Thursday during an escape attempt.

The prisoner, identified only as a 160-pound man being held for violating a no-contact order in a domestic violence case, climbed through a hole behind a public address speaker in his cell and managed to slip through the building before he slipped through the ceiling above Whitney.

Whitney said he heard a noise overhead and looked up to see an arm poking through the ceiling. The man was recaptured without incident.

The prisoner was taken to a Seattle hospital for treatment of cuts.

Police said he now faces additional charges of attempted escape and damaging property.

Repair crews sealed the hole.

(JUNE 8) UPI - Israel's Likud Party joined with six right-wing and religious parties to form one of the most right-wing governing coalitions in Israel's history. In Israel, the term ''right wing'' generally refers to those opposed to talks with the P-L-O and the return of occupied territories to Israel's Arab neighbors. Caretake Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and the parties signed an agreement after talks ironing out differences among religious parties over the posts in several ministries.

The first mate of a British-registered oil tanker is accused of substance abuse in the third major spill this year in the Kill Van Kull channel, one of the world's busiest waterways. The ship ran aground yesterday, spilling 260-thousand gallons of heavy fuel oil into the waterway separating New York and New Jersey. Geoffrey Gregory of Mersky, England, is charged in Bayonne, New Jersey, with operating a ship under the influence of alcohol and with UNlawful discharging of a pollutant into a waterway.

PARIS (JUNE 8) UPI - Andre Agassi, extended to four sets by unseeded Jonas Svensson, and Andres Gomez won their semifinal matches Friday and will face each other for the French Open men's championship.

Agassi, the third seed, won 10 of his first 11 games, then struggled before completing a 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 victory over Svensson. No. 4 Gomez defeated Thomas Muster, 7-5, 6-1, 7-5.

For both Agassi and Gomez, Sunday's duel will mark a first-ever appearance in a Grand Slam final. Following a drought that started in 1956 and ended last year when Michael Chang won, the United States now has a chance to win the men's crown in Paris two years in a row.

Agassi and Gomez are 2-2 against each other, with Agassi winning their only 1990 meeting at the Lipton Championships in March.

''I played Gomez at Key Biscayne (Fla.) a couple of months ago and came out all right,'' Agassi said. ''He'll be in for a long afternoon, because I want it pretty bad.''

Both of the semifinal matches were interrupted for a short time early in the first set because of rain.

The women's final is scheduled for Saturday, with top seed Steffi Graf playing No. 2 Monica Seles.

Agassi jumped on Svensson from the start on a cool, wet and windy afternoon. After saving a break point in the opening game, Agassi converted his third break-point opportunity in the second game.

After Svensson held service in the fourth game, Agassi put together his run of seven games, carrying him to 4-0 in the second set.

Svensson, ranked 24th in the world, suddenly threatened to pull back into the match as he won three games in a row and had double break point to even the set at 4-4.

Agassi, though, held his serve and ran out the set.

The third seed appeared ready to wrap up the match quickly when he broke in the third game of the third set, but Svensson retaliated in the fourth, sixth and eighth games.

Agassi jumped to a 3-0 lead again in the fourth set, only to be broken in the fifth game. But Agassi gained the decisive break in the eighth game, then held his serve to end the match.

''I came out here wanting to play well,'' Agassi said. ''At the start of the match neither of us were comfortable with our game, but he was doing a good job of beating himself and I just kept some balls in play and he missed a lot. I got the second set and then he loosened up a lot and I had to bear down.

''The weather conditions were bad and it was a question of who dealt with the circumstances better.''

Gomez, a 30-year-old left-hander from Ecuador, has an opportunity to win his first Grand Slam championship in his 27th attempt. He is the first player 30 years or older to reach the final at Roland Garros since Nicki Pilic, then 33, in 1973.

Only three weeks ago, Muster defeated Gomez in the semifinals of the Italian Open at Rome.

Gomez, on the strength of service breaks in the second and sixth games, built leads of 3-0 and 4-2 in the opening set. Muster, also a left-hander, got the breaks back in the fifth and seventh games.

Gomez double-faulted on break point in the fifth game. On the final point of the seventh game, he dropped his racket while serving, and could only kick the ball back over the net on Muster's return.

From 5-5, Gomez started a string of seven successive games during which he yielded merely seven points. He broke Muster in the 12th game to capture the first set, and broke again in the second and fourth games of the second set with the loss of a single point.

Muster, a 22-year-old Austrian who suffered a severe leg injury last year when he was hit by a car, finally held serve in the sixth game before Gomez held at 15 to end the set.

Gomez, very much in control, broke in the third game of the third set when Muster was wide with a forehand, but Muster drew even at 4-4 with a break in the eighth game.

Muster was within two points of winning the set when he went up 0-30 in the 10th game. Gomez, though, won the next four points to hold his serve, then broke in the 11th game when Muster sent a forehand long.

The match started in sunshine, but rain was falling by the second game and there was a delay of less than 10 minutes with Gomez leading 3-0, 15-15. Within minutes after the final point, the rain came again.

''This time I gave it everything I had,'' Gomez said, referring to his loss to Muster in Rome. ''I knew the way he was going to play. He wasn't going to change his game, but I could change the way I played.

''I just put pressure on him all the time. I didn't want to go to a fourth set. I wasn't tired, but I didn't want to let him come back. On match point (which he won with a backhand pass) I was a little tense, but I really wanted to make the final.''

LONDON (JUNE 8) UPI - Stock prices closed lower Friday in lackluster trading on the London International stock exchange as the current two-week trading account drew to a close.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which climbed 19.9 points Thursday, closed off 11.8 points to 2,366.6. For the week, the key index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, eased 4.8 points.

The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 11.3 points to 1,892.7 but gained 10.3 points for the week.

Volume amounted to around 444 million shares compared with 593 million shares changing hands on Thursday.

Market watchers, noting the low trading activity, said many large institutional investors seemed reluctant to take out new positions before the start of the new trading account on Monday.

Dealers said they were content with the 4 percent rise in the Financial Times Index during the account, a mood which was not conducive to selling at Friday's lower levels.

In the absence of any major news or other market developments, the market mirrored Wall Street's moves, leaving dealers fearful that a late downturn on the Dow Jones Industrial Average could push shares lower.

Analysts also noted the lack of fresh economic news in which to trade. Early next week the British government is expected to issue its latest estimates on retail sales, unemployment and average earnings for workers.

On the trading floor, among the most actively traded issues, a firm insurance sector helped Refuge gain 16 cents to $10.67 and boosted Commercial Union 12 cents to $8.17.

In the banking sector, Midland Bank PLC gained 11 cents to $5 on bid speculation while National Westminster lost 14 cents to $5.52 amid speculation of a broker's downgrading.

Among some of the day's other highlights, Eurodisney lost 17 cents to $17.56, British Land fell 30 cents to $5.04 and STC lost 8 cents to $4.41.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed lower in thin trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 11.59 points or 0.6 percent on Thursday, slipped 15.26 points to 1,822.17. For the week, the index fell 33.78 points.

Analysts said prices eased as investors continued to keep a low profile in the market due to ongoing concern over the costs and impact of the planned July 1st monetary and economic unification of the two Germanys.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 8) UPI - The South African government let a 4-year-old nationwide state of emergency lapse in all but one province Friday and anti-apartheid activists attacked stringent laws to stifle dissent still in force.

Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee declared, ''The lifting of the state of emergency ... is an illustration of the government's declared policy to affirm the rule of law in a democratic South Africa.''

The end to sweeping police and army powers of arrest, along with curbs on media coverage of political violence, will place ''a greater burden on the administration of justice'' and an ''increased number of trials,'' Coetsee said.

The decree, reimposed only in strife-torn Natal province, was lifted a day before the arrival of a U.N. team sent by Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to look into the progress of racial reforms.

Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha sent Perez de Cuellar a letter Friday objecting to the visit.

''Under no circumstances would the ... government allow any outside organization to deprive South Africans of the right to negotiate a new constitution,'' Botha's letter said.

Thursday, President Frederik de Klerk told the three-chamber racially segregated Parliament, from which the black majority is excluded, that lifting most of the emergency removed one of the ''major stumbling'' blocks to full power-sharing negotiations with blacks.

But the 900,000-strong black Congress of South African Trade Unions, as well as senior African National Congress member Mohammed Valli Moosa, pointed out the government still retains an arsenal of security legislation to use against political opponents.

''Any individual can still be picked up and slammed into jail with no reason given,'' Moosa said, referring to the Internal Security Act, which allows detention without trial and the banning of people, organizations, gatherings and publications.

He noted the Public Safety Act enables the government to declare any riot-hit region an ''unrest area'' and close it to outside scrutiny.

The labor organization said in a statement, ''The government is trying to create the impression that a climate of free political activity has now been created ... the reality in South Africa is very different.''

The group also objected to troops in black townships, where anti-government rioting led de Klerk's predecessor, Pieter W. Botha, to impose the state of emergency on June 12, 1986, and renew it annually, citing ''a revolutionary climate.''

De Klerk proclaimed the reimposition of emergency rules in Natal province only hours after gunmen shot and killed two policeman, one in a black township of Natal, in overnight politically motivated violence.

A police sergeant was killed in Ntuzuma, near the province's Indian Ocean port city of Durban, and another policeman died and one was hurt at Kagiso west of Johannesburg, when attackers sprayed their vehicle with machinegun fire, police said in their official ''unrest'' report.

The Natal violence, which flared between rival Zulu factions in 1987, has since claimed some 3,000 lives despite sweeping powers of arrest the emergency has given police and tough curbs it placed on media coverage of rioting.

De Klerk said in his proclamation Friday he was declaring the fifth successive Natal emergency because ''circumstances have arisen ... which seriously threaten the safety of the public and the maintenance of public order, and that the ordinary law of the land is inadequate.''

He called on the ANC to demonstrate its ''commitment to peace'' but received a mixed response from ANC leaders, which contrasted with a warm welcome of his action from Western leaders.

The ANC demands an end to the emergency nationwide, the release of some 3,000 prisoners held for politically motivated crimes, and the safe return of about 20,000 political exiles as major conditions to talks with the government over a post-apartheid constitution.

Since taking office last September, de Klerk has launched a reform package which has included legalizing black opposition, releasing black leader Nelson Mandela and promising to phase out discriminatory laws.

MIAMI (JUNE 8) UPI - Eastern Airlines will rehire 90 union pilots who struck the carrier more than a year ago in the first such recall since picket line were withdrawn in November, a company spokesman said Friday.

''We are bringing back 90 pilots,'' said Bob Hunter, a spokesman for Eastern.

Hunter said the recall did not result from negotiations between union and company negotiators, but rather from company efforts to rebuild its business in the wake of the crippling strike and subsequent bankruptcy filing.

''This is simply due to the fact that we are expanding our schedule this summer and need more pilots,'' Hunter said.

A spokesman for the pilots union was not available for comment.

Hunter said the recall notice did not include flight attendants.

''There is no mention of flight attendants at this time,'' he said.

This spring, 215 attendants were recalled after the union signed a back-to-work agreement.

Eastern filed for bankruptcy March 1989 five days after unions representing its pilots, flight attendants and ground workers launched a crippling strike.

The Air Line Pilots Association and the Transport Workers Union, which represents Eastern flight attendants, ended their walkouts in November. The International Association of Machinists remains on strike.

Eastern's current work force includes 915 pilots who were recruited as replacement workers, as well as about 860 pilots who defied ALPA by crossing the picket line.

An estimated 1,200 to 1,400 pilots are waiting to return to work.

Hunter declined to be specific about Eastern's expansion plans. The Miami Herald has reported that Eastern's court-appointed trustee Martin Shugrue wants to expand the airline's service in the Southeast.

Hunter declined to confirm that report.

''We are looking at several different options,'' he said.

Hunter said the pilots will be recalled based on the time they signed the company's recall list, and on their qualifications.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 8) UPI - Caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir brought together his Likud Party bloc and six right-wing and religious partners Friday to form a hard-line coalition government expected to be one of the toughest in Israeli history.

Its formation appeared to end the country's political crisis. The main goals were settling the Soviet Jewish immigration issue and pursuing the peace process, analysts said.

Shamir and the other parties signed the coalition agreement and guidelines shortly before 3 p.m., ending 42 days of intense political maneuvering that followed the collapse of the Likud-Labor ''national unity'' government over the direction of the peace process.

The formation of the Likud-led coalition, one of the most right-wing in the country's history, left the center-left Labor Party out of the government for the first time since 1984.

In Israel, the term ''right wing'' is generally used to refer to those opposing negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization and to the return of occupied territories to Israel's Arab neighbors. It is not usually used in the traditional sense of conservative or anti-socialist.

Shamir has headed a transitional government since the 15-month-old Likud-Labor ''national unity'' government collapsed March 13 over Shamir's refusal to approve a U.S. plan for holding Israeli-Palestinian talks to further the peace process.

He took issue Friday with the new coalition's right-wing label.

''The main effort of the government will be given to the most important issue in our lives today: the mass immigration flowing to the state and its absorption,'' Shamir told his coalition partners at the signing.

Shamir, who immediately informed President Chaim Herzog he had put together the coalition, was expected to put it to a vote of confidence Monday in the 120-member Israeli Parliament, the Knesset.

Several minor disagreements remained to be worked out. The two-member ultra-rthodox Degel Hatorah party did not sign the agreement because the extent of its control over the Religious Affairs Ministry had not been resolved. In addition, several Likud members were angry that they had not received government posts under the coalition.

However, Government Press Office Director Yossi Olmert said Degel Hatorah was commited to supporting Shamir and would not jeopardize the coalition.

Despite the coalition's declared commitment to peace, Shamir's efforts are likely to be opposed by the right-wing parties that support annexation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip and expanded Jewish settlement there. The two-member Moledet party seeks the expulsion, or ''transfer,'' of Arabs.

The same right-wing parties will probably press for harsher measures to suppress the Palestinian uprising, now entering its 31st month.

The religious members for their part are commited to legislating stricter observance of Jewish law and expanding their influence over government health and social services.

The coalition's guidelines declare the right of Jewish settlement in all parts of Israel, including the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and opposition to direct or indirect talks with the PLO.

In addition, the guidelines call for talks with Palestinians from the territories, but make clear that Jerusalem will not be subject to negotiations under any peace agreement.

''We will (also) deal with all the important issues that face us - progress toward peace, the strengthening of security, the settlements, the development of the economy, the solution of social problems,'' Shamir said.

David Levy, who is expected to become foreign minister, said the new government would be commited to the 1989 Israel peace initiative, whose centerpiece was Palestinian elections in the territories leading to limited autonomy.

''We are faithful to our initiative in its entirety which is based on the Camp David agreements,'' he told Army Radio.

Former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, expected to be appointed housing minister with additional control over settling immigrants, said the present ''emergency situation'' of deteriorating security and strained relations with the United States was due to opposing forces in the Likud-Labor government.

''It is a lot easier to forward a peace process with a body that is more or less homogeneous in its political standpoint,'' he said.

Foreign Minister Moshe Arens probably will shift to the defense ministry, where he will assume the difficult high-profile task of coping with the uprising in the occupied territories.

After 42 days of coalition negotiations, Shamir managed to enlist the signed support of 62 Knesset members, including 40 from his own party.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - The stock market was broadly and sharply lower in light early afternoon trading Friday as more profit taking after the record highs Monday and computerized program selling extended early losses.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 14.32 Thursday, was down 21.84 to 2875.49 at 1 p.m. EDT.

Declines led advances 980-390 among the 1,887 issues crossing the NYSE tape.

Volume amounted to about 87,130,000 shares at 1 p.m., compared with 103,550,000 in the same period Thursday.

Continued profit taking after the market's most recent record high Monday and program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock index futures, both kept prices under pressure, analysts said.

The market tried to rebound from three straight sessions of profit taking at the opening, but selling quickly wiped out those gains.

The market was especially vulnerable to computerized selling, analysts said, since many players were on the sidelines before the weekend and next week's spate of economic data. That data include two inflation reports, on producer prices and consumer prices.

On the trading floor, Pacific Gas & Electric was most active, up 1/4 to 23 1/2.

News Corp. followed, up 3/4 to 17 1/2. Genentech was third, up 5/8 to 26 7/8.

Alexander & Alexander Services was also actively traded, down 1 1/4 to 26 5/8, as was Eastman Kodak, which was off 3/8 at 42. The company has not commented this week on the heavy trading of the stock, but analysts say it has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting interest.

Elsewhere, The Gap was down 3 1/8 to 55 3/8. The trendy retailer reported sales up 6 percent in the most recent period, but the increase was far below the 15 percent gain of a year ago.

Among other blue chips, AT&T was down 1 to 41 7/8, IBM was down 1 to 119 1/2, Merck fell 1 5/8 to 79 7/8, Boeing lost 1 1/4 to 82 5/8, Philip Morris was down 5/8 to 44 1/4 and McDonald's was down 3/4 to 34 5/8.

Prices were sharply lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

B.A.T Industries led the Amex issues, up 1/16 to 11 1/8.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - Rates on 30-year fixed mortgages decreased to 10.10 percent from 10.29 percent and adjustable-rate morgages decreased to 8.50 percent from 8.55 percent during the week, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Friday.

The fixed-rate average is for a 30-year loan covering 80 percent of a home's cost. The average adjustable-rate mortgage also is for 30 years, but for 75 percent of the home price.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - John Poindexter was tried fairly, a federal judge ruled Friday, clearing the way for the former White House national security adviser to be sentenced next week for his Iran-Contra crimes.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene ruled that Poindexter's congressional testimony during the summer of 1987 was not used against him during trial.

Because Poindexter gave his nationally televised testimony under a grant of immunity, the information it contained could not be used against him during his trial unless prosecutors developed it from other sources.

Greene also ruled that the special Iran-Contra prosecutors made adequate provisions to protect themselves from exposure to Poindexter's immunized testimony to Congress.

Poindexter, who was Ronald Reagan's national security adviser during the scandal that overshadowed the president's second term, is scheduled to be sentenced Monday.

He was convicted April 7 of five felony charges carrying a possible 25-year prison sentence and $1.25 million in fines.

In a seven-page ruling, Greene said, ''Defendant has failed to demonstrate anything more than harmless and inadvertent incidents of second and third hand accounts of brief snippets of immunized testimony.

''Nothing indicates or even suggests that his immunized testimony was ever used against him. Any instances of exposure were minor, accidental and wholly harmless.''

The office of special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh has asked Greene to put Poindexter behind bars, arguing his coverup effort could have poisoned the constitutional system with a ''diet of lies.'' Lawyers for the retired Navy rear admiral said he has suffered enough and should not be jailed.

Poindexter was convicted of conspiring to deceive Congress, making false statements to lawmakers and obstructing congressional inquiries.

None of the previous Iran-Contra defendants has received a jail term.

Poindexter was the last of the original group of defendants indicted in the complex scandal that involved secret weapons sales to Iran, efforts to win freedom for American hostages in Lebanon and the diversion of arms sale profits to the rebel Nicaraguan Contras when Congress had banned such aid.

Poindexter, 53, declined to testify in his own defense during his trial.

Greene has wide latitude in sentencing Poindexter because the crimes occurred before federal sentencing guidelines took effect. Had the crimes occurred later, a jail term would be mandatory because the convictions involved felony charges.

BAYONNE, NJ (JUNE 8) UPI - Crews worked Friday to remove 260,000 gallons of heavy heating oil from one of the world's busiest waterways following a spill blamed on the lookout of a Hong Kong tanker.

The Kill Van Kull, the waterway between Bayonne and Staten Island, remained closed as more than 300 workers cleaned up the oil-soaked sand with rags, picks and shovels.

Joanna Burger, a biology professor at Rutgers University, spent Friday morning examining the area for ecological damage.

Burger, who heads Rutgers' graduate ecology program, said the damage to animals and plants in the area will take some time to assess.

''The difficulty is that the area has had so many oil spills in the last few months that any new spill creates a greater problem because it's compounding the other effects,'' she said.

The BT Nautilus struck a rock early Thursday as it maneuvered towards a marine terminal in Bayonne. Geoffrey F. Gregory, the vessel's first mate, was charged with operating a vessel while under the influence of alcohol and illegal discharge of a pollutant into a waterway after he reportedly failed a post-accident blood test.

It was the fifth major spill in the channels between New Jersey and Staten Island in a year that began with a New Year's Day leak from an Exxon pipeline.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the No. 6 fuel oil in the Nautilus's cargo is easier to contain than lighter oil, but more difficult to pick up. Petty Officer Lionel Bryant said most of the oil appeared confined to the 3-mile Kill Van Kull.

But oil began washing up at Coney Island early Friday.

Environmental investigators said the heavy oil formed foot-long globs that sink and rise with the currents and tides, taking about 24 hours to float the 8 to 10 miles from the kill to the south end of Brooklyn.

A spokeswoman for the New York Parks Department said the oil was being bagged under supervision of inspectors from the state's Department of Environmental Conservation.

Gregory, 52, of Mersey, England, was released on bail after a court appearance Thursday night. A Bayonne municipal judge set bail at $5,000 cash and ordered him to surrender his passport.

The mate, second in command of the Nautilus, was acting as spotter while the vessel docked at the Coastal Oil Terminal in Bayonne. The Nautilus was carrying 14.7 million gallons of fuel oil of a type used by power plants from Cameroon in West Africa.

The Nautilus, registered in Gibraltar, is owned by a subsidiary of BT Shipping Ltd. of Bermuda.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 8) UPI - Contrary to popular belief, salary is not the principal motivating factor influencing career choices among today's college students, according to a survey released Friday.

The survey by Right Associates also found that although 80 percent of respondents came from dual-career families in which both parents held professional positions, 67.3 percent said they did not necessarily follow the careers of their parents and that their own interests and skills were the principal factors prompting their career choice.

The survey was conducted among college students who attended a recent company-sponsored series of career seminars in 12 cities: Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Princeton, N.J., Atlanta, Boston, Cleveland, Houston, New York Providence, San Francisco, Stamford and Walnut Creek, Calif.

The students, both male and female, represented a broad range of colleges and majors. More than 65 percent had grade point averages of 3.0 or better.

The study found that money ranked near the bottom of the list of factors influencing their career choice. Only one out of nine students said salary was the most important factor; 6 percent said their decision was the result of either luck or chance.

Sixty percent decided on their current career choices between the ages of 19 to 22, while attending college. A little less than a third selected careers between the ages of 15 and 18.

Business and business-related careers accounted for 37 percent of the careers chosen. Careers in the arts, psychology and sociology represented 25 percent of the choices, while engineering and computer science each were the career choices of 10 percent of students.

Only 1 percent of the students said they were planning careers in medicine or law.

(JUNE 8) UPI - President Bush continues a political swing through the Midwest today, saying a U-S-Soviet trade pact means ''good news for agricultural America.'' In a speech on behalf of Iowa Governor Terry Branstad, Bush said a trade agreement reached at the superpower summit last week should result in expanded markets for Iowa corn and soybeans.

NATO ministers ended a two-day meeting in Scotland by announcing agreement on a plan to ease Soviet fears about a unified Germany's staying in the Western alliance. The ministers offer assurances that NATO forces won't be extended, at least for a transition period, into what is now East Germany. The NATO ministers also agreed to a transiton period for Soviet forces leaving East Germany.

Michigan prosecutors want to stop a retired doctor from using a suicide device on more patients. Dr. Jack Kevorkian earlier this week used the device to help an Alzheimer's patient kill herself. Oakland County prosecutors charge that Kevorkian wants to set up ''suicide clinics,'' and they asked a Pontiac judge today to act quickly to bar the former pathologist from using the machine again.

Thunderstorms brought heavy rains to the Midwest... and cooler air was expected on the West Coast. Storms with winds gusting to 60 miles an hour were reported in southern Iowa. Dense fog settled in southeast Nebraska. Storms also were reported in the Indianapolis area and east into Ohio, north of Dayton. A brisk Pacific front pushed cool weather into the West Coast.

The first female chief of the American Bar Association is leaving the post to pursue other opportunities. Former Watergate prosecutor Jill Wine-Banks says in a letter of resignation that she will step down as A-B-A chief operating officer to explore other interests. She refused to elaborate.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 8) UPI - A shuttle-class Titan 4 rocket successfully drilled a military satellite into orbit Friday in a spectacular predawn flight symbolizing the recovery of America's post-Challenger military space program, officials said.

''Everything went very well,'' Air Force Col. Frank Stirling, director of the Titan 4 program, told reporters. ''It was a beautiful sight to behold. We're embarking, with the launch last night, on the long-awaited fruition of capability after the loss of the (shuttle) Challenger.''

The $173 million Titan 4, making only the second flight in a $7.1 billion 41-rocket program, thundered to life at 1:22 a.m., six minutes late because of concern about hazy weather, and majestically climbed away from launch complex 41 at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

Turning night into day, the giant rocket, only slightly less powerful than NASA's space shuttle, thundered skyward atop twin pillars of flame, shaking the ground like a pile driver as it knifed through a thin deck of clouds in a fiery nighttime spectacle visible for hundreds of miles.

As usual with such supposedly secret missions, dozens of reporters and area residents gathered near the Air Force station to watch the launch, tipped off by sources, Coast Guard ''launch danger zone'' broadcasts, flashing red warning lights and word of mouth.

''It was gorgeous!'' said a spectator. ''There was a huge crowd here, we figured about 50 cars. It looked like a drive-in theater. There was cheering when it went off.''

Sources said the rocket was carrying an electronic signals intelligence satellite, or ELINT, designed to intercept data from Soviet rocket tests and to eavesdrop on other forms of communication. But in keeping with a strict no-comment policy, the Air Force would not discuss the hush-hush payload.

Still, a few details were apparent in that the Titan 4 was launched on a sharply northeasterly course toward an orbit the Air Force said was tilted 52 degrees to the equator.

The ''high inclination'' orbit, allowing the satellite to fly over every point on the globe between 52 degrees north and south latitude, appeared to confirm suspicions the Titan 4 was carrying a spy satellite. Communications satellites, for example, are launched into preliminary orbits inclined just 28.5 degrees.

Getting the Titan 4 program up and running marks a major milestone for the Air Force in its bid to eliminate reliance on NASA's manned space shuttle to get high-priority national security payloads into orbit.

''The recovery, I think, has reached the point now where we can say with this successful launch, we are well on our way to achieving the full capability ... that this nation needs to continue our access to space and our preeminence in launch operations,'' Stirling told a small group of reporters.

At the time of the 1986 Challenger accident, the Air Force was phasing out use of unmanned rockets in favor of the shuttle. But even before the disaster that grounded the shuttle program for three years, the Air Force won approval to build 10 Titan 4 rockets to provide a backup launch capability for critical payloads.

After the shuttle disaster, the program was expanded to 23 Titan 4s and rocket-builder Martin Marietta Space Launch Systems of Denver was awarded contracts valued at some $5 billion.

The program has since been expanded to 41 rockets, with options for eight more, under contracts valued at $7.1 billion. Launch pad modifications and a variety of other work will add another $700 million to the total.

Through 1997, Stirling said, the Air Force hopes to buy 75 Titan 4s, pushing the cost of the program to $17 billion. The program is the seventh largest in the Air Force and the 14th most expensive in the overall military budget.

Stirling said up to 10 Titan 4s will be launched each year using four launch pads, two at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station and two at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., including space lanch complex 6, originally built for the space shuttle and mothballed after Challenger.

Two more Titan 4 flights are planned for 1990 - one each from Florida and California - in a slow but steady buildup to 10 launches per year.

Stirling said economies of scale will drive costs down and improve efficiency. When the Air Force only intended to build 10 Titan 4s, it was going to cost about $3,600 per pound of payload to low-Earth orbit.

With 41 rockets under contract, the cost has dropped to $2,000 per pound and later this decade, Stirling said, it could drop as low as $1,600 per pound to space.

ALBANY, NY (JUNE 8) UPI - A daughter of the late Robert F. Kennedy and the oldest son of New York Gov. Mario Cuomo plan to marry Saturday in Washington, tying together two of the nation's leading liberal Democratic families.

Andrew Cuomo, 32, his father's closest confidante who builds housing for the homeless, is to wed Kerry Kennedy, 30, who founded a human rights organization called the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Foundation.

The two were engaged on Valentine's Day in a romance that wags quickly labeled ''Cuomolot.''

Cuomo began working on political campaigns at 16 and was 24 when, as campaign manager, he engineered his father's victory in the New York governor's race. It is speculated he will someday run for public office.

The guest list for the nuptials, to be held at 1:30 p.m. EDT at St. Matthew's Church, reads like a who's who in Democratic politics and the news media.

New York City Mayor David Dinkins; Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy, uncle of the bride; New York Times editorial page editor Jack Rosenthal, and Newsday columnist Jimmy Breslin were expected to join about 250 guests at the ceremony, and a reception later at Ethel Kennedy's McLean, Va., Hickory Hills estate.

The wedding party includes best man Christopher Cuomo, 19, and John F. Kennedy Jr., cousin of the bride.

SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA (JUNE 8) UPI - Jose Figueres Ferrer, the spunky former president who fathered democracy in Costa Rica, fought Central American dictators and personally foiled a hijacking with a submachine gun died Friday morning.

A three-time president of Costa Rica, ''Pepe'' Figueres led a 1948 revolution that toppled a pro-communist government and abolished the military, leading to decades of democratic stability.

Family members said Figueres died Friday morning after an unspecified illness that had kept him bedridden for months, but requested further details be kept private. Figueres was 83.

Sources said the government would decree three days of mourning to honor Figueres and that his body would probably lie in state at the National Assembly.

A lover of fast cars, slim women and almost anything American, the 5-foot-3 Figures had an impish humor and a flair for dramatic actions that made him one of the most colorful figures of Latin America in the 20th Century.

Fluent in English, he studied engineering at the Massachussetts Institute of Technology from 1922 to 1926 but claimed his ''real alma mater'' was the Boston Public Library, where he read almost anything on the shelves.

Born Sept. 25, 1906, in the rugged central highlands of Costa Rica, Figueres was the eldest son of migrants from the Catalan region of Spain, the arid and rocky home of fiercely independent people from whom he said he got his spunk.

He once gave Nicaraguan guerrillas a ''tank'' that he built in the tool shed of his farm, ''The Endless Struggle.'' The heavy steel plating mounted over the vehicle made it so heavy it had to be towed into combat.

A lifelong opponent of dictators, he gleefully admitted that he almost ruined a 1973 summit of Central American presidents with a joke on the five army generals seated around him.

''Isn't it odd that all you bastards are generals, and I'm the only civilian, but I'm only one who's ever fought a war?'' he claimed to have told the red-faced generals.

That war was in 1948 when Don Pepe, as he's known to everyone, led a revolution that toppled President Teodoro Picado and his communist allies when they tried to deny the presidential sash to an elected liberal.

The war cost 1,000 lives but ushered in a three-man junta led by Figueres that over the next 18 months decreed 834 laws putting Costa Rica on a firm democratic footing that has held until today.

Asked how he engineered Costa Rica's stable democracy, Figueres replied, ''We got rid of the general problems'' - a joking reference to having eliminated the military.

Figueres fought official corruption, gave women the vote, ordered free primary schooling, nationalized banks, built housing for the poor, extended electricity to the countryside and negotiated a better contract with the United Fruit Co. that then dominated Costa Rica's banana industry.

His most far-reaching decision was to abolish the army and turn its barracks into schools and museums, arguing it was a threat to ''internal peace.''

In 1953 Figueres founded the National Liberation Party and a year later was elected president by the biggest majority Costa Rica has ever seen in clean balloting - 67 percent. He was elected to another four-year term in 1970.

Figueres freely admitted plotting to overthrow the Dominican Republic's Gen. Rafael Trujillo, Venezuela's Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez, Nicaragua's Gen. Anastasio Somoza and Cuban President Fulgencio Batista, among others.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL (JUNE 8) UPI - A record store operator was arrested Friday for selling the rap album ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be'' to an undercover detective, the first such arrest since a federal judge declared the 2 Live Crew album obscene.

A Broward County sheriff's spokesman said Charles Freeman, 31, the operator of E.C. Record Shop just outside Fort Lauderdale, was targeted by undercover agents after he publicly thumbed his nose at Wednesday's court ruling.

''We have known for some time that he had the album, 'As Nasty As They Wanna Be,' and that he was selling it. In fact, he has been telling the news media at every opportunity that he will continue to sell the recording despite the ruling,'' said spokesman Jim Leljedal.

Freeman was arrested Friday morning after selling the recording by the Miami rap group to an undercover detective.

U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez ruled Wednesday that the album was obscene. The judge said his ruling applied in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

Under Florida law, it is a first-degree misdemeanor to sell obscene material to adults. If convicted, Freeman faces up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Florida said it will offer to defend Freeman. ACLU Executive Director Robyn Blumner condemned the arrest as ''an attack of the thought police.''

Leljedal gave this description of the arrest:

''An undercover deputy went to the store, went inside and found Mr. Freeman being interviewed by two television stations. Without identifying himself as a deputy sheriff, he went and picked up an album and a cassette of the recording, 'As Nasty As They Wanna Be,' and paid $8.89 plus tax,'' he said.

''After he made the purchase the television reporters wanted to interview him and Freeman tried to persuade him to speak up and side with him. He declined to comment. He then went to the door and signaled to other deputies who were waiting outside,'' Leljedal said.

Freeman is the second person to be arrested in Florida for selling the album. In March, a 19-year-old record store clerk in Sarasota was arrested and charged with selling the recording to an 11-year-old girl. Charges were later dropped.

Leljedal said additional arrests are possible.

''Generally, when we talk about obscenity arrests, we have certain deputies who try to monitor the situation at outlets that sell pornographic or obscene material. They monitor it, but we often act on tips, and that is probably the way this will be done,'' he said.

MOSCOW (JUNE 8) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher warned Israel Friday to stop settling Soviet Jews in occupied territory, with the Soviet leader saying the settlements may lead to new limits on emigration.

Thatcher, who spoke after talks with Gorbachev in Moscow, said the West had worked long and hard for freer exit of Soviet Jews and Gorbachev had granted that possibility.

"We think it is wrong for people who leave the Soviet Union to be placed in the occupied territories ... belonging to somebody else and not the state of Israel," Thatcher said.

"I think it is letting those of us who have campaigned vigorously down to seek to treat the immigrants from the Soviet Union in that way" by settling them on land that was seized during the 1967 war from the Arab countries, she said.

Gorbachev repeated his criticism of Israel's settlements and reiterated comments he made at the Washington summit indicating emigration policies might be tightened if the Soviet Jews continue to be settled in the Israeli-occupied territories.

"I would like to confirm that all this is very serious and we hope that Israel will heed what has been said in Washington," Gorbachev said. "I would like to say that in Washington they realize the gravity of the situation, and I was gratified to hear it again from Mrs. Thatcher."

"I still hope that Israel will will heed it," he said. "In that case under our legislation, this process (emigration) will keep going the way it has been, and we shall not be compelled to introduce corrections.

"If the situation aggravates so that we shall have to respond somehow, then probably we shall have to use our sovereign rights ... in order to influence the situation."

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, MN (JUNE 8) UPI - Boise Cascade Corp. has agreed to pay a $350,000 penalty to the Environmental Protection Agency for starting a $535 million expansion project at its International Falls paper mill without undergoing review or obtaining a proper construction permit, a company spokesman confirmed Friday.

The EPA contended the expansion project would increase air pollution from dust and soot and said it was especially concerned about the impact that the construction and operation of the mill would have on air quality and visibility in nearby Voyageurs National Park.

''Although Boise Cascade agreed to settle this matter with the EPA, we still firmly believe our actions, which were fully sanctioned by the MPCA (Minnesota Pollution Control Agency) and the EQB (Environmental Quality Board), in no way procedurally or otherwise violated any enviromental law or regulations,'' spokesman Bob Anderson said.

''The settlement merely represents our wish not be become involved in a long and complex litigation with the EPA.''

The agency said the fine is the largest penalty it has collected under regulations covering situations where the defendant began construction before obtaining the appropriate permit.

''This fine will serve as a warning that EPA is serious about enforcing its regulations,'' Stephen Rothblatt, the agency's acting regional administrator, said in a letter this week announcing the consent decree reached with Boise.

''More important, it sends a message to industry and to the public that EPA will prevent deterioration of air quality in areas with clean air and will prevent further deterioration of air in already polluted areas.''

Boise started the project in September 1988 after the MPCA granted a variance. The EPA objected, saying the state agency didn't have that authority, and preliminary ground work was halted Nov. 30, 1988. Work didn't resume until July 1989, when the permits were granted.

Anderson said the penalty initially sought by the EPA was higher than the $350,000, although he didn't say exactly how much it was.

The EPA had wanted to fine the company for the value of pilings that were driven before the federal agency granted permits, Anderson said, adding the company estimated it would have incurred $500,000 in legal costs fighting the agency.

FULTON, MO (JUNE 8) UPI - The granddaughter of Winston Churchill toured the college Friday where her grandfather gave his ''Iron Curtain'' speech to inspect a site for a sculpture made of segments of the crumbled Berlin Wall.

Edwina Sandys, 51, wants to re-erect eight slabs of the wall on the campus of Westminster College, where Churchill first used the phrase Iron Curtain to describe a Europe divided by communist and non-communist governments.

Sandys, a sculptor whose work includes four massive pieces for the United Nations, proposes to carve the outlines of a man and woman through the wall to commemorate the first anniversary of its dismantling Nov. 9.

The wall segments were a gift of the East German government. Sandys's visit Friday included talks with an engineer and a landscape architect who may be hired to work with her on the project, said John Marshall, Westminster's vice president for development.

School officials said they would like to erect the sculpture, called ''Breakthrough,'' in a grassy space opposite a 15th century London church by Christopher Wren. The church was bombed in World War II and rebuilt on the campus in 1969.

''Today what we are doing is deciding exactly how and where we will put (the sculpture), and that's terribly important,'' Sandys said. ''We want to put it somewhere where the statue of my grandfather could see it.''

The Berlin Wall was built by East Germany in 1961 to stop the exodus to the West and stood for 28 years. The wall came to symbolize the division of Europe that Churchill spoke of in a speech at Westminster in 1946 in which he declared an ''Iron Curtain'' had descended between the countries dominated by the Soviet Union and the rest of the continent.

East bloc soldiers began dismantling the wall last November.

''In a way one has led to the other, some of the (Eastern Europeans) fleeing led the way a little bit to the whole thing eventually being opened up,'' Sandys said. ''But basically an enormous breakthrough has been made in the past year, in all the countries in eastern Europe. But of course the most symbolic breakthrough has been the physical wall being opened up in Germany.''

The segments of the wall to be rebuilt at Westminster College stand together 27 feet long and 7 feet high, Sandys said. The side that faced West Berlin is colored with bright graffiti but the side that faced East Berlin is grey and blank.

Sandys said, ''It will remain completely blank, like the prison wall that it was. I'm cutting the figures out in the wall. There will be spaces, human figures of a man and a woman bursting through the wall.''

The spaces will be large enough to allow visitors passage from ''east'' to ''west,'' she said.

Sandys, 51, previously sculpted massive lead forms at four United Nations sites in New York, Geneva and Vienna.

CHICAGO (JUNE 8) UPI - Playboy Enterprises Inc. began offering two classes of common stock Friday under a recapitalization plan that included a one-for-two reverse stock split, a stock dividend and an increased number of authorized shares.

Playboy spokeswoman Terri Tomcisin said the previously announced recapitalization was completed late Thursday following approval by the company's board of directors and stockholders.

Under the plan, the company implemented a one-for-two reverse stock split, giving shareholders a single share of new Class A Common Stock, for two previously outstanding shares. The Class A stock has one vote a share.

Shareholders then received a non-taxable dividend of three shares of new, non-voting Class B Common Stock for each share of Class A stock owned.

As part of the reverse split, owners of single shares or an odd number of shares will be paid $12.88 in cash instead of fractional shares of the new stock.

The authorized number of common shares was increased from 15 million to 37.5 million - consisting of 7.5 million Class A shares and 30 million Class B shares.

The new, dual-classed stock began trading Friday on the New York Stock Exchange and the Pacific Stock Exchange but there was no activity.

With the exception of voting rights, the two new classes of stock have substantially identical rights - including dividend rights.

The company revised its certificate of incorporation to ensure that both classes of stock trade at approximately the same price. It now requires anyone acquiring 10 percent or more of the company's Class A stock acquire a proportional number of Class B shares within 90 days.

Playboy Chairman Christie Hefner said the recapitilization was implemented to provide the company with ''increased flexibility to use equity in future acquisitions, financings and employee benefit plans without diluting the voting power of existing shareholders.''

Hefner's father - Playboy founder and Chairman Emeritus Hugh Hefner - owns 70.6 percent of the company's outstanding stock.

Playboy Enterprises publishes Playboy Magazine and produces programming for television and home video. It also publishes catalogs and art reproductions.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - The operator of the Vogtle nuclear plant in Georgia generally responded well to the power failure caused by a truck accident last March, but better safety practices could have reduced risks, federal investigators said Friday.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigators said the loss of electrical power was complicated by the failure of Vogtle operators to take certain safety precautions during reactor refueling operations, resulting in ''an unnecessary reduction in safety.''

In addition, the investigators noted that while plant operators properly declared a site area emergency when the incident occurred, they were slow to notify state and local authorities, partly due to the loss of power.

''Vogtle personnel did not meet the 15-minute notification goal for the emergency response authorities because of the lack of power to the emergency notification network in the (reactor) control room and because of some training and procedural weaknesses,'' the investigators said in a report to the NRC commissioners.

The investigators also said while the Vogtle incident was not unique or unprecedented in the U.S. nuclear industry, neither the NRC nor the industry had provided reactor operators with sufficient guidance on how to respond to power failures during plant shutdowns.

The power failure at Vogtle, located about 25 miles southeast of Augusta, Ga., occurred March 20 when a truck carrying fuel and lubricants for site equipment backed into a power pole in the plant's switchyard, knocking down electrical lines carrying power needed for reactor cooling systems.

At the time, plant operators had shut down one of the two Vogtle reactors, Unit No. 1, for refueling. As part of the outage, two of the four power sources for the plant were out of service for maintenance.

When the power was knocked out, the cooling system for Unit No. 1 became inoperable, causing temperatures inside the reactor to rise from 90 degrees Fahrenheit to 136 degrees.

The rising temperatures were especially worrisome because water levels in the reactor were lowered for the refueling and maintenance work. That meant the reactor was more vulnerable to overheating that could damage its uranium core.

Plant operators started up a backup diesel generator to restore power to the cooling system, but it failed twice, leaving the reactor without heat removal for 36 minutes until the generator began operating properly.

The investigators said there was no damage to Unit No. 1 and no radiation was released.

However, they said the incident would have been less serious if Vogtle operators had taken certain precautions during the refueling outage.

In particular, the investigators said it was not prudent for operators to turn off two of the four power sources to the reactor during the outage, especially when cooling water levels had been lowered.

''Plant configurations and equipment conditions were allowed to exist during the refueling outage at Vogtle that resulted in an unnecessary reduction in safety,'' the investigators said.

The investigators noted plant procedures did not specifically prohibit switching off two of the four reactor power sources, but that Vogtle operators had since acknowledged it was not necessary.

Plant operators also were faulted for failing to effectively control the truck while it was in the switchyard. The investigators said the incident could have been much worse if arcing from the downed power line had ignited the fuel in the truck.

While criticizing operators for lack of prudence, the investigators said, ''The Vogtle staff generally handled the incident well, showing an effective response that compensated for weaknesses in their procedures.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - Government researchers, private industry and universities will join hands to develop a high-speed network that may enable computers to communicate 700 times faster than is now common, officials announced Friday.

The National Science Foundation and the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency awarded $15.8 million to the non-profit Corporation for National Research Initiatives in Reston, Va., to lead the three-year project.

In addition, private companies including GTE, IBM, AT&T and MCI Communications will provide additional equipment and other resources to supplement the work, adding perhaps as much as $100 million to the investment.

The project may lead to the development of a communication network that can transmit at least 1 billion bits - a gigabit - of information per second, the National Science Foundation said.

Standard computer networks can only transmit up to 1.5 million bits per second, while the most advanced experimental networks can only carry up to about 45 million bits per second, officials said.

''It's the difference between a country road and the broadest street you can imagine,'' said Charles Brownstein, acting assistant director for the foundation's Directorate of Computer and Information Science and Engineering,

A high-speed network would enable increasingly common supercomputers around the country to work together, pooling their power to potentially solve new problems and create new applications for computers.

For example, one part of the project will involve testing whether an advanced imaging system used for medical diagnosis, the CAT scan, can be linked to a supercomputer to generate live lifelike images to doctors around the country, he said.

''It would enable people to be able to work with data and computation that's remote from them but at much much higher speeds and opens up oppportunities that we just don't have now,'' said David Farber, a computer scientist at the University of Pennsylvania who developed the high-speed network idea with the National Research Initiative's Robert Kahn. ''There is a lot of real potential.''

Kahn's organization will provide money for five ''testbeds'' around the country that will involve universities, government laboratories and private companies working together on specific projects.

The universities include the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Wisconsin, the University of Illinois, the California Institute of Technology, Carnegie Mellon University, and the University of California at Berkeley. The government laboratories are in Los Alamos, N.M., and Livermore, Calif.

LAS VEGAS, NV (JUNE 8) UPI - A federal judge Friday granted the death wish of a quadriplegic who asked to be removed from a respirator that has sustained his life for more than 20 years.

Kenneth A. Bergstedt, 31, said he no longer enjoys life and wanted to die in peace. He asked the court to allow him to take a sedative and have his life-support system turned off.

Bergstedt sought a legal ruling that his actions would not constitute suicide or a crime and that people who helped him would not be subject to prosecution.

The case is believed to be the first of its kind to hit Nevada's courts and is only one of a handful of others documented in the nation.

Following an evidentiary hearing that lasted about an hour, state District Judge Donald Mosley found that Bergstedt was mentally competent to make the decision to end his life. The judge also ruled that the elements of homicide and suicide were not factors in the case.

''The prognosis is less than encouraging and there is no real likelihood that life will improve for Mr. Bergstedt,'' Mosley said in issuing the ruling.

At the same time, the judge ordered the state Attorney General's office to appeal his decision to the Nevada Supreme Court.

''One District Court judge's decision is not necessarily the definitive answer in this case,'' Mosley said in ordering the appeal.

However, the judge said later the appeal order would not prevent Bergstedt from having himself removed from the respirator immediately.

''He could have done that before he came to court. He was looking for some assurance that he was not committing a crime,'' Mosley said. ''The only risk he takes is that the Nevada Supreme Court will overturn me - but if they endorse my decision it wouldn't matter.''

Bergstedt's attorney, Jack Cherry, said he did not know if the quadriplegic would actually make the decision to remove himself from the respirator before the appeal is heard.

Bergstedt was rendered a quadriplegic in 1969 at the age of 10 when his spinal cord was severed during an accident at a public swimming pool. The accident occurred in Indiana on July 4 when a young girl doing a ''cannonball'' dive landed on Bergstedt, breaking his back.

Since then he has been totally dependent on others for his survival and daily needs.

It is at least the second right-to-die case in the United States this week.

On Monday an Oregon woman suffering from Alzheimer's disease, committed suicide by lethal injection in Michigan, assisted by a physician. Authorities are considering whether to prosecute him.

LINCOLN, NE (JUNE 8) UPI - Eight people developed infections from a contaminated drug used in open-heart surgery and two of them died, Bryan Memorial Hospital officials said Friday.

Susan Frye, Bryan vice president for corporate development, said the hospital traced the infection to a solution of glutamate aspartate. The solution is used to paralyze the heart during open-heart surgery.

She said the hospital switched to a commercially pre-mixed solution and patients who undergo surgery now are not at risk of infection.

''We have determined the source - how it occurred we do not know,'' Frye said at a news conference. She said another solution was substituted ''and patients are not exposed to this potential (for infection) now.''

Frye said Bryan officials determined the contaminated solution was used between May 22 and June 1, a period in which 24 people had open-heart surgery at Bryan. She said one patient died shortly after surgery from a condition unrelated to the solution.

Frye said eight of the remaining 23 developed infections and two of them died - one Tuesday and one Wednesday.

The infection was caused by a microorganism called enterobacter cloacae, she said.

Dr. Richard Morin, a specialist in infectious diseases, said Bryan officials were awaiting a pathologist's report on the cause of death in the two patients.

He said the other six patients were listed in guarded but stable condition. Asked whether the two would have died if the solution had been pure, Morin said, ''I'm not able to answer that question at this time.''

Frye said Bryan on June 1 identified three patients recovering from open heart surgery with symptoms of infection.

Bryan suspended all open heart surgery June 2 after discovering three more infected patients. The surgery was resumed June 4 after switching to the new solution.

Frye said the source of the infection was traced back to preparation of the solution, which came to the hospital as a powder that is mixed with sterile water, passed through a microfiltration system and stored in sterile bottles.

She said Bryan now has switched to a commercially mixed solution.

Dr. Glenn Lau, vice president of medical affairs at Bryan, said surgeons began using the powdered solution in March and will go back to that particular type when it is available in a pre-mixed form.

He said more than 100 hospitals use the type of solution that became contaminated, and he said the type of solution is approved by the Food and Drug Administration. He also said Bryan had notified the FDA of the contamination.

MOSCOW (JUNE 8) UPI - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Friday that a united Germany will undoubtedly be a member of NATO, but sought to reassure him such a move would not threaten the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev has recently seemed to soften his opposition to NATO membership for a united Germany and at a joint news conference with Thatcher spoke only of ''an intensive search ... for the best possible option'' rather than stating flatly that he would not allow NATO membership.

''My central idea is that we should not confine ourselves to just one option that would necessarily turn out to be one-sided,'' Gorbachev said after his meeting with Thatcher. ''The two of us reaffirmed our position supporting the wish of the Germans to live in a single state.

''But there are other aspects that need to be taken into account.''

He warned against rushing into a solution ''like an elephant in a china shop'' and said both sides should be careful that any compromise on German alliance membership would ''strengthen positive trends in Europe and the world.''

But the Soviet leader did not repeat his past unequivocal statements that united Germany could not be a member of NATO.

Thatcher traveled to Moscow after speaking to a conference of NATO foreign ministers in Scotland that focused on the German question.

''As you know our view is that unified Germany should remain in NATO,''

Thatcher said. ''We understand that the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact will require some assurances to enable them to be certain of their own security.

''We must find ways ahead to provide that assurance.''

At the NATO summit in Turnberry, Scotland, foreign ministers from the Western alliance said they welcomed changes announced Wednesday at a Warsaw Pact summit in Moscow to make the Eastern alliance more of a political grouping and less a military organization.

The NATO foreign ministers said in a communique: ''We seek no unilateral advantage from German unity and are prepared to demonstrate this, taking into account legitimate Soviet security interests.''

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and other foreign ministers said they were optimistic about a compromise and the group endorsed a plan to reassure the Soviets that NATO troops would not be moved into the eastern part of a united Germany for an unspecified time after unification.

Both the NATO ministers and Gorbachev called for an increased role of pan-European security structures to ensure stability in Europe.

But Gorbachev and Thatcher appeared to disagree on whether NATO and the Warsaw Pact could set up joint policy structures.

''I do not at the moment see those common bodies emerging,'' Thatcher said. ''For the time being we should continue to work through the existing structures.''

Gorbachev said he ''had a somewhat different view'' and thought joint NATO-Warsaw Pact committees would work, but noted that Thatcher was ''a more cautious person ... still she is not discarding the idea.''

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (JUNE 8) UPI - The Salvadoran justice system Friday came under fire from journalists and human rights groups because a judge absolved a soldier of guilt in the death of a television crewman nearly 15 months ago.

''We manifest our indignation at the unjust verdict absolving a soldier from the Arce Battallion, Jose Antonio Orellana, who was accused of killing journalist Mauricio Pineda,'' the Salvadoran Human Rights Commission said in a statement. The ruling was made Wednesday.

Pineda, a sound man for San Salvador's Channel 12, was shot at a military roadblock while covering national elections March 19, 1989.

The car he was riding in near San Miguel, 75 miles east of San Salvador, was clearly marked as a press vehicle. Pineda was one of three journalists killed during the elections and among more than 30 journalists who have died in the past decade of civil war in El Salvador.

''This reflects the partiality of the judicial system and illustrates the notorious of subordination of civil power to military power,'' the human rights commission said.

Frank Smyth, a member of the directorate of the Salvadoran Press Corps Association, said the ruling ''once again demonstrates the impunity which characterizes the armed forces in this country.''

''I think it puts all of us at risk and demonstrates a tolerance within the system for violence against the press,'' Smyth said.

(JUNE 8) UPI - A Kansas police officer says it was only by the ''grace of God'' that there were NO deaths in a swarm of tornadoes that devastated the city of Emporia last night. Captain Bob Rodriguez says the twisters caused ''a lot of damage'' as they ripped through houses and businesses, injuring 18 people. Officials say at least four tornadoes are confirmed to have hit several areas of the city.

PONTIAC, MI (JUNE 8) UPI - A judge Friday barred the retired doctor who helped a Portland, Ore., woman with Alzheimer's disease take her own life from using his suicide device ever again or assisting in suicide in any fashion.

''He is causing death by unnatural means and nothing is more permanent than death,'' said Oakland County Circuit Judge Alice Gilbert in a stinging rebuke to Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

The 62-year-old retired pathologist from Royal Oak said Gilbert's injunction effectively puts him ''out of business.'' He said he did not know whether he would pursue the case in court, given the current climate of legal and medical opinion.

Gilbert said her temporary restraining order, issued at the request of the Oakland County Prosecutor's office, aplies to ''this machine, any other machine or helping any patient commit suicide regardless of modality employed.''

Agreeing with the prosecutors, Gilbert said she feared the widespread publicity over the first known medically assisted suicide would attract others who want to end their lives.

In his closing statement, Kevorkian had told the judge she would be abetting ''Dark Age mentality'' by granting the injunction.

On Monday, Kevorkian hooked Janet Adkins, 54, up to his suicide device in a van at a park in northern Oakland County. A victim of Alzheimer's disease, Adkins told Kevorkian she wanted to end her life rather than live with the ravages of the disease.

During about 90 minutes of testimony Friday, Kevorkian openly expressed his contempt and resentment for the medical profession, which he said still maintains medieval attitudes about death and dying.

''I'm sure if they could today, they would burn me at the stake,'' he said.

Kevorkian said the medical profession should learn that ''a rational policy of planned death'' would be of inestimable value to mankind if properly developed.

''I know if it is blocked, it would maintain the status of pervasive Dark Age mentality,'' he said.

Under questioning by Assistant Prosecutor Michael Modelski, Kevorkian described in detail his preparations for Adkins' suicide.

Last Saturday, he met Adkins, her husband, Ron, and her best friend in a Madison Heights motel. He said he spent 2 1/2 to three hours determining her medical condition and judging her resolve to end her life. Later, the group went to a restaurant for dinner.

Kevorkian said he told Adkins repeatedly that she could change her mind. ''Her eyes welled up with tears. She was terrified I was going to back out '' he said.

On Monday, Kevorkian, along with his two sisters, went to a park in northern Oakland County where he hooked Adkins to his device in his Volkswagen van.

''She was very anxious. She was in a big hurry,'' he said.

It took him four attempts to get the saline solution going to her vein, he said.

''Then, when everything was ready, I asked her again if she still wanted to go through with it,'' he said. ''She had 25 seconds after she touched the button. She didn't want any delay.

''She said, 'Show me how to hit the button.' Never once did she show a sign of hestiation. There was never any sign of depression.

''She said, 'I want it to work. I want it to be right.' I took the cap off and she hit the device.''

Kevorkian said Adkins pushed a button to change the saline solution to a lethal chemical three times lightly with the back of her hand.

''She looked up and she said, 'Thank you, thank you.' She raised up and she looked like she wanted to kiss me. I said, 'Have a good trip.' And that was it.''

Kevorkian said, ''I don't enjoy seeing people die. It was a wrenching emotional experience. The only calm person was Mrs. Adkins.''

Also testifing was Kevorkian's sister, Flora Holzheimer of Frankfurt, West Germany, who was with Kevorkian at the Saturday dinner and also at the park where Adkins took her life on Monday.

During dinner Saturday night, she said they all agreed that ''we would chose to leave the planet in this way.''

''I was surprised and happy that she (Adkins) ordered some kind of whiskey and ginger ale. It was something she was used to,'' Holzheimer said, describing the dinner table conversation as normal.

On Thursday, prosecutors filed an amended complaint that said Kevorkian is now talking to a Southfield woman with multiple sclerosis about ending her life.

Prosecutors want Gilbert to forbid Kevorkian from using his ''suicide machine'' on the 46-year-old Southfield woman, who was not identified in the complaint, and any others until the court can determine whether Kevorkian's assistance in helping Adkins kill herself was legal.

''There will be immediate and irreparable injury if Dr. Kevorkian is allowed to again use his 'machine' prior to a determination of what exactly it is that his 'machine' does and whether it is legally and medically acceptable,'' Modelski wrote in the court document.

In the complaint, prosecutors urged the court to act quickly. They claimed that because of the ''nationwide publicity Dr. Kevorkian has generated, it is likely other candidates for his 'machine' will be turning up.''

MILAN, ITALY (JUNE 8) UPI - Cameroon, a 300-1 longshot to win the World Cup, sent the tournament off to an astonishing start Friday by jolting defending champion Argentina 1-0 in the opening game of soccer's month-long spectacle.

Before a global television audience of some 1.3 billion, the west African nation scored on a 66th-minute header by Francois Omam Biyick while playing one man short and then survived a second ejection to deliver one of the more startling results in World Cup history.

Argentina, with midfield great Diego Maradona double-teamed and kept in check, proved unable to break the 20-year-year jinx on defending champions. The last World Cup champion to start its title defense with a victory was England in 1970.

Cameroon was left in excellent position to advance to the second round of the 24-team tournament. Argentina now must play exceptional soccer in its remaining Group B games against the Soviet Union and Romania if it hopes to move on.

Before a crowd of 73,780 at Giuseppe Meazza Stadium, Cameroon outplayed a team that included five players from the 1986 World Cup winning team. In no way was this Cameroon team the one that played so poorly in the African Championships in Algeria in March.

As for Argentina, it was more of the same. It had won only six international games since becoming champion four years ago. Until its unimpressive 2-1 victory over Israel two weeks ago, Argentina had not won for 10 games and failed to score in nine.

Cameroon holds a unique mark among the 55 countries to have appeared in the World Cup since its inception in 1930. Cameroon has never lost a game - having tied three times in 1982 and winning once in 1990.

Five minutes before Biyick's goal, his brother, Andre Kana Biyick, was sent off by French referee Michel Vautrot for bringing down Argentine substitute Claudio Caniggia. He will automatically miss one game and be fined $7,000 under new rules for this tournament.

The winning play came on a free kick from the left side of the penalty area. The ball sailed into the box and popped high in the air for Francois Omam Biyick. He headed the ball to the left, leaving goalkeeper Nery Pumpido to drop to his right. The play did not seem especially testing, but the ball bounced under Pumpido's hands and into the net.

Argentina was unable to regroup. And Maradona, playing with an injured toe failed to make a lasting impression. Despite being reduced to 10 men, Cameroon continued to threaten with rapid counter attacks.

Defender Benjamin Massing became the second Cameroon player expelled when he knocked down Caniggia in the 87th minute following an earlier caution. Caniggia, who gave Argentina some life on attack, was the target of lunging tackles by Cameroon defenders on his late run for the goal.

Argentina's best scoring chance came midway through the first half when Cameroon goalkeeper Thomas N'Kono had to react quickly to two Maradona-inspired attacks.

In the 28th minute, N'Kono beat Jorge Burruchaga to the ball just as the striker was lining up a shot, and then stopped a Maradona cross intended for the same player four minutes later.

N'Kono, a veteran who starred in the 1982 World Cup, started only because Coach Valeri Nepomniachi - a Soviet who communicates with his players through his driver - dropped Joseph-Antoine Bell for disciplinary reasons.

At the final whistle, the nine Cameroon players on the field went wild with delight, celebrating one of the finest moments in African sports. For Argentina, there was an uncomfortable sense of deja vu. In 1982, playing as defending champions, Argentina lost its opening game to Belgium 1-0.

Leading to this tournament, Argentina Coach Carlos Bilardo had said his team was ''Maradona and 10 others.'' On Friday, not even Maradona was enough.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (JUNE 8) UPI - The U.S. Embassy expressed concern over the fairness of this weekend's elections, saying communist officials in the provinces were using bullying tactics to try to influence the vote, an opposition newspaper said Friday.

The embassy, in a prepared statement carried by the daily Democratsya, also cited irregularities with voting lists as well as the ''vastly superior'' resources of the ruling Communist Party.

The statement was published two days before Bulgaria's 6.5 million eligible voters cast ballots in the nation's first democratic elections in 44 years. It echoes charges opposition groups have made throughout the campaign.

It expressed alarm over reported physical attacks on opposition candidates and supporters, most of which occurred in rural areas where the communists are believed to be strongest.

''We particularly note the allegations of a consistent pattern of intimidation in provincial areas by members of local government against the population,'' the embassy statement said.

It also cited reports of flawed or erroneous voter lists and said the party's huge resources gave it an unfair advantage over the young and poorly financed opposition.

''Not enough had been done to offset these advantages,'' the statement said.

The Communist Party, which has changed its name to the Bulgarian Socialist Party, has been projected in official opinion polls as the likely winner of the two-stage elections Sunday and June 10.

But independent observers say the race is wide open - an assessment that appeared to be supported by the massive showing of support for the leading opposition group, Union of Democratic Forces, at a rally Wednesday night in central Sofia.

The rally drew several hundred thousand people, according to official reports, and dwarfed a simultaneous demonstration by Communist Party supporters less than a mile away.

UDF president Zhelyu Zhelev told the rally it would be a ''catastrophe'' if Bulgaria were left in the hands of the communists.

''For Europe and for the world this will mean we have not grown to democracy,'' he said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Jack Henry Abbott, a jailhouse author convicted of stabbing an actor to death in 1981, tried to portray himself Friday as helping the victim get medical attention and called an eyewitness who contradicted him a ''liar.''

The attack that left Richard Adan dead on July 18, 1989, took place six weeks after Abbott won an early prison release with the help of author Norman Mailer. Abbott had been serving time for murdering another inmate in a Utah prison.

The witness, Wayne Larsen, testified during a civil trial that Abbott attacked Adan, 22, from behind on the sidewalk outside an East Village restaurant in the pre-dawn hours.

He testified that Abbott swung a knife over Adan's shoulder and plunged it into his heart and then taunted, ''Come on ---------- fight me, now!''

A wounded Adan replied, ''No. I never wanted to. I told you,'' Larsen testified.

Adan then said, ''Why did you have to kill me?'' Larsen testified during the trial into the amount of damages Abbott must pay Adan's widow.

Abbott, 46, who is acting as his own lawyer at the trial in state Supreme Court in Manhattan, suggested Larsen was confused and he was actually trying to help rather than hurt Adan.

''Is it possible that what you heard was me shouting because he was backing into the traffic on Second Avenue and I was shouting to pedestrians to stop him?'' Abbott asked.

''No,'' Larsen snapped.

Larsen testified that after Abbott stabbed and taunted his victim, he slinked into the shadows of nearby buildings.

During cross-examination, Abbott insisted that he was trying to get medical attention for the mortally wounded man. He asked Larsen, ''Did you see me in the midst of that, trying to get help?''

''No,'' Larsen said.

''You're a liar!'' Abbott shouted.

Justice Carol Arber already has ruled that Abbott is liable for damages to Adan's widow, Ricci Adan, 31, and a jury now must decide how much she deserves. Mrs. Adan is seeking $5 million for her husband's wrongful death and $5 million for his pain and suffering.

But the state Crime Victims Board has only $15,000 in escrow from a movie option on Abbott's book, ''In the Belly of the Beast,'' rights from an Off-Broadway production of the same name, and an advance on a second book titled ''My Return.''

In addition, the New York County Sheriff's office has seized $100,000 of Abbott's earnings.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Three months after he was hospitalized with severe burns and captured the hearts of the nation with his bravery, a 12-year-old boy set afire by a bully left the hospital Friday, thanking God and his doctors for his recovery and warning: ''Drugs are not cool.''

David Opont of Brooklyn was burned March 7 and told police his 13-year-old attacker tried to force him to smoke something he thought was drugs.

Opont became the focus of national attention, receiving visits from former President Ronald Reagan, Jesse Jackson and the president of Haiti, the boy's birthplace.

Despite his celebrity status, the slight, soft-spoken boy blinked shyly as family members, carrying balloons, pushed his wheelchair into the bright sunlight on his first trip outside New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center's burn unit, where he has been since the attack.

He broke into a broad smile as reporters and onlookers applauded and called his name.

Opont sat with an elastic gloved right hand across his lap and a book tucked against his leg.

Dr. Cleon Goodwin said the boy wore elastic compression garments under his clothing to help reduce scarring. A bald patch on his head revealed a reddened scalp that Goodwin said could be repaired with skin grafts.

''For the first month and a half, we weren't sure if he would make it,'' Goodwin said. ''His spirit had as much to do with his recovery as anything.''

''I thank God, the doctors and nurses,'' Opont said in a voice just above a whisper after nursing head Barbara Both helped him step up to a podium and supported him as he gave one word answers to questions about his hospital stay.

He said he felt ''fine,'' and ''had fun'' in the hospital, had suffered ''not a lot'' of pain and would take ''less'' than the two years doctors expected for his recovery. He said he wanted most to ''go back to school'' and that the famous visitors were ''OK.''

Opont's longest statement came when he was asked if he had a message for other children after the incident that left him with burns over 55 percent of his body.

''Drugs is not a cool thing to do,'' he said.

MARION, N.C. (JUNE 8) UPI - A man accused of killing his wife and her girlfriend by shoving them from a lovers leap overlook on the Blue Ridge Parkway, was found innocent Monday.

The jury deliberated less than half a day before returning with the innocent verdict in the second trial of James Gibbs, a Fayetteville tire maker whose wife Helen and her best friend Susan Haire, died in October 1988 when they plunged from the scenic overlook.

The 38-year-old Gibbs's first trial ended in a hung jury.

Prosecutors contended Gibbs killed his 32-year-old wife and her girlfriend to end a troubled marriage and assure that he would have custody of the couple's three children.

Defense attorneys Charles Burgin and Frank Goldsmith contended Haire's personal and financial problems led her to commit suicide by jumping from the overlook's wall and Helen Gibbs was - accidently or purposedly - pulled over with her.

But District Attorney Allen Leonard said James Gibbs pushed the two women because of anger over his wife's affair with another man. He did not want to ''come out second best in the marriage,'' Leonard said.

Gibbs pushed his wife from the overlook while Haire had stepped into the woods to use the bathroom, Leonard said in closing arguments Thursday. When Haire came back, Gibbs struggled with her, then ''propelled her off the overlook,'' Leonard said.

''He wasn't going to let Susan Haire stand in the way of the best chance he had of getting rid of his wife,'' Leonard said.

''Susan Haire knew too much and she would have been the best witness against him,'' Leonard said.

But defense lawyer Burgin said the state had ''fallen far short'' of proving its case against Gibbs.

''What have they offered you in the way of proof?'' Burgin asked the McDowell County jury of eight men and four women. ''Speculation, conjecture and might-have-beens.''

KANSAS CITY, MO (JUNE 8) UPI - ConAgra Inc.'s proposed $1.34 billion purchase of Beatrice Co. represents its successful strategy of acquiring diverse food-industry companies at reasonable prices, analysts said Friday.

This strategy, combined with an emphasis on low-cost production and efforts to obtain a leading market share, has made the Omaha, Neb., company an industry giant with sales of more than $15 billion.

As ConAgra grew with a series of acquisitions during the 1980s - including Banquet Foods, RJR Nabisco's frozen food business, and International Multifood's U.S. flour mills - it continued to offer good returns to investors.

The company's stock price appreciated more than 1,300 percent during the decade, nearly double the average food stock, according to research by Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood of Minneapolis. It ranked 12th among the Fortune 500 in total return to investors during the period.

ConAgra said Thursday it would acquire Chicago-based Beatrice Co.'s food operations from Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. partnerships and management for cash and a combination of preferred and common stock. Beatrice had fiscal 1990 sales of $4.3 billion.

Beatrice's familiar grocery stables, including Hunt's, Orville Redenbacher's and Peter Pan, would complement ConAgra's frozen and refrigerated food lines such as Armour Classics, Patio, and Healthy Choice said Craig Carver, analyst with Dain Bosworth in Minneapolis.

''They have always looked at themselves as a food chain company,'' Carver said. ''They get involved from crop protection chemicals all the way to the frozen food case. It's given them a lot of opportunity to make acquisitions along that diverse line.''

Chairman Charles M. Harper said the combined company would have a better opportunity to compete with the international giants of the food industry.

ConAgra International, with offices in 26 countries, primarily trades and markets foodstuffs and food-related commodities.

''Beatrice is a much bigger factor internationally than ConAgra has been, particularly in the prepared food side of the business,'' Carver said. This (acquisition) will give them some opportunity to go after the packaged food side also.''

ConAgra's offer for Beatrice is substantially lower than the $3.5 to $4 billion KKR reportedly sought originally.

However, Beatrice is saddled with a large amount of debt, perhaps as much as $2.6 billion.

Assuming the debt would cause ConAgra to leverage its balance sheet to a greater extent than usual, Carver said. However, its long-term debt would amount to about 50 percent of total capital, a figure that is not out of line in the food industry.

In announcing the acquisition, ConAgra said its strategic plans, including Beatrice, ''indicate we will have substantial uncommitted financial capacity over the next three years. We fully intend to return to our historic 35 percent capitalization ratio (versus long-term debt) as soon as possible.''

ConAgra forecast record earnings, including Beatrice's, and return on equity of more than 20 percent during fiscal 1991.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Black activists and white Bensonhurst leaders declared a fragile cease-fire Friday in the war of words and marches that followed the racial slaying of a black teenager in the Brooklyn neighborhood last summer.

''We don't have to love each other, but we have to live with each other,'' said Rev. Al Sharpton, who nevertheless refused to rule out the resumption of his weekly protests.

''Bensonhurst is going to show the world that people who have been represented as enemies can come together and live the life of the lamb and not the lion,'' promised Assemblyman Frank Barbaro, who represents the community that has often greeted Sharpton's processions with racial taunts and watermelons.

The two stood side by side on the steps of City Hall to announce a truce, along with Moses Stewart, father of the slain youth - Yusuf Hawkins - and a score of religious and political leaders on both sides of the dispute.

They had met twice in recent days to hammer out an accord to bring a stop to the marches by black activists, at least temporarily.

Bensonhurst officials will in turn meet Saturday for the first time with members of Stewart's family to express their condolences and will join in a citywide effort to urge witnesses to bias-related crimes to come forward.

One of the chief demands of the protest marches has been for the ''good people of Bensonhurst'' to come forward and testify against the white youths accused of killing Hawkins.

The prosecution of the first two defendants in the case, the alleged ringleader and triggerman, was severely hampered by a lack of cooperation from witnesses.

Part of the impetus for the truce was to try to avert a repeat of the sometimes violent protests that greeted the verdicts last month when the two - Joseph Fama and Keith Mondello - are sentenced on Monday.

Fama, 19, was convicted of second-degree murder. Mondello, also 19, was cleared of murder and manslaughter but convicted of lesser charges.

Sharpton, Stewart, Barbaro and the others, including Mayor David Dinkins, are to hold a mass meeting in Bensonhurst on Sunday to urge witnesses to come forward and call for the judge to impose maximum sentences against Fama and Mondello.

Sharpton and Stewart said they were impressed with the good will of the Bensonhurst leaders and were ready to turn over a new leaf.

''Rather than taking cheap shots at each other, let us invest real time and try to build one city with equal protection under the law for everyone '' Sharpton said, adding that he was making a special appeal to all people especially himself, not to label entire communities, ''be it Bensonhurst or Harlem.''

But in the next breath he took a bitter swipe at Dinkins, who has staged numerous rallies calling for racial harmony while urging the media to pay less attention to Sharpton and his sometimes inflammatory rhetoric.

''Those that have tried to have harmony with the exclusion of those in the justice battles have only participated in political masturbation,'' Sharpton charged.

Both Sharpton and Stewart made a special appeal to Dinkins, Gov. Mario Cuomo and state Attorney General Robert Abrams to attend the sentencing on Monday, or else face more protests.

Stuart invited them to walk into the courtroom with his family.

''If they do not do this, they themselves are polarizing this city,'' he said. ''If elected officials in this city don't stand by us in our struggle for justice, we're going back to Bensonhurst.''

This remark left many of those present from Bensonhurst upset, but still ready to press on with negotiations over the weekend.

''We do not like to be used as pawns,'' Spatola said.

MOSCOW (JUNE 8) UPI - The Russian legislature voted Friday to declare that its laws have priority over those of the Soviet Union's central government challenging President Mikhail Gorbachev's grip on the country's largest republic.

By a vote of 544-271, the new Russian Congress of People's Deputies decided to include a clause on the primacy of Russia's laws in a sovereignty declaration it will pass next week.

Approval of the clause was a major victory for Russian president Boris Yeltsin, who hopes to make the Soviet Union's largest republic virtually independent of central control.

The clause would establish ''the supremacy of the constitution and laws of the Russian Federation on its entire territory.''

''U.S.S.R. laws that conflict with the sovereign rights of the Russian Federation are suspended by the republic on its territory,'' the measure says.

Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia all passed similar acts on the primacy of local laws on their way to independence declarations, and Moscow has declared them invalid.

Gorbachev discounted Friday's preliminary decision, saying the Congress ''had not yet adopted anything that would violate the Soviet constitution'' and that he was sure that it would not.

However, he warned that ''Russia's people will not tolerate those who would push them to a confrontation among ethnicities and disintegration of the Union.''

Gorbachev has accused Yeltsin of supporting policies that would lead to the Soviet Union's breakup.

Yeltsin, who smiled broadly after the results were announced, refused to comment until the final adoption of the sovereignty declaration.

But leaders of the radical Democratic Russia bloc, the backbone of Yeltsin's support in the Congress, said Friday's voting would mark a turning point in Soviet history.

''Today's was an epoch-making event because the priority of republican laws over those of the (Soviet) Union will transform the entire structure of our union,'' said Viktor Dementyev, a member of Democratic Russia's coordinating council.

Fyodor Shelov-Kovedyaev, a member of the committee drafting the sovereignty declaration, described Friday's vote as an affirmation of Russian independence.

''That we are declaring our laws on our territory to be higher than those of the union says that we are becoming an independent state ''Shelov-Kovedyaev said.

More conservative deputies were dismayed by the decision, saying that Russia would be hurt by conflicts with the central government and other republics.

''There should have been a softer formulation that would take into account the interests of the entire Union and as well as Russia,'' said Ivan Rymorov, a deputy who is also a lieutenant general in the Soviet army.

Rymorov said that Russia's security could be harmed by a looser federation with the other 14 Soviet republics.

''No single republic, including Russia, is competent to resolve the question of the country's defense,'' Rymorov said.

Yeltsin, who lost his post as Moscow's party leader and candidate membership in the Communist Partys ruling Politburo after criticizing Gorbachev's reforms as too slow in November 1987, became Russia's effective president last week by a narrow four votes over a required majority in the Congress.

Friday's vote was the first concrete evidence of the legislature's support for Yeltsin's plan to ''invert the pyramid'' of the Soviet Union, putting Russia's interests before those of the central government.

''The position of Yeltsin for possible negotiations with Gorbachev has sharply improved,'' said Oleg Rumyantsev, another Democratic Russia leader.

No such negotiations, which would presumably center on issues of Russian autonomy, have yet been set.

The Congress, which Friday began selecting a smaller standing Parliament called the Supreme Soviet from among its members, will discuss the entire sovereignty declaration and means for implementing it next Wednesday.

The Russian republic, officially called the Russian Federation because of the many small ethnic groups that live within it, covers three-fourths of the land mass of the Soviet Union, including all of Siberia. It has more than half the nation's population of 280 million people.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - Companies with employee stock ownership plans may realize substantial savings through a Securities and Exchange Commission rule change to be published next week in the Federal Register.

As amended, the SEC rules streamline registration procedures for ESOPs and eliminate the need to provide the agency with annual descriptions of the plans.

Cost savings under the new rules could be considerable.

A company that commented on the rules estimated that the cost of complying with the old filing requirements exceeded $100,000 annually. And the American Society of Corporate Secretaries Inc., in a 1986 survey, found that the cost of new registration statements or post-effective amendments ranged from $4,000 to $6,000.

The primary change is that a company will no longer have to publish a customary prospectus for an ESOP if the information is provided in other company documents that have already been published.

''The critical part for employers is that you can use other documents to satisfy your plan disclosure obligations (under federal securities laws) and that, if you have an ERISA plan, you do not have to duplicate the plan description in (Form) 11-K,'' said Ann Wallace, chief of the SEC's office of disclosure policy.

The SEC disclosed the amended rules in an announcement dated Wednesday.

Reporting requirements under the 11-K form, which consists of an annual report of employee benefit plans, can now be fulfilled merely by submitting financial statements.

Alternately, companies are now allowed to submit financial statements filed with the Labor Department under ERISA - short for the Employee Retirement Insurance Security Act of 1974 - unless they are limited-scope audits.

In streamlining the registration procedures, the SEC also ruled that companies that fund their employee stock plans by repurchasing shares on the open market no longer need to get a legal opinion before reissuing the shares to employees. Instead, the opinion provided when the stock was first issued will suffice.

The new rules also give small companies access to an expedited filing method.

Previously, small firms starting up employee benefit plans had to file Form S-1, which is costly because it requires the maximum amount of corporate disclosure.

Soon, however, companies that plan to raise less than $7.5 million by offering stock to employees can use Form S-8, which requires much less disclosure and thus is less expensive to prepare.

Form S-8 is used to register securities that will be offered solely to employees under an ESOP or an employee retirement plan.

The SEC's amended rules become effective 30 days after publication in the Federal Register.

(JUNE 8) UPI - Political leaders in Canada are making desparate moves to salvage constitutional talks to keep Quebec in Canada. Those efforts were further imperiled today when the premier of Newfoundland threatened to abandon the talks because of their secrecy. Deliberations resumed for a sixth day today in Ottawa with Quebec still refusing to discuss an amendment that would recognize its distinct French-speaking society. The measure must be approved by June 23rd by all 10 Canadian provinces or it becomes void.

NATO ministers today endorsed a nine-point plan aimed at easing Soviet concerns about a unified Germany's becoming part of NATO. The Western alliance gave its negotiators new ''flexibility'' in stalled Vienna talks on conventional forces in Europe. The 16 foreign ministers issued a statement after a two-day meeting in Scotland, saying- ''We seek NO unilateral advantage from German unity.''

President Bush... blazing a G-O-P fund-raising trail across the Midwest... continues to praise the new superpower rapport achieved at last week's summit. At a morning fund-raiser for Iowa Governor Terry Branstad in Des BALTIMORE (JUNE 8) UPI - The American Civil Liberties Union has warned the city that a decision to ban a rally by a skinhead group could cost thousands of dollars in legal fees that would be better spent fighting racism.

The ACLU sent a letter to the city Thursday saying the thousands of dollars that would be spent in a court struggle over the Baltimore Area Skin Heads' right to march in the area would be better used for projects adressing racism.

Two leaders of the civil rights organization, which is supporting the skinhead's First Amendment rights to free speech, have said Mayor Kurt Schmoke refused to meet with them.

Residents of the predominantly white Hampden section have banded together to oppose the group's proposed rally, and Schmoke, who initially refused a permit for the march, offered to let the skinheads use War Memorial Plaza across from City Hall for the demonstration.

The white supremacy group refused the mayor's offer and refiled its request to march in Hampden.

(JUNE 8) UPI - The United States is urging all Americans to immediately get out of war-torn Liberia before the West African nation's civil war worsens. Rebels trying to topple President Samuel Doe's government have advanced to within 35 miles of the capital of Monrovia. The State Department in Washington has arranged for three commercial charter flights this weekend to take the estimated 33-hundred Americans still in Liberia to safety in the Ivory Coast.

A team of Houston scientists are touting what they say are the nation's first genetically engineered calves in work that may lead to healthier cattle that produce leaner meat. WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - The House version of the new farm policy law needs only minor adjustments to fit within current spending levels but a congressman predicted Friday that spending cuts would prompt a major change in the farm program.

''When our spending cuts come, we're going to move to a triple-base option '' said Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, chairman of a House Agriculture subcommittee.

At present, the House Agriculture Committee has endorsed a plan that would give farmers the option of varying their mix of crops on land devoted to wheat, feed grains, cotton, rice and oilseeds, such as soybeans - so-called planting flexibility. Crop support payments would not be made on the ''flex'' acres.

Other committee leaders have mentioned the likelihood of making crop flexibility into a mandatory program - effectively limiting the number of acres eligible for crop supports - if farm spending must be cut. None have been as direct as Stenholm, however.

At present, there are no acreage limitations.

Mandatory flexibility would be similar to the so-called triple-base plan that Stenholm has championed for the past couple of years. Under it, farmers would not be paid crop subsidies for part of their acreage but they would be free to plant whatever they want on that part of their land.

During its drafting of the farm bill, the committee's goal was to produce a package that would cost no more than about $53 billion over five years, the amount the current farm program would cost if it was extended. A review by the Congressional Budget Office showed they nearly succeeded.

The CBO said the House bill was about $2.6 billion over the baseline with the largest item being $1.6 billion in additional spending for the dairy program.

Two sources said committee leaders planned to resolve the dairy issue by using the Senate's baseline, which presumes stable spending in the coming years and would accommodate the cost of the committee's dairy program. The House budget baseline assumed sizeable reductions in the dairy support price, which resulted in the program being calculated as calling for additional spending.

The Agriculture Committee has that would set the support price at a minimum of $10.10 per 100 pounds of milk - the current price - for the next five years.

Aside from dairy, only minor changes, such was putting a cap on the cost of some export programs or slightly delaying the start-up date for higher grain loan rates, will be needed, sources said.

Leaders planned to make the adjustments in the farm bill at a committee meeting Tuesday.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Prices were sharply lower at the close of the New York Stock Exchange Friday in light trading, pressured by waves of profit taking and computerized program selling.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 14.32 Thursday, tumbled 34.95 to 2862.38, according to an unofficial tally.

Declines led advances 1,002-455 among the 1,968 issues crossing the NYSE tape at 4 p.m. EDT. Volume amounted to about 144,000,000 shares, compared with 160,420,000 traded Thursday.

Prices were sharply lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Continued profit taking after the market's most recent record high Monday and bouts of program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock index futures, pushed prices down, analysts said.

The market tried to rebound from three straight sessions of profit taking at the opening, but the selling quickly wiped out those gains.

The market was especially vulnerable to the computerized selling, analysts said, since many players were on the sidelines before the weekend and next week's spate of economic data. That data includes two inflation reports, the producer price index and consumer price index.

On the trading floor as of 3 p.m. EDT, Genentech was most active, higher.

Pacific Gas & Electric followed, up slightly. News Corp. was third, moderately higher.

Alexander & Alexander Services was also actively traded, down sharply, as was Eastman Kodak, which was lower. The company has not commented this week on the heavy trading of the stock, but analysts say it has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting interest.

Elsewhere, specialty retailers were lower after disappointing April sales reports. The Gap, The Limited, Toys 'R' Us, Home Depot and Mercantile Stores were all down sharply.

Among other blue chips, AT&T, IBM, Merck, and Boeing fell sharply while Philip Morris was down in active trading and McDonald's was lower.

B.A.T Industries led the Amex issues, up slightly.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 8) UPI - Mike Glickman, the whiz-kid realtor now in bankruptcy, said Friday he and more than 500 of his former employees have joined one-time rival Jon Douglas Co.

''I'm hopeful this will be a lifetime job,'' Glickman said at a news conference at Douglas offices in West Los Angeles. ''Douglas offered me this without taking anything away from my pride.''

''I plan to help Jon Douglas become No. 1 in California and in the United States,'' Glickman said.

In his new role, Glickman, who was the sole owner of Mike Glickman Realty Inc., will oversee Douglas sales efforts of ''estate'' properties valued at $750,000 or more in the San Fernando Valley.

With more than 1,200 agents, Glickman's company had been the largest real estate firm in the valley until closing down five offices Tuesday, the same day he filed for both corporate and personal bankruptcy. The defunct company owes $500,000 in rents and $1.5 million in other debts.

Glickman has refused to blame the failure on his extravagant style, which included contests and lavish parties, or on his unabashed self-promotion.

Douglas, who uses a more conservative upscale marketing approach, said Friday he won't ask Glickman to change his style substantially.

''I'm just going to let him go in the area that he really shines, which is building a fantastic sales organization,'' Douglas said. However, he did say that he doesn't care for contests as a promotion, and both men joked that Glickman would begin wearing a tie and perhaps get a haircut.

Douglas said he also wants Glickman to lead motivational seminars - something for which he is noted.

The 30-year-old Glickman, whose grand style made him a prominent figure in the once-sizzling Southern California real estate market, has blamed his company's downfall on over-extending the firm during a period of cooling real estate sales.

At the news conference, Glickman refused to say when creditors will be paid. ''It's all going to work out,'' he promised.

Douglas said the key issue for Glickman and bankruptcy trustee Donald Henry to resolve involves the 2,000 listings Glickman's company had at the time of the bankruptcy. He said attorneys for Douglas, Glickman and the creditors are scheduled to meet next Tuesday.

Douglas disclosed Friday that he had held preliminary discussions with Glickman's representatives several months ago about the possibility of buying the company, but nothing had developed. ''We told them to show us some numbers, but they never got back to us,'' he said.

Douglas, whose company operates 32 California offices and had 1989 sales volume of $6.2 billion, also defended his expansion by hiring more than 500 former Glickman employees at a time when sales have slowed.

The market's only problem, he said, is that sellers are asking too much for their properties because they believe that the boom of 1988 will return.

''I don't think this market is nearly as bad as people think it is,'' Douglas said. ''We just have not been able to convince sellers that they're living in the past.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - The EPA announced Friday it has imposed record fines on an Idaho paper company for violation of clean air laws and on a Houston oil and gas entrepreneur for failure to comply with underground injection regulations.

Environmental Protection Agency officials said the Boise Cascade Corp. of Boise had agreed to pay a $350,000 penalty for failing to obtain proper air emission permits before beginning construction of modifications to its paper and pulp mill in International Falls, Minn.

The penalty, part of a consent decree filed in federal district court in Minneapolis, is the largest fine ever paid by a company for failure to obtain permits under EPA's ''Prevention of Significant Deterioration'' and ''New Source Review'' programs. Both are designed to prevent worsening of air pollution.

Also agreeing to pay a record environmental fine was Younas Chaudry, owner of three oil and gas production companies based in Houston: Pioneer Exploration Co., Delta Petroleum Inc., and State Energy Investment Inc.

Chaudry agreed to pay at least $159,000 to settle an EPA enforcement action brought against him for failure to comply with requirements of federal rules concerning underground injection of toxic wastes. The rules are designed to preven contamination of ground water.

The penalty, the largest ever imposed under the EPA's underground injection program, was part of a settlement agreement with the EPA filed in federal district court in Montana.

EUREKA, CA (JUNE 8) UPI - The Coast Guard boarded and seized a Japanese fish processing vessel off Northern California early Friday, officials said.

Coast Guard officials said the 400-foot Miyajima Maru was suspected of undercounting its catch of salmon and dolphin. A boarding team from the Coast Guard cutter Clover took control of the ship before dawn about 11 miles off the coast near Eureka, Petty Officer Elizabeth Neely said.

The Coast Guard was called after another Japanese vessel, the Tenyo Maru, reported that Miyajima Maru was underlogging its catch. The ship was seen dumping salmon and porpoises overboard that were not logged on its books, Neely said.

The ship was supposed to be fishing for sable and rockfish, Neely said.

Investigators from the Clover first boarded the ship Thursday night. After discovering violations aboard, officials waited for approval from the commandant of the Coast Guard, Adm. J. William Kine, to seize the vessel because it was an international ship.

Rep. Peter Defazio, D-Ore., said Japanese vessels regularly exceed their ''inadvertent catch'' limits for fish other than those they are fishing for, such as salmon.

''This is just the tip of the iceberg,'' Defazio said. ''My fishermen have been complaining about this for a long time now. Instead of stopping, (Japanese ships) kept on fishing and threw the extra fish overboard.''

Neely said a team boarded a second Japanese vessel, the cargo ship Taisei Maru No. 52, as part of the same investigation and was checking its cargo holds Friday afternoon.

Meanwhile, the Clover was escorting the Miyajima Maru to port.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 8) UPI - The shuttle Atlantis was hauled from its hangar to NASA's rocket assembly building Friday in preparation for movement next week to launch pad 39A and blastoff in July on a secret military mission.

The grounded shuttle Columbia currently is mounted on the seaside launch stand, undergoing final tests to help locate the exact position of a hydrogen fuel leak that has delayed the ship's takeoff on a 10-day astronomy flight from May 30 to mid-August.

''Delays are just part of the game,'' Columbia skipper Vance Brand said in a telephone interview from Houston. ''We're just going to let down for a few days and come back stronger than ever.''

NASA managers Friday decided not to conduct another fueling test using supercold liquid hydrogen, clearing the way for the veteran spaceplane to be hauled back to the the Vehicle Assembly Building next Tuesday.

Once inside, Columbia will be unbolted from its external tank and rolled into a processing hangar for repairs expected to delay launch until around Aug. 12.

With Columbia out of the way, Atlantis will be hauled out to pad 39A next Saturday for launch around July 13 on a mission to carry a military payload into orbit. It will be the fourth of eight flights now scheduled for 1990, one less than planned before Columbia's problems wrecked NASA's flight schedule.

The leak that grounded Columbia apparently only shows up in the presence of frigid liquid hydrogen, which chills the shuttle's internal plumbing to some 420 degrees below zero.

In a critical test Wednesday, engineers pumped the rocket fuel back aboad Columbia and traced the leak to a cavity in the ship's 17-inch hydrogen fuel line ''quick disconnect'' fitting where the propellant line enters the belly of the orbiter from the external tank.

The disconnect fitting is equipped with internal valves on either side of the point where the line separates once the ship reaches orbit, allowing the external tank to fall away.

Engineers conducted tests Friday to find out whether the leak is on the tank side of the disconnect fitting or in the part of the mechanism attached to the shuttle. The latter option represents a worst-case scenario, because the fitting cannot be easily replaced.

In any case, managers have decided to remove the valve assembly from Columbia's tank for a detailed inspection to make sure no generic problems are present that could cause similar trouble for other flights.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 11) UPI - USAir will plunge further into the intensifying international flight market with the help of foreign airlines in an effort to offset its sluggish domestic business, USAir Group Inc. Chairman Edwin Colodny said Friday.

Colodny also said during a visit to Pittsburgh that USAir will delay deliveries of new planes from The Boeing Co. and slow the shelving of older planes to ''give ourselves considerable more flexibility.''

Asked if USAir would make a profit in 1990, Colodny said: ''I don't know. We've gone through a very rough three quarters.'' USAir's ridership is down 0.6 percent for the year's first five months.

Colodny, speaking to the Greater Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, said the U.S. economy and the domestic travel industry are experiencing a ''soft'' period.

''I don't think we should fool ourselves and say everything is rosy. It is not,'' Colodny said.

He said, however, that airlines have seen a modest increase in international traffic and touted the June 15 start of non-stop USAir flights from Pittsburgh to Frankfurt, West Germany, as a ''harbinger of more to come.''

Frankfurt is USAir's second European destination, after London from Charlotte, N.C. USAir also is arranging direct flights from Philadelphia to Paris and an agreement was reached last week with Alitalia for future flights from Pittsburgh to Italy, Colodny said.

''USAir is expanding its participation in international travel not only with its own direct service but also through marketing alliances with foreign carriers, such as Alitalia,'' he said.

American Airlines also has announced plans to attack the international flight market, which has been dominated by TWA and Pan Am.

Colodny, meanwhile, said he was excited about USAir's growth at Greater Pittsburgh International Airport, in conjunction with a $593 million expansion project expected to be completed in October 1992.

Colodny said the Pittsburgh airport is the only one in the Northeast with room for growth and predicted it will become a major hub for future international air traffic.

But Colodny warned air traffic will be slow without a fourth parallel runway, saying it is ''absolutely vital if we are going to minimize delays.''

Allegheny County Commissioner Tom Foerster said a fourth runway will be ready by 1995. He said the federal government and airlines will pay for it.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 8) UPI - Czechoslovakia, the only East Bloc country to once freely embrace communism, held its first free elections in 44 years Friday in which voters are expected to reject it in favor of the pro-democracy Civic Forum.

At stake were seats for the national parliament, or Federal Assembly, and the parliaments of the Czech and Slovak republics, which together make up Czechoslovakia.

The pro-democracy group Civic Forum, which led the ''Velvet Revolution'' that swept away the country's communist regime without violence last year, was projected to sweep the elections.

A spot survey of polling stations indicated a large turnout in the major cities despite intermittent thundershowers, with many citizens saying they voted for the Civic Forum and its sister movement in Slovakia, Public Against Violence, in both races. Believed to be running next was the conservative Christian Democratic movement.

At the Zborovska Street polling station in Prague's Fifth District, nearly one-third of those eligible voted within the first four hours of the two-day balloting period.

''I voted for Civic Forum because they started it (the changes) and we trust them,'' said Ondrej Demeter, a gypsy who came with his mother, father and young son.

Demeter said the communists ''won't have many votes, even though there might be some good people among them.''

''It's a secret who we voted for, but we can tell you this: We haven't voted for No. 10,'' the Communist Party slate, said Vladimir Cerny, who said he and his wife, Frantiska, wanted their votes to support the development of Czechoslovakia as a democratic country.

In the Slovak republic of Bratislava, 30 to 40 people, mainly elderly, lined up in the rain as some polling stations opened, many of them voting freely for the first time.

And in the vacation village of Cernovice outside Prague, Kvetusa Kovickova who first voted in the last free elections in 1946, said simply: ''It's a beautiful feeling.''

Balloting was spread over Friday and Saturday morning to accommodate the national habit of migrating to country cottages on weekends. Surveys had predicted a turnout of 82 to 88 percent of the 11.2 million eligible voters.

First official results were expected Sunday, with final results in all the races expected Wednesday.

The West German polling organization INFAS is expected to announce its projections a half an hour after the polls close Saturday. INFAS predicted the results of the East German elections within 1.6 percent accuracy and the Romanian elections within 3 percent accuracy.

The Civic Forum, which dominates the transitional coalition government, sought the highest possible turnout, because a lower one would favor the communists.

President Vaclav Havel made an emotional speech urging Czechoslovaks to use their newly restored rights to vote for candidates who have been in the forefront of the revolution, and not those who joined up afterward - many of them former communists who turned in their party cards.

''I get the impression a lot of people are voting - and they're voting for the Civic Forum - to finally fundamentally topple the remains of communism here,'' a Western diplomat said.

Among those voting was former Communist Party leader Gustav Husak, cane in hand, who presided over the dismantling of the 1968 ''Prague Spring'' that was crushed by Soviet tanks and the repression that followed.

Another former hard-line Politburo member, Vasil Bilak, who was detained for questioning this week on his role in the invasion, said that during elections under communist rule, ''All were united. (But) time showed us we need a different form'' of elections now.

The elections were the first completely free ones since May 1946, when the communists gained 38 percent of the vote - the most of any political party in the only country in Eastern Europe where the Communist Party scored a postwar election victory.

LIMA, PERU (JUNE 8) UPI - Fears of violence, rumors of a military coup and a high degree of uncertainty over who will be Peru's next president stalked the nation less than 48 hours before Sunday's runoff election.

One of the nastiest campaigns in Peruvian history will culminate in the vote pitting prize-winning novelist Mario Vargas Llosa, 54, against Alberto Fujimori, 51, an agricultural engineer and son of Japanese immigrants.

The two runoff candidates were the top finishers in a first-round election in April.

An estimated 80,000 police and 150,000 troops have been deployed in the streets in an effort to prevent violence before Sunday's election. A virtual tie existed in last-minute polls Friday in the closing hours of the campaign between the two first-time candidates.

''We do not know who is going to win,'' said Manuel Torrado, director of the Datum public opinion research firm.

His polling gave Vargas Llosa, the conservative candidate, only a 1.4 percent lead over the more liberal Fujimori, too small a margin to predict who would win. Other polls also released to journalists Friday gave Fujimori a lead of 2 percent to as much as 7 percent, with a large number of undecided voters.

''It is very clear that those undecided are going to elect the next president,'' said Alfredo Torres of the Apoyo polling firm.

Torrado also said that, with the apparent closeness of the vote, ''I think the winner is going to be (the party) who has better control of the ballot boxes.''

Vargas Llosa said Friday in an interview with Lima radio stations that his campaign ''has an organization that is very alert to whatever (fraud) attempt.''

Rumors of a possible military coup also swirled around in the tense atmosphere of uncertainty, prompting outgoing President Alan Garcia, the defense minster and Vargas Llosa to publicly deny them.

''We, I underline, we will respect the electoral results. This I can guarantee,'' said Gen. Julio Velasquez, the defense minister.

Taxi driver Juan Delgado, a fervent Vargas Llosa supporter, said if Fujimori wins, ''personally, I want a coup.''

One of the possible scenarios that would bring on a military takeover is that of violence if no clear winner emerges Sunday and there are charges of vote fraud by either side.

The National Election Council is not expected to release official final results for at least 15 days and perhaps as long as a month. Predictions of the vote outcome by the polling organizations could be conflicting.

Sociologist Fernando Rospigliosi, political editor of Caretas magazine, said the possibility of no clear winner emerging could lead to ''dangerous political uncertainty of incalculable risks.''

Both sides are going to say there was fraud if the other appears to be winning, he said in an interview. ''That could bring clashes in the streets. This is very, very dangerous.''

The controversial campaign with its charges of a ''dirty war'' has polarized the two forces. Vargas Llosa's strident attacks against Garcia and against the left, which supports Fujimori, also has heightened tensions.

Fujimori supporters accuse Vargas Llosa's Democratic Front of racism in attacks on Fujimori's Japanese heritage. Several also said in interviews the campaign pitted the ''whites'' represented by Vargas Llosa versus the ''cholos,'' the Peruvian term for citizens of mixed Indian-European ancestory.

''They (the right) have always been the white, the elitists,'' said Julian Bustamente, a senator-elect from Fujimori's Change '90 party.

The campaign also led to a confrontration between evangelical Christians who support Fujimori and the powerful Roman Catholic Church. Last week, after the appearance of a series of handbills purporting to be from evangelical churches that attacked Catholic beliefs, the Catholic Church in Lima staged a procession with some of its most sacred objects.

Fujimori backers and the evangelical movement charge the pamphlets and other anti-Catholic attacks were manufactured by the Vargas Llosa campaign.

''It is part of a plan. It is an underground campaign by the Democratic Front,'' said Carlos Garcia, the Change '90 second vice president candidate and former president of the National Evangelic Council.

''Apart from the racism and the immorality, there was the religious theme.''

The Shining Path guerrilla movement called Friday for citizens to either not vote or to annul the ballot. The group, believed to have some 5,000 armed members, also has called for an ''armed stoppage'' in two Andean cities in areas where it has a strong presence.

More than 19,000 people have been killed in guerrilla-related incidents since the Shining Path began operations in 1980. Lima and eight states and seven other provinces are under declared states of emergency because of guerrilla threats.

On Wednesday, suspected rebels burned an electoral registry and a wave of bombs exploded downtown despite an alert of an estimated 80,000 police officers and 150,000 soldiers ordered to prevent violence before the June 10 presidentiae its first attack 10 years ago in its ongoing effort to establish a Maoist regime in the South American country.

#90159u2017 06/08/1990 ~United Press International

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - The U.S. dollar, with no indicators to guide it, ended higher in thin trading Friday against major foreign currencies.

In late New York trading, the dollar was changing hands at 1.6975 marks, up from 1.6920 late Thursday. The dollar was quoted at 153.48 yen, up from 152.50 the previous day.

Other dollar rates: 1.4490 Swiss francs, up from 1.4440; 5.714 French francs, up from 5.703; and 1,248 Italian lire, up from 1,245.

The British pound edged lower to $1.6845 against Thursday's $1.6890.

Trading was thin and the dollar remained in narrow ranges, closing out a lackluster week, analysts said.

''It was a typical end to a very quiet week,'' said David Jaques of Barclays Bank PLC. ''There was no release of any economic information of any importance, and it was an extremely quiet day. There was very little volume.''

Although a squaring of positions usually occurs ahead of a weekend, there were not many positions taken this week, he added.

Many investors aren't expected to change their positions ahead of two major inflation indicators - the producer price index and the consumer price index - to be released next week, analysts said.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly higher against major currencies in quiet Friday trading, supported by political unrest in the Soviet Union and by a weaker West German mark.

Currency analysts said the dollar continued to be viewed as a safe haven for buyers amid the Soviets' political turmoil and economic problems and amid concerns about the future of a united Germany.

The absence of any major economic indicators made for as dull a day in Europe as in New York, analysts said.

The dollar rose slightly in Frankfurt to 1.6990 deutsche marks against 1.6920 at Thursday's close and was higher in Zurich, at 1.4505 Swiss francs vs. 1.4365.

In London, the pound moved lower against the dollar at $1.6830 from $1.6880 at the previous day's close.

The dollar closed higher in Brussels at 34.8525 Belgian francs against 34.77 but retreated in Paris and Milan, at, respectively, 5.7030 francs against 5.7085 and at 1,245.20 lire against 1,245.50.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar edged up against the Japanese yen in quiet trading, closing at 152.65 yen vs. Thursday's close of 152.55. Dealers said the dollar was able to advance marginally after light interbank dealings in an otherwise dull trading day.

Gold closed higher in Zurich at $354 an ounce against Thursday's $353.50 andwas up in London at $354.50 an ounce compared to $353.25.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $355.25 an ounce, up from $353.75 Thursday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled June spot contract gold at $355.70 an ounce, up from $354.60.

Silver was up in Zurich and London, finishing at $5.05 an ounce against $5.00 Thursday and at $5.03 an ounce against $5.01, respectively.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.025 an ounce, unchanged. Comex June spot silver ended at $5.007, off from Thursday's close of $5.013.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Ames Department Stores Inc. said Friday it will close 221 stores in 16 states and lay off 17,500 employees in an effort to ''stop the bleeding'' and revive the bankrupt retailing group.

Ames Chief Executive Stephen Pistner disclosed the plan at a meeting with the discount retailer's bondholders, creditors and bankers in New York.

Later in the day, an Ames spokeswoman said there would be 221 closings in all 16 states in which the company does business although, ''the significant majority (169) are being closed'' in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, North Carolina and Florida.

The other states and the number of stores to be closed are: Pennsylvania, 9; Virginia, 8; Kentucky, 8; Massachusetts, 8; Maryland, 6; New York, 4; Rhode Island, 3; Michigan, 2; West Virginia, 2; and Connecticut and New Hampshire, one each.

Ames, whose 1988 acquisition of the Zayre stores for $778 million triggered its financial woes, filed April 25 for Chapter 11 protection from creditors in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York. Pistner, who has been credited with turning around Chicago-based Montgomery Ward, was named as Ames' new CEO shortly after the bankruptcy filing.

''This will stop a major part of the bleeding,'' Pistner said, adding the decision would affect 184 former Zayre stores and end Ames' presence in a number of states outside its core operations in the northeast.

Ames, based in Rocky Hill, Conn., currently operates 679 stores, primarily in the eastern part of the United States. With the planned closures, which include 33 stores previously slated to go out of business, Ames would retain 458 stores.

''The measure will have to be approved by the bankruptcy court and the plan will be submitted to the court next week,'' Pistner said.

''About 17,500 employees will be laid off and will receive severance pay '' he added. Ames said in documents earlier filed with the bankruptcy court that it has 55,000 employees.

Pistner declined to immediately give an estimate of the one-time cost linked to the closings. He stressed the measure will help regain the crucial confidence of Ames vendors who had halted shipments to the ailing chain this spring.

Pistner added Ames has yet to draw on the $250 million in post-bankruptcy loans extended by Chemical Bank under court approval. At least part of the funds are likely to be used to finance the divestiture costs.

Pistner said if the closing is approved by the court, the targeted stores will hold ''going-out-of-business'' sales in August, which would help raise capital.

''Analysts have been expecting this announcement for a while,'' said David Williamson, retail industry analyst with Advest Group Inc. in Hartford, Conn. ''We did not know when exactly this was going to happen nor how many stores it would affect, but it was unavoidable.''

''Ames needed to close that many stores to bring losses under control and raise cash from the sale of the merchandise in these stores which will give vendors some sense of comfort so that they will promptly resuming shipments,'' Williamson said. ''I can't see why the bankruptcy court will not approve.

''This clearly is a step in the right direction,'' he added. ''Although it is early to say whether the decision affects te right stores, it involves stores away from Ames' original regions and it will help to keep the stores in a tight area, which allows to cut shipping and advertising costs.''

Ames grew to a $5-billion retailing empire after its acquisition of Zayre, aggressively moving into states where the retailer had no previous presence.

Pistner explained Ames chose to close a large number of stores only weeks after the bankruptcy filing, saying this was the best method of cutting losses and initiating restructuring.

''This business is coming back to health,'' he said.

BAYONNE, NJ (JUNE 8) UPI - The Coast Guard said it will investigate the spill-plagued tanker traffic to New Jersey's oil terminals as crews worked Friday to clean up 260,000 gallons of oil dumped when a tanker struck a rock.

The Kill Van Kull, the waterway between Bayonne and Staten Island, remained closed to regular ship traffic as more than 300 workers cleaned up the oil-soaked sand with rags, picks and shovels. A few vessels were allowed through.

The spill early Thursday from the BT Nautilus was the third classified as major in a year that began with a New Year's day leak of 500,000 gallons from an Exxon pipeline. In March, a barge exploded, dumping about 150,000 gallons of heating oil, while two smaller spills dumped significant amounts of oil.

Coast Guard officials said more than 1 million gallons have been dumped into the channels between New Jersey and Staten Island so far in 1990, four times as much as in all of 1989. The tank farms and refineries that line the New Jersey shore make the area one of the biggest oil ports in the world and the Arthur Kill-Kill Van Kull system one of the busiest waterways.

Andrew Willner, harborkeeper for the American Littoral Society, said the series of spills threatens marine plants and animals in an area that has become much cleaner in recent years.

''The use of old equipment, inefficient equipment and ill-trained and under-supervised people has caused immeasurable damage to a recovering ecosystem,'' Willner said.

The Nautilus, a Hong Kong-based tanker, hit a rock at about 5:20 a.m. Thursday, ripping a 30- to 40-foot gash in a tank holding more than 1 million gallons of oil. New Jersey authorities arrested the first mate later Thursday, charging that he was drunk on duty while serving as a lookout.

But Coast Guard Capt. Robert North, captain of the Port of New York, said Geoffrey Gregory of Mersey, England, was not responsible for the accident. The vessel was under the control of its captain and of a pilot who had come on board to guide it into the Coastal Terminal in Bayonne, North said.

Oil from the vessel formed foot-long globs in the water that washed up on beaches at New York's Coney Island, 8 to 10 miles away, and at Sandy Hook on the other side of Raritan Bay in New Jersey.

Rear Adm. Gene Henn, who heads Coast Guard maintenance operations for the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, said his panel will have broad power to review the series of accidents and make findings. His recommendations could include barring tanker traffic at night and ordering additional training and licensing for terminal workers and tanker crews.

Gregory, 52, who allegedly failed a test for drugs and alcohol after the accident, was freed on $5,000 cash bail after a court appearance Thursday night. He was charged with operating a vessel while under the influence of alcohol and illegal discharge of pollutants into a waterway.

The mate, second in command of the Nautilus, was on duty while the vessel docked. But North said he had no responsibility for its movements.

The Nautilus was carrying 14.7 million gallons of No. 6 oil used to fuel power plants. The vessel, registered in Gibraltar, is owned by a subsidiary of BT Shipping Ltd. of Bermuda.

A Rutgers biology professor who examined the area Friday morning, said assessing the ecological damage will take some time.

''The difficulty is that the area has had so many oil spills in the last few months that any new spill creates a greater problem because it's compounding the other effects,'' Joanna Burger said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - Stocks closed sharply lower Friday in light trading as profit taking and computerized program selling sent the market to a fourth straight loss and its biggest drop since February.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which eased 14.32 Thursday, tumbled 34.95 to 2862.38. The index has not posted a gain since Monday and registered its sharpest loss since falling 38.74 on Feb. 20.

Among broad market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 2.16 to 196.05 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index sank 4.44 to 358.71. The price of an average share lost 39 cents.

Declines led advances 1,004-460 among the 1,974 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 142,600,000 shares, down from 160,420,000 shares traded Thursday.

Waves of profit taking after the market's all-time high Monday and bouts of program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock index futures, sent prices tumbling, analysts said.

The market tried at the opening to rebound from three straight sessions of profit taking, but more selling quickly wiped out those gains.

Analysts said stocks were especially vulnerable to the computerized selling since many players were on the sidelines before the weekend and next week's spate of economic data. That data include the producer price index and consumer price index, both indicators of inflation.

On the whole, though, market observers were not especially troubled by the market's performance.

''I don't see this as the start of anything significant,'' said a trader at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. ''The market is entitled to pull back a little after the rally of the past few weeks.''

Dennis Jarrett, chief market strategist at Kidder, Peabody & Co., agreed.

''We saw some profit taking and, certainly, sell programs were an important part of today's activity. But this is healthy,'' he contended. ''We haven't done any major damage, it's part of a nice healthy scenario '' representing the consolidation of gains after a rally.

On the trading floor, Bowater was the most active issue, up 3/8 to 24 1/4 in dividend-related trading.

Pacific Gas & Electric followed, unchanged at 23 1/4. Philip Morris was third, down 5/8 at 44 1/4.

Genentech was next, up 1/2 to 26 3/4. As of Thursday's close, the stock was dropped from the S&P 500 because of its proposed merger with Switzerland's Roche Holdings.

News Corp. was also active, up 3/4 to 17 1/2 after saying it would make a public offering of 49 percent of its Hong Kong newspaper business.

Eastman Kodak traded 1.5 million shares, falling 3/4 to 41 3/4. The company has not commented this week on heavy trading of the stock, but analysts say it has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting interest.

Elsewhere, specialty retailers were lower after disappointing April sales reports. The Gap lost 2 3/8 to 56 1/8, The Limited fell 1 1/8 to 46 1/4 and Mercantile Stores slumped 1 to 43.

A tumble in entertainment stocks was said to have been sparked by concerns about the prospects for some major movies to be released soon. Disney sank 4 7/8 to 123 3/8, Time Warner fell 2 7/8 to 107 3/4 and MCA lost 1 3/4 to 56 3/4.

Elsewhere, Medtronic tumbled 3 3/8 to 76 1/4 after announcing a stock-swap merger with Bio-Medicus.

Among other blue chips, AT&T fell 7/8 to 42, IBM lost 1 7/8 to 118 3/4, Merck fell 1 1/2 to 80 and Boeing tumbled 1 3/8 to 82 1/2.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 176,303,110 shares, compared with 193,347,590 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed sharply lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index fell 2.40 to close at 361.17. The price of an average share lost 8 cents. Declines led advances 308-214 among the 806 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 12,564,790 shares, compared with 13,674,300 traded Thursday.

B.A.T Industries led the Amex issues, unchanged at 11 1/16.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 3.22 to close at 460.87.

(JUNE 8) UPI - Oil prices were mixed Friday with the crude market taking a direction-seeking pause and gasoline falling another penny a gallon to bring its weekly loss on the New York Mercantile Exchange to more than 4 cents.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for July delivery edged up 11 cents to end the day at $16.78 a barrel, down 72 cents from last Friday.

''There's a reluctance of people to establish fresh sell positions at these low levels and a reluctance to buy in the face of what could become an OPEC price war,'' said Peter Beutel, financial consultant with Merrill Lynch Futures Inc.

Crude prices plunged during the week on news that Saudi Arabia, the largest producer in the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, was discounting its crude.

The move was seen as a warning to Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates to curb their continued overproduction, which has led to the current world crude glut. OPEC pumps more than a third of the world's crude and attempts to support prices by limiting the cartel's output.

July delivery unleaded gasoline fell 1.02 cents to 56.59 cents a gallon, bringing its five-day loss on the Merc to 4.19 cents a gallon.

Randall Rothenberg of Dean Witter Reynolds' Energy Futures Group said traders were reacting to Exxon Corp.'s announcement late Thursday that its huge 130,000 barrel-a-day Bayway, N.J., refinery would return to production before month's end.

The refinery has been shut down since Mar. 5 while Exxon studied the causes of oil spills that took place earlier this year.

Gasoline had already been under price pressure from the last two weekly American Petroleum Institute surveys, which showed gasoline inventories growing at a time of year when, because of increased driving activity, they normally decline.

Beutel noted there also was heavy selling on the more volatile U.S. Gulf Coast cash market, where gasoline was quoted at 60.60 cents a gallon, down 2.25 cents on the day and 6.15 cents on the week.

On the New York Harbor cash market, unleaded was unchanged on the day at 63.10 cents a gallon, 1.45 cents less than a week ago.

The drop in traded gasoline rates could mean relief for motorists, who have been hit with rising pump prices since the end of March.

Trilby Lundberg of the authoritative Lundberg Letter in Los Angeles said that for the week ended Friday the average price of unbranded rack gasoline charged station owners by refiners - the wholesale price most sensitive to change - was down by 1.5 to 2 cents a gallon.

Average retail pump prices of $1.1605 cents a gallon nationwide are about 5 cents a gallon higher than at the beginning of the year, Lundberg said in a telephone interview.

She said the letter's latest survey of retail prices covering the past two weeks will be completed this weekend.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast crude cash market, WTI was quoted at $16.75 a barrel, a gain of 10 cents on the day but a loss of 75 cents on the week.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent fell 1 cent to $15.57 a barrel, 18 cents less than a week ago.

The UAE's Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - was quoted at $13.33 a barrel, up 2 cents on the day but down 69 cents on the week.

On the Merc, heating oil finished the day at 47.21 cents a gallon, up 0.41 cent on the day but down 1.52 cents on the week.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - Two Maryland men were charged Friday with assaulting Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., in an attack the congressman's spokesman called ''one of those incomprehensible, random acts of violence.''

Studds, 53, was walking home at about 11:30 p.m. Thursday after dinner with a friend when he was ''blindsided'' and knocked down, said Studds' Press Secretary Steven Schwadron.

''Once disabled, they beat and kicked his body and head,'' Schwadron said, adding Studds suffered facial cuts and bloody clothes. Studds walked to his home two blocks from the attack and did not go to a hospital.

''It appears to be one of those incomprehensible, random acts of violence. Of the many vulgaries used, it is clear they didn't know who Studds was and there was no evidence of a gay element,'' Schwadron said.

In 1983 Studds was publicly censured by the House for a homosexual relationship with a teenage page. He has publicly acknowledged he is homosexual.

Studds flew to Cape Cod, Mass., Friday for the weekend and planned a full work schedule for next week.

Thomas Carter, 19, of Gaithersburg, Md., and James Byrne, 19, Silver Spring, Md., were apprehended by uniformed officers of the Secret Service, who happened to be driving by the assault area.

A Secret Service report on the incident said a third man allegedly stood by and encouraged Carter and Byrne. He was taken into custody but later released.

Schwadron said the attack was witnessed by four people and two of them reportedly followed the attackers and helped the Secret Service officers locate them.

Once apprehended, Carter and Byrne admitted responsibility for the attack, the Secret Service said.

''It seemed like the thing to do at the time,'' arresting officer T. W. Kreisher quoted Carter as saying after the arrest. He said Byrne said, ''I only hit the dude a couple of times.

''Additionally, once in the cellblock and after being asked by another prisoner as to the charge he was being charged with, Mr. Carter was overheard to say, 'I beat up a congressman,''' Kreisher said in his statement.

Carter and Byrne have been charged with assault on a member of Congress with resulting injury, a felony that could bring a maximum penalty of 10 years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

CLEVELAND (JUNE 11) UPI - A national survey found more than one third of the executives responsible for hiring middle management and professional staffs plan staff increases during the second half of 1990, continuing a trend of recent years.

Management Recuiters International, a management recruitment firm, found that of the more than 3,600 executives polled, 35.1 percent said they planned to increase their middle management and professional staffs during the last six months of the year, 50.9 percent said they planned to maintain current staff sizes and 13.8 percent expect to have staff reductions.

In the same survey for the first half of the year, 36.2 percent said they planned staff increases, 51.6 percent planned to maintain staff levels and 11.8 percent planned staff reductions.

''Looking back over the past five years,'' said Management Recruiters President Alan Schonberg, ''the employment situation has been remarkably steady in spite of the gloomy forecasts of many of the nation's leading economists.

''Since 1986, between 35 percent and 39 percent of the executives that we poll have consistently forecast hiring increases for their middle management and professional staffs. The stability in this particular segment of the work force is confirmed by the Bureau of Labor, which reports unemployment rates for middle management well under the national average for the rest of the labor force.''

The Southwest region, consisting of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisianna showed the most promise in the latest survey, with 50.2 percent of the executives in that region predicting staffing increases.

During the first half of the year, the Southwest ranked third among the eight regions surveyed with 38.9 percent planning staff increases.

The low end in the latest survey found the South Central region of Alabama Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky at 30.9 percent and the Middle Atlantic region of New York, New Jersy and Pennsylvania at 31 percent.

The Midwest with Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin checked in at 34.8 percent, up from 35.8 percent of the executives planning staff increases during the first half of 1990.

The Pacific region of Washington, Oregon and California was second best at 38.4 percent, followed by the Midwest with the Dakotas, Minnesota, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas at 36.6 percent.

The South Atlantic with Florida, Georgia, the Carolinas, Virginia and West Virginia were at 33.4 percent. And New England with Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island was at 32.8 percent.

Figures for other states were not reported because of insufficient data.

Management Recruiters International, headquartered in Cleveland and with offices in several cities, conducts similar surveys twice a year.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) UPI - Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc. and its creditors are preparing for a showdown in bankruptcy court this week over competing reorganization plans to enable the fallen Wall Street firm to repay its debts.

Both Drexel, which filed for bankruptcy protection in February, and its creditors committee have drawn up outlines of reorganization plans but with key differences.

Drexel's plan, which it claims would repay creditors 100 percent on the dollar, calls for placing the firm's assets into a new business entity that would issue promissory notes to creditors, with values equal to creditors' claims.

The notes would mature in six years, would not guarantee interest and could not be publicly traded for at least 30 months, under the proposal Drexel made to creditors Wednesday.

Unanimously rejecting that plan, the creditors committee Thursday drew up its own. Under its proposal, Drexel would be run under new management and issue shorter-term notes that would bear interest and could be publicly traded.

''So far, Drexel has its own plan and our committee has its plan, and there's quite a difference,'' Wilbur Ross, a bankruptcy specialist and adviser to the creditors committee, said Friday.

Fundamental points of contention revolve around who should run the company the length of the notes' terms and whether they should be interest-bearing, Ross said.

Drexel bankruptcy attorney Alan Miller said the firm would make an all-out effort to work out its differences with creditors.

''Some things will make them unhappy and some things will make them happy and they will want to negotiate the unhappy things to make them happy,'' Miller said. ''We will try to do so.''

The two sides were scheduled to meet Tuesday before U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Howard Buschman III.

At issue is Drexel's period of exclusivity - whether it can retain the sole right to submit a plan to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

Drexel's period of exclusivity ends Wednesday. Its attorneys are expected to seek an extension, and the creditors committee said it will oppose such a move so it may pursue its own plan.

The creditors committee formulated a plan more quickly than is common in bankruptcy cases because of Drexel's unique nature, Ross said.

Companies under bankruptcy protection usually develop a business plan first and then a reorganization plan, but Drexel is no longer operating as a business, he explained.

''The creditors, at least, visualize Drexel's business plan as mainly the winding down of its portfolio,'' he said.

Much of Drexel's assets are speculative holdings, including equity in leveraged buyouts, bridge loans and high-yield, high-risk investments known as junk bonds.

Once a pioneer and powerhouse in the use of junk bonds that fueled the corporate takeover frenzy of the 1980s, Drexel filed for bankruptcy protection Feb. 13 in the largest such action in Wall Street history after defaulting on more than $100 million in loans.

Members of the creditors committee are collectively owed $1.055 billion, while Drexel owes other creditors another $1 billion, Ross said.

Observers have noted if Drexel repays its debts in full, creditors will be less likely to question the hugh bonuses the firm paid top executives in the two months prior to its bankruptcy filing.

''All we're saying is we lent $2 billion to the company and we want it back and we want back our interest in present value,'' Ross said. ''If and when Drexel gives them that, the creditors would lose interest in the bonus issue. We're not approaching this from a punitive point of view.''

CHICAGO (JUNE 8) UPI - Shawon Dunston smashed his second career grand slam Friday, capping a nine-run third inning that helped the Chicago Cubs snap a five-game losing streak with a 15-2 rout of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Jeff Pico, 2-0, the 10th pitcher to start for the Cubs this season, scattered six hits, struck out two and walked two over seven innings. Terry Mulholland, 3-3, took the loss, lasting 2 2-3 innings.

Philadelphia's Lenny Dykstra extended his hitting streak to 21 games with a two-out single in the seventh. The major leagues' leading hitter with a .410 average, Dykstra is 39 for 89 (.438) during the streak, the longest this season.

The Cubs sent 12 men to the plate in the third. Ryne Sandberg led off with his 13th home run. Dunston followed with an infield single, reached third one out later on Luis Salazar's basehit and scored on Mark Grace's groundout to make it 4-1. The Cubs then rapped four straight hits off Mulholland, including RBI singles by Hector Villanueva and Pico, and a run-scoring double by Jerome Walton.

Don Carman relieved Mulholland and intentionally walked Sandberg to load the bases and face Dunston, who launched a 2-2 pitch onto Waveland Avenue for his ninth home run. Dunston's only other grand slam came Sept. 15 against Pittsburgh.

Curtis Wilkerson, who replaced Sandberg in the fourth, added a two-run, two-out single in the sixth for a 13-1 margin. Villanueva hit his third home run in six games since being called up from Triple A in the seventh, a two-run shot, to open a 15-1 lead.

Steve Lake's RBI single in the Phillies' eighth made it 15-2.

Chicago took a 2-0 lead in the first on Mulholland's wild pitch and an error by Dickie Thon. The Phillies pulled within 2-1 in the second on Pico's error.

The Cubs' nine-run third inning was a season-high outburst, and their most runs in an inning since June 3, 1987, when they scored nine in the first against Houston. The 15 runs also marked a season high.

(JUNE 8) UPI - NATO foreign ministers end their two-day meeting with a nine-point plan... President Bush talks politics in the Midwest... a judge clears the way for John Poindexter to be sentenced on Iran-Contra crimes... and explosions rock a Texas chemical plant... U-P-I has these top stories and more, next.

NATO foreign ministers ended a two-day meeting today that centered on easing Soviet fears about a reunified Germany's military strength.

Among other things, the 16 ministers authorized greater flexibility for negotiators meeting in Vienna with Soviet representatives in talks on reducing conventional forces in Europe. The talks involve a proposed reduction of U-S and Soviet forces.

But Moscow has voiced concern about German military strength once East and West Germany are unified. The West wants the forces of a united Germany included in the NATO military alliance. The Kremlin wants Germany to be neutral.

As the NATO meeting in Scotland came to an end today, Secretary of State Baker said he is hopeful a solution to Moscow's concerns can be achieved. Other ministers also voiced optimism that a compromise solution could be reached.

In a related development, the ministers said they welcome the outcome of a Warsaw Pact meeting in Moscow yesterday. The seven-nation group announced plans to change from a military alliance dominated by the Soviet Union to a political grouping of sovereign states.

TALLAHASSEE, FL (JUNE 8) UPI - Southern Bell customers will receive about $100 million less in rate reductions and refunds this year than previously expected because of a ruling issued Friday by the Florida Public Service Commission.

The commission approved depreciation rates for the BellSouth Corp. subsidiary that will allow the telecommunications company to claim $120 million in depreciation expenses, commission spokeswoman Beverlee DeMello said.

Assistant Public Counsel Charlie Beck said he was disappointed in the commission's decision.

''Customers won't receive the refunds and rate reductions that they would have otherwise received because of this decision,'' said Beck, who represents utility customers in cases before the commission. ''Southern Bell will keep the profit as result of this decision.''

But Southern Bell officials said the new depreciation rate will eventually benefit customers.

''I think the commission took a real positive step for the telecommunications future of the state,'' said Spero Canton, manager of media relations for Southern Bell. ''Because of today's action, I think the customers will benefit with a modern telecommunications system.''

At issue Friday was a 1988 case in which the commission set intrastate rates $147 million a year higher than they would have been otherwise to cover what Southern Bell said it would need for depreciation expenses.

The Public Counsel thought that allowance was too high, and asked that the depreciation rate be reduced by $20 million. Southern Bell, meanwhile, wanted it raised to $152 million.

The PSC staff recommended Friday that Southern Bell be allowed to write off $34 million and let customers pocket the remaining $113 million.

But commissioners agreed with Southern Bell's argument that it needed more money to replace aging equipment and granted it the $120 million depreciation, leaving about $27 million for customers.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney ordered the removal Friday of short-range air-to-ground nuclear missiles carried aboard U.S. strategic bombers that are kept on alert, pending the outcome of safety studies.

The heads of the three U.S. nuclear weapons laboratories had recommended that the missle - the AGM-69A short-range attack missile, or SRAM-A - be taken out of service because of safety risks, the Pentagon said.

It carries the W-69 nuclear warhead, which various estimates suggest has a yield of between 200 kilotons and 1,100 kilotons of TNT. The Hiroshima blast at the close of World War II was about 15 kilotons.

The supersonic missile can be carried on the B-1, B-52 and FB-111 bombers, has a range of about 130 miles, and can be used to attack enemy air defenses, missile silos or mobile targets.

The missiles are being removed pending the outcome of studies, due this summer, being conducted by the Air Force and Energy Department, which contracts with the laboratories for the design and production of nuclear warheads.

''The laboratories have initiated new analyses. Until those analyses are completed, I beleive it is prudent to take this action,'' said Cheney, adding that the missile poses no safety hazard to the public.

Although the statement was not specific, it is believed that experts are concerned that an aircraft fire might detonate the high explosives that surround the radioactive material and that blast could disperse the radioactive materials.

The Pentagon statement said that although planes do not fly training missions with the SRAM-A on board, the missile is put on those bombers designated as ground alert aircraft - planes loaded with weapons, fueled and ready to fly within minutes.

Cheney's order means that although the planes will remain on alert, the will not be loaded with SRAM-As.

The weapons are typically loaded in a rotary dispenser in the bomb bay that can hold eight missiles, although the FB-111 carries two in the bomb bay and four under the wings. The B-1B can carry up to three rotary launchers and the B-52 has one launcher in the rear bomb bay.

The missile's problems were first detailed two weeks ago by the Washington Post.

The Air Force has bought at least 1,500 of the missiles produced by Boeing Aerospace Co. They weigh 2,208 pounds, are 14 feet long and 17 inches in diameter.

(JUNE 8) UPI - U-S Secretary of State Baker and his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, are reportedly making headway in resolving the thorny issue of German unification.

President Bush discussed that progress before wrapping up a two-day political swing through America's heartland and heading back to the White House.

Before leaving Omaha, Nebraska, Bush repeated that a united Germany must be anchored in NATO and said Baker is ''optimistic'' about the direction of new negotiations.

Bush's tour through Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska helped raise some two-Million dollars for G-O-P coffers.

Bush also used the trip to tout the successes of last week's superpower summit in the areas of grain and trade pacts.

When he returns to Washington, he's scheduled to meet West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl for another round of unification talks.

Canada's constitution is in trouble.

The nation's leaders have met for six straight days to try to break the stalemate over the Meech Lake Accord... and have gotten nowhere.

The aim of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and his supporters is to smooth the historically stormy relationship with Quebec by recognizing the French-speaking province as a ''distinct'' society.

Quebec has threatened to secede unless the measure is passed, but other provinces who oppose special powers for Quebec say its leaders are guilty of constitutional blackmail.

Newfoundland Premier Clyde Wells says he's fed up with the secret, closed-door sessions and is close to boycotting further talks.

Wells says he could NO longer be part of such pressured discussions because- as he put it- ''you get into a position where you caN'T make sensible judgments.''

The Meech Lake accord was drafted three years ago after Quebec refused to sign the 1982 constitution on grounds it did NOT recognize the province's French-speaking population.

(JUNE 8) UPI - Officials today ordered about one-thousand people to evacuate after a series of explosions rocked a chemical plant in Pearland, Texas.

One fireman said the blasts at the Solvents and Chemicals Incorporated plant sent a thick column of fire and black smoke into the sky and shot 55-gallon drums into the air ''like rockets.''

At least eight people were reported injured- two in the explosions and six rescue workers or firefighters overcome by smoke or heat. Mandatory evacuations were ordered in a two-mile radius of the plant.

People living up to six miles away from the plant reported hearing the series of explosions, and residents of downtown Houston... which is 20 miles away... could see the smoke and flames.

The plant apparently contained a variety of solvents, including acetone and another additive for diesel fuel.

A Michigan judge today barred Dr. Jack Kevorkian from assisting in any more suicides.

The ruling this afternoon by Oakland County Circuit Judge Alice Gilbert was a stinging rebuke to the retired pathologist from Royal Oak, Michigan.

On Monday, Kevorkian used one of his own inventions... a so-called suicide machine... to help 54-year-old Janet Adkins of Portland, Oregon, take her own life. Adkins, a member of the right-to-die Hemlock society, was a victim of Alzheimers disease.

During testimony today, Kervorkian openly expressed his contempt and resentment for the medical profession, which he says still maintains ''medieval'' attitudes about death and dying.

Kevorkian says Gilbert's decision effectively puts him out of business. He says he does NOT know if he will appeal the court's decision.

(JUNE 8) UPI - South Africa's four-year-old state of emergency decree ended in all but one province today.

The decree was imposed in 1986 to counter black protests against the nation's racial segregation policies. It will remain in effect in Natal province, where there have been bloody racial clashes among rival black factions.

The decree gave sweeping powers to police and army forces, allowing for massive arrests. It also curbed media coverage of political violence.

It's termination comes one day before the arrival in South Africa of a United Nations team that will look into recent Pretoria moves to ease racial tensions. South Africa has protested the U-N decision to send the delegation.

President Frederik de Klerk has expressed hope that allowing the emergency decree to lapse will aid his effort to negotiate a settlement of the nation's racial problems. His hope is the move will be followed by power-sharing negotiations with the black majority.

Judge Harold Greene ruled that testimony given by Poindexter at congressional hearings in 1987 on the Iran-Contra scandal was NOT used against Poindexter at his trial. Sentencing is scheduled for Monday.

He was convicted April 7th of five felony charges carrying a possible 25-year sentence and one-Million dollars in fines.

The office of special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh has asked Greene to put Poindexter behind bars. It claims that the former national security adviser's effort to cover up the Iran-Contra scandal amounted to what was termed ''a diet of lies.''

Poindexter, convicted of conspiring to deceive Congress, says he has suffered enough and should NOT be jailed.

Marion Barry says he has reached NO decison on whether to seek a fourth term as Washington, D-C, mayor.

Barry said in a statement that there are NO ''official'' talks under way involving a plea bargain linked to drug and perjury charges against him. His statement came as a followup to rumors that he was seeking an agreement with government prosecutors.

Civil rights leader Jesse Jackson said yesterday that he believes Barry could receive a more generous plea agreement if he were to announce he is out of the mayoral race. Jackson is a friend and longtime associate of Barry's.

Barry's trial got under way in Washington on Monday. Selection of a jury to hear the case continues.

MAYNARD, MA (JUNE 8) UPI - Digital Equipment Corp., which never paid a stock dividend during years of enormous growth and fat profits, may start doing so now that profits are off in an industry slump, a spokesman said Friday.

Mark A. Steinkrauss said directors of the country's cash-rich No. 2 computer maker talk from time to time about initiating a dividend.

''I'm sure they'll give it due consideration,'' Steinkrauss said. ''We're not trying to suggest it's imminent, only that they'll look at it in a more favorable manner'' because of the company's slower growth and $2 billion horde of cash.

Last week, Kenneth Olsen, the company's founder and president, put a less optimistic spin on the question. ''It's about time'' to pay a dividend, he conceded, ''but when the world gets slow like this, it might get misunderstood.''

However, Olsen conceded the days of fast growth, which are fueled by heavy borrowing, are over. ''Borrowing money to pay dividends, of course, is crazy,'' Olsen said.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 8) UPI - The state Supreme Court has ruled that a man's homeowner insurance covers damages he was ordered to pay for infecting a girlfriend with genital herpes.

The high court this week let stand a San Jose appeals court decision issued in March that held an insurer had the duty to defend the policyholder in a lawsuit and cover the resulting damages, unless the policyholder deliberately tried to pass on the disease.

The ruling is the first of its kind in the state.

State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., which unsuccessfully challenged the appeals court decision, had argued the unusual ruling would hold insurers financially liable for a wide range of sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS.

Lawyers for policyholder Mark Eddy denied the decision would force insurance coverage for all consensual sexual intercourse that spreads a disease.

They said State Farm and other insurers already have begun to reword homeowner policies specifically to preclude liability for diseases spread by voluntary sexual conduct.

The suit against Eddy was originally filed in 1986 by Carol Greenstreet in Santa Clara County Superior Court.

She accused him of negligence, battery, fraud and emotional distress for passing on genital herpes despite her expressing concern about potential exposure to sexually transmitted diseases prior to their romantic relationship.

Greenstreet eventually obtained a $298,000 judgment against Eddy.

Eddy maintained State Farm was obligated to cover the award under his $300,000 homeowner policy against suits for bodily injury, sickness or disease.

State Farm contended it had no obligation to defend Eddy. The company further maintained that it violated ''public policy'' to require insurers to cover injuries stemming from consensual sexual conduct.

Eddy, who believed he contracted the disease in 1980, maintained that he had not expected to pass it on and had been told in March 1986, three months before his involvement with Greenstreet, that a medical test showed he did not have herpes.

MILAN, ITALY (JUNE 8) UPI - The 1990 World Cup opened at Milan's packed Giuseppe Meazze Stadium in Milan with a rush of color, the blast of fireworks, balloons, scantily clad models and a deafening cacophany from 80,000 fans.

Cloudy weather threatened to dampen the 20-minute opening spectacle, but the sun burst through midway through the afternoon to fill the vast, ultra-modern stadium with light.

About 200 gymnasts clad in the national colors of each of 24 competing countries opened the show with a dance routine as they flourished the 24 flags.

Four sets of female models wearing thematic outfits - one eyecatcher a series of see-through green garments - paraded around a catwalk built over the 12-foot deep security moat surrounding the field.

Then all 350 people spread out over the turf around 24 giant soccer balls, which burst open as fireworks exploded in the stadium roof and released hundreds of pink, purple, yellow and green balloons into the blue sky.

Edoardo Bennato and Gianna Nannini followed by singing the competition anthem, ''Un'estate Italiana'' - An Italian Summer.

The ceremony ended as a choir from La Scala Opera House in downtown Milan was beamed in by television link singing the ''Va Pensiero'' chorus from Guiseppe Verdi's opera ''Nabucco''.

Safety authorities gave Rome's renovated Olympic Stadium the go-ahead to host World Cup matches, one day before Saturday's Group A match between Austria and host Italy.

A panel of experts from the fire brigade, police department, health authority, the city of Rome and the civil protection bureau made a two-hour inspection of the facility, restructured at a cost of $140 million.

The panel, worried by what it perceived as flaws in the structure on the bank of the Tiber, imposed strict safety recommendations for Saturday. They include stationing 70 firemen inside the ground, keeping the stairs totally clear and not allowing in any more than the structure's 83,400 maximum capacity.

Having ruled himself out of Sweden's opening Group C game on Sunday against Brazil because of a calf injury, captain Glenn Hysen plans to console himself with his favorite outside activity - practical jokes.

''Everything is still quiet at the hotel, but just wait,'' he said with a smile. ''I will start it all up when we get into the right spirit.''

Last fall, Hysen called a series of famous Swedish ice hockey players and musicians on the phone and offered them professional contracts. The phone bill reportedly reached $3,000.

He regularly welcomes rookies to the Swedish squad by cutting up their underwear and keeps Sweden Coach Olle Nordin on his toes with crank calls impersonating Swedish journalists.

Scotland Coach Andy Roxburgh doesn't believe in talking to his players. He prefers to show them videos.

''Most soccer players prefer to see things than to talk about them,'' Roxburgh said. ''Just like me, they think in pictures rather than in words. Therefore, I only give my players a minimum of information.''

Uruguay Coach Oscar Washington Tabarez delayed naming his starting lineup for his team's opener against Spain to determine the status of midfielder Santiago Ostolaza's injured left knee.

''I think it's worth seeing how his injury progresses before I choose the team,'' Tabarez said.

The tough midfielder has shown himself to be especially good in the air.

''If it were up to me, I would play on just one leg, but I must think about the rest of the team,'' said Ostolaza, who has an ice pack constantly strapped to his knee. ''I am enormously keen to play against Spain, but will do so only if I am completely fit.''

Ostolaza injured himself two weeks ago, but despite extensive treatment was only able to play for four minutes in a training session on Wednesday.

Argentina's Diego Maradona may be recognized as the world's premier soccer player, but Italy's Roberto Baggio gets the accolades in another survey.

Baggio was the voted the best looking World Cup player in a survey published Friday in Novella 2000, an Italian gossip magazine.

Few Italian women may be interested in the results of all 52 World Cup matches, but almost all can be persuaded to watch television to get a close-up look at the players' muscular legs.

The women also voted Stefano Tacconi, Italy's reserve goalkeeper, as the man they most would like to marry.

He beat out top competition including Italy's Walter Zenga, Gianluca Vialli and Franco Baresi. Another runner-up was Holland's Ruud Gullit, known as much for his dreadlocks as his booming shot.

The biggest apparent loser? Maradona, soccer's stocky millionaire and the idol of his south American nation. According to the magazine, the Argentine captain tops the ''unpleasant'' and just plain ''ugly'' list as voted by readers.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) UPI - The Treasury bond market closed practically unchanged Friday but held onto gains made the previous week stemming from economic news that fueled expectations the Federal Reserve will ease credit.

When dealing ended Friday, the benchmark 30-year bond, the 8 3/4 of 2020, traded at 103 10/32 to yield 8.44 percent, against 103 9/32 and 8.45 percent a week before.

Analysts said the week's trading was somewhat aimless, with bonds staying near the rally-level prices of a week ago. The rally was triggered by a weak May employment report that boosted hopes of a Fed easing.

''A good part of the market's firmness seemed to reflect a general optimism that the additional May data to be released in the week ahead, including the broad inflation indexes, would confirm a moderation in economic activity,'' said Douglas Schindewolf in Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.'s ''Credit Market Comment.''

Both the Producer Price Incdex and the Consumer Price Index are scheduled to be released in the coming week.

Bond prices were boosted modestly during the week by ''a stronger U.S. dollar, falling commodity prices and news that consumer credit expanded less than expected in April,'' Salomon Brothers noted in its ''Bond Market Roundup.''

''Overall, the shape of the yield curve remained essentially unchanged,'' Salomon said.

Ten-year Treasury notes closed at 102 21/32 to yield 8.47 percent, compared with 102 24/32 and 8.46 percent one week earlier. Five-year notes ended at 100 8/32 to yield 8.43 percent, against 100 10/32 and 8.41 percent at auction.

Three-year Treasury notes closed at 100 20/32 to yield 8.38 percent, compared with 100 21/32 and 8.37 percent the week before. Two-year notes closed at 100 9/32 to yield 8.34 percent, against 100 10/32 and 8.33 percent.

Six-month Treasury bills were discounted at a rate of 7.62 percent to yield 8.03 percent, against last week's discount of 7.61 percent and yield of 8.02 percent. Three-month T-bills ended at a 7.71 percent discount to yield 7.97 percent, against 7.70 percent and 7.95 percent a week earlier.

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.'s index of long-term Treasury bonds fell 2.04 points in the week to close at 1,296.39.

The Federal funds rate closed at 8 1/4 percent, over the perceived Federal Reserve target rate of 8 1/8 percent. The rate is applied on overnight loans by one bank to another and underlies most others.

MILAN, ITALY (JUNE 9) UPI - An estimated 1.3 billion fans in 170 countries Friday watched the opening of a World Cup tournament that should eventually attract more than 25 billion viewers.

Fans packed bars in Buenos Aires, Argentina, to watch the game, broadcast live by local television. Their reactions turned from subdued worry to vocal horror as a Cameroon attacker capitalized on a fumble by the Argentine goalie to provide a 1-0 victory.

Robert Astegiano, 67, said that the play of his national team ''truthfully made me ashamed.'' At his side, Marcos Alonso, 52, added ''it has been a long time that I have been humiliated like that.''

The official television station, ATC, said ''the Argentine selection was a disaster.''

It is estimated that by the time the five-week event ends, upwards of 26.5 billion people will switch on television coverage.

The audience for the 1986 World Cup in Mexico was something on the order of 13.5 billion. The 16-day summer Olympic Games in Seoul attracted a mere 10.4 billion, official statistics showed.

If the population of the world is taken to be some 5 billion, Mr. Average Global Citizen will watch about 5.5 World Cup games between now and the finale on July 8.

Remaining games are expected to attract an average audience of about 500 million.

The biggest and fastest-growing market for soccer is in Asia where 13.2 billion people will tune in for the 1990 World Cup, followed by Europe with 7.4 billion, and South America, where the audience will be some 3.5 billion.

The audience in Africa will be some 2.6 billion, the United States 520 million, the Middle East 280 million and 30 million in Australia and the Far East and the Pacific.

Most of those Asian millions will be Chinese. Televison ownership figures for China in the last four years have shown a steep rise along with those for Africa.

With such massive, worldwide audience interest, soccer itself is coming under pressure to adjust to a more saleable, TV advertising-oriented format.

One proposal would split a game into four quarters of 25 minutes rather than the present two 45-minute halves to maximize advertising potential. It met with widespread criticism and is virtually certain to be shelved by FIFA, the sport's governing body.

''The estimated audience for Italia '90 is outstanding: 26.5 billion television spectators are expected, double that of the last World Cup, mainly because of the particularly favorable time schedule for the matches especially in Europe,'' a spokesman for the organizers said.

Italy lies conveniently in the time zones between East and West and is serving the big audiences in Europe and Africa live in prime viewing time.

The organizers expect interest in the United States to be higher than four years ago, when 497 million people tuned in to the world's biggest soccer binge.

One cable channel - Turner Broadcasting - is expected to carry at least 28 of the 52 games. American audiences may be stimulated by the appearance of a U.S. team for the first time in the television age, and also because the United States is hosting the competition in 1994.

The biggest single one-day audience in television history was the Live Aid charity concert of 1985, which attracted an estimated 2 billion viewers.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 8) UPI - Lingering oil from last year's Exxon Valdez oil spill prompted the Alaska Department of Fish and Game to close two Prince William Sound beaches to fishing Friday.

Exxon repeatedly has insisted that fishing would be normal this year following the widespread fishing closures that came in the wake of the 11-million-gallon Exxon Valdez tanker grounding and spill March 24, 1989.

But Friday, state fisheries biologists, after meetings with Exxon, announced that salmon fishing scheduled to open Monday around two beaches was canceled.

''The closures are small in comparison to last year's closures,'' said Michelle Sydeman of the state Department of Fish and Game in Juneau. ''It's a small fraction of the total beach area impacted by the spill.''

Both areas are at the western edge of Prince William Sound, about 50 miles from where the tanker hit a reef and broke open, spewing oil into pristine waters and coating 1,200 miles of shore.

The existence of sticky oil, oily mousse globs, subsurface oil, sheens of oil and the potential for waves to wash new sheens from oily beaches into the fishing grounds prompted the action, Sydeman said.

The off-limits areas include a 700-yard stretch of beach at Eshamy Bay, a rock island in the middle of Foul Bay and waters 300 yards seaward from both sites.

The state emergency order closing the areas to fishing said, ''A year has passed since the Exxon Valdez grounded on Bligh Reef, and the broad area closures used in 1989 are no longer necessary. Only a small fraction of the impacted coastline continues to have oil in sufficient quantities and of the consistency to pose an appreciable likelihood that gear will be fouled or product adulterated.''

The order said these areas, among the hardest hit by the spill, could leach oil into adjacent fishing waters, tainting gear and catch.

Exxon anticipated the closures two days earlier and prepared a ''response for use in event of minor Prince William Sound closures'' that stated, ''Overall, we believe these closures will have a minimal impact on the salmon season and that the vast majority of Prince William Sound will remain open to fishing.''

The four-sentence Exxon statement began and ended by saying Exxon was working to have ''a normal fishing season'' this year.''

But earlier this spring, the state shut down a shrimp fishery in the sound because of oil sheens bleeding off nearby shores into shrimp waters.

However, herring fishing took place without a hitch this spring and major salmon fishing areas were expected to reopen this summer.

Alternate fishing sites are available for the fishermen displaced by the closure, Sydeman said.

Exxon cleanup crews have worked on the closed beaches, Sydeman said, but state fisheries officials who visited the sites last month and this week concluded that a threat of oil contamination remained.

The closures came one day after Exxon scientists declared that the sound was well on its way to recovery, that the impacts of the spill would be short-lived, that remaining oil was unlikely to be very toxic and that fish avoid oil and that ''even if the fish acquires an oily flavor, there is no evidence that this poses a toxicological hazard.''

The state has a ''zero tolerance'' policy involving fish and oil, triggering closures where oil exists in fishing grounds. The state also has implemented inspection procedures that will not allow a catch to go to market if any fish have been tainted by oil.

SEATTLE (JUNE 8) UPI - Pacific First Financial Corp. said Friday it has purchased certain assets and assumed some of the liabilities of American Savings, of Salt Lake City, from the federal Resolution Trust Co. for $30 million.

American Savings operates 17 branches in Utah and 45 in Oregon, where it operates under the name of Willamette Savings. Thirty-three of American Savings' branches are in Fred Meyer retail stores.

All branches will be reopened under the name Pacific First Bank, officials said.

American Savings has 215,000 deposit accounts, 175,000 of which are in Oregon and the remainder in Utah, with deposits totaling $1.2 billion.

American Savings, founded in 1923, has been under control of the RTC since February 1989. Pacific First assumed the deposits as well as approximately $1 billion in good loans, the majority of which are for family residences.

The RTC said it would provide cash of approximately $150 million to make up the difference between assets purchased and liabilities assumed. That would cover the bad loans made by American Savings, most of which were for short-term construction and commercial enterprises, officials said.

''We are pleased about this acquisition because customers will benefit from our broad line of financial services and expanded distribution system as well as our conservative financial management and strong capitalization,'' said Jerry Pohlman, chairman and chief executive officer of Pacific First.

Kenneth Thrasher, senior vice president and chief financial officer for Fred Meyer Inc., said he was happy with Pacific First's acquisition of the Willamette Savings locations in Fred Meyer stores.

Pacific First is a wholly owned subsidiary of Royal Trustco Ltd. of Toronto, which completed its acquisition of the Seattle-based company last December.

With the American Savings acquisition, Pacific First has 180 offices in Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada and Utah and has assets of $8.2 billion. It is the largest savings institution headquartered in the Pacific Northwest.

ATLANTA (JUNE 11) UPI - Officials of Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln-Mercury division were in Atlanta Friday to introduce southeastern dealers to two 1991-model small cars they hope will challenge foreign imports for domestic sales.

Both the Mercury Tracer and the Mercury Capri are made outside the United States and are designed to compete with imports like the Toyota Celica and the Mazda Miata.

The Tracer, which Ford builds in Mexico, will be available in three models - a standard four-door notchback, a station wagon and the sporty Tracer LTS. The LTS features a powerful, electronically fuel-injected 1.8-liter dual overhead camshaft engine.

The Capri, built in Australia, is aimed at competing with the Mazda Miata. At about 2,610 pounds, the Capri is about 400 pounds heavier than the Miata. Capri features front-wheel drive, a small rear seat, an optional hardtop roof and comes in two series - standard and the performance-oriented XR2.

David T. Walsh, Mercury's small car planning manager, said the Tracer and Capri models would be available in dealerships for the summer buying season.

Company officials said the Capri with all options should cost about $15,500, while a fully loaded Tracer will retail for about $11,000.

Lincoln-Mercury plans to produce about 125,000 Tracers and 30,000 Capris, Walsh said.

He said the Capri is designed to be the most affordable sporty convertible in its class, providing ''an excellent opportunity to attract a new class of young, well-educated and affluent buyers to Lincoln-Mercury.''

The Tracer models offer a standard five-speed manual or optional four-speed automatic transaxle.

''The 1991 Tracer will offer roominess and versatility in a stylish, aerodynamic design,'' said Ross H. Roberts, Ford vice president and Lincoln-Mercury general manager. ''Its ride, handling and performance characteristics will be outstanding, and it will come with a level of standard and optional equipment uncommon in this class of car.

''The quality of the new Tracer will continue at the world-class level established by the previous model,'' Roberts said. ''We're confident it will compare favorably with any car in its class built anywhere in the world.''

Jack Hoyt, operations manager of the Lincoln-Mercury division, said small cars accounted for about 20 percent of the division's total sales in the Southeast.

Hoyt said tht car sales in the Southeast have been ''a little soft'' recentlybut that he expected sales to pick up as the summer buying season gets going.

''We'll see an increase in buying with the warmer weather, now that school is out and people are planning for their summer vacations,'' said Hoyt.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 8) UPI - The Soviet Union, reacting to Belgian press reports that a young KGB officer in Brussels defected recently to the United States, admitted Friday that a member of its staff had disappeared in March.

The Soviet Embassy in Brussels identified the man as Igor N. Cherpinski, the embassy's third secretary, and said he disappeared with his wife and a 3-year-old son.

''Up to now the embassy has not received any official reply apart from oral statements that the family in question was not on Belgian territory '' the Soviets said.

The Brussels daily newspaper La Libre Belgique reported Tuesday a young KGB officer recently had sought refuge in the U.S. Embassy and was promptly sent to the United States where he revealed the names of his contacts in Brussels.

The newspaper said they included a Western ambassador to the European Community or to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, an assistant to EC Commission President Jacques Delors, a high official of the Defense ministry and a member of the office of Interior Minister Louis Tobback.

It said the assistant to Delors was involved in negotiating agreements between the EC and East European countries.

Belgian government officials refused comment on the newspaper report but an EC spokesman admitted Tuesday a commission official had been in contact with the person in question ''in the framework of his duties.''

He insisted, however, the official was neither an assistant to Delors nor in charge of negotiating agreements with East European countries.

The Soviet statement said Cherpinski ''is a young diplomat, born in 1962, on duty at the embassy since March 1989. He was in charge of cultural relations between the USSR and Belgium, and also belonged to the embassy press service.''

''As far as known by the embassy, I.N. Cherpinski did not maintain contacts with the Commission of the European Community, with NATO or with members of Belgian ministerial offices.

''In fact, the veracity of any 'revelations' by a junior officer of the embassy appears highly doubtful,'' the embassy statement said.

Press reports have linked the defection of the Soviet Embassy official to the forced resignation of the Luxembourg ambassador to NATO in April.

Luxembourg's foreign minister, Jacques Poos, told his country's Parliament last month that Ambassador Guy de Muyser, 64, resigned when the government took away his security clearance April 25.

He said the government had received information from NATO security services that de Muyser had ''infringed security rules set by the alliance.''

He did not specify which NATO security rules had been infringed and Luxembourg officials refused at the time to confirm reports that de Muyser had made several trips to Moscow without approval from NATO's secretary-general and had delivered a classified document to a Soviet contact.

De Muyser, who was Luxembourg's permanent representative to NATO since 1986, had served as ambassador to Moscow from 1981 to 1983.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 8) UPI - A 20-year veteran FBI agent who told the agency in 1988 he is homosexual filed suit in federal court Friday to block his imminent dismissal, loss of security clearance and loss of pension.

The case is believed to be the first in the nation by an agent challenging the loss of his job based on homosexual discrimination, said Richard Gayer the agent's lawyer.

The agent, identified in the lawsuit only as John Doe, accused the FBI of discrimination based on sexual preference in violation of the Constitution's equal protection clause, as well as violation of his constitutional rights of free speech and free association.

Gayer said at least two lawsuits have been filed in the past by aspiring FBI job applicants who admitted they were homosexual, but not by a longtime agent.

Doe's case ''is the only suit I know of by an agent who has been employed any amount of time, that has filed suit claiming anti-gay discrimination '' Gayer said.

FBI spokesman, Carlos Fernandez would not comment directly on the current lawsuit but said, ''Our concern is sexual conduct, not sexual preference.''

''Individual sexual orientation, whether homosexual or heterosexual, may involve conduct relevant or adversely affecting employment in the FBI, Fernandez said.

He refused to comment on the possible existence of an FBI policy forbidding hiring or retention of homosexuals.

Doe's security clearance was revoked in September 1989 and now he believes he could be fired as soon as Monday.

He faces loss of all his pension benefits and inability to get a new job because of the loss of his security clearance.

Gayer said although Doe is openly gay he cannot sue in his own name because he must protect his ability to resume work on organized crime, counter-intelligence and undercover assignments in San Diego.

Doe has given the FBI permission to tell anyone about his homosexuality, Gayer said.

Doe, 45, began working for the FBI in 1969 and has never been approached by a blackmailer or subjected to any coercion because of his homosexuality according to the suit.

''No person outside of the FBI has ever influenced his professional conduct and no one ever will,'' according to the suit.

Gayer said that Doe was not homosexual when he joined the service in 1969 and simply did not discuss his sexual preference with superiors until he was questioned in December 1988.

At that time, Doe discussed his homosexuality and cooperated in an investigation and polygraph exam, according to the suit.

Despite FBI knowledge of his sexuality since 1988, he was assigned to head up a major bombing case in March, 1989.

U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson, who is expected to hear the case, has not set a date to consider Doe's request for a preliminary injunction against the FBI.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 8) UPI - Up to 70 percent of the homeless in Los Angeles' Skid Row and surrounding areas were not counted despite an unprecedented effort by the Census Bureau to include that segment of the population, a report released Friday said.

Mayor Tom Bradley said he was ''deeply concerned'' by the findings. And at a meeting with Rep. Tom Sawyer, D-Ohio, he called on Sawyer, chairman of the House panel that oversees the Census Bureau, to examine the issue.

Appearing at a news conference with Bradley, Sawyer said he has scheduled a series of hearings by the Subcommittee on Census and Population on the nationwide effort to count the homeless this spring.

''I am alarmed by suggestions of certain (Bush) administration officials that we should use the results ... to allocate funds for homeless assistance programs. It is highly premature to consider any uses of that infomation until we have thoroughly evaluated the validity of the count,'' he said.

The study of the homeless count, conducted by Michael Cousineau, head of the Los Angeles Homeless Health Care Project, and anthropologist Thomas Ward, was commissioned by the Census Bureau.

It is the first of five such evaluations throughout the country to examine the homeless count, dubbed ''S-night,'' which took place between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m. on March 20. Reports are still expected from groups in New York Chicago, Phoenix and New Orleans.

Cousineau said that, based on evaluations by 80 observers placed throughout the central city area, 59 to 70 percent of the homeless were uncounted.

With estimates on the number of homeless in Los Angeles ranging from 35,000 to more than 100,000, however, the investigators were unable to provide a specific count on the number missed.

John Reeder, director of the Census Bureau's operations in California, agreed that some homeless were not counted, but he defended the census efforts.

''S-night was intended to count (only) components of the homeless,'' he said. ''Our plan all along was to produce a count of those people we observed at the locations we were aware of ... (and) we instructed our enumerators not to go into certain situations where they may be placed in danger.''

The 1990 census got off to a dismal start. Six weeks ago, officials said 63 percent of the households had returned census forms, causing some politicians to warn the $2.5-billion head count was in jeopardy of succumbing to bureaucratic ineptitude and public apathy.

However, in recent weeks a street army of more than 200,000 census takers, bolstered by an emergency $110 million appropriation by Congress, have mounted a door-to-door drive to count the populace and census officials now believe more than 90 percent have been counted.

Still, Sawyer said he was concerned the bureau had not completed its field activities by its June 6 deadline in many areas, and the quality of the reviews designed to weed out duplication and catch ommissions could be affected.

Many of the nation's largest cities are lagging behind the national completion rate, including Los Angeles, where only 83 percent of the households have been counted, according to the Census Bureau.

In an effort to complete the tally, a new nationwide ''Were You Counted?'' campaign will be launched June 25, Sawyer said.

Ironically, however, Reeder said any homeless residents who fear they may not have been counted, need not contact the Census bureau.

Since the homeless have no formal residence, the bureau is unable to verify whether they had actually been counted. To eliminate the chance of counting a homeless person twice, he said the bureau would not add them to the tally.

SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA (JUNE 11) UPI - Jose Figueres Ferrer, the spunky former president who fathered democracy in Costa Rica, fought Central American dictators and foiled a hijacking with a submachine gun, died Friday.

A three-time president of Costa Rica, ''Pepe'' Figueres led a 1948 revolution that toppled a pro-communist government and abolished the military, leading to decades of democratic stability.

Figueres died at 7:30 a.m. from heart failure. Family members said he suffered from an unspecified illness that had kept him bedridden since 1989 in critical condition. Figueres was 83.

Costa Rican President Rafael Calderon Fournier lamented the death of the former president, saying, ''One of the greatest men of Costa Rica has died. He made history and contributed to democracy and peace.''

Calderon decreed a day of national mourning in honour of Figueres.

''The government decrees a day of national mourning as suits the death of a former president of the Republic and the great men of this country,'' Calderon said.

Figueres will be buried Tuesday at his farm, called ''la Lucha,'' or the fight, some 40 miles from San Jose.

Family and friends will mourn his death privately at Figueres' home, about 2 miles from the capital. On Saturday, his remains will be moved for public respects to the National Museum, where he abolished the army in 1949.

A lover of fast cars, slim women and almost anything American, the 5-foot-3 Figueres had an impish humor and a flair for dramatic actions that made him one of the most colorful figures of Latin America in the 20th century.

Fluent in English, he studied engineering at the Massachussetts Institute of Technology from 1922 to 1926 but claimed his ''real alma mater'' was the Boston Public Library, where he read almost anything on the shelves.

Born Sept. 25, 1906, in the rugged central highlands of Costa Rica, Figueres was the eldest son of migrants from the Catalan region of Spain, the arid and rocky home of fiercely independent people from whom he said he got his spunk.

He once gave Nicaraguan guerrillas a ''tank'' that he built in the tool shed of his farm, ''The Endless Struggle.'' The heavy steel plating mounted over the vehicle made it so heavy it had to be towed into combat.

A lifelong opponent of dictators, he gleefully admitted that he almost ruined a 1973 summit of Central American presidents with a joke on the five army generals seated around him.

''Isn't it odd that all you bastards are generals, and I'm the only civilian, but I'm only one who's ever fought a war?'' he claimed to have told the red-faced generals.

That war was in 1948 when Don Pepe, as he's known to everyone, led a revolution that toppled President Teodoro Picado and his communist allies when they tried to deny the presidential sash to an elected liberal.

The war cost 1,000 lives but ushered in a three-man junta led by Figueres that over the next 18 months decreed 834 laws putting Costa Rica on a firm democratic footing that has held until today.

Asked how he engineered Costa Rica's stable democracy, Figueres replied, ''We got rid of the general problems'' - a joking reference to having eliminated the military.

Figueres fought official corruption, gave women the vote, ordered free primary schooling, nationalized banks, built housing for the poor, extended electricity to the countryside and negotiated a better contract with the United Fruit Co. that then dominated Costa Rica's banana industry.

His most far-reaching decision was to abolish the army and turn its barracks into schools and museums, arguing it was a threat to ''internal peace.''

In 1953 Figueres founded the National Liberation Party and a year later was elected president by the biggest majority Costa Rica has ever seen in clean balloting - 67 percent. He was elected to another four-year term in 1970.

Figueres freely admitted plotting to overthrow the Dominican Republic's Gen. Rafael Trujillo, Venezuela's Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez, Nicaragua's Gen. Anastasio Somoza and Cuban President Fulgencio Batista, among others.

But his opposition to dictators stopped at hijacking and when anti-Somoza gunmen seized a plane in San Jose in 1971, he blocked its escape, standing on the runway and pointing a submachine gun at the cabin until they surrendered.

Two of his most controversial decisions came in 1972 when he established relations with the Soviet Union and gave asylum to Robert Vesco, the fugitive U.S. financier who was forced to flee Costa Rica in 1978.

LIBREVILLE, GABON (JUNE 11) UPI - Surgeons saved the life of a hunter whose stomach was ripped open by an elephant in an attack that forced him to sit three days in a forest with maggots feeding on his intestines, a published report said Friday.

Henry Mitsutsu, 43, and his wife had ventured 20 miles on foot into the equatorial forest of Ndjole to search for wild game when the elephant attacked May 17, the newspaper L'Union said.

The Gabonese hunter had bagged several beasts and his wife began starting for home with the couple's provisions when she heard a terrified cry. Mitsutsu had been charged by the elephant as he took aim at a troupe of monkeys, and the animal ripped open his stomach with a tusk, the report said.

The hunter fell to the ground and his intestines spilled out of the wound. His wife stayed beside him for one night then went to get help. Rescue workers found him still alive when they arrived May 20, his colon and intestines invaded by maggots.

Mitsutsu was taken to a surgery center run by the Jeanne Ebori Foundation in Libreville, the Gabonese capital, and underwent a three-hour operation during which 300 maggots were extracted from his body, medical sources said.

Part of the hunter's intestine already attacked by the maggots was cut out during surgery and the two ends were sewn to facilitate digestion.

Mitsutsu made progress gradually after the operation and some of the maggot-infested tissue was sent for analysis to a laboratory at the Gabonese University's medical school.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 8) UPI - An Air China plane carrying more than 100 people was emptied Friday after the airline received a telephone bomb threat as the 747 jet was waiting to take off, authorities said.

A police bomb squad searched the plane for more than 90 minutes in a remote area of Los Angeles International Airport after the 90 passengers and 15 crew members got off. No explosives were found aboard the plane, bound for San Francisco and then Beijing.

Sgt. Jack Dillard said the bomb threat was received by the airlines' reservation counter at the airport about 12:40 p.m.

Elly Brekke, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said the passengers and crew members climbed off Flight 984 without incident.

Xue Xiao Bin, an Air China spokesman, said that after police determined there was no bomb the passengers and crew returned to the plane and left for San Francisco about 4 p.m.

''We received a call from a person. We don't know his name,'' Xue said. ''He said nothing; just that there a bomb in the plane.''

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 8) UPI - A nurse was sentenced Friday to die in the gas chamber for hiring a man who killed and mutilated her roommate in 1985 so she could collect on a $100,000 insurance policy.

Moments after she was sentenced, Maureen McDermott, 42, who had remained emotionless, addressed the court and, with her voice cracking, insisted she was innocent.

A former nurse at County-USC Medical Center, McDermott is the second woman sentenced to die in California since the death penalty was reinstated in 1978. Cynthia Lynn Coffman was sentenced to die last August for the kidnap and murder of an insurance clerk. McDermott's sentence will be automatically appealed.

Superior Court Judge Alan B. Haber had the option of sentencing McDermott to life in prison without parole, but instead upheld the April 3 recommendation of the jury and formally sentenced her to death in San Quentin's gas chamber.

McDermott was convicted of first-degree murder for hiring an acquaintance to kill the victim, Stephen Eldridge, 27, so she could collect on a $100,000 mortgage insurance policy the two had taken out after purchasing a home together in Van Nuys.

The man she hired to kill Eldridge, James Luna 36, of La Puente, testified at McDermott's trial that on April 28, 1985, he and two accomplices ambushed Eldridge near his home. They stabbed him more than 40 times and cut off his penis, Luna said, in an attempt to make investigators believe the slaying was homosexually-related.

McDermott told investigators that robbers invaded their residence, bound and gagged her as she showered, then killed Eldridge.

Investigators became suspicious because of the disparity of injuries. McDermott's wounds were so slight no medical attention was required, Deputy District Attorney Kathryn Mader said.

During the trial, Mader called McDermott ''the most vicious, sadistic and cold human being that we will ever see in our lifetime.''

Her court-appointed lawyers, Joe Ingebar and Carl Burkow, argued that authorities failed to conduct a complete investigation into the murder. They contended that Luna and his accomplices, brothers Marvyn and Don Lee, framed their client in an effort to obtain immunity.

Luna is scheduled to sentenced but he does not face the death penalty because he agreed to testify against McDermott. The Lee brothers were given immunity for testifying to their part in the slaying.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 8) UPI - Lingering oil from last year's Exxon Valdez oil spill prompted the Alaska Department of Fish and Game to close two areas of Prince William Sound to fishing Friday.

Exxon cleanup crews had completed work on the sites, Exxon spokesman Joe Tucker said. But state officials maintained a threat to fishing existed in the two areas.

Exxon repeatedly has insisted that fishing would be normal this year following widespread closures in the wake of the 11-million-gallon Exxon Valdez tanker grounding and spill March 24, 1989.

But Friday, state fisheries biologists, after meetings with Exxon, canceled salmon fishing scheduled to open Monday in two locations.

''The closures are small in comparison to last year's closures,'' said Michelle Sydeman of the state Department of Fish and Game in Juneau. ''It's a small fraction of the total beach area impacted by the spill.''

Both areas are in western Prince William Sound, 50 miles from where the tanker hit a reef and broke open, spewing oil into pristine waters and coating 1,200 miles of shore.

The existence of sticky oil, oily mousse globs, subsurface oil, sheens of oil and the potential for waves to wash new sheens from oily beaches into the fishing grounds prompted the action, Sydeman said.

''We expect these sites to improve dramatically,'' Tucker said, noting that this week Exxon sprayed fertilizer to stimulate growth of oil-eating organisms, a process called bioremediation being used after cleanup crews leave beaches where oil remains.

Off-limits are a 700-yard stretch of beach at Eshamy Bay, a rock island in the middle of Foul Bay and waters 300 yards seaward from both sites.

The state emergency order closing the areas said, ''A year has passed since the Exxon Valdez grounded on Bligh Reef, and the broad area closures used in 1989 are no longer necessary. Only a small fraction of the impacted coastline continues to have oil in sufficient quantities and of the consistency to pose an appreciable likelihood that gear will be fouled or product adulterated.''

The order said these areas, among the hardest hit by the spill, could leach oil into adjacent fishing waters, tainting gear and catch.

Exxon anticipated the closures two days earlier and prepared a ''Response for use in event of minor Prince William Sound closures'' that stated, ''Overall, we believe these closures will have a minimal impact on the salmon season and that the vast majority of Prince William Sound will remain open to fishing.''

The four-sentence Exxon statement began and ended by saying Exxon was working to have ''a normal fishing season this year.''

But earlier this spring, the state shut down a shrimp fishery in the sound because of oil sheens bleeding off nearby shores into shrimp waters.

However, herring fishing took place without a hitch this spring and major salmon fishing areas were expected to reopen this summer.

Alternate fishing sites are available for fishermen displaced by the closure, Sydeman said.

''It's expected that the total salmon harvest in the sound will not be impacted by these closures,'' Tucker said. He said fishermen ''can fish in areas that are not closed.''

The closures came one day after Exxon scientists declared that the sound was well on its way to recovery, that the impacts of the spill would be short-lived, that remaining oil was unlikely to be very toxic, that fish avoid oil and that ''even if the fish acquires an oily flavor, there is no evidence that this poses a toxicological hazard.''

The state has a ''zero tolerance'' policy involving fish and oil, triggering closures where oil exists in fishing grounds. The state also has implemented inspection procedures that will not allow a catch to go to market if any fish have been tainted by oil.

OMAHA, NE (JUNE 8) UPI - Mike Rebhan pitched a six-hitter and Georgia posted a four-run, two-out rally in the fourth inning Friday night, delivering the Bulldogs to their first College World Series title game berth with a 5-1 victory over the Stanford Cardinal.

The Bulldogs, 51-19, will face Oklahoma State, 56-16, for the NCAA title in a nationally televised game at 1 p.m. EDT Saturday. Stanford, which won championships in 1987 and '88 and had never before been eliminated from CWS play, was sent home with a 59-12 mark.

Rebhan, who beat Stanford with a five-hitter in the second round, allowed a Troy Tallman home run in the second - Tallman's 10th of the season - but gave up just two singles and a double the rest of the game in improving to 13-5.

He struck out six and walked one. From Paul Carey's single that opened the fourth through a Tallman double in the seventh, Rebhan retired 10 consecutive batters.

Stanford starter Mike Mussina, 14-5 overall but 0-2 in the CWS, retired 10 of the first 11 batters he faced before J.R. Showalter doubled in the fourth. Mussina got the second out in the inning but Georgia cracked four consecutive hits.

Bruce Chick tied the score with a single that score Showalter and took third on a Doug Radziewicz base hit. Ray Suplee doubled in both runners and Terry Childers drove Suplee in with another double for a 4-1 edge.

The Bulldogs, whose only previous trip to the CWS was a two-game-and-out visit in 1987 for a seventh-place finish, made the score 5-1 in the seventh with consecutive doubles by McKay Smith and Jeff Cooper off reliever Scott Weiss.

Weiss struck out nine over five innings, including the top four batters in the Georgia order in the fifth.

Georgia was one of a record-tying three Southeastern Conference teams to qualify for the CWS this season and will be trying to become the first SEC member two win an NCAA baseball title. Alabama, in 1983, and Tennessee, in 1951, each reached the CWS finals but lost one-run games to Texas and Oklahoma.

(JUNE 8) UPI - The head of the Organization of American States says he expects the Nicaraguan Contras to be disbanded by Sunday. The O-A-S leader told U-P-I today that despite earlier pessimistic predictions, he's optimistic that the rebel group will demobilize as called for under an April agreement reached with Nicaragua's new government. Estimates of the rebel force range between 10-thousand and 15-thousand troops.

A judge has granted the wish of a Nevada man. 35-year-old Kenneth Bergstedt... who has been paralyzed from the neck down since childhood... told the court earlier this year that he NO longer enjoyed life and wanted to be removed from the respirator that keeps him alive. Nevada District Judge Donald Mosley today agreed, saying that Bergstedt was entitled to a ''dignifed end.''

A teary-eyed widow today told her husband's killer in a New York City courtroom that she wants ''some kind of payback'' for her loss. The killer is jailhouse author Jack Henry Abbott, who was freed on parole in 1981 just six weeks before stabbing Ricci Adan's husband in an argument. A justice already has ruled that Abbott is liable for damages to the widow, and a jury now must decide how much she deserves.

Polls say Peru's two top presidential candidates are virtually tied as they head into Sunday's elections. Mario Vargas Llosa and Alberto Fujimori were the top finishers in first-round elections held in April. Since then, they have waged one of the nastiest political campaigns in the country's history. More than 150-thousand troops have been deployed to guard against election violence.

Andrew Krakow killed Tuesday in his vehicle at a residence near the town of Montello in a domestic abuse case. A 13-year-old boy is accused of first-degree intentional homicide. A minister at today's service said Krakow taught people to respect the beauty of nature.

The National Weather Service has issued a tornado watch tonight for portions of the Central Plains and Midwest. The nation's midsection is still struggling to recover from a wave of twisters this morning which UNleashed hailstones, high winds and tornadoes. Last night, twisters in Emporia, Kansas, tossed cars, flattened buildings and injured at least 18 people.

The California Supreme Court has ruled that a homeowner's insurance can be used to pay off damages for a policyholder accused of infecting his girlfriend with genital herpes. The high court this week held the insurer must pay damages... unless the policyholder deliberately tried to pass on the disease. State Farm argued the ruling would hold insurers liable for a wide range of sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS.

India and Nepal today reached a trade and transit agreement to end a 14-month dispute that has staggered Nepal's economy. Land-locked Nepal depends on the Indian port of Calcutta for shipment of its exports and imports. India closed all but two border checkpoints when transit treaties expired early last year. India was angry that Nepal had bought weapons from China. The closures greatly restricted Nepal's trade, resulting in shortages and inflation.

(JUNE 8) UPI - President Bush talks about German unification with West German Chancellor Kohl... Texas chemical plant blaze contained... NASA works around grounded shuttle mission. U-P-I has the latest world and national news, next:

President Bush today finished his fund-raising swing through the Midwest and returned to the White House to have dinner with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Bush said significant differences remain between the Soviet Union and the United States, chief among them Lithuania and German reunification.

The president reported UNspecified progress on the thorny question of German unity earlier this week in a meeting betwen Secretary of State

Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in Denmark.

The Soviet Union opposes the U-S desire for a united Germany to be a full member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The president made his comments aboard Air Force One after closing out a two-day political swing through Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. Bush raised about two Million dollars for Republican candidates in those states.

The president also said he has been discussing breaking off U-S dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Bush called on P-L-O leader Yasser Arafat to condemn last week's foiled guerrilla attack on an Israeli beach.

A huge smoky fire is nearly extinguished at a Texas chemical plant rocked by multiple explosions today.

At least eight people were injured... two in the explosions and six rescue workers or firefighters overcome by smoke or heat.

The blasts at the Solvents and Chemicals Incorporated plant lasted for several hours.

The fire department captain said explosions sent 55-gallon drums flying 30 feet into the air ''like rockets.'' One witness described the scene as ''mass hysteria.''

Mandatory evacuations were ordered for about one-thousand people in a two-mile radius of the plant, but have since been called off.

The facility apparently contained a variety of solvents, including acetone and a diesel fuel additive.

Meanwhile, Phillips Petroleum also reported a fire at its K-Resin plant within a chemical complex in Pasadena, Texas. The complex is the same one where a series of massive explosions killed 23 workers and injured more than 130 in October. Police said today's fire appeared to be minor although five or six people were injured.

(JUNE 8) UPI - While one shuttle is grounded, another is being readied to take its place on the launch pad.

The shuttle Atlantis was hauled from its hangar to NASA's rocket assembly building today at Cape Canaveral.

Next week, Atlantis will roll out to launch pad 39-A for blastoff in July on a secret military mission.

The grounded shuttle Columbia currently is mounted on the seaside launch pad. NASA managers decided NOT to conduct another fueling test using super-cold liquid hydrogen. That clears the way for the Columbia to be hauled back to the the Vehicle Assembly Building next Tuesday.

Engineers will then try to repair a leak where the fuel line from the big external tank attaches to the shuttle. The leak has pushed back Columbia's astronomy mission until August.

Israel has a new government.

Six right-wing and religious partners joined the conservative Likud Party to form a hard-line coalition likely to be one of the toughest in Israeli history.

The country's Likud and Labor coalition broke up March 13th over Likud's refusal to approve a U-S plan for holding Israeli-Palestinian talks to further the peace process.

The center-left Labor Party is out of the government for the first time since 1984.

Likud opposes negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization and the return of occupied territories to Arab nations.

Caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir says his coalition is NEITHER right-wing NOR left-wing. He says the main effort of the new government will be settling Soviet Jewish emigrants.

Shamir is expected to put the coalition to a vote of confidence Monday in the Israeli Parliament.

(JUNE 8) UPI - A top official of the Organization of American States says that if all goes as planned, the Nicaraguan Contra rebels will be disbanded within the next few days. But others are challenging his optimism.

The O-A-S Secretary-General says that the great majority of the rebels will have turned in all their arms by Sunday's deadline... but that O-A-S troops may remain in Nicaragua.

Fernado Serra of the O-A-S Support and Verification Commission says his figures show disarmament will still be far from complete on Sunday.

The conflicting reports come on the final day of a five-day O-A-S meeting in Paraguay.

O-A-S representatives... stationed in five camps along the Nicaraguan border... are overseeing the disbanding of some 15-thousand Contra rebels.

The Contras fought a nine-year civil war... financed mostly by the United States... aimed at overthrowing Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Defense Secretary Cheney has ordered short-range nuclear missiles removed from some U-S strategic bombers.

The Pentagon says the missiles will be taken off bombers kept on alert staus pending the results of a new safety study.

The heads of three U-S nuclear weapons laboratories had recommended that the short-range attack missile be taken out of service because of new concerns about safety risks.

The Air Force and Energy Department plan to release the results of the new safety study later this summer. The Pentagon did NOT say exactly what concerns it has about the missiles, but experts have said an aircraft fire might detonate the high explosives and trigger a radioactive leak.

The missiles carry a warhead of somewhere between 200 and 11-hundred kilotons. The Hiroshima blast was about 15 kilotons.

DENVER (JUNE 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Hallador Petroleum Co. (NASDAQ:HPET) announced a net loss of $559,000, or 1 cent per share, on revenues of $1,290,000 for the first quarter of 1990.

For the corresponding period in 1989, Hallador's predecessor entity posted net income of $55,000 on revenues of $653,000. Although revenues increased substantially in the 1990 quarter, increased expenses associated with previously announced changes in the company's management and with the properties, staff and office facilities acquired in the 1989 merger led to the loss.

W.T. Krieg, president, stated ''The first quarter results included in excess of $200,000 in non-recurring expenses which contributed to the substantial loss. As management changes are completed and the operations of our entities are consolidated in future quarters, we expect to be able to reduce general and administrative expenses from the first quarter levels.

Additionally, operating cash flow is positive and should strengthen if product prices improve.''

The first quarter results also caused the company to be in default of certain covenants of its bank loan agreement for which the bank issued a waiver and amended the agreement on May 24, 1990.

Hallador Petroleum also announced the completion of its purchase of interests in the South Cuyama Unit, Santa Barbara County, California. As previously announced, a subsidiary of Hallador owns 25 percent of Santa Barbara Partners, the partnership which acquired an 88 percent working interest in the unit from a subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Co.

The purchase was effective as of May 1, 1990. The subsidiary also completed its purchase of a separate 5.7 percent interest in the unit effective June 1, 1990.

Santa Barbara Partners received financing in order to consumate the purchase and fund certain capital expenditures. The lender will initially receive 80 percent of the partnership's net cash flow from the interest. The percentage of dedicated cash flow decreases periodically when the lender receives varying levels of return on its financing.

Hallandor is an independent oil and gas production company based in Denver.

DES MOINES, IA (JUNE 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Pork producers representing the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) held an unprecedented half- hour private meeting with President George Bush in Des Moines, Iowa, today. The President told the producers he was determined to press in the current Uruguay round of trade talks for a further opening up of world markets. "It's going to be difficult, but we're not backing off," the President said. "As President, I don't intend to back off on the right decision for world exports of all agriculture products," he told the producers.

NPPC President Mike Wehler, a pork producer from Plain, Wisconsin, told the President that North American pork producers are greatly concerned over the current non-tariff trade barrier that exists with respect to pork exports to the European Economic Community. Under what is known as the Third Country Meat Directive, only one pork packing plant in all of North America is currently authorized to ship fresh pork to the EEC nations. "Producer leaders representing U.S., Canadian and Mexican pork producer associations met last week at World Pork Expo in Des Moines and formed a North American Pork Alliance," Wehler told the President. "The pork producers of the three North American countries are urging their respective government leaders to work immediately to remove this artificial trade barrier so that the practice of free trade may thrive," Wehler told the President.

NPPC President Elect John Hardin, Jr., a pork producer from Danville, Indiana, briefed the President on the pork council's position on pending farm legislation, urging him to "stay the course" on present Administration farm policy.

During the meeting, NPPC President Wehler presented President Bush a package of six America's Cut (TM) boneless pork loins and they were quickly handed to a White House steward to place aboard Air Force One. National Pork Council Women President Lorraine Harness of New Hartford, Missouri, presented the President with a special gift for First Lady Barbara Bush. It contained various items for barbecuing, including an apron that bears the message, Pork-The Other White Meat (R). President Bush said, "This is great. This is Barbara's birthday, and I haven't had time to get her anything yet. This may do it."

ST. LOUIS, (JUNE 9) PR NEWSWIRE - General Dynamics said today that it has given to the United States Navy a proposed delay in the first flight and follow-on production of the Navy's new A-12 aircraft. Correspondingly, a major program review is under way to estimate the cost impact, and may result in a material charge against second quarter earnings.

The schedule delays permit completing the strong technical basis of the program before conclusion of final tooling and production of the development test aircraft. The A-12 industry team is confident that the basic operational requirements of the A-12 will be met.

Further detail is unavailable as the program is classified, but General Dynamics emphasizes that the A-12 will be a superb high technology aircraft for the Navy.

KNOXVILLE, TN (JUNE 9) UPI - Knoxville's two daily newspapers announced Friday they are settling a lawsuit by ending their 33-year joint operating agreement, freeing The Knoxville News-Sentinel and The Knoxville Journal to compete with each other.

The News-Sentinel, owned by the E.W. Scripps Co. of Cincinnati, will pay Persis Corp., the Honolulu owner of The Journal, $40 million to cover earnings The Journal would have received from 1991 through 2005, according to a statement released by both papers.

''This one-time payment is less than the expected amount The News-Sentinel would have paid in distributions to The Journal had joint operations continued through 2005,'' said Lawrence A. Leser, president and chief executive officer of The E.W. Scripps Co.

The $40 million payment will result in a $23 million charge, or 30 cents per share, to The E.W. Scripps Co.'s second-quarter 1990 net income.

The joint operating agreement will end in December 1991, officials with the companies said.

By severing ties, the papers settle a 6-month-old lawsuit brought by the News-Sentinel. The News-Sentinel contested The Journal's recent purchase of a neighboring newspaper, the Maryville, Tn. Daily Times, which has its own printing presses and competes with the Knoxville papers for advertising dollars and readers.

The News-Sentinel is a morning paper published seven days a week with a circulation of more than 103,700. The Journal is an afternoon paper published Monday through Saturday with a circulation of about 41,650.

MEXICO CITY, MEXICO (JUNE 9) UPI - Mexican police raided two airplanes near the U.S. border Friday and seized some $300 million worth of pure Colombian cocaine belonging to the Medellin drug cartel, a published report said.

''I can confirm that some 3,000 kilograms (6,600 pounds) of cocaine were siezed,'' a spokewoman for the Federal Judicial Police said.

The spokeswoman said she could not provide further details of the capture.

The daily newspaper Excelsior reported the cocaine was discovered when two Turbo Commander 1000 planes made an emergency landing at a secret landing strip near Ciudad Juarez, 925 miles northwest of the capital, along the Mexico-U.S. border.

Excelsior quoted federal police Commander Elias Ramirez Ruiz as saying the operation, ''is the most important to date against international narcotics trafficking.''

According to information found aboard the Colombian registered planes, the cocaine belonged to members of the Medellin drug cartel, Ramirez said.

The planes have been taken, under heavy security, to Ciudad Juarez airport and will later be brought to Mexico City, the paper said.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 9) UPI - House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt charged that Bush Administration economic policies are ensnarled in a ''petrified'' free-market ideology that is hobbling the nation's economic future.

Gephardt, the House majority leader and onetime presidential hopeful, charged Friday that President Bush had handed over the reins of the nation's economy to ''a troika of ideologues'' - White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, economic adviser Michael Boskin and budget director Richard Darman.

''They are intelligent, experienced - and thoroughly blinded by ideology '' Gephard said in a speech broadcast by National Public Radio.

''For ideological reasons, there are several policies they won't even consider. For philosophical reasons, there are several problems they simply won't see,'' the Missouri lawmaker said.

Gephardt charged the administration's ''petrified'' free-market ideology has left the nation ''running in place'' while other countries charge ahead. Unless things change, he said, the United States ''will not be a factor'' in an emerging global economy dominated by Asia and Europe.

''Back in Washington, we simply haven't been serious,'' Gephard told the World Affairs Council and the Commonweath Club. ''We're like a sandlot football team trying to play the 49ers. And you don't have to go to the Denver Broncos to know what the outcome is going to be.''

He said the U.S. economy is approaching a state of crisis due to ballooning budget deficts and a national debt that tripled during the last decade; huge trade deficits; loss of markets in semiconducters, consumer goods and machine tools; falling real wages for manufacturing workers, and a shift in the tax burden from the rich to the poor and increased poverty and homelessness.

Gebhart, known in 1988 for rousing speeches attacking Japan's trading practices, credited Japan's ''common sense'' policies for its competitive success while attacking Bush and former President Reagan for policies that have produced ''debt, disinvestment and neglect.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 9) UPI - President Bush refuses to make any predictions, but says progress is being made toward finding ''common ground'' with the Soviet Union on placing a unified Germany in NATO.

And West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl says he believes a unified Germany will be admitted into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization by fall.

Bush and Kohl held a 90-minute dinner meeting at the White House Friday to discuss the thorny reunification issue as well as the Soviet Union's opposition to Germany having full NATO membership due to security concerns.

''I think the facts are on our side,'' Bush told reporters afterward. ''A united Germany in NATO will not be threatening to the Soviet Union. A U.S. presence will not be threatening to the Soviet Union.''

''So we've just got to keep on making our case,'' he said.

Just hours earlier, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev discussed the German question in Moscow.

Thatcher said she told Gorbachev that a united Germany will become a member of NATO, but sought to reassure him that such a move would not threaten the Soviet Union.

And a conciliatory Gorbachev, speaking at a joint news conference with Thatcher, focused on the need for ''an intensive search ... for the best possible solution.''

The Soviets initially called for a neutral Germany. But Moscow has since proposed joint German membership in NATO and the Warsaw Pact, or a Germany in NATO but outside the alliance's military command.

Bush said believes the Kremlin's once-hardline opposition is softening.

''With the changes (reforms) going on in the Soviet Union, I think it is much more likely that we can find common ground,'' said Bush, who Sunday completed four-days of summit talks with Gorbachev in Washington.

Although he and Gorbachev failed to resolve the German question, Bush said the Soviet leader realizes that U.S. forces in Europe are a stabilizing factor and that an independent country is free to select its alliances.

''So I think we are making progress. But I can't make a prediction as to how successful, totally successful, we're going to be,'' he said.

Bush said he and Kohl did not seek to draw up any possible measures to allay Soviet concerns during their meeting Friday. But he said that would be a topic of discussion at the July 5-6 NATO summit in London.

The president noted that NATO leaders would seek an expanded role for the alliance to further ease Soviet security concerns.

Bush and Kohl were joined at their White House meeting by Secretary of State James Baker, who returned just hours earlier from a two-day NATO conference in Turnberry, Scotland.

There, NATO ministers agreed to expanded military force-reduction talks and other steps aimed at easing Soviet fears over a united Germany in the Western Alliance.

On Tuesday, Baker met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in Copenhagen in an effort to narrow U.S.-Soviet differences over German reunification.

''I think Jim would like to feel ... that perhaps he made some progress,'' said Bush without providing any specifics.

Kohl arrived at the White House ready to listen and to talk - and to report to Bush about how the unification process in Germany was proceeding. A key economic pact between East and West Germany is set to take hold July 2.

(JUNE 9) UPI - The Midwest and the Great Plains received NO reprieve from nasty weather Friday. One day after tornadoes, thunderstorms and flash floods pelted the regions, parts of Kansas were once again raked by tornadoes. But authorities say Friday's twisters did NOT repeat the damage caused by an earlier wave of tornadoes. Thunderstorms also hit parts of the eastern United States.

President Bush played host to West German Chancellor Kohl at the White House Friday. Both leaders said that the security concerns of Europe would be best met if a single unified Germany belongs to NATO. In an effort to soothe Soviet concerns regarding Germany's potential membership in NATO, the two leaders reiterated their belief that Germany's involvement in NATO would result in stability. NATO will discuss the issue of Soviet concerns at a summit next month.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Peruvian voters go to the polls on Sunday to decide who will replace outgoing President Alan Garcia. Sunday's contest is a run-off between prize-winning author Mario Vargas Llosa and former political UNknown, Alberto Fujimori. The two are running neck-and-neck in a race that some observers regard as the dirtiest in Peruvian history. Some commentators have speculated that the contest's tightness might prompt a military takeover.

NEW YORK (JUNE 9) UPI - White Bensonhurst leaders said they hoped to strengthen a fragile truce with the black community by expressing their condolences to the family of a black teen slain in a racial attack last summer in the Brooklyn neighborhood.

Leaders in the predominantly Italian-American neighborhood were set to meet Saturday with the family of 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins, who was shot dead last Aug. 23 during an attack by a gang of 30 white youths, some of them wielding baseball bats.

They also planned to call on Bensonhurst residents to come forward with any information they might have about the killing of Hawkins, who had gone to Bensonhust with three friends to look at a used car.

Saturday's scheduled meeting comes one day after black activists and white Bensonhurst leaders declared a fragile cease-fire in the war of words and marches that followed the slaying of Hawkins.

''We don't have to love each other, but we have to live with each other,'' said Rev. Al Sharpton, who nevertheless refused to rule out the resumption of his weekly protests.

''Bensonhurst is going to show the world that people who have been represented as enemies can come together and live the life of the lamb and not the lion,'' promised Assemblyman Frank Barbaro, who represents the community that has often greeted Sharpton's processions with racist taunts and watermelons.

The two stood side by side on the steps of City Hall to announce a truce, along with Moses Stewart, Hawkins' father, and a score of religious and political leaders on both sides of the dispute.

They have met twice in recent days to hammer out an accord to bring a stop to the marches by black activists, at least temporarily.

One of the chief demands of the protest marches has been for the ''good people of Bensonhurst'' to come forward and testify against the white youths accused of killing Hawkins.

The prosecution of the first two defendants in the case, the alleged ringleader and triggerman, was severely hampered by a lack of cooperation from witnesses.

Part of the impetus for the truce was to try to avert a repeat of the in some cases violent protests that greeted the verdicts last month when the two - Joseph Fama and Keith Mondello - are sentenced on Monday.

Fama, 19, was convicted of second-degree murder. Mondello, also 19, was cleared of murder and manslaughter charges but convicted of lesser charges.

Sharpton, Stewart, Barbaro and the others, including Mayor David Dinkins, are to hold a mass meeting in Bensonhurst on Sunday to urge witnesses to come forward and call for the judge to impose maximum sentences against Fama and Mondello.

Sharpton and Stewart said they were impressed with the good will of the Bensonhurst leaders and were ready to turn over a new leaf.

OTTAWA (JUNE 9) UPI - Political leaders reached an agreement in principle Friday night on a constitutional amendment that would keep Quebec in Canada by giving the province special powers to promote its French language and culture.

But the agreement could unravel if negotiators fail to resolve roadblocks over the proposed amendment's ''distinct society clause'' when they resume meeting Saturday.

''We have a large measure of agreement on most of the important principles '' said Prime Minister Brian Mulroney after a meeting adjourned in the early hours of Saturday morning, adding that legal texts were still being prepared and the agreement still had to be formally signed.

The leaders of the 10 Canadian provinces have been meeting all week on a proposed amendment that Quebec has demanded be passed before it signs the 1982 constitution, which it says fails to recognize Quebec as a French speaking society. The province has threatened to secede over the issue.

But smaller provinces have opposed the amendment, known as the Meech Lake Accord, becuase they fear it will give Quebec the power to discriminate against its English-speaking minority.

Mulroney said if the agreement is finalized, it would be a ''very good development for Canada, for all Canadians ... it completes the constitutional process of making the country whole again.''

But Newfoundland Premier Clyde Wells, a constitutional lawyer who opposed the amendment, told reporters: ''There is a roadblock. All of us have a problem. We will deal with details in the morning.''

Reports said the bone of contention was the amendment's distinct society clause.

A spokesman for Mulroney said there was ''broad agreement'' on a final package deal that included a provision that constitutional experts will write a legal opinion about the relationship between the distinct society clause and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The three provinces that oppose the Meech Lake accord, Manitoba, Newfoundland and New Brunswick, wanted a clause inserted into the constitution ensuring that the distinct society clause would not override the nation's Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The spokesman said the legal opinion, to be attached to the agreement, would determine the relationship between the distinct society clause and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Reports said Wells also won an agreement for a provision that the distinct society clause would be examined periodically to ensure that it had not demeaned the Charter. But when the final legal text was presented to him, the provision was missing.

The tentative agreement reached Friday night also specifies that a so-called Canada clause, addressing the rights of aborigines, the multi-cultural nature of Canada and the relationship between its English- and French-founding cultures, will be negotiated in a future round of constitutional talks.

The apparent breakthrough in the constitutional impasse came late into the sixth straight day of negotiations, when it appeared the talks would collapse.

Reports said the leaders had reached agreement on Senate reform, in which the leaders will try over the next few years to create an elected Senate with more equal representation from all provinces.

But negotiations were at the point of collapse late Thursday after Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said he would no longer participate in discussions about the distinct society clause.

They were further threatened Friday when the premier of Newfoundland said he was fed with up the secretiveness of the talks and threatened to abandon the negotiations.

The negotiations had reached a feverish pitch because the Meech Lake accord must be approved by the legislatures of all 10 provinces by June 23 or it becomes void.

The constitutional talks have preoccupied Canadians for months. Opinion polls indicate that the majority of those outside Quebec oppose the Meech Lake accord because it gives the province a special status. Most Canadians believe Quebec will separate from Canada regardless of what happens to the Meech Lake accord.

Quebec opinion polls confirm that sentiment, with the majority of Francophones, including the business community, supporting secession.

CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA (JUNE 9) UPI - Two American women were missing Saturday after the wreckage of their 36-foot yacht was discovered off the northeast Australian coast, officials said.

A spokesman for the Federal Sea Safety Center in Canberra said a search vessel had recovered a yellow drum and part of the radar from the 36-foot sloop Banshee on Saturday morning. The wreckage had been spotted earlier by a search aircraft.

The spokesman said 16 aircraft had been deployed to search the wreckage site, about 350 miles east of Rockhampton, where winds reached 45 knots and waves 16 feet on Saturday.

Officials did not release the names of the two women, whom they said sent out a distress call Thursday.

The crew of an airforce plane sent to the area reported their yacht had been dismasted, but spotted one of the women on board the vessel.

A radio beacon was dropped from the aircraft to pinpoint the yacht's position as night fell, but four civilian and several airforce aircraft were unable to locate the sloop during an all-day search Friday.

Officials said the Banshee had left Bundaberg, 150 miles south of Rockhampton, bound for Vanuatu.

(JUNE 9) UPI - It may not have been a vintage performance, but Roger Clemens still had what he needed to become the first 10-game winner in the major leagues this year.

''It had to be the worst game he's thrown all year,'' Boston catcher Tony Pena said Friday night after Clemens led the surging Boston Red Sox to a 4-3 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

''He was all over the place,'' Pena said. ''But when he got in trouble, he beared down. That's why he's one of the best.''

Clemens battled through seven innings, allowing two runs, eight hits, walking three and fanning eight.

''I fought with myself a bit tonight,'' said Clemens, 10-2. ''I struggled from the second inning on. I was throwing the ball in the middle of the plate. When you do that, you get in trouble.''

The 1986 and 1987 Cy Young Award winner has won six of his last seven starts and has a 1.80 ERA.

Jeff Reardon, who got the last two outs with runners on first and third, pitched the final two innings to record his eighth save and his second in as many nights.

''We kept the fans here to the end,'' said Boston Manager Joe Morgan, ''but it was a sweet ending.''

Ellis Burks' go-ahead two-run homer in the seventh was the key offensive blow for Boston, which posted its sixth straight win.

Trailing 2-1 in the sixth, the Red Sox jumped ahead on Burks' two-run blast. Tom Brunansky doubled leading off against John Farrell, 3-4. After two outs, Burks lined a shot into the left-field screen for his seventh homer.

Jody Reed's suicide squeeze scored Luis Rivera, who had doubled and moved to third on Wade Boggs' grounder, to make it 4-2 in the seventh.

''We've been struggling to get something going,'' said Cleveland's Chris James. ''Going against one of the best, like Clemens, was an extra challenge.''

Cleveland, which suffered its fifth consecutive loss, went in front 2-1 in the second on rookie Beau Allred's two-run homer, his first hit in the majors. Allred, recalled from Colorado Springs Thursday, lofted a drive that hooked around the right-field foulpole. It was the first homer in Fenway against Clemens this season.

''Clemens wasn't nearly as good as he has been, but he won,'' said Morgan. ''It just shows you how good he is.''

Elsewhere in the American League, Seattle dumped Detroit 5-2 in the first game of a double-header, Detroit downed Seattle 6-3 in the nightcap, Baltimore edged New York 5-4 in 10 innings, Chicago nipped Minnesota 3-2, Toronto trounced Milwaukee 11-5, Oakland outlasted Kansas City 3-1 and Texas topped California 10-6.

In the NL, it was: Chicago 15, Philadelphia 2; Montreal 18, St. Louis 2; New York 7, Pittsburgh 1; San Francisco 23, Atlanta 8; Houston 3, Cincinnati 1 in 10 innings and San Diego 12, Los Angeles 6.

Tigers 6, Mariners 3 (second game)
Mariners 5, Tigers 2 (first game)

At Detroit, pinch-hitter Gary Ward was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded, forcing home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning to lift Detroit to victory in the nightcap and a split of a twi-night double-header. Mike Henneman, 2-4, earned the victory with 1 1-3 innings of shutout relief. Keith Comstock, 1-2, took the loss.

In the first game, Jay Buhner hit a two-run homer to support the four-hit pitching of Erik Hanson over eight innings. Hanson, 6-4, matched a season-high with nine strikeouts and walked two before being lifted after the eighth for Mike Jackson, who earned his second save. Frank Tanana, 4-4 allowed 10 hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Orioles 5, Yankees 4, 10 innings

At Baltimore, Randy Milligan scored from third base on a throwing error by rookie third baseman Jim Leyritz in the 10th inning, helping Baltimore hand New York its seventh straight loss. Brian Holton, 2-1, gave up no hits and no walks in the 10th and Allan Mills, 0-1, took the loss.

White Sox 3, Twins 2

At Minneapolis, Ron Kittle hit a solo home run in the eighth inning and Ozzie Guillen drove in two runs. Kittle's ninth homer helped make a loser of reliever Juan Berenguer, 4-1. Scott Radinsky, 5-0, pitched 2-3 inning of scoreless relief and Bobby Thigpen notched his 18th save in 21 opportunities.

Blue Jays 11, Brewers 5

At Milwaukee, George Bell homered twice and drove in six runs to power the Toronto. Tom Gilles, 1-0, earned his first major-league victory and Tom Henke pitched the final two innings for his eighth save. Chuck Crim, 2-2, suffered the loss.

A's 3, Royals 1

At Oakland, Curt Young fired a two-hitter through six innings and Dennis Eckersley saved his 19th game of the year to lead Oakland. Young improved to 3-1 while Kansas City starter Mark Gubicza dropped to 3-6. Danny Tartabull hit his fourth homer for the Royals.

Rangers 10, Angels 6

At Anaheim, Calif., Rafael Palmeiro collected three singles and a home run in five at-bats, driving in four runs to power Texas. Charlie Hough, 6-4, scattered seven hits over seven innings and survived three Angel home runs. Mike Fetters, 0-1, suffered the defeat.

PEARLAND, Texas (JUNE 9) UPI - Exploding barrels of highly flammable solvents fueled an intense blaze at a chemical plant that shot up flames visible for 20 miles and threatened to ignite dozens of chemical storge tanks nearby.

Two plant workers were injured in Friday's blast and fire and six other rescue workers or fire firefighters were overcome by smoke or heat, authorities said.

Plant officials were trying to determine the cause of the explosions and fire.

Residences in a 2-mile radius of the plant were ordered evacuated at one point, but the effort was called off shortly before 5 p.m. and people were allowed back into the area. The fire was nearly put out by that hour and officials said they no longer feared dozens of nearby chemical storage tanks might ignite and blow up.

The explosions at the Solvents and Chemicals Inc. plant began about 11:30 a.m. Barrels of chemicals exploded in ensuing blasts for several hours.

''We've got 55-gallon drums going up like rockets,'' Fire Department Capt. Robert Coonan said.

One person was standing by a warehouse when the blasts began. ''Real sudden, everything was popping and blowing up and people were running away from it,'' the witness said. ''All of a sudden there were barrels popping 200 or 300 feet up in the air. It was mass hysteria when it went up.''

A 49-year-old unidentified plant worker was taken to Memorial Southeast Hospital with minor burns on his forearms. Hospital officials withheld his name.

Plant worker Eloy Salazar, 26, was flown by medical helicopter to Houston's Hermann Hospital, where he was listed in serious conditions with first-degree burns covering 28 percent of his body, a hospital spokesman said.

Two firefighters suffering heat exhaustion also were taken to Memorial Southwest, and four Emergency Medical Service workers were treated for smoke inhalation, said hospital spokeswoman Rebecca Lilley.

People living up to 6 miles from the plant reported hearing the explosions. Residents of downtown Houston, about 20 miles to the north, could see the smoke and flames.

''We started hearing explosions and it sounded like somebody shooting a shotgun,'' said Robert Cowan. ''After about 20 or 30 repetitions, we started looking out the window. By then, the flames were already several hundred feet high.''

The plant apparently contained a variety of solvents, including acetone and MTBE, an additive for diesel fuel.

''All of them are very flammable and explosive, and that's why we are evacuating,'' police Officer Craig Biggler said.

There are homes across the street from the plant on the south side and trees on the other three sides.

''So far, my house is not on fire. That's all I know,'' said Jo Churchman, who lives next to the plant and was forced from her home.

With the temperature for the day rising to 90 degrees, firefighters braved heavy smoke and flames to rescue two goats and some geese from a pen near the plant.

SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA (JUNE 9) UPI - The government appealed to residents of a populated valley to be calm as a series of more than 30 earthquakes, the strongest measuring 4.9 on the Richter scale, shook the area.

The national siesmological center said the main quake hit at 6:30 p.m. Friday and lasted for 5 1/2 minutes, rattling homes and cracking open the main highway leading to the town of Santiago de Puriscal.

No injuries were reported, but firefighters said the damage to the highway blocked traffic in both directions.

The siesmological center said that of the more than thirty quakes detected since midnight, seven had measured between 3 and 4.5 on the open ended Richter scale.

The continual siesmic activity has its epicenter in Puriscal, 25 miles from San Jose, and affects the entire Central Valley of the country, a most densely populated area that contains 2 million people and the capital of San Jose.

The onslaught of quakes provoked a wave of panic and the National Emergency Commission appealed over television and radio for calm, reminding Costa Ricans that, ''the phenomenon of earthquakes has always been present in the country and that since the territory was formed they have occurred frequently.''

In Puriscal, which has suffered substantial siesmic activity over the past six weeks, 3,000 residents have abandoned their homes in search of accommodations they feel are safer.

Geologists and siesmologists of the National University of Costa Rica said that a shift of two land masses that caused a March 25 quake measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale, activated certain faults in the area of Puriscal, in the Central Valley of Costa Rica.

A chain of volcanic mountains in the area has also had increased erruptions.

Humberto Trejos, coordinator of the National Emergency Commission, said that according to technical studies, the chain of earthquakes in the Puriscal area comes from a system of relatively small local faults.

''Because of this it is estimated that severe earthquakes will not occur even though small ones will continue,'' he said.

Trejos said the commission had not recommended that Puriscal be evacuated.

(JUNE 9) UPI - After three teams scored a total of 56 runs in extraordinary victories Friday, some unusual post-game comments were heard in clubhouses around the National League.

''When it was 11-1, I slapped myself a couple times,'' said Chicago Manager Don Zimmer after the Chicago Cubs trounced the Philadelphia Phillies 15-2.

''It was crazy out there,'' recalled Braves outfielder Dale Murphy, after suffering through a 23-8 annihilation at the hands of the San Francisco Giants. ''They just kept hitting and kept hitting and kept hitting.''

''There isn't a manager alive who hasn't had a game like this,'' said veteran St. Louis skipper Whitey Herzog, after the Cardinals were buried 18-2 by the Montreal Expos.

The day boardered on the bizarre, beginning with the afternoon contest in Chicago. Shawon Dunston smashed his second career grand slam to cap a season-high nine-run third inning, helping the Cubs set a season-high for runs in a game while snapping a five-game losing streak.

Jeff Pico, 2-0, scattered six hits, struck out two and walked two over seven innings. Terry Mulholland, 3-3, took the loss, lasting 2 2-3 innings.

''I remember a game last year when I had a pretty comfortable lead, I think 10-3, and we ended up losing 16-13,'' Pico said. ''Hector (Villanueva, catcher) and Dick Pole (pitching coach) kept telling me to act like it was a 1-0 game.''

At Atlanta, Will Clark belted a pair of three-run homers, Rick Parker drove in six runs and the Giants established major league season-highs in runs and hits.

''Pretty much everything we hit fell in tonight,'' said Clark.

Parker had four hits, including his first major league homer; Jose Uribe went 4-for-4, knocked in three runs and scored four times; and the Giants roughed up seven Atlanta pitchers with 27 hits.

In Herzog's nightmare, Nelson Santovenia drove in a career-high six runs and Tim Wallach added four RBI. Santovenia blasted a three-run homer to highlight a six-run first inning and added a two-run single in the eighth to pace Montreal's 14-hit attack.

''It is nice to see but it is difficult to pitch that type of game because I had to wait so long in between innings,'' said winning pitcher Dennis Martinez, who evened his record at 4-4. ''That is the first time in my career that I've had a 12-0 lead.''

Elsewhere in the NL, New York shocked Pittsburgh 7-1, Houston edged Cincinnati 3-1 and San Diego snubbed Los Angeles 12-6.

In the AL, it was: Seattle 5, Detroit 2 in the first game of a double-header; Detroit 6, Seattle 3 in the nightcap; Baltimore 5, New York 4 in 10 innings; Chicago 3, Minnesota 2; Toronto 11, Milwaukee 5; Oakland 3, Kansas City 1; Texas 10, California 6; and Boston 4, Cleveland 3.

Mets 7, Pirates 1

At New York, Darryl Strawberry hit a pair of home runs and drove in three runs and Gregg Jefferies added a two-run shot to power New York. Sid Fernandez, 4-5, allowed two hits over seven innings in a game that was delayed for a total of 2 hours 48 minutes by rain. Bob Walk fell to 4-4 with the help of two Pirate errors.

Astros 3, Reds 1, 10 innings

At Houston, pinch-hitter Glenn Wilson stroked a three-run homer with two out in the 10th inning and Mike Scott struck out a career-high 15. Wilson's blast made a loser of Randy Myers, who fell to 1-1. Scott, 3-6, allowed one hit over the first nine innings and retired 19 straight in one stretch.

Padres 12, Dodgers 6

At San Diego, Benito Santiago stroked a three-run homer to ignite a six-run seventh inning and Joe Carter contributed three RBI, powering San Diego to its fourth straight victory. Craig Lefferts, 4-1, the Padres' third pitcher, allowed one hit. Jim Gott, 0-1, lasted just two-thirds of an inning, allowing six runs and three hits.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Thunderstorms rumbled from central Plains to the East Coast Saturday, threatening flooding in some areas, but causing no new damage in storm-ravaged Kansas where residents recovered from two straight days of tornadoes.

A band of thunderstorms strecthed across parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas andMissouri, the National Weather Service said. Thunderstorms also hit Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia and an area including Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Deleware.

Flash flood watches were posted for streams in western Pennsylvania and the West Virginia Panhandle.

Thunderstorms unleashed tornadoes in Emporia, Kan., Friday causing minimal damage compared with a wave of twisters a day earlier that leveled numerous buildings and injured 18 people in the same area.

Jim Paul, assistant manager at the Emporia Municipal Golf Course, said he and several other workers were the only ones left at the course around 7 p.m. Friday when funnel clouds were spotted approaching. They drove several miles away to flee.

Returning later, Paul said damage seemed slight.

''It looked like it blew the trash around. It didn't destroy anything but there was a lot of rain and there's flooding in the fairways,'' he said.

Tornadoes also hit the Texas Panhandle Friday, but stayed away from urban areas and there were no reports of injuries or damage, authorities said.

''They're just spinning all around here. But thank the Lord, they didn't hit anything,'' said one Carson County sheriff's dispatcher. ''They would float around the ground a little bit and then float back up.''

Carson County deputies reported at least six tornadoes east, west and northeast of the town of Panhandle between about 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. Friday. But each twister touched down for only a few minutes in open areas and avoided the town, dispatchers said.

Elsewhere, skies were cloudy from the Middle Atlantic region to Florida with temperatures in the 70s and 80s. Temperatures were mostly in the 70s throughout the nation's midsection, dipping into the 50s and 60s in the Pacific Northwest and northern Plains. Temperatures climbed into the 90s in Arizona and Nevada.

CAGLIARI, SARDINIA (JUNE 9) UPI - Fifteen English soccer fans were arrested Friday night after fighting started in a downtown bar and spilled into the streets in the first serious outbreak of hooliganism at the 1990 World Cup finals.

The trouble came at the beginning of a long, hot weekend during which 10,000 English fans are expected to arrive on the island of Sardinia in time for England's opening match against the Republic of Ireland Monday. It cast grave doubts over the likelihood of English clubs being readmitted to European cup competition next month.

English teams have been banned from playing in Europe since the Belgian Heysel Stadium disaster of 1985 when a riot by Liverpool fans at the European Cup Final in Brussels caused the death of 39 Italian supporters of the Turin-based team Juventus.

The English national team was not barred from international competition.

Initial reports said six fans suffered minor injuries during a fight with baton wielding policemen. Police initially detained 30 fans.

The arrested fans, who were visited by a British consular officer, were held overnight in a juvenile detention center before appearing in court Saturday. At least 10 were being detained, while the rest were released with a warning not to drink alcohol while they remained in Cagliari. Police found knives on two fans.

Witnesses said the trouble began Friday night in a bar near the port area of Cagliari, the capital of Sardinia.

When the bar owner asked the fans to stop misbehaving, they refused. The police were called and they evicted the fans, who spilled into the street and threw bottles at passers-by and policemen.

They also damaged another nearby bar. Alcohol sales will be banned in Cagliari on days surrounding World Cup matches.

Many were draped in the red, white and blue Union Jack British flag and wearing only swimming trunks or shorts.

England will play its three first-round matches on Sardinia and more than 3,000 police have been deployed on the island to avert trouble.

Officials expect at least 8,000 Irish and Dutch fans to come to Sardinia. On June 16, England plays Holland, whose fans have a reputation for violence almost as discreditable as the English fans.

An accord reached Friday by the Italian Foreign Ministry and the British ambassador to Rome calls for Italy to provide London with a list of all English and Welsh citizens facing charges for soccer-related violence.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Britain's National Football Intelligence Unit would be informed of all sentences handed down in Italy involving British citizens.

Italian police have arrested 25 English fans this week and the government has deported two, including self-styled hooligan king Paul Scarrot.

GENEVA (JUNE 9) UPI - South African black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, ending the first week of a grueling six-week world tour, Saturday dismissed reports that he was ill as ''propaganda.''

Talking with reporters, he protested mildly against some South African media reports that he was ill and was canceling most of his scheduled engagements.

''You are witnesses that this might not be correct,'' he said with a smile. ''It is strange how propaganda can create a world which is absolutely divorced from reality.''

Mandela, 71, looked well and rested after suffering from fatigue Friday.

He met for 90 minutes Saturday morning with members of church and other anti-apartheid movements at the World Council of Churches.

Mandela arrived in Geneva from Paris on Friday and immediately made an hour-long speech at the annual assembly of the U.N. International Labor Organization.

He told cheering delegates that black South Africans ''are confident that victory is in sight,'' but that international aid would be needed when the black majority came to power.

Afterward, he was forced by what his doctor called ''tiredness'' to cancel a visit to the International Red Cross.

Mandela went ahead all the same with an evening helicopter trip to the Swiss capital of Bern - a 30-minute flight - to meet Swiss foreign minister Rene Felber and other government officials.

Both Mandela and his aides, however, said arrangemnts were being made to cut back his packed schedule for the remaining five weeks of his 14-nation world tour.

He said Saturday that he was ''very satisfied'' with his talks in Bern, despite the fact that Switzerland - because of its policies of neutrality - has never enforced economic trade sanctions against South Africa or any other country.

Mandela called on his supporters to continue their efforts to sever the trade and banking relationship between the Swiss and Pretoria.

He met afterwards with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Thorvald Stoltenberg of Norway, to discuss some 20,000 black South African nationalists living in exile in neighboring African countries.

Those people, he said, will ''cease to be refugees when they return home to their own country.''

Stoltenberg assured Mandela that aid for the exiles would continue as long as they have refugee status, U.N. officials said.

Mandela later had lunch with South Africans living in Geneva before begining 36 hours of rest before his next stop Monday in Westy Germany.

From there he will go to France, Italy, Canada and the United States before returning to Europe to visit Britain and Ireland. He will fly home via the African nations of Uganda, Ethiopia, Kenya and Mozambique.

CAGAYAN DE ORO, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 9) UPI - Lightning killed six people in the southern Philippines when it struck a farmhouse where they had taken shelter from a raging thunderstorm, police said Saturday.

Four others were wounded in the incident Friday in Mati, Misamis Oriental province, 500 miles south of Manila.

Lt. Col. William Amerkhan, police provincial commander, said two children and four adults in the house were killed by the lightening bolt.

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 9) UPI - An explosion ripped a Norwegian tanker carrying 33 million gallons of oil in the Gulf of Mexico, killing two people and causing a slick as a fire aboard the ship raged out of control, Coast Guard officials said.

Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene said two people were missing and 38 others abandoned ship following the explosion, which began near the tanker's engine and cargo rooms about 1 a.m. Officials said a small amount of oil created a slick a few yards long.

Storage tanks containing the crude oil were ''very possibly'' fueling the fire, which continued to rage out of control at 8:30 a.m., Greene said. He said the fire engulfed a 240-foot section of the 1,000-foot ship in the Gulf of Mexico, about 57 miles southeast of Galveston.

Greene said firefighting crews were ''standing by'' and letting the fire burn aboard the Norwegian tanker Mega Borg. He said salvage crews were rushing to the scene.

YAOUNDE, CAMEROON (JUNE 9) UPI - Strangers hugged and danced and taxis and trucks raced through the streets early Saturday in a celebration of national pride after Cameroon defeated defending champion Argentina 1-0 in the opening game of the World Cup.

Normally deserted bars and dance halls were filled with revelers until dawn Saturday, and hundreds of people rushed to the national radio house after the triumph to find journalists singing Cameroon's national anthem.

''This proves that if we are united we can accomplish great things,'' a radio broadcaster said.

Yaounde resembled a ghost town in the hours that preceeded Friday night's match in Milan, Italy. The government declared a national holiday for the occasion and as the match began, traffic came to a halt as people gathered around television sets in homes, bars and sidewalks.

The official government press wasted no time in deciding the victory was due to the foresight and leadership of Cameroon President Paul Biya, who attended the match in Milan.

Independent observers said Cameroon's unexpected performance can only help Biya's regime, which has been weakened by a severe economic and political crisis.

But if Cameroon's players were the obvious heroes of the night, the match also provided Cameroon, a former French colony, with an easily identifiable enemy - the French referee Michel Vautrot. Most fans thought he was too rough on their team in sending off Andre Kana Biyick and Benjamin Massing.

But fans expressed pride that Cameroon defeated the Argentines with only nine men.

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN (JUNE 9) UPI - A desponent Russian teenager with a fake hand grenade hijacked a Soviet airliner to Sweden after he was kicked out of his home by his parents, police said.

The airliner, a three-engine Tupolev jet of the Soviet airline Aeroflot, returned to the Soviet Union with 135 passengers and crew aboard early Saturday, Swedish authorities said.

Police said the aircraft had been on a domestic flight from the Byelorussian capital Minsk to Murmansk, 1000 miles north of Moscow on the northern Kola peninsula, when it was hijacked by the 17-year-old Russian boy.

The official Soviet news agency Tass identified the hijacker as Dmitry Semenov and said the Soviet Union had requested that he be turned over to Soviet authorities. There was no immediate word on the charges he could face.

Brandishing a fake hand grenade, Semenov forced the aircraft's pilot to change course 40 minutes into the flight from Minsk to Murmansk by threatening to blow up the aircraft, Tass and airport authorities at Stockholm's Arlanda international airport said.

Police said Semenov told them he hijacked the plane because he was expelled from his home by his parents.

Tass said there were 114 passengers and 7 crew members aboard the Tu-154.

''The captain Sergei Brilev decided to land in Stockholm to save the lives of the passengers,'' Tass said.

Swedish authorities were alerted to the hijacking early Saturday, and gave the plane immediate permission to land.

Semenov surrendered to Swedish police an hour after the aircraft landed.

''I want to live in Sweden,'' the young man was quoted as saying.

Airport authorities said Semenov was a student at a Technical College in Minsk, 420 miles southwest of Moscow.

Swedish police said there were no immediate plans for the return of the youth to the Soviet Union.

''We have received no official request for extradition,'' a spokeswoman for the Swedish Foreign Ministry said.

She said that in a similar case in 1977, Swedish authorities had tried and sentenced a Soviet national in Sweden instead of repatriating him to stand trial in the Soviet Union.

Tass was unclear on whether a formal request extradition had been made, saying ''the question of giving up the criminal to the Soviet side is being decided.''

Semenov was in detention at Stockholm Police Headquarters Saturday and was expected to be remanded in custody during a preliminary court hearing Saturday.

No one was hurt in the hijacking. One unnamed woman with a weak heart was briefly treated by Swedish doctors but continued to Murmansk with her traveling companions Saturday.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 9) UPI - The pro-democracy movement Civic Forum won a clear majority in federal parliamentary elections, Czechoslovakia's first free elections in 44 years, initial projections showed Saturday.

The West German polling firm INFAS, which conducted exit polls of 12,000 people, projected President Vaclav Havel's Forum and its sister party in Slovakia, Public Against Violence, won 52 percent of seats in the 300-seat Federal Assembly, which consists of the House of the People and the House of Nations.

The Christian Democratic Union, a coalition of three Christian Democratic parties, was projected to win 12 percent, followed by the Communist Party with 10 percent.

The remainder of the 22 parties that ran in the elections Friday and Saturday may not make the 5 percent cut-off to sit in the federal parliament, the projections showed.

INFAS predicted the results of East German elections within 1.6 percent accuracy and the Romanian elections within 3 percent accuracy.

The projections presage a sweeping victory for Civic Forum, the pro-democracy coalition of 11 parties and movements that formed after the Nov. 17, 1989,police attack on demonstrators in Wenceslas Square and led the subsequent ''Velvet Revolution'' which led to the overthrow of four decades of communist rule.

Federal election officials said the turnout in two days of voting Friday and Saturday exceeded 90 percent, a thumping rejection of communism as well.

If the INFAS projection is borne out by official results expected to be announced Sunday, Civic Forum will have a working majority in parliament without need to form a coalition with the Christian Democrats, whose fortunes fell at the last minute over allegations that one of its leaders was a secret police agent for many years.

However, the Forum and Public Against Violence may still seek to form a ''grand coalition'' with the Christian Democrats in order to strengthen their hand as it begins to implement the tough economic reforms needed in the coming months.

INFAS also projected the results of the East German and Romanian elections reaching within 1.6 percent accuracy in the former and 3 percent in the latter.

In a dramatic conclusion to the election, the INFAS results were projected in the midst of a news conference at which Havel's chief adviser, Jiri Krizan, confirmed publicly that People's Party candidate Josef Bartoncik had worked as a highly paid agent of the former secret police or StB since 1971.

Krizan and Deputy Interior Minister Jan Ruml said they decided to reveal the accusation publicly after Bartoncik promised Havel he would withdraw his bid for re-election to parliament, where he is deputy president of the entire Federal Assembly and president of the House of the People.

The officials said the information about Bartoncik's past was not revealed until Thursday because his file disappeared in January. His past was revealed when another former StB agent, identified only as Bartoncik's commander, came forward with the evidence.

Civic Forum's victory was even greater in the Czech Republic parliament, according to INFAS projections. The exit polling showed the Forum gaining 60 percent, compared with 9.5 percent for the Communist Party and 7.5 per cent for the Christian Democratic Union.

In Slovakia, projections showed Public Against Violence will get 37 percent compared to 21 percent for the Christian Democrats, 11.5 percent for the communists and 10 percent for the Slovak National Party.

In the race for Federal Assembly seats, INFAS calculated that the Civic forum would win 52 percent of the 300 posts once votes of smaller parties - which did not make the 5 percent cut off - are redistributed among larger parties according to the electoral law's proportional representation formula.

Turnout across the nation surpassed even the most optimistic pre-election predictions of 88 percent. It was a turnaround for a nation where apathy toward politics had been the norm since a 1968 Soviet-led Warsaw Pact invasion crushed the ''Prague Spring'' of reforms under former communist leader Alexander Dubcek.

In the farming village of Kemenny Most 20 miles outside of the capital, local election officials said 206 of 208 eligible voters showed up at the polls.

A sample survey of voters in several villages outside of Prague and in the nearby industrial city of Kladno showed all but one voted for the Forum.

Among those parties which will not make it into parliament, according to the INFAS projections, are the Greens, the Social Democrats, the Socialists, the Democrats, the Agriculture and Rural Party, and the Coexistence Party which represents the country's ethnic minorities.

It was a stunning conclusion to the election for Czechoslovakia, which in the interwar years had the most democratic government in Central Europe until the country was dismembered by Hitler through the Munich Pact.

After the war, the communists gained 38 percent of the vote in free elections in 1946 - the only place in Central Europe where the population gave the party a majority. But the communists used the results as a springboard to eliminate opposition parties and staged a successful coup in February 1948 that gave them a monopoly on power until last November's revolution.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 9) UPI - The government freed 28 political prisoners from South Africa's Robben Island prison Saturday, apparently part of a promise by President Frederik de Klerk to free a total of 48 prisoners.

The release, the largest since de Klerk was elected in September, coincided with the arrival Saturday of a U.N. fact-finding mission.

When de Klerk announced the end of a 4-year national state of emergency Thursday, he also said 48 political prisoners would be freed in advance of an agreement with the African National Congress on its demands that all political prisoners be freed.

OAK BROOK, IL (JUNE 9) UPI - McDonald's Corp. says complete nutrition information on all permanent menu items will be posted for customers at all of its more than 8,200 restaurants by the end of July.

The posters to be displayed will list both ingredients used and nutritional values, McDonald's USA President Ed Rensi announced Friday.

Rensi said the move will make the fast-food giant the first restaurant chain to offer such complete nutrition and ingredient information on all permanent menu items.

''As a food-service company, we care about both nutrition and our customers,'' Rensi said. ''It only makes sense to do everything we can to address both.''

A company spokesman denied the decision to post the information was made in reaction to newspaper ads that appeared across the country April 4 charging McDonald's hamburgers and french fries were ''poisoning'' consumers with cholesterol.

The ad was placed by an Omaha, Neb., group calling itself the National Heart Savers Association, headed, founded and funded by millionaire Phil Sokolof.

A McDonald's spokesman has denounced the ads as ''reckless, misleading and intended to scare rather than inform.''

Rensi said the chain has added to its menu to include a variety of dietary choices and has reduced fat, cholesterol and sodium in its products.

''This program provides simple, complete nutrition and ingredient information on all our products,'' said Michael Goldblatt, McDonald's director of nutrition and product development.

''Since this information will be permanently posted in our restaurants, we can now guarantee our customers that all the imformation they require to make smart menu choices is there when they need it,'' he said.

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (JUNE 9) UPI - Tests performed when Frank Reed returned to the United States after spending 44 months as a hostage in Lebanon have revealed the presence of arsenic in his system, officials said Saturday.

Reed underwent the tests as part of a standard procedure for former prisoners, officials at Andrews Air Force Base said.

Aside from a brief visit to family members in his native Malden, Mass., the 57-year-old educator has been recuperating at the Malcolm Grow Medical Center on the base since his return to the United States.

''The screening laboratory test for heavy metal, lead mercury and arsenic are a part of this hospital's protocol for returning prisoners and hostages,'' the Air Force said in a statement.

''These tests were performed upon Mr. Reed's arrival. The initial test for arsenic was positive. Subsequent tests confirmed this exposure to arsenic and its elimination to a non-toxic level,'' the statement said.

Officials refused to comment on how or when Reed ingested the poisonous substance.

Reed was freed by his captors April 30 after spending 44 months as a hostage in Lebanon. The founder of the Lebanese International School and a convert to Islam, Reed was kidnapped in West Beirut on Sept. 9, 1986.

He has said he was blindfolded during much of his captivity and lost a great deal of weight, some of which he has since regained.

Reed has been extremely vocal in his calls for the freedom of other hostages. After his release, he told reporters in West Germany he was ''angry'' and ''embarrassed'' that other Westerners with whom he shared his captivity remained prisoners.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Around the world... around the clock, U-P-I has the latest news.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said last night political leaders have agreed on most of the measures in a constitutional amendment that would give Quebec special powers. The leaders of 10 Canadian provinces have been meeting all week to work out a compromise with French-speaking Quebec, which wants to be recognized as a ''distinct society.''

President Bush had a dinner meeting with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at the White House last night. The leaders discussed the issue of a unified Germany in NATO. Kohl said he believes a united Germany will be admitted to the Western military alliance by the fall. And Bush said he thinks Moscow eventually will accept a unified Germany in NATO.

British Prime Minister Thatcher met with Soviet President Gorbachev in Moscow yesterday and sought to reassure the Soviet leader a unified Germany in NATO would NOT threaten the Soviet Union. Gorbachev appears to be softening his stance toward the issue. He's NO longer stating outright that he will NOT allow NATO membership for a united Germany.

The Soviet republic of Russia has declared that its laws take precedence over those of the Soviet Union's central government. Lawmakers will include the provision in an independence declaration they intend to pass next week. The action is a major victory for new Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Israel's caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was successful yesterday in forming a hard-line coalition government between his Likud Party and six right-wing and religious partners. The formation of a new government appears to end Israel's 42-day political crisis.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 9) UPI - Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere left Saturday on an historic four-day trip to the United States as the first East German leader to be invited to the White House.

De Maiziere flew from East Berlin's Schoenefeld Airport and was scheduled to land in New York about 9:40 p.m. EDT after a stopover in Gander, Canada.

In an interview with the East German news service ADN, President Bush described the visit as ''another station in the splendid changes in Eastern Europe.''

De Maiziere of the conservative Christian Democratic Party was scheduled to confer Monday in Washington with Bush as well as Secretary of State James Baker.

He was expected to discuss in Washington the same topics Bush covered with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at the White House Friday - the Soviet Union's opposition to full NATO membership for a united Germany.

De Maiziere shares the view of Kohl and Bush that German membership in NATO will be a stabilizing force in Europe and poses no threat to the Soviet Union.

In Washington, de Maiziere also will meet members of Congress, business leaders and hold talks with Harvey Meyerhoff, president of the U.S. Holocaust Museum.

Before traveling to Washington, de Maiziere was scheduled to meet Cardinal John O'Connor, Catholic archbishoip of New York, representatives of the World Jewish Congress and a delegation of business leaders in New York.

He will end his visit back in New York Tuesday with a meeting with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Erich Honecker, the hardline Communist leader ousted in the peaceful East German revolution, tried for years to get an invitation to Washington as confirmation of his stand that unification never would take place and the existence of two German states was a fact.

De Maiziere, like Kohl a Christian Democrat, heads East Germany's first freely elected government - a broad coalition of five parties - including the Social Democrats who are in opposition in West Germany.

In the former government, the East German Christian Democrats collaborated with the Communists in the Communist-run National Front. But de Maiziere, a virtually obscure lawyer, was untainted. De Maiziere was a professional viola player, but gave that up and studied law after he injured an arm.

He rose to prominence only after the Communist Party purged itself of its active collaborators after the ouster of Honecker and his supporters.

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 9) UPI - An explosion and fire ripped through a Norwegian tanker Saturday, killing two people and threatening to discharge 33 million gallons of oil into the Gulf of Mexico, Coast Guard officials said.

Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene said the fire raged out of control while an oil slick about three-quarters of a mile long and one-quarter of a mile wide surrounded the tanker, about 65 miles southeast of Galveston.

Greene said he feared the blaze would cause ''structural failure'' to the cargo tank, threatening to discharge 800,000 barrels of crude oil aboard the ship that would fuel the fire.

''For certain, the engine room and superstructure is engulfed in flames,'' Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Mike Shoul said. ''The Coast Guard cutter on the scene cannot get close enough for its firefighting equipment to be used.''

Greene said Coast Guard officials were assessing damage to the ship from a videotape that was taken by a helicopter crew.

Two people were killed and two others were missing after the explosion erupted near the tanker's engine and cargo rooms about 1 a.m., officials said. They were not immediately identified by authorities.

Officials said 36 crewmembers who abandoned ship were being taken by boat to Brazosport Memorial Hospital in Freeport, Texas. Lt. Robert Randolph, who piloted the medical evacuation helicopter to the tanker, said none of the injured required an airlift.

Linda Runnels, a Brazosport nursing supervisor, said the hospital staff expected to treat people suffering from burns, broken bones and smoke inhalation.

The firefighting vessel Carolyn Chouest and Coast Guard cutter Buttonwood were en route to the burning ship, but officials said the blaze had already engulfed a 240-foot section of the Norwegian tanker Mega Borg. He said salvage crews also were rushing to the scene.

''We've got at least one Coast Guard cutter in the area, and have had helicopter overflights around the vessel throughout the early morning hours,'' Shoul said. ''There are also a couple commercial vessels on the scene just helping to monitor the situation and to provide assistance as needed.

''The size of the boat precluded it from coming into shore. It's larger than our ship channel can handle,'' he said.

The oil, which was being loaded onto a smaller tanker to be brought into port as part of standard procedure, spilled when the hoses between the two ships broke, Greene said.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 9) UPI - Former President Ronald Reagan said in an interview released that he doubts Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev can survive unless he seizes the initiative and introduces true democracy.

In an interview with the West German newspaper Welt am Sonntag, Reagan called on the West to help Gorbachev in his efforts to introduce widespread economic and political reforms.

Reagan made the comments in discussing his reunion with Gorbachev in San Francisco last Monday.

The former president said that when Gorbachev came to power, he soon learned that the main Soviet problem was not the government's fumbling implementation of communist doctrines but the system itself.

''I think Gorbachev must continue to seize the initiative,'' he said. ''He should lead the Soviet Union and its citizens to economic and political reforms. In other words, to democracy. If he does, he will remain in power. If he doesn't, I have my doubts.''

Reagan praised Gorbachev as the first Soviet leader to discard the doctrine that the whole world must become communist and who agreed to abolish a whole category of weapons - medium-range missiles.

''Yes, we should help Gorbachev,'' he said. ''At the same time, we should not cease to urge him to make reforms that will lead to true democratization.''

The former president warned against dissolving NATO. He said the military threat has diminished but has not disappeared. The revolutionary changes in Eastern Europe, he said, easily could lead to a new, dangerous situation.

''I am convinced there will be a reduction in weapons, but the (Western) alliance must continue to exist,'' Reagan said.

ABIDJAN, IVORY COAST (JUNE 9) UPI - About 360 U.S. citizens will be flown out of war-torn Liberia Sunday to the neighboring Ivory Coast, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in the Ivorian capital said Saturday.

An Air Guinea Boeing 737 is to make three trips into Spriggs Payne airport in the Liberian capital of Monrovia, ferrying about 120 passengers at a time, according to Robert Peterson, the spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Abidjan.

If all goes according to plan, the 360 Americans will then fly Sunday night to Charleston, S.C., aboard a Lockheed L1011, he said.

On Thursday, the United States advised the estimated 3,300 Americans living in Liberia to leave the country immediately as the forces of rebel leader Charles Taylor moved to within 35 miles of Monrovia and captured Robertsfield International Airport.

Taylor, 42, launched an armed insurgency against the government of President Samuel Doe last Christmas Eve, and in 5 1/2 months of bloody civil war has fought his way to within sight of his goal of overthrowing Doe's 10-year old government.

For the past two weeks, four U.S. and two British naval vessels have cruised off the coast of the West African nation preparing for a snap evacuation of Westerners in the event of a firefight for Monrovia.

But the rebels have not moved in as fast as had been expected since taking over last week the strategic port of Buchanan, just 80 miles from Monrovia after two weeks of bloody fighting. The rebels are also in control of the vast Bridgestone/Firestone rubber factory near the capital.

The Spriggs Payne airfield from where the Americans will be evacuated Sunday is located only 5 miles from downtown Monrovia and has remained open.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Peterson said the United States had no immediate plans to evacuate more people out of the country after Sunday's three flights.

''We are not even calling this operation an evacuation,'' he said. ''Technically, it's an assisted departure.''

Peterson said he could not estimate how many of the 3,300 U.S. citizens would be left behind in Liberia after Sunday's move.

''We know that some people have taken the road up to Conakry,'' through Sierra Leone to Guinea, he said. ''Not everybody bothers to tell us if they're leaving.''

''We're not even sure who the 360 people tomorrow are going to be,'' Peterson added. ''Priority will be given to U.S. citizens and then to non-U.S. adults accompanying U.S. minors.''

The government in Monrovia, meanwhile, expressed support for a proposal by church groups Saturday for a cease-fire in the war which has so far left thousands dead and sent an estimated 350,000 Liberians fleeing for their lives into neighboring countries.

There was no immediate response from Taylor to the cease-fire call, but in the past he has single-mindedly rejected international calls for a negotiated peace settlement.

Taylor has sworn to capture Doe, for whom he worked between 1980 and 1984.

Put in charge of government acquisitions after Master Sgt. Doe took power in a short but violent 1980 coup, Taylor was accused four years later of embezzling $900,000 and fled to the United States, where he was arrested but never extradited to Liberia. He set himself up as an opposition in exile, with the sole aim of removing Doe from power.

Invading Liberia from the Ivory Coast in December with a force of only a few hundred men, Taylor quickly rallied an estimated 4,000 men under his banner, largely because government troops, under Col. Charles Julu, responded with indiscriminate shootings of civilians and burned villages in an effort to root out the rebels.

On Thursday, Doe asked President Bush to help him fend off Taylor's advance and promised to hold free elections in 1991 if he survived. He restated a claim that Taylor was backed by Libya.

Taylor spent time in Libya between 1986 and 1989, but is not thought to be directly sponsored by Libyan leader Col. Muammar Gaddhafi.

Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in 1822 and became Africa's first republic in 1847. Until 1980 it was ruled by descendants of its American founders.

PARIS (JUNE 9) UPI - Monica Seles, a 16-year-old Yugoslavian, became the youngest winner of a Grand Slam championship in 103 years Saturday when she upset Steffi Graf 7-6 (8-6), 6-4 in the French Open final.

In a scenario that is likely to haunt Graf, she gave away four set points in the opening set tie-break, and never was able to take a lead in the second set.

''If I had won the first set I would have won the match, but I didn't,'' Graf said.

This is the second year in a row the 20-year-old West German has lost the championship to a younger opponent. In 1989 Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, then 17, became the youngest French champion ever, and now Seles has replaced Sanchez-Vicario in the record book.

''I really wanted to enjoy this match,'' said Seles, a slim blonde who lives in Florida. ''I wasn't afraid at all today.''

''I love this tournament, I really wanted it and I really worked hard for it with my father, and it's just great. As the tournament started for me I didn't think I would get this far. But I felt good today.''

Asked if she felt she could overcome a 6-2 deficit in the tie-break, Seles responded, ''If I had known beforehand I never would have believed it, but I thought if she could go ahead 6-2, then I could. I played point by point and that's how it got to be.''

The victory was the 32nd in a row for Seles, and she now has beaten Graf twice in straight sets in the last three weeks, the only losses Graf has suffered since her defeat in last year's French final. When Seles won in Berlin last month, that snapped Graf's 66-match winning streak.

''I'm lacking confidence right now, not hitting the ball like I used to, making mistakes,'' Graf said. ''A little bit of something is missing.''

The men's championship is scheduled Sunday with third seed Andre Agassi playing No. 4 Andres Gomez.

The start of the women's final was delayed 25 minutes because of rain, and there was another delay of 55 minutes with Seles leading 3-1. Within minutes after the match ended, the rain fell again.

Seles trailed 5-0 and 6-2 in the opening set tie-break before winning six successive points. On her fourth set point, at 6-5, Graf committed her only double fault of the set and then she was long with a forehand.

Graf went to the net on the next point, and Seles passed her with a forehand down the line to end the set.

There were five service breaks in the first six games of the match, Seles doing the honors three consecutive times to jump to a 4-1 lead.

Graf, effectively using a drop shot during her comeback, broke at love in the sixth game and at 15 in the 10th to force the tie-break. Seles netted an easy forehand on the final point of the 10th game.

Again in the second set Seles jumped to a 3-0 lead, and once again Graf drew even, this time on the strength of a service break in the fifth game.

The two women then held serve till the 10th game, when Seles broke at 15 as Graf sent a forehand long.

''I've only lost twice to her so she's not a nightmare yet,'' Graf said of Seles. ''I hope she doesn't become one.''

MEMPHIS, TE (JUNE 9) UPI - Civil rights leader Jesse Jackson said Saturday a pattern of discrediting black elected officials is developing in the United States similar to one that drove blacks from office following Reconstruction.

''I wouldn't say it's a conspiracy, but one can at least see a pattern here. Not one of these people has been convicted, but they keep investigating,'' said Jackson at a prayer breakfast sponsored by embattled Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn.

The two-time Democratic presidential candidate centered his remarks around Ford, who is running for a ninth term but still faces political corruption charges first filed in 1987.

Ford's first trial ended April 27 in a mistrial after a jury could not reach a verdict in the case, and prosecutors say they plan to retry the case.

''Why does this Harold Ford trial take on such national importance? Because there is a sense of history, not hysteria. We remember what happened in the last century,'' he said.

''Ten years after slavery ended, the numbers of black officials were growing rapidly,'' Jackson said.

''But then the group of people who says we are only a little higher than animals and a little lower than people started their campaign to disrupt, discredit and destroy our leadership,'' he said. ''It did not take very much to re-instill fear in whites.''

Jackson listed highly publicized investigations of Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., and Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., which he said were fruitless.

''Bill Gray was just a heartbeat away from Speaker of the House at that time. Ron Dellums was the strongest advocate in Congress of reducing the military budget. Is it just Harold Ford?'' Jackson asked.

''There have been all these discrediting leaks and investigations, and not one conviction. But there has been just enough suggestion and the power of suggestion has power. The suggestion is a discrediting assumption,'' he said.

Unlike the others, Jackson noted that Ford has been indicted and tried.

''In a jury of his peers, 9 of 12 exonerated him. But losing 9-3 is not enough for the government. They say, 'He is our trophy. We cannot stop because he is our trophy,''' Jackson said in urging the government not to retry Ford.

Ford, 45, said the charges against him will not be a campaign issue in his majority black district. Ford faces his strongest opposition of several years from state Rep. Pam Gaia, who said she plans to pin her campaign on honesty.

''I've been elected once since I was charged, and I don't think it will be a campaign issue. I expect that the charges will be dropped,'' Ford said.

Ford and his lawyers filed motions this week asking that he be acquitted due to what they called a lack of evidence presented during his three-month trial. They also said that a second trial would constitute double jeopardy.

TORRANCE (JUNE 11) UPI - A Superior Court jury awarded a $5.37 million judgment Friday against Toyota Motor Corp.'s American subsidiary, saying that the design of the Japanese automaker's four-wheel drive SR5 truck was inherently unstable.

The verdict was one of the largest such penalties ever posted against the company, the Los Angeles Times reported.

Most of the jury's award was to go to Cynthia Gosper of Garden Grove, whose neck was shattered when the Toyota SR5 truck she was driving during a family vacation in Arizona rolled over after being rear-ended.

The jury concluded that there was a defect in the truck's design that caused it to topple out of control from the paved highway and that caused the driver's side door to pop open, throwing Gosper from the truck. The woman is now a quadriplegic.

''This certainly is precedent-setting. There is no doubt about that,'' Raymond P. Johnson, one of Gosper's attorney, told the Times. ''We don't know of any other similar verdict in the country.''

Attorneys for Toyota said they will appeal the decision, insisting that the four-wheel-drive truck is both stable and safe.

''The saddest part on behalf of Toyota is that we were unable to communicate adequately to the jury the utility and truly safe nature of this four-wheel-drive vehicle,'' said Toyota attorney Brian Eyres.

During the trial, Toyota argued that the force of the rear-end collision caused the roll-over and contended that rocks and vegetation could have knocked open the door latch as the truck tumbled.

Statistics from the federal Fatal Accident Reporting System for the 1984 through 1986 model years of Toyota trucks show that 30 of the truck's 35 fatal accidents involved roll-overs. Liability attorneys reached elsewhere in the nation said the Torrance verdict would spur others to file lawsuits.

''To me, that says something about the vehicle's stability,'' said car safety analyst Sam Cole.

In the Torrance case, jurors said Gosper, 35, should receive $5.27 million. The remaining $100,000 will be divided between her two children, Christine, 11, and Melissa, 9, who were riding in the camper shell and suffered cuts and bruises in the accident.

Gary Gosper, the children's father and Gosper's ex-husband, also sufferred minor injuries in the crash. Because they divorced last year, he dropped out of the suit.

The Gospers were on their way to a Grand Canyon vacation, in part to celebrate their purchase two months earlier of the 1981 Toyota SR5 truck.

As they left the town of Seligman, Ariz., shortly before daybreak April 24 1984, a 1973 Ford station wagon rear-ended their truck. The uninsured driver of the station wagon fled.

The Gospers' truck was traveling about 55 mph at the time of the collision but attorneys from both side differed on whether the station wagon was moving at 90 mph or closer to 70 mph.

After the impact, the Toyota skidded off the highway, swayed on two wheels and rolled over several times. The driver's side door popped open, throwing Cynthia Gosper from the truck. She landed on her neck, breaking it.

Jurors told the Times that they voted 11 to 1 that the truck's design was flawed, but that their vote was split on whether the defect was in the truck's stability or the door latch that opened.

''All the automobile industry should look at what is safe for the motoring public,'' said jury foreman Bob Anderson of El Segundo. ''This truck is not.'' freed 48 political prisoners Saturday in the biggest such release by his reform-oriented government.

Some 28 prisoners serving terms of up to 13 years on charges of treason, terrorism and sabotage were freed from Cape Town's Robben Island prison while 20 others were released from prisons elsewhere in the country, Prisons Service spokesman Maj. Dave Smith said.

The 28 in Cape Town included 26 members of the African National Congress and one member each of the Pan Africanist Congress and the Black Consciousness organization.

The mass release coincided with the arrival Saturday of a U.N. fact-finding mission in Cape Town for a 10-day tour arranged during talks in March between de Klerk and U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The prisoners - many expected to be released this year but at least one not due for release until 1995 - were informed of the decision Friday night at the Robben Island maximum-security prison off Cape Town while watching the World Cup soccer match between Argentina and Cameroon.

They were dropped off at the Cape Town harbor at midday Saturday and fed sandwiches and soup by supporters before appearing at a news conference.

When de Klerk announced a lifting Thursday of a 4-year-old national state of emergency, he also said 48 political prisoners would be released in advance of an agreement with the ANC on its demands that all political prisoners be freed.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Canada's unity may be assured because of a late-night agreement by the provincial leaders.

Germany's membership in NATO is a leading topic at three high-level meetings.

A Soviet airliner is hijacked to Sweden.

And, cow's blood is used to make a substitute for human blood.

U-P-I has this and other top news today.

Canadian political leaders have reached an agreement in principle on a constitutional amendment that would keep Quebec in Canada.

The agreement... announced by Prime Minister Mulroney early today in Ottawa... gives Quebec special powers to promote its French language and culture.

However, the agreement may unravel if negotiators fail to resolve roadblocks over the proposed amendment's ''distinct society clause.'' Mulroney and the leaders of Canada's 10 provinces plan to resume their talks today.

Mulroney says legal texts are still being prepared and the agreement has yet to be formally signed. Mulroney says if the agreement is finalized, it will be a ''very good development for Canada.

The leaders of the 10 Canadian provinces have been meeting all week to debate a proposed amendment that Quebec has demanded be passed before it signs the 1982 constitution. Quebec says the constitution fails to recognize the province as a French-speaking society. The province has threatened to secede over the issue.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Germany's membership in NATO... yes or NO... was the topic of debate yesterday in Washington... Moscow... and Turnberry, Scotland.

In Washington last night, President Bush and West German Chancellor Kohl discussed the prospect of a united Germany in the Western alliance... something which is opposed vehemently by the Soviet Union for security concerns.

After meeting with Kohl, Bush said progress is being made toward finding ''common ground'' with the Soviet Union on placing a unified Germany in NATO. Kohl said he believes a unified Germany will be admitted into NATO by fall.

In Moscow, Soviet President Gorbachev welcomed British Prime Minister Thatcher. She told her host that a united Germany should be a member of NATO, but sought to reassure him such a move would NOT threaten the Soviet Union.

After his meeting with Thatcher, Gorbachev said both sides should be careful that any compromise on German alliance membership would... in his words... ''strengthen positive trends in Europe and the world.''

In Scotland, NATO foreign ministers agreed to expanded force-reduction talks and other steps aimed at easing Soviet fears over NATO membership for Germany.

Police say 135 passengers and crew were aboard the Aeroflot Tupolev craft when the teen-ager hijacked it last night. The aircraft had been on a domestic flight from Minsk to Murmansk.

Stockholm police took the teen-ager into custody... and have NOT said whether he will be returned to the Soviet Union. The Soviet airliner was sent on its way to Murmansk early this morning.

Police say NO one was hurt in the hijacking. The young man told police he hijacked the plane because his parents had thrown him out of their home.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Two men are charged with assaulting Democratic Congressman Gerry Studds of Massachusetts. A spokesman for the congressman says the attack was ''one of those incomprehensible, random acts of violence.''

Secret Service men who happened to be in the area of the attack captured the two suspects, who later confessed. An arresting officer quotes one of the young men as saying ''It seemed like the thing to do at the time.'' They were charged yesterday.

53-year-old Studds was walking home in Washington Thursday night when he was knocked down and beaten by two men. Spokesman Steven Schwadron says the attack left the congressman with several facial cuts and bloody clothes.

Schwadron says it's clear the men did NOT know who Studds was and there's NO evidence the assault was motivated by any anti-gay sentiments.

In 1983, the House censured Studds because of his homosexual relationship with a teen-age page. The congressman has publicly acknowledged he is gay.

(JUNE 9) UPI - It looks as though Church Universal and Triumphant members will NOT finish and move into their nuclear fallout shelters just north of Yellowstone National Park.

The controversy follows a 31-thousand-gallon oil leak outside the church's 756-person shelter complex near Corwin Springs.

An attorney for the Upper Yellowstone Defense Fund says church members and Montana officials reached an agreement barring any occupation or further building of shelters.

Fund lawyer James Goetz says there was some discussion about what would happen in the event of a nuclear war. In his words- ''I couldN'T tell if they were serious or NOT.'' He added- ''If that happens, I suppose it's the least of our worries.''

Montana is suing the church and this agreement does NOT influence that legal action. The state wants all further construction of the shelters to be stopped until a full environmental analysis can be conducted on septic systems and other church developments.

Judge Peter Rapkoch yesterday extended a temporary restraining order halting all further shelter construction.

The restriction was ordered on April 23rd... the day church leader Elizabeth Clare Prophet predicted 12 years of global cataclysms would begin.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Researchers say cow blood may be the answer to the world's blood shortage. Researchers at a medical school in Guatemala City tested the substance on 12 healthy people and reported NO negative side effects.

The Guatemalan government released a statement at the United Nations yesterday... saying test results indicate NO kidney, respiratory, or cardiovascular problems occurred during the test program at any time.

The blood substitute is known as Hemopure. It was developed by the Biopure Corporation of Boston. Researchers say purified cow hemoglobin is chemically processed and remarkably similar to human blood.

Scientists say hemopure could be the ''Holy Grail of hematology'' because it's plentiful and free of infectious agents... such as the deadly AIDS virus. Hemopure is NOT a complete blood replacement but could be used in transfusions for victims of major accidents until their bodies can regenerate their own bodies.

Dr. Ted Jacobs of Harvard Medical School in Boston says relevant information from the first human tests is being sent to the F-D-A and other agencies.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 9) UPI - A Bush administration battle to tear down the U.S. embassy in Moscow suffered an important setback last week but State Department officials said they won't give up the fight to raze the building.

The setback came when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted down a $270 million request for funds to tear down the partially completed 11-story chancery building on the U.S. embassy grounds in Moscow.

Secretary of State James Baker had made tearing down the building, which has been planted throughout with listening devices, a priority in his frequent dealings with Congress.

After three years of study, the State Department decided the only safe way to deal with the listening devices, put into the pre-cast concrete structure by Soviet contractors, was to raze the building to ground level and start all over again with strict controls over future construction.

The Senate committee disagreed and voted $50 million for providing ''secure space'' in the embassy compound, scratching the money for tearing the present building down.

''The issue is how to get adequate, secure space in a reasonable amount of time,'' a senior State Department official said. ''That's our goal and that's why we chose the option of tearing the whole building down.''

The House Foreign Affairs committee accepted the State Department argument and voted for the $270 million to raze the building.

''We are going to stick to the House version,'' which means the issue will be fought out in a conference between the two houses of Congress, another department official said.

Under an agreement with the Soviets, the Soviets cannot occupy their new embassy building in Washington, which is ready for occupancy, until the U.S. building in Moscow is finished and approved.

The red-brick, unfinished structure in Moscow towers over the American embassy compound, with signs that extensive water damage have made it unusable and uninhabitable.

Meanwhile, the only totally secure space in the embassy compound in Moscow is a medium-sized conference room known as ''the tank'' where 12 people can sit around a conference table and converse with some assurance that they will not be overheard by Soviet intelligence.

Apart from that, U.S. officials in Moscow are told not to talk about anything classified, even obliquely, since a number of indirect references can be put together in a meaningful way by Soviet intelligence.

Directly across from the embassy is an old, and apparently abandoned Russian Orthodox church, which is believed by American security officials to be a sophisticated KGB listening post aimed at the embassy. U.S. diplomats have dubbed the building ''Our Lady of Eternal Vigilance.''

Complicating the argument about the future of the Moscow embassy office building, or chancery, is a legal question. The Soviet government, as the contractor on the chancery building, chose to insure itself in case of default on the contract.

The U.S. government claims the Soviets defaulted because they chose to pepper the pre-cast concrete with listening devices that made the building unacceptable as a diplomatic post, and therefore the Soviets are liable.

The Soviets disagree and as part of their defense they have suggested that all countries, including the United States, use such devices. The Soviets have displayed some electronic listening devices, which they claim were found in the frames of windows of their new, unoccupied embassy building in Washington.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 9) UPI - East German Defense Minister Rainer Eppelmann said Saturday East Germany will leave the Warsaw Pact the day Germany is unified.

He told the West Berlin newspaper Morgenpost that the issue was not discussed at the Warsaw Pact leaders' meeting in Moscow Thursday, but that it was tacitly agreed that unification would end East German membership in the Warsaw Pact, the Eastern counterpart to NATO.

The one-day Warsaw Pact meeting in Moscow, the first since the ouster of the hard-line communist regimes in East Germany and other countries, agreed to radical changes that ended Soviet domination of the alliance and committed it to cooperation with NATO.

A statement issued after the meeting made no mention of an East German withdrawal after unification.

But the Morgenpost quoted Epplelmann as saying, ''Nevertheless, it was tacitly agreed that on the day of the political unification of Germany, the German Democratic Republic would give notice of termination of its memebership.''

Eppelmann said all military structures of the alliance, such as the joint high command, would be abolished this year.

His statement was published as senior diplomats of the two Germanys and the four World War II victors with special rights in Germany met in East Berlin to prepare for the second meeting of their six foreign ministers. The meeting, to discuss unification and its attendant problems, will be held in East Berlin June 22.

At the first two-plus-four meeting in Bonn May 5, the Soviet Union opposed NATO membership for a united Germany. The other five nations supported it.

NATO foreign ministers, meeting in Turnberry, Scotland, agreed Friday to expanded force-reduction talks and other steps aimed at easing Soviet fears over the presence of a united Germany in the Western alliance.

NATO gave its negotiators new ''flexibility'' in the stalled conventional forces in Europe talks, and agreed to ''follow-on negotiations to further enhance security and stability in Europe'' once an initial pact is reached.

''We seek no unilateral advantage from German unity and are prepared to demonstrate this, taking into account legitimate Soviet security interests '' the 16 NATO foreign ministers said in a communique at the close of a two-day session on the Scottish seashore.

The Soviet Union has advocated a neutral Germany to avoid a drastic change in the balance of power in Europe, and even dual membership for Germany in both NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl on his return to Bonn Saturday from talks in Washington said that he and President Bush agreed ''full membership in NATO of a unified Germany is an essential factor for stability and security in Europe.''

Both agreed, he told the West German newspaper Welt am Sonntag, that the six-power talks can be ended successfully by the fall meeting of the 35-nation Conference of Security and Cooperation in Europe.''

''We are ready to take into account the security interests of the Soviet Union,'' he said.

Kohl said he and Bush agreed that at the NATO summit meeting in July the future political role of the alliance should be stressed more strongly to signal the Soviet Union that NATO and the Warsaw Pact are moving toward cooperationn in a sensible way.

The West German weekly news magazine Der Spiegel said Saturday that Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadse unofficially indicated to West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher the Soviet Union will accept German membership in a changed NATO in exchange for massive economic aid of $20 billion.

The magazine said West Germany is ready to accept the proposal and wants cooperation of the United States and the European Community in the deal.

Genscher, in an interview with West German radio, said, ''I cannot confirm such a talk.'' He added, ''We are for building new trust through economic cooperation.''

Secretary of State James Baker, who met in Copenhagen on Tuesday with Shevardnadze, said he was ''generally more positive'' that a compromise solution to the German question could be found.

Other NATO foreign ministers also voiced optimism a breakthrough was near.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Canadian political leaders have come to an agreement on a constitutional amendment that would keep Quebec as part of the nation. Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said early this morning the leaders will meet again today to hammer out the agreement's details. French-speaking Quebec wants to be recognized as a ''distinct society'' with special powers to preserve its language and culture.

President Bush said last night he'll continue to press his case for a unified Germany in NATO. The president made the comments after a working dinner meeting with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at the White House. The leaders discussed the issue of NATO membership for a united Germany and both leaders expressed optimism the Soviet Union will eventually accept the idea.

British Prime Minister Thatcher was in Moscow yesterday where she met with President Gorbachev. The focus of their talks centered on the military future of a united Germany. Thatcher told Gorbachev a unified Germany undoubtedly will be part of the Western military alliance. For his part, the Soviet leader appeared to back away from earlier statements flatly rejecting NATO membership for a united Germany.

DETROIT (JUNE 9) UPI - General Motors Corp.'s Buick Division is the only domestic carmaker rated among the top five in an annual survey of automotive quality, it was reported Saturday.

The Detroit Free Press said the soon-to-be released survey, conducted by J.D. Power & Associates, will give Toyota's Lexus Division - in its first year of existence - the highest quality rating in the study.

The survey, one in a series annually produced for the past six years, focused on car buyers' evaluations of 1990 models after the first three months of ownership.

Japanese automakers continued to dominate the top 10 spots in the study. Subaru and Mitsubishi, however, fell to the middle of the pack.

Mercedes-Benz was rated second, Toyota was third and Infiniti was fourth. Buick was fifth on the car-quality list.

Richard Thompson, a spokesman for GM's Buick-Oldsmobile-Cadillac car making group, said he hadn't seen the report, but added, ''I've heard Buick did well.'' Buick was also the highest-rated domestic division in 1989.

The next domestic division rated was Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln Division, which was 11th.

The top-rated car in the survey was Toyota's Cressida, which had an average of 63 problems per 100 cars. Mercedes-Benz' E-Series was next on the list with 71 problems. Toyota's Camry was third with 72 problems and Lexus' LS400 was fourth with 74 problems.

The Buick LeSabre was the only domestic automobile in the top 10, ranking sixth with 82 problems.

Heading the list of the worst automobiles was the Chevrolet Camaro, which had an average of 317 problems per 100 cars. The Pontiac Firebird was the runnerup with 290 problems.

Seven of the study's worst 10 cars were from domestic automakers.

J.D. Power, based in Agoura Hills, Calif., compiles the information for subscribers - mainly automakers - and releases some data to news media. That information is scheduled for release in early July.

(JUNE 9) UPI - President Bush says NATO is making progress toward finding ''common ground'' with the Soviet Union on placing a unified Germany in the Western alliance. Bush met with West German Chancellor Kohl last night at the White House.

Halfway around the world, German membership in NATO was being discussed by Soviet President Gorbachev and British Prime Minister Thatcher. Gorbachev recently has appeared to soften his opposition to Germany's NATO membership.

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (JUNE 9) UPI - Radical students said they have organized a ''death squad'' to capture U.S. Ambassador Donald Gregg when he visits the southern city of Kwangju next week, a news report said Saturday.

The domestic Yonhap News Agency said anti-American students in Kwangju, 170 miles south of the capital, accused Gregg of having represented the CIA in Korea during the 1970s and announced at a rally they had formed a ''death squad'' to capture the U.S. diplomat.

Yonhap did not elaborate.

The report could not be independently confirmed, but was apparently being taken seriously by U.S. officials.

''The U.S. Embassy is aware of the reports and has coordinated security arrangements for Gregg's trip (to Kwanju) with Korean officials,'' said one American official.

Gregg is scheduled to inaugurate a new U.S. cultural center Tuesday in Kwangju, an opposition stronghold.

Yonhap said about 300 youths held a campus rally in Kwangju Saturday and issued an anti-American proclamation, saying they would oppose the opening of the cultural center.

The students charged Gregg with orchestrating a recent merger of conservative political parties which enhanced the power of President Roh Tae-Woo and denounced Gregg for having headed the CIA in Korea during the 1970s.

In Seoul Saturday, hundreds of students staged a street battles with riot squads after police thwarted a massive anti-government rally.

About 800 youths hurled firebombs and rocks at police starting at about 5:30 p.m. and continued scattered street protests at several key downtown points of Seoul.

''Disband (the ruling) Democratic Liberal Party'' and ''Oust Roh Tae-woo '' the students chanted as they fought police who retaliated with volleys of tear gas bombs.

A dissident coalition planned to stage a large-scale rally in Seoul to mark the third anniversary of nationwide protests on June 10, 1987, which forced the now defunct ruling Democratic Justice Party to revise the constitution to provide for direct election of the President.

Authorities banned the planned rally and posted 10,000 police around major campuses and at strategic points in the city. The student protests erupted when they were blocked by police from reaching the City Hall Plaza, the proposed rally site.

At least six protesters were seen arrested on the scene and several others were hurt. There were no official reports on arrests and injuries.

BAYONNE, NJ (JUNE 9) UPI - Most New Jersey and New York ocean beaches appear to be safe from oil spilled in a tanker accident on a New York Harbor waterway, the Coast Guard said Saturday.

''After this morning's overflight of the area, we can report that there is no oil at Sandy Hook, Breezy Point or Jamaica Bay from the spill,'' Lt. Cmdr. Paul Milligan said.

Sandy Hook is the closest New Jersey ocean beach to the south of the spill site. Breezy Point and Jamaica Bay are in New York state, to the east of the spill site, beyond the point where Lower New York Bay meets the Atlantic Ocean.

Milligan said that there were only scattered sightings of free-floating tar balls off Norton's Point at the bottom of the bay near Coney Island in Brooklyn.

''When we say that oil has been sighted there, we are saying tar balls, grapefruit-sized lumps, not large quantities of oil,'' he said.

Milligan said it was possible that the oil could have come from earlier spills, not from Thursday's incident in the Kill Van Kull, a channel separating Staten Island and New Jersey.

''There has been no fingerprinting of this oil to identify those tar balls as coming from this latest spill. You can have old or different oil coming into the area,'' the Coast Guard spokesman said. ''But when people see tar balls, there is a tendency to say, 'Oh, that's from the latest spill,' and it may not be.''

More than 260,000 gallons of home heating oil was spilled by the British tanker BT Nautilus after it ran aground in the waterway early Thursday. Small amounts washed ashore at Midland Beach on Staten Island Friday and Saturday.

But Milligan said most of the heavy oil was contained in the Kill Van Kull by booms. About 100 Coast Guard personnel and almost 200 private workers were gathering the gloppy mess into bags Saturday.

The first mate of the BT Nautilus has been cleared of causing the ship to run aground, Milligan said.

Geoffrey Gregory, 52, of Merskey, England, was arrested by New Jersey authorities after the accident.

Gregory, who allegedly failed a test for drugs and alcohol after the accident, was freed on $5,000 cash bail after a court appearance Thursday night. He was charged with operating a vessel while under the influence of alcohol and illegal discharge of pollutants into a waterway.

Miller said a preliminary investigation found that the ship's captain and a registered pilot were in command of the tanker and guiding it towards a Newark unloading terminal when it ran aground.

A five-person Coast Guard board will launch an inquiry Monday into the series of accidents which have spilled more than 1 million gallons of oil into the waterways separating New Jersey and Staten Island this year.

Thursday's accident was the third major spill in the area since New Year's Day, when 500,000 gallons of oil leaked from an Exxon pipeline between Linden and Bayonne. Two smaller accidents also caused significant spills.

Milligan said that no wildlife kills have been reported from the latest spill and that the waterway could be reopened to commercial traffic as soon as Sunday.

A group of New Jersey state senators are sponsoring legislation to toughen New Jersey's oil spill penalties.

The bill, which would set fines up to $10 million for major spills, is scheduled for a vote before the full Senate Monday.

The $10 million fine would apply to spills of 100,000 gallons or more. Existing law sets a maximum $1 million fine for water pollution.

Related bills scheduled for a vote Monday would require routine use of oil containment booms when oil is transferred from ships to shore terminals, and an inventory of pipelines that carry oil and other hazardous materials to and from storage and refinery facilities.

An assessment of safety procedures at New Jersey's oil-handling facilities would also be required.

(JUNE 9) UPI - The Coast Guard says an oil tanker continues to burn after exploding earlier this morning in the Gulf of Mexico, 65 miles southeast of Galveston, Texas. Officials say two men aboard the one-thousand-foot ship died and two others are missing. Officials say it doesN'T appear the loaded Norwegian tanker has NOT leaked any of its cargo oil.

The Coast Guard says it will take a closer look at the crowded New Jersey waterway- the site of a 260-thousand-gallon oil spill Thursday. The Kill Van Kull, between Bayonne, New Jersey and New York's Staten Island, is closed to regular ship traffic. Crews are still trying to clean up the oil-soaked sand.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (JUNE 9) UPI - Romania's freely elected Parliament met Saturday for the first time in 40 years in a session interrupted by an anti-government demonstration that kept angry lawmakers from their television sets as Romania met the Soviet Union in its opening World Cup match.

The noisy protest came just after senators and deputies took a recess to watch the soccer match on television in Omnia Hall, a cornerstone of last December's revolution.

''Hurry up!'' shouted one lawmaker as some 500 demonstrators staged the protest at the cobblestone foot of Metropole Hill outside the Parliament building. ''We want to get back to the match.''

He was met with cheers and a round of applause.

Romania knocked off the Soviet Union 2-0 in Bari, Italy.

The demonstration was directed against President Ion Iliescu for belonging to two political parties simultaneously - the caretaker National Salvation Front, which has two-thirds of the seats in the new Parliament, and the banned Communist Party.

The protesters waved banners calling Iliescu a criminal, but many passers-by booed and jeered the marchers, members of the opposition ''People's Alliance'' and ''Dec. 16-21 Alliance.'' They blocked access roads to the Parliament building, calling for a new revolution and urging the military to join it.

New government posts are to be announced Tuesday when ministers assemble for the first time.

Bucharest Mayor Dan Predescu arrived on the spot but failed to set up a dialogue with the demonstrators. Troops and police cordoned off the area around Parliament but no altercations were reported.

Both senators and deputies used their historic first vote to disband within 10 minutes, so a commission of representatives could be elected to validate the elected members. One observer remarked that this was in keeping with a well-known Romanian saying, ''Work begins with a recess.''

The presidents of both chambers were then chosen. Both were the oldest members present.

Parliament was elected May 20 after a controversial campaign characterized by a monthlong anti-communist demonstration at University Square in the center of Bucharest and criticism from foreign observers. Saturday's march originated at the square.

The Assembly of Deputies consists of 396 members and is dominated by the NSF, the party that assumed power after the violent revolution in which former dictator Nicolae Ceausescu was overthrown and summarily executed.

The new president of the deputies, 80-year-old Radu Rene Policrat, made an emotional half-hour speech Saturday referring to the ''historic moment'' of the opening of Parliament as a ''national awakening'' after 40 years of darkness.

He was flanked by the four youngest deputies (the youngest is 26) in the grandiose assembly hall, formerly the meeting place for official Communist Party functions. He told members, ''We are free again, we are masters of our own destiny''.

He warned the deputies when they drew up the constitution as their first task, they should steer clear of both despotism and the dangers of too much power, too much freedom and possible anarchy.

The historic assembly was watched from the balconies by interim government officials including the defense, interior, foreign office and privatization ministers.

Petre Roman, officially announced Friday as the new prime minister and who had just returned from watching the opening World Cup soccer match in Italy, was also present.

Senate President Cezar Buda reminded the 115 Upper House members of the need for a strong opposition to ''ensure democracy'' and stressed their responsibility to check the government in the period before the next elections in 1992.

Omnia Hall is situated behind the old Communist Party Central Committee building in Palace Square from which Ceausescu was forced to flee by helicopter during a pro-democracy demonstration in December.

The square in front of the builidng, the scene of the subsequent attack on demonstrators by the military, was gleaming Saturday with row upon row of chauffeur-driven cars belonging to diplomats and high ranking clergy invited to attend the opening of the Senate.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Two people are dead and two are missing southeast of Galveston, Texas, this morning. They were aboard a one-thousand foot tanker that exploded 65 miles offshore in the Gulf of Mexico. The Coast Guard says the cargo of crude oil has NOT been affected by the blast. It says a slick around the burning ship is believed to be fuel used to propel the ship- NOT its fuel cargo. The vessel reportedly is burning out of control.

The weather word is rain from the central Plains to the East Coast today. Forecasters say a band of thunderstorms stretches across parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri. They say more thunderstorms hit Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia and an area including Pennsylvania, New York,

New Jersey and Deleware. Flash flood watches were posted for streams in western Pennsylvania and the West Virginia Panhandle.

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 9) UPI - An explosion ripped through a Norwegian tanker Saturday, killing two people, leaving two missing, injuring 17 others and starting a raging fire that threatened to sink the 1,000-foot vessel and its cargo of 800,000 barrels of crude oil.

The burning tanker, Mega Borg, was riding at anchor about 57 miles southeast of Galveston, surrounded by Coast Guard firefighting equipment and private vessels that helped in rescuing crewmen from the ship after the first explosion was reported at 1 a.m. CDT.

Two crewmen were missing. No Americans were aboard.

Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene said the fire raged out of control, and had totally engulfed the aft 200 feet of the ship, including the superstructure that holds the pilot room above deck and the engine room below. An estimated 7,000 gallons of crude oil and a sheen of fuel oil had leaked into the Gulf of Mexico.

''It is a heck of a fire,'' said Lt. Robert Randolph, who piloted a medical evacuation helicopter over the vessel within an hour of the initial explosion.

At midday Saturday, Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Thomas Leveille said firefighters - held back from the rear of the ship by heat and burning oil in the water - switched their priorities to cooling and protecting the 33 million gallons of crude oil aboard.

Leveille said they hoped to contain the fire aft until more firefighting equipment could arrive from shore by Saturday night. Once more equipment was on the scene, he said, they were to focus on trying to extinguish the blaze.

Leveille said the oil in tanks adjacent to the aft superstructure would help the effort by absorbing heat away from the steel bulkhead, keeping the bulkhead cooler and delaying any structural failure.

The initial explosion occurred as the ship's cargo of oil was being pumped into a smaller tanker to be brought into port. Some oil spilled when the hoses between the two ships broke, Greene said.

''The size of the (Mega Borg) precluded it from coming into shore. It's larger than our ship channel can handle,'' he said.

The Mega Borg had arrived in the southeast Texas area from Palance, Angola and its next port of call was to have been Aruba. The vessel's agent is Biehl and Co. of Galveston. The captain and first mate, who were not identified, were aboard the Coast Guard cutter Cushing standing off from the tanker.

Two crewmen were known dead on the ship and two others were missing. Thirty-six crewmen were transferred to nearby ships or boats in the darkness and were taken by supply boat to Brazosport Memorial Hospital in Lake Jackson, Texas. Lake Jackson is located about 50 miles southwest of Galveston at the mouth of the Brazos River.

A hospital spokesman said 17 crewmen were treated at the hospital. Fifteen were released after treatment, and went to a local hotel, and two were admitted. The treatment process was going slowly because none of the crewmen spoke English, and so interpreters from the hospital's staff had to help.

Of the two admitted, Melicio Decanaey, 29, of Manila, had a cut tendon in his left wrist and P.P. Mahamood, 43, believed to be from India, suffered a bruised hip, thigh and calf.

One crewmen, John Estibeiro, 25, an engine fitter from Bombay, India, interviewed at the hospital, said he was smoking a cigarette by his bunk and about to go to sleep when he felt the vibrating explosion.

''It was just like an explosion,'' he said. ''And then I came to the reality that I had to run for my life. It was all very dark. Lights fell down on the floor from the vibration. We are lucky we were close by the shore and we had some help.''

Ravishanker Nayamtally, 43, of India, the ship's second engineer, said he was asleep.

''I didn't hear anything or see any flames,'' he said. ''All I saw was smoke. Everyone was in shock. I'm lucky that I managed to come off the ship.''

He said most of the crew members from from India or the Phillippines.

Greene said he feared the blaze would cause ''structural failure'' to the cargo tank, threatening to discharge 800,000 barrels of crude oil aboard the ship that would fuel the fire and create an oil spill of giant proportions.

Greene said Coast Guard officials were assessing damage to the ship from a videotape that was taken by a helicopter crew.

The firefighting vessel Carolyn Chouest and Coast Guard cutter Buttonwood were at the scene and more vessels, including salvage vessels, were steaming toward it.

OMAHA, NE (JUNE 9) UPI - Freshman Stan Payne and Dave Fleming combined on a five-hitter and Bruce Chick and Jeff Cooper knocked in runs Saturday, delivering the Georgia Bulldogs their first NCAA baseball title with a 2-1 decision over the Oklahoma State Cowboys.

Georgia, 52-19, is the first Southeastern Conference team to win the College World Series, after one-run losses by Alabama in 1983 and Tennessee in 1951. The Bulldogs' only other CWS appearance resulted in a two-game-and-out stopover in 1987.

Oklahoma State, which won the title in 1959, became the first team to lose five championship games. The Cowboys, 56-17, dropped finales in 1961, 1966 1981, 1987 and 1990. The last three have come under Coach Gary Ward.

Payne, making his CWS debut in the title game, gave up four hits while lasting one batter into the seventh inning. He struck out six and walked three. Fleming struck out the side in the ninth for his second save of the year. Oklahoma State starter Dennis Burbank, 10-2, took the loss.

The Cowboys entered the title game hitting a record-pace .390 in the CWS but managed just one hit - a squibber down the third-base line that died in the infield grass - over the first five innings against Payne.

The Georgia left-hander lost his bid to become the third pitcher to post a complete-game shutout in the CWS final game in the sixth inning. Mitchel Simons singled and one out later, took third on a hit by Brad Beanblossom. Michael Daniel got the run in with a sacrifice fly.

Brian Kelly led off the Oklahoma State seventh with a double and Fleming was brought in. Kelly took third on a groundout and tried to score on a grounder to short but was cut down at the plate as catcher Terry Childers held on to the ball despite a hard rolling slide by Kelly.

Oklahoma State was in position to tie the score in the eighth after Simons singled and went to second on a sacrifice. Beanblossom was walked but the Bulldogs turned their third double play of the game when Daniel grounded to short and second baseman Joey Alfonso made a snappy turn to nip the diving Daniel at first.

Georgia broke a scoreless tie in the fourth. Cooper led off with a walk and went to third on J.R. Showalter's single ahead of Chick's sacrifice fly.

Childers opened the fifth with a single and advanced to third on McKay

Smith's double. Cooper singled in the run for a 2-0 lead.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 10) UPI - Kerry Kennedy, daughter of the late Robert F. Kennedy, and Andrew Cuomo, son of New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, were married Saturday in a private ceremony that united two of the nation's best-known political families.

Some 300 family members and friends attended the ceremony at St. Matthew's Cathedral, which began at 1:30 p.m. EDT on a typically hot and humid June day in Washington. A longtime Kennedy family friend, the Rev. Gerard Creedon, celebrated the wedding mass.

The bride, 30, is one of 11 children of Ethel Kennedy and the late senator. She was 8 in 1968 when her father was assassinated in a Los Angeles hotel shortly after winning the Democratic California presidential primary.

Many of her siblings attended the bride, including youngest sister, Rory, 21, who served as maid of honor. Also serving as maid of honor was friend Mary Richardson, 30.

Kerry Kennedy is executive director of the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Center for Human Rights in New York.

The groom, 32, is a son of the Democratic New York governor and his wife, Matilda. Andrew Cuomo is president of HELP, a New York-based firm that provides low-income housing.

The groom's younger brother Christopher, 19, served as best man.

Dozens of reporters, photographers and onlookers waited outside the church for the arrival of members of the Kennedy and Cuomo clans, as well as the rich and famous who attended the ceremony.

Among the guests were New York Mayor David Dinkins, talk show host Larry King, arts administrator Kitty Carlisle Hart, and columnists Art Buchwald and Jimmy Breslin.

The bride arrived at the church with her mother, while the groom apparently slipped into the church through a side door.

After the ceremony, the couple left the church - without being doused by ceremonial rice - and waved briefly at the crowd before leaving for a private reception at Ethel Kennedy's home in nearby McLean, Va.

Serving as bridesmaids for the ceremony were sisters Courtney Kennedy and Kethleen Kennedy Townsend, and sisters-in-law Emily Kennedy (Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy Jr.), Sheila Berner Kennedy (Mrs. Christopher Kennedy) and Vicki Gifford Kennedy (Mrs. Michael Kennedy).

Also serving as bridesmaids were friends Paula Aylward, Maryam Elahi and Karen Russell, cousins Kara Kennedy and Victoria Lawford Pender, and Andrew Cuomo's sisters Maria Cuomo Cole, Madeline Cuomo and Dr. Margaret Cuomo Perpignano.

Serving as ushers were Andrew Cuomo's brothers-in-law Kenneth Cole and Robert Perpignano, friends Hap Hairston, Michael McAlary, Jeffrey Sachs and Avery Seavy as well as a host of Kennedys, including John F. Kennedy Jr., and the bride's brothers Christopher, Douglas, Max, Michael, Robert, and Joseph P. Kennedy II, and her brother-in-law David Townsend.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, lisianthus, stephinotis, gardenias, sweet peas and bouvardia. She was wearing a gown of silk satin that was ornamented with crystals, silver bugle beads and hearts of pearls that was designed by Scaasi Bride for Eva Forsyth.

NEW YORK (JUNE 9) UPI - Mayor David Dinkins stood by his warning to Jewish groups Saturday against protests of Nelson Mandela during the anti-apartheid leader's visit this month, a spokesman said.

Dinkins has termed any anti-Mandela protests during the New York visit ''unwise'' and potentially harmful to black-Jewish relations, said Albert Scardino, the mayor's spokesman.

Jewish leaders have threatened to demonstrate against Mandela for what they call his pro-Palestinian and anti-Israel stance.

''I think that it's sad and unfortunate and tactically very, very unwise because the man is an international symbol of freedom and especially so seen by persons of color,'' Dinkins said, referring to the protests, in an interview with the New York Daily News.

A ticker-tape parade is planned for Mandela when he arrives in New York June 20 during his six-week world tour.

Dinkins is hoping that the African National Congress leader will use his three-day New York stay to clarify his position on Israel as well as on the Palestine Liberation Organization and Libya, both financial backers of the ANC, Scardino said.

''Everyone is looking forward to the opportunity to give him a platform to express (his views) more fully,'' Scardino said.

Mandela evokes deep emotion among his supporters, including the city's first black mayor. Dinkins keeps a framed photograph of the activist, freed after 27 years in prison, in his office.

''Because of the role Mandela plays within the minds of many African-Americans and many people worldwide fighting for peace and justice he is an internationial hero. If you attack him you end up attacking the people who support him and are sympathetic with his aims,'' Scardino said.

''It's not a good idea to antagonize people who have been your political allies for many generations,'' the mayoral spokesman warned.

Jewish activists and leaders are split over the Mandela issue. There are divisions even among those critical of his Middle East connections, with some planning demonstrations, some simply stating their views and others angry that a delegation of American Jewish leaders is now in Geneva, Switzerland, for a Sunday meeting with Mandela.

Among the more militant factions, the Jewish Defense League criticized the Dinkins warning as ''chutzpah'' and vowed to protest Mandela throughout his eight-city U.S. tour.

''He is a major disaster for black people. He will prove a major disaster for David Dinkins,'' said JDL National Chairman Irv Rubin, speaking from Los Angeles.

A spokesman for a mainstream international Jewish organization, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the JDL viewpoint did not represent the Jewish community and added, ''By and large (the largest Jewish groups) agree that there should not be demonstrations against Mandela.''

LINCOLN, NE (JUNE 9) UPI - A federal Food and Drug Administration investigator was trying to pinpoint Saturday the source of contamination in a solution that infected eight heart bypass patients, two of whom died.

The patients at Bryan Memorial Hospital are believed to have been infected by a contaminated batch of glutamate-aspartate, used in a solution to paralyze the heart during open-heart surgery.

One of the patients died Wednesday and the other on Thursday, said Sue Frye, the hospital's vice president for corporate development. The hospital refused to identify the patients.

Two of the remaining six infected patients were in the hospital's intensive care unit Saturday. All six were listed in stable condition and were under close observation.

Frye said the hospital also is asking the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta to help determine how the solution became contaminated with a bacteria called enterobacter cloacae. The bacteria is commonly found in the bowel and can be found in water and dirt.

The request for CDC help will be forwarded Monday by the state Department of Health, said Christine Newlon, director of the state Disease Control Division.

The investigation could take weeks or months to complete, but a preliminary report should be ready in the coming week, said Dr. Richard Morin, an infectious disease specialist in Lincoln hired by the hospital as a consultant.

Investigators will look at how the commercially prepared glutamate-aspartate powder was mixed, sterilized and stored in the hospital, Morin said.

Investigators have not eliminated the possibility that the contamination was deliberate, Morin said. But circumstances point to some other cause, he said.

No possibility has been ruled out, he said. But the sterile water mixed with the powder probably was not the source, because it has been used in other areas of the hospital without problem, he said.

One clue may be that some bottles of the solution were contaminated and others not, even though they were part of the same batch, Morin said.

The glutamate-aspartate powder is a product of Ajinomoto USA Inc. of Teaneck, N.J., a U.S. subsidiary of a Japanese company, Frye said. It has been approved by the FDA.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Officials at Andrews Air Force Base say tests performed on former American hostage Frank Reed when he returned to the United States from Lebanon revealed he had arsenic in his system. The 54-year-old educator spent 44 months in captivity in Lebanon. Officials refused to comment on how or when Reed ingested the poisonous substance.

Swedish authorities say a despondent Russian teen-ager hijacked a Soviet airliner to Stockholm by brandishing a fake hand grenade and threatening to blow up the aircraft. The 17-year-old reportedly told police that he commandeered the Aeroflot plane with 135 people aboard because his parents kicked him out of the house.

(JUNE 9) UPI - East Germany says it will leave the Warsaw Pact on the day Germany is unified. Defense Minister Rainer Eppelmann told a West Berlin newspaper that Warsaw Pact leaders meeting in Moscow on Thursday tacitly agreed that unification would end East German membership in the Warsaw Pact. Eppelmann said all military structures of the alliance such as the joint high command would be abolished this year.

Canada's political leaders are hoping today to sign a constitutional amendment that would keep Quebec part of Canada. The province had threatened to secede from Canada unless the amendment was approved.

An anti-government demonstration in Romania marred today's meeting of the country's new free Parliament. The noisy protest came as the parliament met for the first time in 40 years... and kept angry lawmakers from watching as Romania beat the Soviet Union, 2-0, in its opening World Cup soccer match. One lawmaker shouted at the 500 demonstrators- ''Hurry up! We want to get back to the match.'' He was met with cheers and a round of applause.

National Guard troops have been sent to the area and emergency crews are placing sandbags along the wall.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Crucial talks to keep Quebec in Canada may have collapsed... East Germany says it will quit the Warsaw Pact... Coast Guard firefighters battling a deadly tanker fire off Texas... And tests show former U-S hostage Frank Reed may have been poisoned... These top stories and more, next, from U-P-I.

A tentative agreement aimed at keeping Quebec in Canada unraveled today when two Canadian provincial leaders refused to accept the accord and walked out of talks in Ottawa.

Newfoundland Premier Clyde Wells said- quoting now- ''Obviously the document presented last night was NOT acceptable.'' Wells and Manitoba province leader Gary Filmon left the Ottawa meeting after four hours of talks today. Wells says they will return later to see how Prime Minister Brian Mulroney will deal with the situation.

The agreement was reached in principle last night on a constitutional amendment that would give Quebec special powers to promote its French language and culture. Quebec has threatened to secede unless the Meech Lake Accord is approved.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Frank Reed may have been poisoned during his 44 months in captivity in Lebanon.

Doctors at Andrews Air Force base say tests performed on the former American hostage at the time of his return to the United States revealed arsenic in his system.

Officials are NOT saying how or when Reed ingested the poison... and Reed himself doesn't even know.

An attorney for the 57-year-old educator says Reed has known about the arsenic for ''some weeks'' but chose NOT to release the news while undergoing treatment for serious side effects.

Now, the former American hostage is concerned that captors may be poisoning other hostages still held in Lebanon.

Reed has been recuperating at the Malcolm Grow Medical Center on the base since his return to the United States two months ago. He underwent a battery of tests as part of a standard procedure for former prisoners.

Palestinian leaders say they are worried that Israel's new right-wing government may stymie the peace process and trigger a new cycle of violence.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir yesterday ended Israel's political crisis by forging a new coalition government that is one of the most conservative in the nation's history.

And although Shamir has pledged what he called ''progress toward peace,'' Palestinians have their doubts. They say Shamir's peace plan falls far short of the Palestinian prescription for peace.

The Israeli initiative includes a plan for elections in the occupied territories of Palestinian representatives to negotiate with Israel on limited autonomy.

Palestinians seek an independent state in the occupied areas and want Israel to negotiate with the P-L-O, which Shamir has steadfastly refused to do.

The renewed concern comes as Palestinians throughout East Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza Strip today observe a general strike to mark the start of the 31st month of their uprising against the Israeli occupation.

MEXICO CITY, MEXICO (JUNE 11) UPI - Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani called on the Mexican government Saturday to use its influence to persuade Cuban leader Fidel Castro to cooperate in bringing peace to El Salvador.

''Cuba is directly involved in the regional and local conflict and though we have seen some positive change in their attitude ... Mexico could serve as a channel for communication with Cuba in the peace process,'' Cristiani told reporters, winding up his three-day official visit to Mexico.

Cristiani's visit to Mexico represents a renewed warming of relations between the two countries, particularly economically. Out of it has come renegotiation of the $32 million oil debt owed to Mexico and an increase in El Salvador's oil quota from 8,000 barrels to 12,000 barrels a day.

The trip was the first official visit of a Salvadoran president to Mexico since the decade-old civil war erupted in El Salvador. In 1981, Mexico recognized the leftist rebels in El Salvador as a ''belligerent force'' and a valid social movement, causing friction between the two governments and a cooling in relations.

Emilio Lopez Bassols, the Mexican ambassador to El Salvador, told United Press International that Cristiani brought up the issue of Cuba during private talks, but Mexico has not yet responded.

On Thursday, Salinas said Mexico would support El Salvador in all peace efforts because, ''El Salvador deserves peace.''

Cristiani also said that if an agreement could be reached to end the 10 years of violence in his country, ''we would ask the United States to convert military support into social and economic aid.''

He said his government receives $300 million dollars a year from the United States, of which $80 million goes to military spending.

Congress, however, threatened to cut off military aid to El Salvador in response to the Nov. 16 slaying of six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her teenage daughter allegedly by army officers.

Cristiani said they will solve the Jesuit case, but that he could not comment on whether chief army officials were involved in the killings for fear of disrupting ongoing investigations.

He added that El Salvador's justice system is, ''not a model, but neither is it as bad is many say it is.'' El Salvador uses the Napoleonic Code as a basis for its justice system.

Cristiani defended the army, saying both the government and the armed forces, composed of 54,000 soldiers, support the peace process.

''Definitively ... once the cause (the war) disappears, there will be a reduction in the army,'' he said.

Cristiani said the civil war, which has claimed more than 72,000 lives, mostly civilians, has also caused $4 billion worth of losses. El Salvador's economy produces less than $5 billion a year.

''Not everything has been destroyed,'' Cristiani said, offering an optimistic view of his country's economy.

He added that there are greater levels of confidence since he assumed power just over a year ago and that there has been a rise in the production of coffee and sugar cane.

(JUNE 9) UPI - The party that led the Czechoslovakian revolution last fall is well on its way to winning a major victory today in the country's first free elections in 44 years.

That, at least, is what one West German poll projects.

Exit polls of 12-thousand voters show Civic Forum and its sister party in Slovakia will capture 52 percent of the seats in the 300-seat Federal Assembly... which consists of the House of the People and the House of Nations.

The projections indicate surprising gains for both the Forum and the Public Against Violence parties, as last week public opinion surveys reflected withering support for the groups.

If the margin of victory pans out, Civic Forum does NOT necessarily have to seek a coalition government with Christian Democrats.

Official results aren't due out until tomorrow, but the polling firm is the same one that predicted the results of the East German elections with pin-point accuracy.

Anti-government protesters in Bucharest today interrupted Romania's first free parliamentary session in 40 years.

The protest came as lawmakers broke to watch a televised World Cup soccer match between Romania and the Soviet Union.

Some 500 demonstrators staged the march to protest President Ion Iliescu's

But their ill-timed arrival on the steps of parliament came just after senators and deputies used their historic first vote to adjourn the meeting in order to watch the soccer match in nearby Omnia Hall... a cornerstone of last December's revolution.

One observer says the vote to watch the match was in keeping with an old Romanian saying... ''Work begins with a recess.''

Romania, by the way, beat the favored Soviets, 2-0.

KALAPANA, Hawaii (JUNE 10) UPI - Lava boiling out of Kilauea volcano destroyed two more buildings Saturday and threatened to claim the last home standing in a village wiped out by the mountain that began erupting seven years ago.

The molten rock spilling over the Kalapana Gardens housing area and Kalapana village destroyed a large canoe halau, or boathouse, at 7 a.m., civil defense spokesman Lanny Nakano said.

Four hours later, lava totaled one of the few remaining homes in Kalapana Gardens, he said.

The fresh damage brought to 165 the number of homes and other structures devastated since Jan. 3, 1983, when the volcano began its latest eruption of the century.

The last home in the village was in imminent danger as lava flowed just yards away, and Nakano said it could be destroyed by the close of the weekend. One flow came within 7 feet of the home before stagnating, Nakano said.

The Kalapana area once thrived, but as of Saturday night 18 homes remained: the one in the village, nine in the old homestead area, and eight in Kalapana Gardens, Nakano said.

Lava poured into the ocean near the canoe landing site, sending up billowing clouds of steam containing hazardous chemicals such as hydrochloric acid and volcanic particles. The ''laze,'' or lava haze, was blown to sea by strong trade winds.

At the volcano's vent 7 miles upslope, production of the 2,000-degree lava remained steady as an estimated 650,000 cubic yards of molten rock per day poured from the simmering mountain's maw.

Kilauea has turned Kalapana into a ghost town, as it did in earlier years to the communities of Royal Gardens and Kapa'ahu. Those living in 16 homes in the community of Kaimu a mile to the east have been placed on standby alert.

The communities ravaged by the volcano during its seven-year-long eruption have been declared national disaster areas, and a federal disaster field office remains open in the nearby town of Pahoa.

Authorities have received 185 applications for help since the disaster relief effort began May 23, coordinator Frank Kishton said. Damage from the long eruption has been estimated at $61 million.

''Inordinate'' levels of arsenic found in former hostage Frank Reed...

And, talks aimed at keeping Quebec from seceding from Canada break down...

These stories... and more... next, from United Press International:

A raging fire continues to burn out of control on a Norwegian tanker in the Gulf of Mexico, following explosions early today that left two people dead and two others missing.

Firefighting boats are at the scene about 57 miles southeast of Galveston, Texas... and officials tonight ordered water sprayed on the Mega Borg tanker to keep it cool so the hull WON'T warp. Crews are waiting for special equipment needed to help battle the blaze.

Coast Guard Captain Thomas Greene says he's concerned the fire might cause ''structural failure'' to the cargo tank and result in a spill of all 38-Million gallons of oil aboard the ship.

An estimated seven-thousand gallons of crude leaked into the Gulf following the first explosion, which came early this morning. Two more blasts occurred this afternoon, spilling more oil.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Frank Reed may have been poisoned during his 44 months of captivity in Lebanon.

Officials at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, D-C, made public today what they have known since Reed's release six weeks ago- that he is suffering from arsenic poisoning. Doctors discovered the unusually high levels of the substance during standard procedural tests following Reed's return to the United States. Since then, they've managed to treat the serious side effects of the poison and reduce it to non-toxic levels.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Liberian government troops and rebels may NOT have to square off in a final showdown in the nation's crumbling capitol of Monrovia.

Rebels have agreed to peace talks with besieged President Samuel Doe.

Negotiators have yet to iron out details of the talks... but they will be mediated by the Liberian Council of Churches and will probably take place in the neighboring nation of Sierra Leone.

The agreement to negotiate is a surprise as both sides have steadfastly vowed to fight until the bitter end.

As many as one-thousand people have been killed since rebel leader Charles Taylor began his effort to oust Doe six months ago. The fighting has been particularly brutal in recent days.

This past week alone, more than 100 people were killed in Bucahanan as rebels took control of the port city, the nation's second-largest town.

Bodies littered the streets, dogs roamed the rubble and rebel troops looted abandoned shops.

And while the fighting appears to have subsided for now, the U-S Embassy is still planning to airlift some 360 Americans to safety tomorrow.

NO one can say Frank Davis is without talent.

Davis today rocketed a watermelon seed 32 feet to become Missouri's watermelon seed-spitting champion. His wind-aided burst captured the teen competition and beat the adults' best mark by seven feet.

The state's Watermelon Association sponsors the annual St. Louis contest.

The best effort of the six division winners came from St. Louis Deputy Mayor Jack Keane, winner of the Second Year Trophy.

A contest spokesman says Keane spit the seed 23 feet with- quote- ''practically a broken jaw'' from a recent car accident.

The annual state-wide contest has only a couple of rules. First, contestants canNOT use any artificial means to help propel the seed. Second... if a spitter has false teeth and the false teeth go farther than the watermelon seed, then judges tabulate the teeth in the score.

(JUNE 9) UPI - Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro today declared her dream of a war-free Nicaragua has become reality. At a jungle ceremony which attracted more than one-thousand Contra rebels who have laid down their arms, Chamorro added that an end to the nine-year civil war will allow her administration to reactivate the Central American nation's beleaguered economy. The rebels had agreed to disarm by tomorrow, but several thousand rebels have yet to demobilize.

Thunderstorms dumped heavy rain in parts of the eastern half of the nation today, particularly in Ohio. The rains swelled Buckeye Lake in central Ohio, and for a time authorities feared a leaking dam might collapse. The lake's floodgates were opened, which saved the dam. But the water that was released flooded Interstate 70... forcing partial closure of 11 miles of the road. Heavy rain and scattered flooding were also reported in five other states.

MADRID (JUNE 10) - Cocaine seized by Spanish police last week was to be shipped to Italy to supply football fans attending the World Cup, press reports said here Sunday.

Police arrested an Italian, Daniel Lodovitchetti, and two Colombians, Federico Sarmientos Carbonell and Carlos Julio Velasco, and confiscated 90 kilograms (198 pounds) of cocaine in what it said was one of the biggest cocaine hauls here Friday.

The El Pais newspaper said police noticed a considerable rise in cocaine shipments to Italy that was "very certainly linked to the World Cup".

The drug was to be shipped to Italy by plane, according to the daily El Sol.

Police suspect the three dealers to be members of an international drug smuggling ring.

LIMA (JUNE 10) - Soldiers and police patrolled the streets of Lima Sunday as Peruvians went to the polls in a runoff presidential election pitting novelist Mario Vargas Llosa against political newcomer Alberto Fujimori.

Polls opened at 9:00 a.m. (1300 GMT) for the estimated 10 million registered voters to cast ballots, and are scheduled to remain open seven hours.

Voting is mandatory in this South American nation of around 22 million people.

The rebel organization Shining Path, which claims allegiance to Maoist ideology, has called "armed strikes" in several cities in a bid to force a boycott of the elections, threatening to kill those who vote.

Scores of Limenos, as residents of the capital call themselves, walked to voting centers as the election got under way, with thousands of police and soldiers keeping watch to prevent rebel attacks.

Parts of the capital suffered blackouts late Saturday as electrical pylons were dynamited in attacks blamed on Shining Path.

The candidates go into the voting in a virtual dead heat, according to recent polls and political observers.

Mr. Vargas Llosa drew the most votes in first-round voting April 8, followed by Mr. Fujimori, who had soared from relative obscurity to political celebrity in the final weeks of the campaign.

Mr. Vargas Llosa, a 54-year-old champion of free-market economics, advocates draconian measures to heal Peru's inflation-battered economy.

Mr. Fujimori, the 51-year-old son of Japanese immigrants and a former univeristy dean, favors a more gradual approach to economic reform.

Outgoing President Alan Garcia was barred from running for re-election.

GENEVA (JUNE 10) - South African black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela had a meeting of two and a half hours here Sunday with American Jewish leaders and told them he recognised Israel and would like to go there, they said.

The Jewish delegation was led by Henry Siegman, executive director of the American Jewish Congress who described the meeting with Mr. Mandela as "an extraordinary encounter".

"He was extraordinarily forthcoming," Mr. Siegman said.

He said the deputy president of the African National Congress had "reiterated its rejection of all forms of anti-semitism" and had "expressed his regrets of the misinterpretation of his recent comments in Lusaka" where he compared the ANC's struggle against apartheid with that of the Palestinians against Israel.

"He recognised the right of Israel to exist in secure borders ....

expressed an interest to visit Israel personally and would accept an invitation."

Mr. Siegman said Mr. Mandela held such historic Israeli figures as Golda Meir and David Ben Gurion "in high esteem", notably Mrs. Meir who had spoken "high and loud" against apartheid.

Mr. Mandela "criticised the government of Israel on how it deals with the Intifada (the Palestinian revolt in the occupied territories)" and "expressed concern about the emerging racism and anti-semitism in part of the world, specially profanation of Jewish cemeteries in Western Europe."

Mr. Siegman said the issue of Soviet Jewish emigration to Israel did not come up during the talks.

Mr. Siegman said Mr. Mandela considered the estimated 120,000 Jews of South Africa as "supporters" in the battle against anti-apartheid and had a "deep sense of history and sense of loyalty".

"Our hope was to clarify misunderstanding. We want his New York visit to be a wholehearted celebration of a hero of the century," Mr. Siegman said.

On Sunday Mr. Mandela went to the Geneva headquarters of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) to thank officials who have visited political prisoners in South Africa.

The visit was scheduled for Saturday but Mr. Mandela postponed it because of momentary fatigue.

Mr. Mandela is due to leave late Sunday for West Germany, his next stop on a six-week, 13-country tour.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 10) - The European Economic Community (EEC) and Romania have signed an economic accord liberalising trade, the European Commission announced Sunday.

The agreement, the last in a series concluded by the EEC with East European countries since the end of 1988, completes its normalisation of relations with Warsaw Pact nations.

Similar agreements were signed in September 1988 with Hungary, with Poland in September 1989, with the Soviet Union in December 1989 and in May 1990 with Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Bulgaria.

This first generation of "flexible" accords is intended to allow the EEC to develop relations with Eastern Europe and help them in restructuring their economies, the European Commission said.

The accord with Romania anticipates a number of measures primarily aimed at liberalising trade and encouraging foreign investment.

Relations between the Community and Romania were totally disrupted by events in December 1989, just before the downfallof communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

Immediately after the Romanian revolution, Bucharest announced it wanted to renew negotiations with the 12-member EEC, particularly during the March 19 meeting of the joint EEC-Romania Commission.

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 10) - Clean-up crews equipped with a high-seas barrier boom and other containment supplies arrived at a Norwegian oil tanker that exploded Saturday and was still burning Sunday in the Gulf of Mexico, authorities said.

Small explosions shook the 250-meter (853-foot) Mega Borg overnight, but the fire remained confined to the aft section of the ship, said a U.S. Coast Guard official in Galveston.

The Coast Guard's Atlantic Strike Team from Mobile, Alabama, and other mop-up groups worked to extinguish the blaze and salvage the ship's cargo of about 152 million liters (38 million gallons) of light crude oil.

The Mega Borg's owners have dispatched 10 firefighting vessels to spray foam on the vessel and contracted an airplane to spread dispersants over the nearly 28,000 liters (7,000 gallons) of oil that have spilled from the tanker.

That oil has spread into a slick 0.4 kilometers wide (a quarter mile) and 18 kilometers (11 miles) long.

Authorities said the tanker was not in immediate danger of spilling its cargo, breaking up or sinking.

Saturday, a series of explosions in the engine room rocked the Mega Borg as part of its cargo was being transferred to an Italian tanker.

The vessels were 90 kilometers (55 miles) southeast of Galveston when the explosions occurred.

The explosions and resulting fire killed two crewmen and left two missing and presumed dead. Seventeen members of the crew of 41 were injured, but none seriously, officials said.

The cause of the blasts was not immediately known, a Coast Guard officer said.

The Mega Borg was coming from Angola and its next port of call after Galveston was to have been Aruba.

ABIDJAN (JUNE 10) - Lebanese businessmen in Ivory Coast have signed an undertaking with local trade union bosses to improve working conditions for African employees following an anonymous "hate" campaign against the prosperous Lebanese community, a Lebanese spokesman said Sunday.

The agreement signed with the General Union of Ivorian Workers (UGTCI), calls for an ad hoc committee representing employers and workers to be set up to "rule on labour disputes", an official of the Lebanese World Cultural Union told Agence France-Presse.

Unsigned pamphlets denouncing Lebanese expatriate "gangsters" and calling on African workers to go on strike from Monday have been circulating in Abidjan since the beginning of last week.

Some pamphlets urged violence against the 120,000-strong Lebanese community.

The government reacted with a warning that it would protect the safety of all communities in Ivory Coast. However many Lebanese have taken advantage of the end of the school year to send their wives and children to the Middle East.

Lebanese Ambassador Nizar Chams met the community's Moslem and Maronite leaders as well as businessmen on Friday to discuss the situation.

They agreed that Lebanese factory and shop owners should ignore the threat of a strike Monday, despite a rash of wildcat stoppages last week.

Lebanese run much of the so-called independent sector, which includes shops and small businesses and escapes most official tax and legal constraints.

Their staff, often made up of immigrant African workers, allege the Lebanese pay far lower wages than other foreign employers.

ABIDJAN (JUNE 10) - The United States began evacuating U.S. nationals from Liberia Sunday despite the announcement that the Liberian Government and rebels seeking to oust President Samuel Doe were set to begin peace talks to end a six-month rebellion.

A plane chartered from Air Guinea took off in mid-morning from James Spriggs Payne airport with 120 Americans on board, including children born of U.S. parents.

The plane, which was ferrying the Americans to Abidjan, was due to make two return trips on Sunday.

The peace talks, announced over Liberian state radio late Saturday, are to start this week in Freetown, Sierra Leone, under the blessing of the U.S. State Department which has been negotiating behind the scenes for weeks to bring about a settlement.

National Patriotic Front (NPFL) rebel leader Charles Taylor told journalists at his base camp at Buchanan port 90 miles (144 kilometers) east of the Liberian capital Monrovia late Saturday that he had agreed to send a delegation to Freetown to discuss a possible ceasefire.

But he said NPFL rebels, who launched their insurgency last December in northeastern Nimba County, would not talk politics with the government delegation.

Mr. Taylor, 42, has insisted that Mr. Doe must stand down in favor of a transitional government of NPFL members and others hand-picked by his movement.

But the former government official who fled the country in 1984 after authorities in Monrovia charged him with embezzlement said he would not agree to the one item slated for talks -- a ceasefire -- unless the government accepted his political demands.

(In Washington, a State Department official who requested anonymity said Saturday there were no pre-conditions attached to the negotiations over a three-point peace plan submitted by the Liberian Council of Churches (LCC) and the Muslim Council.)

Thursday's peace plan called for a ceasefire to be monitored and supervised by an "accepted neutral body," preferably the United Nations and a round table discussion on "neutral ground."

The plan also called on the government to give maximum protection to Mano and Gio tribesmen accused of being rebels and hunted down by solders.

BEIJING (JUNE 10) - An oil spill was spreading Sunday off the northeast coast of China after two foreign-registered cargo ships collided, a Chinese maritime official said.

One of the ships, the Panamanian-flagged Maya 8, sank in the Bohai Gulf after it collided early Friday with the Spring Falcon, registered in Liberia, said a spokesman for the marine safety supervision bureau in the port of Dalian.

The spokesman, quoted by the official New China News Agency, said the resultant oil spill stretched some 18 kilometers (11 miles) wide and 70 kilometers (42 miles) long and was spreading.

There was no immediate independent confirmation of the report, and it was unclear which ship the oil came from or what kind of oil it was.

The spokesman did not specify whether the spill caused environmental damage, but said measures had been taken to control it.

The crew from the Maya 8 were rescued by the Liberian ship, which left the site without agreeing to a request for an investigation by China's maritime affairs office, the spokesman was quoted as saying.

The Dalian marine safety supervision bureau sent cables ordering the Spring Falcon to return to Dalian port, in China's northeastern Liaoning province, as and had summoned the ship's owner, the spokesman said.

TEL AVIV (JUNE 10) - The central committee of Israel's right-wing Likud bloc Sunday unanimously approved a new government list headed by its leader, caretaker prime minister Yitzhak Shamir.

If approved by parliament Monday, the administration would be the most hardline seen in Israel to date, including for the first time parties that openly advocate expulsion of Palestinians from the Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

The landslide support followed last-minute problems and came a day before Mr. Shamir was to seek a parliamentary vote of confidence for the 32-member government, cobbled together after six weeks of political deliberations with far-right and religious groups.

However Likud MPs Abraham Sharir, Yigal Horowitz, Aharon Abouhatzira and Zalman Shoval threatened to vote against Mr. Shamir unless they, too, received ministerial posts.

Mr. Shamir initially promised Mr. Sharir a post in his government when he left Likud six weeks ago to join the opposition Labour Party. But on Sunday the caretaker premier said there was no room left in his new cabinet.

"Once again I naively believed in the promises of Mr. Shamir and I was cheated," Mr. Sharir told Voice of Israel radio.

Another Likud MP, Reuven Rivlin, also threatened to vote against the Shamir government if Mr. Shamir became a minister.

Likud sources expected Mr. Shamir to emerge victorious Monday, despite the difficulties and said he could in principle muster a 62-vote majority in the 120-seat Knesset, parliament.

Another possibility is that he could win 59 votes, against 58 for the opposition, if the four MPs seeking portfolios abstain from the Knesset vote, the sources said.

But Mr. Shamir could loose any hope of forging a new government if the four decide to vote in favour of the opposition, the sources said, adding that this last scenario would mean "political suicide" for the MPs.

BELGRADE (JUNE 10) - The French Ambassador to Albania, Michel Boulmer, was manhandled by Albanian police who entered the grounds of his residence in order to arrest a young man who was seeking diplomatic asylum, an embassy official said Sunday.

Emmanuel Rousseau, first secretary of the French Embassy in Tirana, told Agence France-Presse by telephone that the man, whose identity remains unknown, had got through the gates of the Ambassador's residence in the May 30 incident when several Albanian policeman entered the compound and arrested him.

Mr. Rousseau described the action as ''an aggravated violation of the extra-territoriality'' of diplomatic compounds.

The ambassador attempted to intervene, said Mr. Rousseau, and both he and his wife received blows in the scuffle which followed. The man was taken away by police and his fate was unknown.

In Paris, foreign ministry sources said three formal protests were lodged following the incident, two by the French embassy and a joint protest by the four European Community embassies in Tirana (Italy, Greece, West Germany).

Xenophon Nushi, the Albanian Ambassador to France, was summoned to the French foreign ministry in Paris, according to the ministry sources.

Since the beginning of the year, 10 other Albanians have attempted to gain asylum in Western embassies in Tirana, in the Greek and Italian embassies in particular.

Those two embassies are surrounded by uniformed and plainclothes policemen who, in several instances, have not hesitated to penetrate the compounds to arrest Albanians seeking asylum.

DORTMUND, West Germany (JUNE 10) - West Germany's environmental Greens party elected a new leadership Sunday to help regain momentum lost since the Berlin Wall came down and prepare for a merger with their East German counterparts.

One of three new spokespersons elected at the close of a national convention here was Christian Stroebele, former lawyer for the terrorist Red Army Faction and architect of the so-called Red-Green coalition in West Berlin.

The others, Renate Damus and Heide Ruehle, were women in keeping with the party statutes.

Mrs. Damus is regarded as an independent leftist, while Mrs. Ruehle describes herself as "above" internal factionalism.

With the new leadership, the party hopes to recover its place in the limelight, lost when the Berlin Wall came down and the process of German unification began.

The Greens, who complain that mainstream West German parties have hijacked their original ideas, no longer oppose unification as they once did and want to merge with East German environmentalists in a bid to retain their role as a maverick political force.

In September the party plans to hold a special congress to form an alliance with East German counterparts as well as women's, leftist and smaller pro-ecology groups.

Delegates meeting here reiterated the Greens' opposition to future German membership in NATO and deplored the lack of emphasis on environmental problems in the unification treaty.

They also passed a resolution calling for the price of gasoline to be increased from the current one Deutsche mark (59 cents) a litre to "at least five marks" (2.90 dollars).

Delegates who came to the Dortmund convention by car were asked to donate one Deutsche mark to the party for every kilometer (half mile) they drove.

NEW YORK (JUNE 10) UPI - Promoter Don King, in an 11th-hour attempt to prevent unprecedented purse bidding on a heavyweight title fight, Saturday offered champion James ''Buster'' Douglas $20 million to fight top-ranked contender Evander Holyfield.

Douglas' manager, John Johnson, received the offer only 21 1-2 hours before the World Boxing Association was scheduled to throw Douglas' title defense open to all promoters. The champion's ongoing suits against King prevented him from reaching a bout agreement with Holyfield - prompting the WBA to order the purse bids, which give a champion 75 percent and challenger 25.

''Don King Productions hereby offers Mr. Douglas a purse of $20 million U.S. dollars plus 50 percent of gross revenues in excess of $34 million U.S. dollars for the Douglas-Holyfield bout,'' said King's letter to Johnson. ''For these purposes, gross revenues shall mean gross revenues received by Don King Productions less production costs, taxes and related expenses.

''If this offer is acceptable to you, please let me know by noon (Sunday). We are prepared to enter into an agreement on the foregoing basis immediately.''

Johnson said the deal is not close enough to what he's looking for but is happy to see progress and said ''it's possible'' he and King could settle before the 4 p.m. Sunday purse bid (televised on NBC).

''I'm glad he's come from 10 million to fight (former champion Mike) Tyson to 20 million to fight Holyfield,'' Johnson said of King's initial offer for Douglas to give a rematch to Tyson, who lost to Douglas Feb. 10.

''We're closer but we're not close enough. We want the two-fight deal. He has to finally understand that James Douglas is the heavyweight champion of the world and he wants to fight Evander Holyfield at The Mirage and then he wants to fight Mike Tyson at The Mirage.''

Douglas is seeking to escape his contract with King, who in turn is suing the fighter and manager for breach of contract. King also is suing The Mirage and World Boxing Association for interfering with his rights: The Mirage for offering a conditional contract to promote Douglas if he frees himself from King; the WBA for holding the purse bids.

The Mirage owner Steve Wynn's conditional offer is to promote Douglas-Holyfield for $25 million as part of a $40 million, two-fight if Douglas beats Holyfield.

Johnson said the chances of avoiding purse bids depends on whether King ''wants to come further to our terms - come close to that deal.''

The offer from King to Johnson was designed to stop the purse bids but not the trial. The letter to Johnson not only failed to suggest settlements but reiterated King's stand:

''Due to The Mirage's tortious interference with our promotional and bout agreements with you and James ''Buster'' Douglas, and your conscious unwillingness to negotiate a deal with us for the upcoming Holyfield-Douglas bout, Don King Productons has not had an opportunity to negotiate an agreement on your purse for that bout.''

In order to avoid the bidding process, Johnson and King not only have to reach agreement but also satisfy Holyfield's side.

A source close to Holyfield said should Johnson accept King's terms, the challenger would expect an offer of ''eight or nine million.''

Johnson reminds that Douglas got only $1.3 million in his title shot at Tyson but then conceded his fighter did not come in with Holyfield's top ranking, experience and marketability, and agreed that expectation is in the ballpark.

Holyfield's promoter, Dan Duva of Main Events - the only one to publicly admit intentions to bid Sunday - would not comment on whether he would accept that amount but said ''We're open.

''They're cutting it pretty close,'' he laughed at Johnson and King. ''I'm ready to listen but if they want to talk, I'm going to play softball and my game's at 9 a.m.''

Failing the last-ditch agreement, Duva said his bid will bring Douglas at least $20 million.

King's offer to Johnson came after three hours of negotiations Friday night between them and The Mirage broke down. At that point, Johnson scoffed at previous offers he claims King has made to Douglas of $18 million.

OTTAWA (JUNE 10) UPI - Canada's political leaders signed a tentative agreement Saturday expected to prevent Quebec from seceding, recognizing the province as a distinct society and confering on it powers to promote its French language and culture.

But Newfoundland Premier Clyde Wells, the most vocal opponent of special powers for Quebec, said his signature on the agreement was conditional on the results of either a referendum in his province or a free vote in the Newfoundland provincial legislature.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said the agreement ''will allow us to turn a page on the history of the constitution and start ... building a stronger future for all our children.''

''It is more difficult to bring together than to divide, to build than it is to destroy,'' Mulroney added.

The agreement endorses a proposed constitutional amendment, formally called the Meech Lake Accord, that will become void unless it is approved by all 10 provinces before June 23. All but three of the provinces have approved the amendment and two of the holdouts pledged in Saturday's agreement to pass it by the deadline. Newfoundland remained the only question mark.

Mulroney and the provincial leaders negotiated the proposed amendment - which would recognize Quebec as a distinct society and empower it to promote and protect the French language and culture - three years ago after Quebec refused to sign the country's 1982 constitution. Qubecers argued the constitution did not take into account the province's French culture.

But the provinces disagreed over the powers the proposed amendment would give Quebec, threatening the fragile and often hostile relationship between Quebec and the rest of Canada.

Quebec, home to 6.2 million French-speaking people, has threatened to consider seceding if the Meech Lake Accord is not approved.

The seven days of constitutional negotiations, which began Sunday and almost collapsed several times over the distinct society clause and its special powers for Quebec, were the longest in Canadian history.

Wells, who became a hero to the majority of English-speaking Canadians opposed to the accord, said in an impassioned speech that he recognized Quebec was a distinct society, but he remained concerned about the special powers it would receive through passage of the constitutional amendment.

Quebecers, he said, must ''place Canada first and recognize that like all of the other provinces, Quebec is second.''

He said he could not endorse the agreement and that his signature was simply a commitment to hold either a referendum or free vote in the Newfoundland legislature.

Manitoba Premier Gary Filmon, who had opposed the accord said he would sign the agreement.

Besides endorsing the Meech Lake Accord, the premiers agreed on a process to reform the appointed Senate.

They also decided that a so-called Canada clause - addressing the rights of aborigines, the multi-cultural nature of Canada, and the relationship between its English-and French-speaking cultures - will be negotiated in a future round of constitutional talks.

The amendment's ''distinct society'' clause, conferring special powers on Quebec, was at the heart of the marathon negotiations. Provinces opposed to the Meech Lake accord feared Quebec would use the powers to pass laws that benefit the French but violate rights of minorities enshrined in Canada's Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The leaders agreed to seek a formal legal opinion from eminent jurists across the country, testifying that the distinct society clause will not impair the Charter. Quebec has insisted that such a letter not have any legal force.

That did not satisfy Wells, a constitutional lawyer, who wanted a provision for periodic review to ensure that Quebec's laws did not violate the Charter and a commitment that the distinct society clause would be amended if there were violations.

The provision was left out of a final document offered to the premiers late Friday and almost resulted in the total collapse of negotiations.

Wells tried to have the provision added to the accord Saturday, but was unable to secure Quebec's approval for the measure.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Canadian legislators reached a tentative agreement Saturday that preserves Quebec's French heritage. After seven days of intense negotiations, leaders from nine of Canada's 10 provinces joined the federal government in granting Quebec special status as called for in the so-called Meech Lake accord.

While Alberta Premier Don Getty applauded the action, his counterpart in Newfoundland was less than enthusiastic. Premier Clyde Wells emerged from the seventh day of talks and proclaimed he could NOT support the agreement. He said he will allow Newfoundland's voters or its legislature to decide the fate of the pact.

Air Jamaica officials say 11 people, including two flight attendants, suffered minor injuries Saturday when a flight to Los Angeles hit severe turbulence over Mexico. An airline spokesman says the flight crew decided the injuries were NOT serious enough to warrant an emergency landing.

Peruvian radio said Saturday that eight people died when an earthquake measuring five-point-six on the Richter scale struck a jungle area Friday night. The temblor rocked the same region which was hit by a shaker that tipped the Richter at six-point-two. That earthquake occurred May 29th and killed at least 56 people.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Federal authorities and Texas officials have O-K'd the use of chemical dispersants to contain an oil spill from a burning Norwegian tanker in the Gulf of Mexico. Some seven-thousand gallons of light crude and a sheen of fuel oil have leaked in to the Gulf so far. The approval is contingent on whether the spill becomes more serious.

Three shark fishermen caught a 17-foot sawfish this week off Florida's Key Biscayne, but they got criticism instead of praise when they returned to shore. The prehistoric-looking fish with a saw-like bill took the fishermen's bait Thursday night... starting a two-and-a-half-hour battle that ended when the fishermen shot it three times with a handgun. When they returned to shore with the 600- to 800-pound fish, other fishermen said they should have let it go. It's NOT an endangered species, but it's seldom seen in the wild.

CANBERRA, Australia (JUNE 10) UPI - Two American women adrift for four days in their disabled 36-foot sailboat were rescued off the Queensland coast Sunday by the crew of a Taiwanese freighter, officials said.

Jeannie Talley and Joy-Beth Smith, of Crescent City, Fla., were both in good condition when taken aboard the freighter from their crippled yacht Banshee, said Stephen McElhinney of the Canberra Sea Safety Centre. One of the women might have suffered a broken leg, he said.

The women, on a 1250-mile voyage from Bundaberg, Australia, to the island nation of Vanuatu, broadcast a distress signal Thursday after losing their mast in a storm, authorities said.

Hopes they were still alive faded Saturday when wreckage believed to be from their yacht was sighted by aircraft in 16-foot seas with winds blowing to 45 knots.

But a massive search involving 16 aircraft continued and Sunday the Banshee was sighted about 500 miles northeast of Bundaberg.

The yacht was about 50 miles from the spot where it was first spotted Thursday by a military search plane homing in on the womens' radio distress call. The crew on the Orion search plane reported the ship was dismasted and wallowing in high seas.

The Orion was forced to return to base at nightfall and search planes and ships were unable to relocate the Banshee until Sunday afternoon, when the women had almost been given up for dead, officials said.

''One plane saw a flare and spotted the Banshee and we were able to divert the Taiwanese cargo vessel, Maersk Sentosa, to the yacht and the women were taken safely aboard,'' McElhinney said.

''Army helicopters are flying to the ship and we hope to be able to repatriate the women to Gladstone in Queensland later today,'' he said Sunday.

McElhinney said the wreckage sighted Saturday could have been the mast from the Banshee, or refuse dumped by another vessel.

''But in those awful conditions things were really looking grim,'' he said.

''It is just one of those things. You just have to be optimistic and keep searching and this time its paid off.''

(JUNE 10) UPI - With the score tied in the 11th inning the Chicago Cubs said Grace.

Mark Grace answered their prayers and delivered the game-winning single, sending Shawon Dunston across the plate to lift the Cubs to a 4-3 victory.

His teammates may have been thankful but Grace wasn't satisfied.

''This is nothing,'' said Grace. ''We're still in last place. ... Any win is a big win for us.

''The way I've been going, I've got nobody at my mercy,'' said Grace, who is batting .281. But he added, ''I've started swinging the bat better the last eight to 10 days.''

Dunston opened the 11th inning with a single off Jeff Parrett, 2-4, and stole second. After Andre Dawson walked, Grace singled sharply to center, scoring Dunston.

Reliever Les Lancaster, 5-2, hurled four innings in recording the victory. He allowed three hits, one run and fanned two.

''Zim (Manager Don Zimmer) knows I can throw strikes,'' Lancaster said. ''I hope he leaves me there (in the bullpen).''

Chicago is 4-2 in extra innings this season, including 3-0 at home.

Trailing 3-2, the Phillies tied the score in the ninth on an RBI single by Lenny Dykstra - extending his major league-leading hitting streak to 22 games.

Dickie Thon opened the ninth with a walk and moved to third on a single by Darren Daulton. One out later, Dykstra's single scored Thon for a 3-3 tie. With the bases loaded, Lancaster was able to get two groundouts and end the rally.

The Cubs led 3-0 in the first inning on a home run by Ryne Sandberg and two-run triple by Marvell Wynne.

With one out, Sandberg sent Marvin Freeman's first pitch into the left-center field bleachers for his 14th homer. One out later, Dawson and Grace singled, both scoring on Wynne's triple to the wall in right.

The Phillies closed within 3-2 in the fourth when Ricky Jordan slammed a two-run homer, his fourth of the year.

--- AROUND THE NL ---

Elsewhere in the National League: New York nailed Pittsburgh 9-3, Atlanta dumped San Francisco 5-3, Montreal downed St. Louis 3-1, Houston chased Cincinnati 4-1 and Los Angeles edged San Diego 5-4 in 11 innings.

Mets 9, Pirates 3

At New York, Orlando Mercado and Kevin Elster drove in two runs each to back the six-hit pitching of David Cone, 2-4, over 7 1-3 innings. Cone struck out nine and notched his first victory since May 19. Bob Patterson, 4-2, suffered the loss. Mercado triggered a four-run fourth inning with a two-run homer.

Braves 5, Giants 3

At Atlanta, Charlie Leibrandt, 1-0, allowed nine hits and drove in two runs to spark the Braves, snapping the Giants' seven-game winning streak. Leibrandt struck out three and didn't walk a batter in his first complete game. Atlee Hammaker, 4-4, absorbed the loss.

Expos 3, Cardinals 1

At Montreal, Rookie Mark Gardner allowed five hits over 8 2-3 innings, helping the Expos to victory and spoiling St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog's 10th anniversary with his team. Dave Schmidt got the final out for his fourth save. Scott Terry, 0-5, was the loser.

Astros 4, Reds 1

At Houston, Glenn Davis ignited a four-run outburst with his league-leading 18th home run. Jim Clancy, 2-5, allowed one run and five hits in 5 2-3 innings for the victory. Dave Smith recorded his 11th save. Rick Mahler, 1-1, was the loser for the Reds, who have dropped five of their last six.

Dodgers 5, Padres 4

At San Diego, Eddie Murray led off the eleventh inning with his second home run of the game to give Los Angeles the win. John Wetteland, 2-4, went two innings, struck out two and gave up one hit. Eric Show, 0-6, took the loss. The switch-hitting Murray hit the homers from either side of the plate, marking the 10th time in his career he has accomplished that feat.

BEIJING (JUNE 10) UPI - Israel plans to open its first liaison office in Beijing this week as a diplomatic beachhead, ending decades of estrangement with China, which traditionally has supported Israel's enemies.

The office, operated by the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities at a foreign-managed hotel in downtown Beijing, will technically serve as a clearinghouse for academic exchange between the two countries and will not have official government status.

Israel and China have no diplomatic relations, and are unlikely to establish official ties in the foreseeable future. Beijing maintains strong political and military ties with Arab nations and has steadfastly supported the Palestinian cause.

Yet the liaison office, staffed by two Israeli science academy experts, represents a watershed in a relationship that has been developing quietly in recent years, taking the countries from political and ideological confrontation to pragmatism.

''China has been taking a bigger place in the world and certainly in the Middle East,'' said Yoseph Shalhevet, 59, the agricultural expert who heads the new office, and who along with an administrator has been in Beijing for several months before the formal opening of the office this week.

''Obviously it is in Israel's interest to have some kind of relations,'' he said. ''And for the Chinese, I think they realize it is not to their advantage to keep Israel isolated.''

China's immediate interest is obtaining trade and technology from Israel. The Chinese have already opened a tourism office in Tel Aviv, and up to 1,000 Israelis are expected to visit China this year.

China is keenly eyeing Israeli agricultural technology and a known but unacknowledged military relationship has been in place since the mid-1980s.

But with trade expected to only inch forward - in part due to China's economic problems - the Israelis are clearly hoping that the informal ties may one day lead to better political relations.

''They are aware that China is one of the five permanent members of the (United Nations) Security Council,'' which often plays a major role in the Middle East, observed a Western diplomat.

''They are also aware that unofficial missions can remain in place for years and ultimately mean near normal relations without the formal trappings,'' the diplomat said.

Progress lies years ahead. Although the Chinese claim to have stopped training Middle East guerrilla groups, they have kept up a drumbeat of criticism of Israeli policy.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has long maintained a mission in Beijing that the Chinese have designated as an embassy. They refer to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat as president on his frequent visits.

China has also been a major arms supplier to Israel's avowed enemies, including Iran and Iraq. Just last week, the United States voiced concern over Chinese aid to Libya in producing chemical weapons.

China's economic ties with Israel are not entirely new. An Israeli trading company, UDI Ltd., has been in China for a decade and is one of the biggest foreign operations in the country.

The firm is also believed to have helped funnel Israeli tank and aircraft technology to China, but neither its executives nor the Israeli science office staff will discuss the reports.

''We are not political figures,'' said Shalhevet. ''We have nothing to do with politics, or the military. What Israel does militarily we don't know and we dont care.''

The Israeli office, formally hosted by the Chinese Academy of Sciences, is primarily focusing on academic exchanges. It will provide only guidance for possible trade, which is handled by an Israeli firm, COPECO, set up in Hong Kong for that purpose.

The Chinese are most interested in agricultural technology, especially irrigation, because China is plagued by chronic water shortages in its western deserts. Israel is considered a technological leader in the irrigation field.

China is already buying Israeli fertilizer and a small amount of irrigation equipment and medical equipment. A handful of Chinese students have been sent to study in Israel.

There is even a Hebrew language program at Beijing University, whose seven Chinese students strain with the unfamiliar tongue and take part in holiday celebrations with the small Jewish community among Beijings foreign residents.

BEIJING (JUNE 10) UPI - China's controversial retrenchment program and a continuing market slump forced 400,000 people out of work in April, an official newspaper reported Sunday.

The English-language China Daily, a state-run newspaper, said workers in collectively owned enterprises had been hardest hit and called the outlook for employment in China ''bleak across the board.''

The gloomy assessment came despite recent reports by the state-owned media of an economic upturn.

Official reports cite rising production figures and revived market sales in praise of China's continuing austerity program, which has brought the country to the brink of recession since its imposition in late 1988.

''The latest government statistics show that company chief executive officers and factory managers are having to slash their payrolls because of the current production and market slump,'' the China Daily said.

The report said by April, China's workforce totalled 136.03 million, a drop of 1.4 million workers from the year-end figure.

The China Daily cited figures from the State Statistical Bureau indicating that 1 million of the workers had retired while the remaining 400,000 were ''forced out of work.''

Chinese Premier Li Peng recently agreed to ease the government's tight money policies, which have created nationwide production halts and a drop in overall industrial production even as they achieved their goal of curbing record-high inflation.

Li also acknowledged unemployment as a growing problem and proposed stricter controls over China's urban job market.

In March, the official press reported that China was starting a new nationwide labor network to help cope with growing unemployment and stem the flow of rural job-seekers into urban areas.

OSLO, Norway (JUNE 10) UPI - Journalists went on strike for the first time in Norway Sunday after Norway's Journalist Union and the Newspaper Publishers' Association failed to agree on a labor contract, Norwegian Radio reported.

The journalist union and employers had agreed on wage rates, but were unable to agree on union demands for improved working conditions and the right of the union to negotiate for all of its members.

Following the breakdown in negotiations in the early hours of Sunday, the union called a strike at the country's eight largest newspapers and the national news agency NTB.

Journalists at state-owned radio and television stations, who negotiate separately, were expected to begin a strike June 15.

During the indefinite strike, journalists plan to publish their own newspaper in Oslo and Norway's west coast oil capital of Stavanger.

NEW YORK (JUNE 10) UPI - Mayor David Dinkins was to join the family of a black teen gunned down by a gang of white Bensonhurst youths at a Brooklyn church Sunday where community leaders planned to urge witnesses to come forward.

The church gathering was scheduled the day after white Bensonhurst leaders hoping to strenghten a fragile truce with the black community, expressed their condolences to the family of Yusuf Hawkins during a dinner held at an undisclosed Brooklyn home Saturday.

Hawkins was shot to death by a mob of white youths determined to keep blacks and Hispanics away from a nearby party last Aug. 23. The 16-year-old and three black friends had ventured into the predominantly Italian-American neighborhood to look at a used car.

The prosecution of the first two defendants tried last month in the case was severely hampered by a lack of cooperation from witnesses.

Keith Mondello, 19, described as the ringleader, was cleared of murder and manslaughter charges but convicted of lesser charges.

His co-defendant, Joseph Fama, 19, described by prosecutors as the triggerman, was convicted of second-degree murder.

Both men were scheduled to be sentenced Monday.

In the weeks that followed the Hawkins' slaying and the trials of Mondello and Fama, black activists staged a number of protest marches through Bensonhurst calling for witnesses to come forward and testify.

The marchers' demands were often met with taunts from Bensonhurst residents, some of them wearing Ku Klux Klan T-shirts, who shouted racial epithets and waved watermelons at the demonstrators.

Earlier this week, the black activists vowed to stop marching through Bensonhurst after an accord was reached with white Bensonhurst leaders that both sides hoped would promote racial harmony.

Among those expected to attend the mass unity meeting at St. Dominic's Church was the Rev. Al Sharpton, one of the organizers of the protest marches, Moses Stewart, Hawkins' father and state Assemblyman Frank Barbaro.

KUWAIT (JUNE 10) UPI - Kuwaitis went to the polls Sunday to elect a newly created National Council that observers say was sparked by the pro-democracy movement in Eastern Europe.

Kuwait's emir, Shiekh Jaber Al Ahmad Al Sabah, called the election last spring to quell months of often-violent democracy protests for the re-establishment of Kuwait's Parliament.

Al Sabah did not go so far as to recall Parliament - disbanded in the mid-1980's for being too disruptive during the Iran-Iraq war - but did create the 75-member council he said will spend two years examining the pluses and pitfalls of a parliamentary system and then drawing up a new set of rules for a future parliament.

Kuwaitis Sunday will elect 50 members of the National Council while Al Sabah will appoint the remaining 25 members.

Opposition leaders, many of whom had served in the disbanded Parliament, called for Kuwaitis to boycott the election, saying the National Council was unconstitutional.

But the government countered with a public relations program that urged the men in the Gulf state to vote out of a sense of duty. Women, along with police and soldiers, are not allowed to vote.

A total of 348 candidates are vying for the 50 open seats on the council.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 10) UPI - Mayor Marion Barry has determined that ruling out a race for a fourth term would help the defense in his cocaine and perjury case, a published report said Sunday.

The Washington Post, quoting unidentified sources close to the mayor, said Barry may take himself out of the running as early as Monday. The report said the mayor's lawyers hope that such an announcement would improve their leverage in seeking a plea bargain.

A Barry announcement that he will not run for another term would likely lead to even more visible efforts by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, an longtime associate and friend of Barry's, to promote a plea agreement between the mayor and U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens, the newspaper reported.

''This is basically a last chance to get things off dead center,'' a source identified only as being close to the mayor was quoted by the Post as saying. ''The line will be, 'OK, Mr. Stephens, your investigation has effectively gotten rid of Mr. Barry as mayor. What is the point of sending him to prison on top of everything else?'''

Barry released a statement Friday saying there is no ''official plea bargaining under way'' and that he had not made a decision on a re-election bid.

Asked about reports that Barry will soon rule out a run for re-election, his top political adviser, Anita Bonds, told the Post, ''I don't know anything about it.''

''He's committed to what he's doing now,'' Bonds said. ''That occupies a lot of time and energy.''

Jackson has said he believes the mayor could expect a more lenient plea agreement with federal prosecutors if he were to announce he is out of the race. He said has he urged Barry to renounce his interest in a fourth term.

Stephens has said a Barry resignation would be irrelevant to the case against the mayor, and the Post quoted sources - identified only as familiar with the prosecution side of the case - as saying he would likely take a similar stance toward a declaration of non-candidacy.

The American Civil Liberties Union has asked Judge Jackson to reject any plea bargain including a provision - written or not - involving Barry's political career, on the grounds that such an agreement would usurp the city voters' right to choose the mayor.

Barry is on trial charged with three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor charges of cocaine possession and one misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine. He could face 26 years in prison and more than $1.8 million in fines if convicted on all counts.

Barry was arrested Jan. 18 at the Vista International Hotel in downtown Washington after he was videotaped allegedly smoking crack in a sting to which he was lured by a former girlfriend cooperating with the FBI.

Jury selection in the trial was to resume Monday. U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson has said he expects the process to continue throughout the week, but plans having a jury sworn in and sequestered June 18.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (JUNE 10) UPI - Miriam Makeba, the black South African-born singer hailed as ''Mama Africa'' for her passion and popularity, sang on home soil for the first time in 31 years Sunday after returning from political exile to visit family and her mother's grave.

Makeba, 57, joined relatives, local entertainers and supporters in singing the black liberation anthem ''Nkosi Sikele i'Afrika,'' or ''God Bless Africa,''after arriving from Brussels to her racially reforming homeland.

Makeba, for millions around the world a symbol of black pride, fortitude and resilience, returned to a traditional tribal welcome and knelt quietly on a mat given her by an elderly female relative in a ceremony to mark the end of a long absence.

Saying she was ''very happy to be home,'' Makeba said priorities during the week's visit will be seeing her brother and other family, visiting Johannesburg's satellite black township of Soweto - the place of her youth - and ''praying by my mother's grave.''

The weary Makeba told reporters she did not ''sleep for a week'' in anticipation of getting an entry visa, which was refused her until Friday. Authorities were fearful the woman who has performed at numerous African independence celebrations would stir up political unrest.

''I've always wanted to come home. Now that everyone is coming home, why shouldn't I?'' she added, referring to other exiles being given permission to come back, or simply returning, following the racial reforms launched in February by President Frederik de Klerk.

''I think I'll be happier when I come back to sing before my people,'' Makeba said, noting she had no plans on the private visit for any public performances of the dozens of songs which, over three decades, she has sung and recorded in North America, Europe and Africa.

Makeba went into self-imposed exile the year before her mother's death in 1960, citing humiliations suffered under white minority rule. When only 18 days old, she spent six months in jail with her mother, who was sentenced for illegally brewing beer to supplement a maid's income.

As a teenage singing star, Makeba was forbidden by segregationist laws to perform in English, being forced to use her home language, Xhosa.

She was nurtured in the United States by singer Harry Belafonte in the early 1960s and was married at one time to militant black U.S. leader Stokely Carmichael, who gave her a strong sense of politics but also a career-damaging activist status.

Her decision not to perform publicly on her homecoming is in line with a U.N. ''black list'' of foreign writers, musicians and other artists who have appeared in South Africa. Names are removed only if artists pledge in writing not to perform in the country again.

Makeba was helped to return to South Africa by the African National Congress, which supports the ''black list.'' Its cultural desk said she would be working with the ANC on future visits.

Married five times, but now divorced, Makeba's career has taken a roller-coaster course.

Her marriage to Carmichael cut her off from the American political establishment and led to years of enforced low productivity. She settled in Guinea in the 1970s and became a roving ambassador, visiting the United Nations and various countries to speak out against apartheid.

Makeba did not abandon music, and her career peaked again in the United States in 1987, as a star with Paul Simon's ''Graceland'' tour.

Her latest album, Walela, released last year, is close to ''going gold'' in South Africa, where Makeba's popularity has never waned.

LONDON (JUNE 10) UPI - Investigators searched for suspects Sunday in the bombing of a British army headquarters hall, which injured 17 civilians attending a birthday party for an military officer's son, police said.

Detectives from Scotland Yard's Anti-Terrorist Squad sealed off roads and scoured the area around the Territorial Army headquarters in North London, in an effort to track suspects in the explosion, which occurred at 11:15 p.m. Saturday.

Police said it appeared the explosive device was placed on the roof of the building within 24 hours of the blast. There were no military officers in the hall when the explosion occurred, police said.

No one claimed responsibility for the attack, police said. Authorities said it might have been the work of the Irish Republican Army, which continues to wage a violent campaign against British rule in northern Ireland.

''Anything with a military connection at the moment is a target for the IRA. Quite simply, it's another indiscriminate and wanton terrorist act,'' said Anti-Terrorist deputy chief superintendent Derek Willison. ''It is an enormous relief that nobody was killed.''

Two women, aged 17 and 21, remained hospitalized with cuts from flying glass. Ten women and five men, most of them students, were treated for minor injuries at a nearby hospital and released, a Scotland Yard spokesman said.

The injured were among about 40 people aged 17 to 25 attending a black-tie 21st birthday party for a Cambridge law student when the blast ripped through the ceiling and wall of an upstairs bar in the three-story building, the spokesman said. The force of the explosion sprayed glass over the partygoers and shattered windows of nearby buildings, police and guests at the party said.

Tom Parker, a guest at the party for the student, who was able to hold the the party at the hall because he was the son of a Territorial Army captain described the scene in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

''The explosion knocked everybody to the ground. There was glass. I don't remember being cut. I imagine nobody else does, but I mean people were covered in blood,'' Parker said.

''Everybody was on the floor, people started screaming,'' he said. ''When the noise stopped and the glass stopped, people stopped screaming and they left fairly orderly.''

Investigators and officials condemned the attack, saying that if members of the IRA were responsible they had made a grievous mistake, since no military officers were in the building.

''It is a pointless and wicked attack,'' Home Secretary David Waddington said.

The IRA has recently stepped up its deadly campaign on the British mainland, with a series of bombing and shooting attacks that have left at least two dead and several people injured.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 10) UPI - Masked Palestinians shot and killed a Gaza Strip Arab suspected of collaborating with Israel, while the army Sunday lifted a 5-day-old curfew in the West Bank city of Nablus, Palestinian and military sources said.

Residents of the Rafah refugee camp in Gaza found the bullet-riddled body of Jamal Ahmed Abu Aziz, 29, near a mosque Saturday afternoon, Palestinian sources said. He was killed by a group of five or six masked men, the sources said.

As well as being a suspected collaborator, Abu Aziz was alleged to have been involved in drug dealing and prostitution, the sources said.

The army confirmed the death and said police were investigating. Palestinians killed two other suspected collaborators Friday.

More than 200 Palestinians suspected of aiding Israel or of allegedly immoral behavior have been killed by other Palestinians since the start of the 30-month-old uprising against Israeli rule in the occupied territories.

A curfew on the West Bank city of Nablus and surrounding refugee camps was lifted Sunday. The restriction had confined 120,000 residents to their homes since Tuesday, when soldiers shot and killed two area boys in separate incidents.

Some curfews were lifted and shops reopened in parts of Gaza City Sunday, but many residents remained confined to their homes by curfews for a 12th consecutive day, Palestinian sources said.

Elsewhere in the Gaza Strip, at least four Palestinians were injured by live bullets Saturday in clashes with soldiers, Palestinian sources said.

The army imposed a curfew on the southern West Bank village of Halhoul near Hebron after the car of Jewish settler was stoned Sunday, injuring a woman, the army spokesman said.

In Arab East Jerusalem, about 70 tombstones in a Jewish cemetery on the Mount of Olives were damaged Saturday night, Israel Radio reported. The cemetery's night watchman was detained for questioning, it said.

HOLLYWOOD, FL (JUNE 10) UPI - Two members of the rap group 2 Live Crew were arrested early Sunday and charged with violating Florida's obscenity law during a live performance before a club audience, a sheriff's official said.

Band leader Luther Campbell, 29, and member Chris Won Wong, 21, were arrested several blocks away from the club, about 3:05 a.m., said Broward County Sheriff's spokesman Al Gordon.

Warrants will be issued for two other band members who deputies failed to nab last night, Gordon said.

A federal judge in Fort Lauderdale on Wednesday ruled that the group's sexually explicit album ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be'' was legally obscene by south Florida standards.

Broward Sheriff Nick Navarro vowed to enforce the ruling, and record store owner Charles Freeman was arrested Friday after selling the recording to an undercover deputy.

Freeman and the band were targeted for arrest after they publicly stated they would defy the ruling, Gordon said.

''The same as with Mr. Freeman, when you go on television news and announce that you are going to what you damn well pleased, that's all fine and dandy, but if you do it in Broward County, and it's in violation of Florida statutes, you are going to be arrested,'' Gordon said.

Gordon could not say what portion of the band's live performance allegedly violated Florida's obscenity law.

The band's Saturday night performance at Club Futura was its second appearance this weekend. On Friday, 2 Live Crew performed without incident at a club on Miami Beach.

Deputies waited until the second of two shows had ended and the band members left the club before making the arrests in order to avoid a potential confrontation with fans, Gordon said.

Campbell and Wong were arrested without incident, he said. They were taken to the Broward County jail and released about 4:45 a.m. Sunday after they were processed and given notices to appear in court.

The date and time of those appearances will be set later, Gordon said.

''Warrants will be issued for the other two members of the band,'' Gordon said. ''They went in two separate vehicles, and we did not have enough deputies to take them into custody. The actual charge is prohibition on certain acts in connection with an obscene, lewd performance.''

All four will be charge with a first degree misdemeanor for violating Florida's obscenity law, Gordon said. If convicted, they would face up to 1 year in jail and a fine of $1,000, he said.

WOODS HOLE, MA (JUNE 10) UPI - A passenger liner with about 1,100 people aboard ran aground off Cape Cod in dense fog early Sunday and was taking on water, the Coast Guard said.

The cruise ship Bermuda Star ran aground and was leaking fuel in a shallow area called Cleveland Ledge near Buzzard's Bay about 8:30 a.m., Coast Guard spokesman Steve Aitkins said.

Two Coast Guard utility boats and other rescue vessels were en route to the boat.

''We'll hopefully be trying to contol the situation and taking any passengers off that need to be transported because of any immediate danger '' Aitkins said.

The Coast Guard was also sending fuel containment booms to the scene, although the leak did not pose a major environmental threat, officials said.

''It's its own fuel so it's nothing major; just what it had on board for its own facilities,'' Aitkins said.

Aitkins did not know the ship's destination or origin, and said he could not estimate how far offshore the vessel was.

TURNBERRY, Scotland (JUNE 10) UPI - A new U.S. blueprint for the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, a group often described as ''floating'' or ''shapeless,'' looks strikingly similar to a sturdy model sculpted two months ago by the Soviet foreign minister.

The much-heralded proposal by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, unveiled in Copenhagen, Denmark last week, mirrors a little-noticed CSCE vision outlined in April by his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze.

The 35-nation CSCE, known for putting together the 1975 Helsinki human-rights accords, is a critical cornerstone of compromise in NATO's efforts to allay Soviet fears over a unified Germany in the Atlantic alliance. NATO foreign ministers, meeting Thursday and Friday in Scotland, called for CSCE to be ''strengthened and given effective institutional form.''

The CSCE includes all of Europe except Albania, plus the United States and Canada.

The Soviet Union seeks a greatly enhanced role for the CSCE, an organization long criticized for its unwieldy name, lack of permanent home or staff, and even a paucity of purpose beyond the human-rights arena.

The blob began to take shape April 11 with an eight-page essay written by Shevardnadze for an obscure Brussels-based magazine. The article in ''NATO's 16 Nations,'' an independent chronicle of the Atlantic alliance, garnered some headlines for Shevardnadze's suggestion that a unified Germany might be part of both NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

That trial balloon never got far off the ground, but it overshadowed the truly striking feature of Shevardnadze's paper: its trailblazing and intricately detailed plans for the ''institutional transformation of the Helsinki process.''

The Soviet foreign minister said CSCE should be known by the easy-to-use title ''Greater Europe'' (still including the U.S. and Canada), with a permanent secretariat and rotating summit meetings every two years of the Greater Europe Council. The council would be chaired by the host country leader, and its coordinating body would be the preceding, current and next council chairmen - the same ''troika'' arrangement used by the European Community.

''A CSCE war-risk reduction center, and verification and monitoring coordination center, must be established for the purpose of enhancing security,'' said Shevardnadze, who also called for a procedure ''to take measures for settling conflicts and diputes among nations.''

Foreign ministers would ''meet at least once a year or, better still, twice a year,'' he said.

Baker, in Copenhagen, outlined ''ideas on how we can work together to improve CSCE as a process by reinforcing CSCE's organization.''

Those ideas are very familiar to readers of ''NATO's 16 Nations.''

''The United States favors regular consultations among signatory states,'' the secretary of state said, adding that ministers should meet once a year and their senior officials twice a year.

Baker also said he envisaged a major role for the CSCE in dispute management, and called for the organization to develop a monitoring role for unusual military activities ''or other occurrences which have security implications.''

A greater role for CSCE is only one of nine points in a U.S. proposal to make a united Germany's NATO membership easier for the Soviets to swallow. Others include expanded talks on troop levels throughout Europe, and new concessions on aircraft at the stalled conventional forces in Europe, or CFE, talks in Vienna.

Still, the once-shapeless CSCE has been transformed from a lava lamp to a lighthouse in the two short months since Shevardnadze's structuring.

''We see the CSCE process as an important framework for far-reaching reforms and stability and as a central element in the construction of a new Europe,'' the NATO foreign ministers, who once dismissed CSCE as a quaint human-rights group, said in their final communique from the fog-shrouded Scottish coast.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 10) UPI - John Poindexter, Ronald Reagan's former national security adviser, will learn Monday whether he will be sentenced to prison for his crimes in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Poindexter, 53, who was convicted of five felonies in April, is the last of the original Iran-Contra defendants.

Clearing the way for the sentencing, U.S. District Judge Harold Greene ruled Friday that Poindexter received a fair trial. Greene said Poindexter's congressional testimony during the summer of 1987 was not used against him during the trial.

Because Poindexter gave his nationally televised testimony under a grant of immunity, the information it contained could not be used against him during his trial unless prosecutors developed it from other sources.

Greene also ruled that the special Iran-Contra prosecutors made adequate provisions to protect themselves from exposure to Poindexter's immunized testimony to Congress.

Poindexter was Reagan's national security adviser during the scandal that overshadowed the president's second term. He was convicted April 7 of five felony charges carrying a possible 25-year prison sentence and $1.25 million in fines.

The office of special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh has asked Greene to put Poindexter behind bars, arguing his coverup effort could have poisoned the constitutional system with a ''diet of lies.''

Lawyers for the retired Navy rear admiral said he has suffered enough and should not be jailed.

Poindexter was convicted of conspiring to deceive Congress, making false statements to lawmakers and obstructing congressional inquiries.

None of the previous Iran-Contra defendants has received a jail term.

Poindexter was the last of the original group of defendants indicted in the complex scandal that involved secret weapons sales to Iran, efforts to win freedom for American hostages in Lebanon and the diversion of arms sale profits to the rebel Nicaraguan Contras when Congress had banned such aid.

Prosecutors from Walsh's office successfully argued that Poindexter helped mastermind an illegal coverup designed to protect Reagan politically and hide from Congress details of the secret arms sales and support for the Contras.

Poindexter declined to testify in his own defense during his trial.

Greene has wide latitude in sentencing Poindexter because the crimes occurred before federal sentencing guidelines took effect. Had the crimes occurred later, a jail term would be mandatory because the convictions involved felony charges.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 10) UPI - A daredevil's parachute failed to open Sunday morning sending him plummeting 54 floors to his death from the top of a downtown skyscraper under construction.

Police said the unidentified man was one of two people who evaded security guards and jumped from the Mellon Bank building shortly before 6 a.m.

Police said they did not know how the men evaded security officers at the site, which is still under construction at 17th Street and J.F.K. Boulevard.

Reports of a man videotaping the incident had not been verified by police. The surviving parachutist fled immediately after landing safely in a nearby parking lot.

One police detective who did not want to be named said the dead man's body was so mangled it was impossible for police at the scene to determine what race he was.

''We don't anticipate a quick identification,'' the detective said.

Ray Belikoff, an investigator with the Philadelphia Medical Examiner's office, said the man was white, weighed 150 pounds and was between 5 feet 3 inches and 5 feet 5 inches tall.

''He landed on his feet and may have lost some height in the fall,'' Belikoff said, adding that the man sustained ''many, many'' injuries.

Belikoff said nothing else was yet known about the man other than he had sandy blonde hair and blue eyes, but added they were checking out a tip on the man's identification.

The detective said parachuting from Philadelphia skyscrapers is nothing new, but this is the first incident he could recall in which someone died.

Five parachutists jumped successfully from One Liberty Place after the city's largest building was completed in 1988.

''They were ahead of us on that one,'' the detective said. ''They had a panel truck waiting for them and were gone (before any officers arrived.)''

The 61-story building was the first structure to break the city's unofficial height limit of 491 feet and tower above the statue of William Penn atop City Hall.

''This is a game,'' the detective said. ''They do it in New York all the time. It's just unfortunate about this fellow. ... One had a chute that worked. The other's has to be returned.''

Officials of Mellon Bank Corp., which is based in Pittsburgh, could not be reached for comment about the incident.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... the latest news from U-P-I.

Quebec appears to have won what it wants in order to stay part of Canada... a distinct society clause. Canadian leaders Saturday ended a week of intense talks by tenatively agreeing to grant Quebec special status to preserve its French heritage. Three years ago, Quebec refused to sign the Canadian constitution because its residents felt the document did NOT take into account the province's French culture.

Firefighters are pouring water on a burning Norwegian tanker in the Gulf of Mexico to try to keep the one-thousand-foot vessel cool. Mega Borg erupted into flames early Saturday. Officials fear that a ''catastrophic oil release'' could occur if the ship's hull warps from prolonged overheating. The ship is carrying 900-thousand barrels of crude oil.

Nicaraguan President Chamorro mingled with more than one-thousand demobilized Contra rebels Saturday. Several hundred of the rebels Chamorro met with laid down their arms at a jungle ceremony. The new Nicaraguan leader said the disarmament brings to life her dream of a Nicaragua at peace with itself.

Peru's voters go to the polls Sunday to determine who will be president. Pollsters say the race is too close to call. Competing for the top job are novelist Mario Vargas Llosa and political newcomer Alberto Fujimori. The party of outgoing President Alan Garcia has sided with Fujimori, while the Catholic church has thrown its weight behind Vargas Llosa.

Australian officials say two American women have been rescued by a Taiwanese freighter. The women's 36-foot yacht disappeared and was feared sunk in stormy seas off the Queensland coast. Jeannie Talley and Joy-Beth Smith, of Crescent City, Florida, were both in good health Sunday when found on their crippled yacht Banshee.

An F-B-I agent wants a court order to prevent what he says is his imminent firing by the agency. The unidentified agent's security status was revoked in September for what he says is his homosexuality. Since then, he has been on administrative leave. A federal judge in San Diego is considering the agent's request for an injunction.

An Oregon man has won his fight for a clean slate. Earlier this year, Raymond Roy Evans petitioned a Milwaukee court to expunge his record of a boyhood conviction on charges of driving a stolen car... a conviction handed down in 1937. Evans has NOT received so much as a parking ticket in the last 50 years. He says the conviction haunted him every day of his adult life.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 10) UPI - Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari was expected to receive a nod from President Bush Sunday night for talks that could lead to a historic opening of their 2,000-mile border to free trade and investment.

Over cocktails and a private dinner at the White House, Bush and Salinas were to lay the groundwork for free-trade negotiations that in recent weeks have assumed high priority in Mexico and spurred debate within the U.S. government.

Formal announcement of their agreement to move ahead with the talks was expected Monday. Salinas will promote the trade initiative in meetings with administration officials, members of Congress and American business executives.

''Our position at this point is that we're agreeable to opening discussions,'' one administration official said. ''Where the negotiations lead and how quickly they proceed remain to be seen. We're dealing with some tough issues here.''

Trade was not the only subject for discussion by Bush and Salinas. Continuing legal and political reverberations from the 1985 murder in Mexico of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena have injected tension into bilateral relations.

In particular, Mexico has accused the United States of complicity in the apprehension and mysterious movement to the United States of a Mexican doctor alleged by U.S. officials to have observed the torture of Camarena.

The United States and Mexico have taken a series of trade expansion steps since 1986, when Mexico, embarking on the road to economic reform, joined the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the world trade organization.

The two countries signed a ''bilateral framework agreement'' in late 1987 that committed them to lower tariffs and non-tariff barriers to trade in seven specific areas and established a mechanism to resolve trade and investment disputes.

A formal free-trade agreement between Mexico and the United States, which had more than $51 billion in two-way trade last year, would cover tariffs and other import barriers, access to investment, trade in goods and services and the protection of copyrights, patents and trademarks.

Although the administration signaled a willingness several months ago to open trade talks with Mexico, the issue of a formal accord along the lines of an 18-month-old U.S.-Canada free-trade agreement has stirred controversy on both sides of the border.

Salinas, a Harvard-educated political economist, has faced domestic political resistance to some of his efforts to modernize the Mexican economy by stripping away layers of state control and protectionism dating back to the 1910 revolution.

His move to forge closer economic ties with the United States has provoked warnings from other politicians and business leaders that Mexico guard against exploitation of key industries and resources by its neighbor to the north.

Those fears were seen most clearly last month when the Mexican Senate, in endorsing the conclusion of a free-trade agreement, declared it would be ''categorically opposed to any negotiations that imply a loss of sovereignty.''

In the United States, the trade talks raise concern about Mexican demands for freer movement by Mexican workers to jobs in the United States. That problem was noted last week by the influential Business Roundtable, which endorsed a free-trade agreement, and could spark opposition from some U.S. labor and industry groups.

At a more pragmatic level, U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills has been reluctant to add the negotiation of a complex agreement with Mexico to an already full trade policy agenda.

The administration has attached top priority to the successful conclusion of an eighth round of GATT talks in December, which signals a busy fall of deal-making for negotiators from almost 100 GATT member-countries.

Because of wider disparities in the two economies, the negotiation of a free-trade accord with Mexico is considered to be a far more difficult task than the agreement with Canada, which itself required four years of difficult negotiations that on more than one occasion seemed close to collapse under the weight of political and economic pressures.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 10) UPI - Frank Rickel won his battle with the Internal Revenue Service - but lost the war. And it cost him plenty.

Rickel, of suburban Upper St. Clair, says he spent $28,000 more in legal fees than if he had not fought the IRS.

For nearly five years Rickel battled the IRS over an age discrimination settlement the government wanted to tax.

Rickel fought all the way to the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, which in April ruled in his favor. The court ruled an older worker who wins damages from his employer because of discrimination doesn't have to pay taxes on the award.

But Rickel estimates the battle over $60,000 in taxes cost him $88,000 in legal fees.

''These people at the IRS kept telling me I couldn't afford to fight them '' Rickel said. ''They were right.''

Rickel was fired as general sales manager from the Malsbary Manufacturing

Co. in Uniontown in 1979 at the age of 59. He said he was told by his boss the company wanted a younger man in the job.

Rickel sued Malsbary and its parent, Carlisle Corp., for age discrimination in U.S. District Court in Pittsburgh. Malsbary offered Rickel a $180,000 settlement as a jury was deliberating the case in 1983, and he accepted.

''I figured I probably could've gotten more,'' Rickel said. ''But the company probably would have appealed it on and on.''

Rickel, who holds a master's degree in economics from Kansas State University, said the way he read IRS regulations, court settlements for damages were excluded from federal income taxes. He didn't report an $80,000 payment from Malsbary in 1983 or a $25,000 payment in 1984.

But the IRS contended payments made in age discrimination cases were taxable.

A Tax Court ruled one-half of the money paid to Rickel was taxable and the rest was excluded. The federal appeals court reversed the Tax Court ruling and said the entire payment was exempt from federal taxes.

However, the court also denied Rickel's request that the IRS pay his legal costs.

''What kind of jusitce is that?'' asked Rickel. ''They say, 'Yes, you were right,' and then they make you pay.

''I've always felt if you operate honestly and above board, the government will do the same. But it didn't.''

ST. LOUIS (JUNE 10) UPI - The Missouri Watermelon Association's 1990 seed-spitting championship effort was a 32-foot missile from the mouth of Frank Davis.

Davis's wind-aided burst captured the teen competition and beat the adults' best mark by 7 feet, said Mary Beth Welby, a spokeswoman for the watermelon growers group.

The annual contest was held Saturday at Historic Soulard Farmer's Market on the city's south side.

Welby said seed-spitting contest rules are simple.

''You cannot use any artificial means to help you propel the seed in any way, shape or form,'' she said. ''And if you have false teeth and your false teeth go farther than the watermelon seed, then we count the teeth as your score.''

The most impressive effort among the six division winners came from St. Louis Deputy Mayor Jack Keane, winner of the Second Year Trophy, Welby said.

''He spit the seed 23 feet with practically a broken jaw from an (auto) accident,'' she said.

BATTLE CREEK, MI (JUNE 10) UPI - The city has regained its title of ''America's Breakfast Capital'' by serving a record 38,753 people at what was billed as the world's largest breakfast.

''Everything meshed today,'' Rick Royal, chairman of the Battle Creek organizing committee, said Saturday. ''It was a fantastic day. The weather was the key. It was a picture perfect day.''

Earlier this spring, Springfield, Mass., served breakfast to 37,381 people. Last year, the New England community fed 33,869 to take the title away from Battle Creek for the first time.

''I think people were really out to get Springfield today,'' Royal said. ''We lost for the first time last year and they were ready to get the title back.''

Tables were set up for the event under sunny skies and in 70-degree temperatures in Battle Creek's downtown area. Organizers served thousands of bowls of cereal, doughnut holes, Pop-Tarts and glasses of milk for free.

The cost of the event was covered by Kellogg Co., which is based in Battle Creek, and by the Post Division of General Mills Inc. and Ralston Purina Co.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 10) UPI - Employees who want promotions should spend more time socializing on the job, a new study suggests.

Stuart Schmidt, a professor at Temple University's School of Business, studied 69 pairs of supervisors and their subordinates at manufacturing firms to see how the bosses judged the performance of their employees.

He found that the way workers interacted with their superiors socially was at least as important as how many extra hours they put in on the job.

''Socializing at work is often viewed negatively, as something that interferes with getting the job done,'' Schmidt said. ''In fact, good performance evaluations may not go to the most striving workers, but rather to those who are well-liked and can get along with others.''

The bosses, 90 percent of whom were men, were asked to rate their subordinates on how they worked independently, cooperatively and creatively. They also rated employees on technical ability, motivation, problem-solving skills and prospects for promotion.

''Our study indicates that the results-oriented 'go-getters' do not necessarily get high marks from their bosses,'' Schmidt said.

The study found that employees' ''personal style'' carried a lot more weight than their technical skills when it came to performance evaluations. Workers judged by their bosses to be ''amiable'' or ''reasonable'' scored significantly higher than those seen as ''disagreeable.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 10) UPI - Jury selection in the cocaine and perjury trial of Marion Barry resumes Monday amid reports that the Washington mayor will not run for a fourth term in office in an effort to help his defense.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson said he expects jury selection to continue throughout the week, but plans having a jury sworn in and sequestered June 18.

As the trial moves into its second week, however, speculation has mounted that Barry would make some dramatic move to help his case by either declining to run for office or reaching a plea bargain agreement with the prosecution.

The Washington Post, quoting unidentified sources close to the mayor, said Barry may take himself out of the running as early as Monday. The report said the mayor's lawyers hope that such an announcement would improve their leverage in seeking a plea bargain.

But the mayor's spokeswoman, Lurma Rackley, said she had doubted ''very seriously'' that Barry would make an announcement Monday, adding she was ''pretty sure he's not holding a news conference'' to make such a statement.

A Barry announcement that he will not run for another term would likely lead to even more visible efforts by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a longtime associate and friend of Barry's, to promote a plea agreement between the mayor and U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens, the Post reported.

''This is basically a last chance to get things off dead center,'' a source identified only as being close to the mayor was quoted by the Post as saying. ''The line will be, 'OK, Mr. Stephens, your investigation has effectively gotten rid of Mr. Barry as mayor. What is the point of sending him to prison on top of everything else?'''

Barry released a statement Friday saying there is no ''official plea bargaining under way'' and that he had not made a decision on a re-election bid.

Asked about reports that Barry will soon rule out a run for re-election, his top political adviser, Anita Bonds, told the Post, ''I don't know anything about it.

''He's committed to what he's doing now,'' Bonds said. ''That occupies a lot of time and energy.''

Jackson has said he believes the mayor could expect a more lenient plea agreement with federal prosecutors if he were to announce he is out of the race. He said he has urged Barry to renounce his interest in a fourth term.

Stephens has said a Barry resignation would be irrelevant to the case against the mayor, and the Post quoted sources - identified only as familiar with the prosecution side of the case - as saying he would likely take a similar stance toward a declaration of non-candidacy.

The American Civil Liberties Union has asked Judge Jackson to reject any plea bargain including a provision - written or not - involving Barry's political career, on the grounds that such an agreement would usurp the city voters' right to choose the mayor.

Barry is on trial charged with three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor charges of cocaine possession and one misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine. He could face 26 years in prison and more than $1.8 million in fines if convicted on all counts.

Barry was arrested Jan. 18 at the Vista International Hotel in downtown Washington after he was videotaped allegedly smoking crack in a sting to which he was lured by a former girlfriend cooperating with the FBI.

(JUNE 10) UPI - A Norwegian tanker is burning in the Gulf of Mexico following an explosion yesterday morning that killed two people, left two others missing and injured 17. Coast Guard officials say the crippled tanker has leaked seven-thousand gallons of oil- but they areN'T sure if the leak is from the cargo tanks or the ship's fuel. Cold water is being sprayed onto the ship to keep it cool so the hull woN'T warp and spill 900-thousand barrels of oil into the water.

The Coast Guard says most New Jersey and New York beaches appear to be safe from a large oil spill in the channel separating Bayonne and Staten Island. Officials say the closest beach, New Jersey's Sandy Hook, is free of any oil. They add some large lumps of oil have been found... but it's NOT clear if the oil came from Thursday's 260-thousand-gallon spill or an earlier incident.

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 10) UPI - A series of explosions racked the stern of the burning tanker Mega Borg at midday Sunday, adding to worries the 853-foot ship could buckle and sink with its cargo of 38 million gallons of crude oil.

Coast Guard Chief Todd Nelson said the explosions came from the aft end of the ship in the below-decks engine room, an area that has been engulfed in flames since an explosion ripped through the giant tanker at 1 a.m. Saturday.

There was a series of explosions at noon Sunday, and then three more explosions at 12:25 p.m. CDT.

''Everything from the pump room aft is in flames,'' Nelson said of the suddenly deteriorating situation. ''The crude oil (cargo) is rolling off the boat into the water aflame. There may be burning oil in the water. There may be new flaring from the rearward vents.''

Nelson said the engine room, crew living spaces and the pilots tower were all located in the stern of the ship. The explosions, he said, might signal an increased amount of crude oil leaking from storage tanks into areas on fire and an intensifying of the fire.

The ship, riding at anchor 57 miles southeast of Galveston in the Gulf of Mexico, sank by several degrees at the stern just after the new explosions.

''It appears to be heeling a few more degrees,'' Nelson said. ''I mean down by the stern. It appears to be going down a few more degrees. We don't know if it's sinking.''

Nelson said Coast Guard officials and firefighters from Smit America, a private firm hired to fight the fire, went into emergency meetings Sunday afternoon to discuss the proper response to the new explosions and larger fire.

Nelson said there were five large explosions between 12:15 and 12:25.

''This is the first solid indication that the cargo is involved,'' Nelson said. ''We have an oil spill. We're right now trying to decide what to do with it. We definitely have burning cargo in the water. We don't know that (the ship is)s sinking, but it's definitely heeling more.''

During a news conference in the late morning, prior to the apparent setback, the Coast Guard had said it believed the chances of the ship sinking were minimal. Lt. Cmdr. Frank Whipple said the hull's ship would be cooled by streams of water and that the bodies of two dead crewmen would be pulled off an open deck in preparation for an all-out assault on the fire by a fleet of fireboats on Monday morning.

Of the 41 people aboard when the first explosion hit, two were killed and two were missing and presumed dead. The bodies of the two missing crewmen were believed to be below decks. Seventeen people were injured, none seriously.

The captain and first mate remained on a Coast Guard cutter near the tanker, but all the rest of the crew and the captain's children were transferred by boat to the Texas mainland.

Whipple said the two bodies were in view near the fire in the superstructure and were to have been removed Sunday afternoon. It was not known whether the new explosions would force the cancellation of the effort to retrieve the bodies.

Though the intensification of the fire Sunday might force plans to change, Whipple said at the news conference that Smit America, with the Coast Guard's blessing, intended to assemble all of its equipment and firefighters by Sunday evening and then mount an all-out assault on the fire Monday morning.

Smit America planned to circle the tanker with six fireboats, and send teams onto the forward decks in the blitz against the flames Monday morning.

Whipple said no cause has been found for the initial explosion, which occurred when the Mega Borg was pumping crude oil into a smaller tanker for transport up the Houston Ship Channel.

''We have not determined a cause for the explosion,'' he said. ''The people who would have those answers did not make it: We have two missing and two that are dead.''

If it appears the ship will sink, Whipple said, the Coast Guard would quickly deploy an oil skimmer boom around it to contain the 38 million gallons of light crude oil.

Britist Petroleum and Exxon have called the Coast Guard and made available chemical dispersants they have on hand for use if they are needed. The Coast Guard decided Sunday morning not to use the dispersants because the 7,000 to 10,000 gallons of crude oil already spilled at that point should disperse or evaporate on its own.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (JUNE 10) UPI - Several thousand Contra rebels held on to their weapons Sunday as a deadline for them to disarm passed, but international observers said most of the guerrilla force has been dismantled.

By Sunday morning, about 9,200 Contras had laid down their weapons, a spokeswoman for the Organization of American States' Support and Verification Commission said.

That number included 800 who surrendered their arms at a ceremony Saturday in El Almendro that President Violeta Chamorro heralded as the end of the nine-year civil war between the U.S.-backed rebels and the Sandinista army.

''I have dreamed of an end to the war in Nicaragua. Now that dream has come true,'' Chamorro told more than 1,000 Contras at an outdoor ceremony and Catholic mass in the tiny jungle town where the disarmament process was centered.

Col. Manuel Maldonado, chief of the U.N. peace-keeping forces in Nicaragua said he expected the total number of disarmed Contras to top 10,000 by the end of the day, leaving some 4,000 rebels still with weapons, according to the latest U.N. estimates.

The more than 700 U.N. peace-keeping troops in Nicaragua will stay until June 29 to allow time to complete the disarmament.

Chamorro delayed an announcement she was scheduled to make Sunday outlining reductions in the Sandinista army that were called for by the Contras and other opponents of the former Sandinista government.

A presidential spokesman said a news conference was tentatively set for Wednesday, giving Chamorro more time to study reduction proposals submitted by Gen. Humberto Ortega, commander of the army and brother of former President Daniel Ortega.

Some government officials have called for gradual reductions of the army to about 10,000 troops, but army sources have said 30,000 or 40,000 are needed to defend Nicaragua and maintain a balance of power in the region.

The army says its membership is currently 55,000, although other observers put the number as high as 70,000. Humberto Ortega said earlier this year that many troops left the army in the weeks following Chamorro's Feb. 25 election victory.

The Contra demobilization, originally scheduled for completion by June 10, was delayed as rebel leaders negotiated financial and other concessions from Chamorro's government.

Contras returning to civilian life have been allocated a large plot of land in southeast Nicaragua where they are expected to have housing, schools, domestic and medical services and jobs.

Sandinista Air Force Commander Col. Javier Pichardo told United Press International Saturday that although the disarmament was not yet complete, it had advanced enough to eliminate the threat of continued rebellion.

''I'm optimistic about the whole thing,'' he said. ''There may be a few Contras left after the deadline, but that's not important.''

Many of the remaining rebel combatants insist they will not give up their weapons in the near future, and others say they have hidden arms in the mountains in case the Sandinistas fail to disarm or if violence breaks out again.

Aside from the main Contra group, known as the Northern Front, there also remain about 2,000 armed rebels of the Southern Front in Nicaragua and some 1,400 Miskito Indian rebels on the Atlantic Coast.

The Miskitos are currently disarming under an agreement with the Chamorro government, and the Southern Front is negotiating a disarmament plan.

The United States has earmarked $47 million of a $300 million aid package to Nicaragua for the demobilization process and repatriation of Contras' families living as refugees in neighboring Honduras.

(JUNE 10) UPI - One of the most divisive political campaigns in Peru's history comes to a climax today when voters go to the polls. The campaign between the two is so close, pollsters refuse to project who may win.

Peruvian news reports say another earthquake has struck the same jungle area hit by a quake at the end of May. WASHINGTON (JUNE 10) UPI - Thousands of animal rights activists demonstrated Sunday against the use of animals in medical experiments, against the use of animal skins in fur coats and even against those who believe steak is a good meal.

At 3:30 p.m. EDT, U.S. Park Police estimated that 24,000 activists had turned out for the march from the Ellipse between the White House and the Washington Monument to the Capitol.

''This is the first march for all animals, from all over the world,'' said one of the marchers, Kathy Parker, 45, of Sparks, Nev., education director for Nevada Animal Rights Society. ''The time is now to finally address the issue.''

Leading the demonstration was Peter Link, executive director of the National Alliance for Animals Legislation, a lobbying group, and Tom Regan head of the Culture and Animals Foundation. Demonstrators planned to remain in Washington Monday to lobby members of Congress.

This march ''is the single most important event'' ever for the animal rights issue, Link said, adding the movement plans to mark the 1990s ''as the decade for the animal rights movement.''

Carrying signs with slogans such as, ''Eat beans, not beings,'' the marchers came from across the United States, including Oklahoma, Montana, Rhode Island, California and Missouri.

Among those scheduled to speak at the rally were entertainers Christopher Reeve, Grace Slick and Laura Nyro and cartoonist Berke Breathed, creator of Bloom County.

''I'm not a member of any animal rights group, but I'm giving careful consideration to the issue, mostly to urge moderation and to be reasonable '' Reeves said before the rally.

The actor, best known for his movie roles as Superman, said he did not agree with the more radical marchers who oppose animal research, saying ''humans are more important than rabbits'' in finding a cure for such diseases as AIDS.

In fact, the demonstrators ranged in their beliefs. While many professed to be vegetarians concerned primarily with the use of animals for nutrition, others claimed to be more radical in their support for animal rights.

Renee Bowman, a member of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, which opposes vivisection, was among those determined to take their message to the White House.

Bowman handed out flyers that said, ''Please tape a dime to this card, a penny for each year of horror these helpless animals have suffered, and mail it to our first lady, Mrs. Barbara Bush.''

The animals, Bowman said, were monkeys ''locked away for more than 10 years'' at the National Institutes for Health in nearby Maryland, where ''they've had the nerves in their spine severed and were then virtually tortured in experiments to force them to use their crippled arms.''

''Because George Bush won't accept responsibility, we're going after Barbara Bush,'' Bowman said.

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (JUNE 10) UPI - The United States began airlifting Americans from war-torn Liberia Sunday as rebels battling to overthrow the government of besieged President Samuel Doe agreed to talks.

The first two planeloads of Americans aboard chartered Air Guinea flights arrived in the Ivory Coast capital Sunday morning and early Sunday evening with a third flight planned for later in the evening.

About 360 U.S. citizens in all were expected to be flown out in Sunday's airlift, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said in Abidjan. The Americans were expected to fly later to Charleston, S.C.

Robert and Pat Bellinger, U.S. missionaries on the first flight, said they were sad to leave and intended to return eventually.

''Liberia's home,'' Pat Bellinger said, noting she had spent 26 years and raised a family in Liberia. ''We're supposed to retire next year, and it's hard enough to look toward retirement. But to have this is very, very difficult.''

The United States on Thursday advised some 3,300 Americans living in Liberia to leave the country as rebel forces awaited orders to advance on the West African nation's capital, Monrovia.

Over the weekend, the rebels closest to the capital remained near the Robertsfield Airport, some 30 miles outside the city, and little fighting was reported anywhere in the country.

A ham radio operator in Monrovia reported the city was quiet late Sunday, but he said electricity had been ''erratic'' and officials said there was a limited amount of fuel left in the country.

Robert Bellinger said Liberians in Monrovia were frightened and wary.

''People stay off the streets at nighttime, early in the morning and in the evening,'' he said. ''It's a difficult time for Liberians now. They are frightened. The intimidation and harassment seems to come from rather unusual directions. There's no seeming pattern to it ... the killings, people being beheaded. This is foreign. This is a foreign element.''

In Washington, a State Department spokeswoman said the flights to the Ivory Coast were designed ''to facilitate the departure of U.S. citizens from a crisis area.''

''We are not using the term evacuation,'' she said. ''The roads are still open and people can get out. This is not a red alert. The military situation remains fairly quiet.''

Talks between the Liberian government and rebel forces were scheduled to begin Monday morning in Freetown, Sierra Leone. The talks are slated to be held at the U.S. Embassy in Freetown, at the request of the Liberian Council of Churches, which will mediate the discussions.

U.S. officials emphasized Sunday the United States will not play role in the talks beyond providing a meeting place.

The government and rebels agreed to talk following several days of heavy fighting and reportedly escalating acts of brutality along tribal lines. Hundreds died last week and perhaps more than 1,000 people have been killed since rebel leader Charles Taylor began his effort to oust Doe in late December.

Doe, who last week appealed to the United States and the international community for help as his grip on power weakened, announced Friday through Information Minister Emmanuel Bowzier he would accept the church proposal for talks.

The agreement to talk is a major shift on the part of both sides. Before this, Taylor had said the only thing he would negotiate was Doe's departure from power. Doe previously had said he would not deal directly with Taylor.

Fighting appeared to have subsided to some degree on Saturday and early Sunday, U.S. officials said.

On the vast Bridgestone-Firestone rubber plantation, where rebel and government troops both are stationed, the weekend passed quietly, with U.S. and foreign employees confined to their homes, company spokesman Bob Troyer reported from corporate headquarters in Akron, Ohio, Sunday.

In Washington, a U.S. official said both sides had troops on the plantation, but neither was in control of the 188-square-mile tract, the largest rubber plantation in the world.

The official said, however, that government forces were mobilizing near the plantation. It is possible that troops could eventually fight at the same time as their leaders are negotiating, the official said.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (JUNE 10) UPI - The pro-democracy Civic Forum and its Slovak sister movement, Public Against Violence, won a commanding majority in the federal Parliament in Czechoslovakia's first free elections in 44 years, official final results showed Sunday.

The Communist Party, which ruled alone for 42 years until it was toppled by November's Velvet Revolution, came in second place in the Czech Republic while the Christian Democratic Movement of Slovakia took second in the Slovak Republic.

The two republics make up Czechoslovakia, each with their own parliaments and representatives to the national Parliament, called the Federal Assembly.

The final results from Saturday's elections were a blow to the Christian Democrats, which had expected a much stronger showing in both republics.

Deputy Prime Minister Jan Carnogursky, a Christian Democrat and contender for prime minister in the new government, told United Press International that as it stands, his party will not participate in the new federal government and he will not be a candidate for premier, pending a final decison by the party presidum.

Carnogursky said he will meet Tuesday with President Vaclav Havel, who will choose the next prime minister, who in turn will form the new government.

The Civic Forum said it wanted all three Christian Democratic parties in its government and Havel is expected to ask Carnogursky's party to come on board.

The surprising results for the Communists, which did better than the 10 percent predicted for them, strengthens the position of current Prime Minister Marian Calfa.

The Communist Party held a monopoly rule in one of the most repressive regimes in the East Bloc until last November's revolution.

In a brief televised address, Havel expressed gratitude at the large turnout - the highest ever in Europe in a voluntary election.

In the Czech Republic, Civic Forum got 53 percent in the Chamber of People or lower house, and 50 percent in the upper house Chamber of Nations. The Communist Party's respective figures were 13.5 percent and 13.8 percent, while the Christian Democrats got 8.7 percent and 8.8 percent.

The only other party to make it into Parliament from the Czech Republic was one representing the 4 million Moravians and Silesians, both nationalistic parties, which got 7.9 percent in the lower house and 9.1 percent in the upper chamber.

In Slovakia, Public Against Violence captured 32.5 percent in the Chamber of People and 30.3 in the Chamber of Nations.

The Christian Democrats won 19 percent and 16.7 percent respectively, the Communists got 13.8 percent and 13.4 percent, the Slovak National Party, another nationalist group, secured 10.9 percent and 11.4 percent and a party representing Hungarians and other ethnic minorities got 8.6 percent and 8.5 percent.

The elections were given a clean bill of health Sunday from international observers who said they were astounded at the 96 percent turnout, by far the highest among the sprouting democracies of Eastern Europe.

The Christian Democrats, who were especially strong in heavily Catholic Slovakia, are believed to have fared badly in part because of a late-breaking scandal over revelations that one of its leaders collaborated with the secret police of the former communist government.

The same matter brought the downfall of another party leader, Jan Budaj, who resigned late Saturday in Bratislava as chairman of Public Against Violence. Budaj said he was co-opted into signing a letter of cooperation with the dreaded police after he was caught smuggling underground literature across the Polish border and because of his attempts to emigrate from Czechosolvakia in the late 1970s.

But Budaj said he never actually cooperated and did not answer questions during their occasional visits.

All of the major parties that participated in the campaign agreed to undergo voluntary background checks of their parliamentary candidates in order to purge from public office any collaborators.

Among others forced to resign recently were Deputy Prime Minister Josef Hromadka, a Protestant minister, and Deputy Foreign Minister Vera Bartoskova, a member of the People's Party, which is one of three parties that make up the Christian Democrats.

NEW YORK (JUNE 10) UPI - A man police sources said was a capo in the Lucchese crime family was found dead in the trunk of a black Jaguar that had been parked on a Bronx street for about a week, police said Sunday.

Police about 5 p.m. Saturday opened the trunk of the sports car, which was parked in the Baychester section after residents on the block complained about a foul odor coming from the vehicle, said Sgt. Mary Wrensen, a police spokeswoman.

Police identified the man as Michael Salerno, 67, of the New York City suburb of Ardsley, said Officer Anthony Mazzola, another spokesman.

''He's a capo in the Lucchese family,'' said a law enforcement source who investigates organized crime cases.

Detectives investigating the killing said they do not believe Salerno was a related to Anthony ''Fat Tony'' Salerno, the former boss of the Genovese crime family who is serving a 100-year term for his conviction in the Mafia commission case in 1986.

''We are going on the assumption that he is not a relative of Fat Tony and that he may be connected with Lucchese family,'' said another investigator familiar with the slaying who asked that his name not be used.

Police said Michael Salerno's body was clad in a tan checkered sports jacket, tan pants and a white shirt and was wearing ''extensive'' gold jewelry - chains, rings and bracelets - leading detectives to discount robbery as a motive.

''But we're in the very early stages of our investigation,'' one homicide investigator cautioned.

Both the reputed boss and underboss of the Lucchese family, Vittorio ''Vic'' Amuso and Anthony ''Gaspipe'' Casso, were indicted in a $142 million bid-rigging case unsealed May 30 in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn and were fugitives.

The killing of a capo, or caporegime, a captain in the organized crime hierarchy, would normally require the sanction of a boss, but it was unclear whether the family was in disarray as a result of the recent indictments, which targeted top members of four of New York's five Mafia families.

The homicide investigator said it appeared that Salerno died from a gunshot wound to the chest, but the final determination of the cause of death would be made by the medical examiner's office.

While police believe Salerno had been in the trunk for about a week, no missing persons report had been filed either with New York City or Ardsley police.

Salerno was found stuffed in the the trunk of a 1988 black Jaguar registered to his daughter, Julia Yodice. The car had been parked on the street for about a week, Wrensen said.

Police in Ardsley, N.Y., said they had no record of a Michael Salerno living on Delwood Lane, which they described as a pleasant street of mid-sized homes with sloping lawns.

Ardsley police Sgt. Leonard Balducci said New York City police detectives went to Yodice's home late Saturday to notify her of her father's death.

CHARLOTTE, NC (JUNE 10) UPI - Conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is getting more than 60 percent of his major individual political campaign contributions from outside North Carolina, a newspaper reported Sunday.

A survey of donations from political action committees and people shows that Helms, known for his conservative views, got contributions from all 50 states, the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands, The Charlotte Observer said.

Among the big-name donors were entertainer Bob Hope, beer brewer Joseph Coors, NASCAR driver Richard Petty and investor T. Boone Pickens, all of whom chipped in $1,000 each to the Helms campaign effort.

Helms, seeking a fourth consecutive term, will face recently nominated Democrat Harvey Gantt, the former Charlotte mayor, in the November general election.

Helms has raised nearly $5.7 million since 1987, or about 14 times more than Gantt has and more than all but a handful of Senate colleagues.

Political action committees have given Helms $325,000, but The Observer said most of the senator's money comes from people who have donated $1.1 million through mid-April.

The newspaper analyzed contributions of $250 or more to the senator through mid-April.

A retired lawyer from Clearwater, Fla., and his family have given Helms $4,250 in one of the larger individual gifts.

''We think he's honest and intelligent and we think he stands for basic American values and traditions, so we're all for Jesse, God bless him,'' said C. Bourton McDougal, who is 82. ''We are not liberals, and we are not left-wingers. We hate pornography and we like free enterprise.''

Helms got $67,601 from California, $61,981 from New York and $54,579 from Texas, his largest total contributions.

His lawyers maintain that Poindexter has suffered enough and should NOT be jailed. But prosecutors want Poindexter to be put behind bars, arguing that his coverup effort could have poisoned the constitutional system with what they call a ''diet of lies.''

A British Airways pilot was nearly sucked out his plane today when a cockpit window shattered in flight. British Airways officials say the incident caused the Spain-bound jetliner with 81 passengers aboard to lose pressure and forced an emergency landing in Southhampton, about 76 miles southwest of London. Officials say Captain Tim Lancaster was injured when the quick pressure drop pulled his head and shoulders out of the broken window. Crew members had to struggle to pull him back in.

Coast Guard divers are trying to assess damage to a passenger ship that ran aground today in dense fog with about 11-hundred people aboard off Cape Cod, Massachusetts. Reports indicate that NO one was injured. The Coast Guard says the cruise ship ''Bermuda Star'' is leaking fuel, but the leak does NOT pose a major environmental threat. Rescuers are waiting to see if high tide will raised the ship to a level where it can be stabilized and moved to a nearby port.

Fire continues to rage aboard a Norwegian tanker that was ripped by an explosion early yesterday in the Gulf of Mexico off the Texas coast. Fireboats are pumping water onto the hull of the burning tanker to keep it cool until a firefighting fleet arrives. The tanker is anchored 57 miles southeast of Galveston. It is loaded with 38-Million gallons of crude oil. Two crewmen were killed and two others are missing and presumed dead in the blast.

The United States has began airlifting Americans from war-torn Liberia. The first planeload of Americans arrived in the neighboring Ivory Coast this morning aboard a chartered flight. Two more flights are scheduled later today. The evacuation cames as rebels battling to overthrow the government of besieged President Samuel Doe agreed to peace talks. Americans were advised last week to leave Liberia as rebel forces advanced on the capital of Monrovia.

ROME (JUNE 10) UPI - Czechoslovakia dedicated its World Cup thrashing of the United States on Sunday to values Americans have enjoyed for more than 200 years.

The same weekend Czechoslovakians held their first free elections since 1946, their World Cup team humbled the U.S. squad 5-1 in Florence. Unfortunately for the Czech players, they left home for Italy before they could vote.

''We're very sorry we couldn't participate in the first free elections in our country,'' said captain Ivan Hasek, who scored one of Czechoslovakia's goals. ''The goals and the victory are our way of participating from afar. We dedicate this victory to the Civic Forum (political party) and President (Vaclav) Havel who, if we continue to play like today, will come soon to see us in the World Cup.''

Don't count on U.S. President George Bush flying to Rome this week to watch the Americans after the way they performed in their first World Cup match in 40 years. Any hopes the United States had of continuing the early string of upsets started by Cameroon and Romania died minutes after taking the field against Czechoslovakia.

The Americans stayed with the Czechs for about five minutes. Then the vast difference in talent and experience showed, and Czechoslovakia posted the most lopsided World Cup victory in the first three days of competition.

''Obviously our inexperience showed in a number of facets,'' U.S. Coach Bob Gansler said. ''We started out reasonably well with a measure of self-confidence, but then we gave up a couple of soft goals. It was a good exhibition of what inexperience can do for you.''

Tomas Skuhravy scored twice for Czechoslovakia, with the other goals going to substitute Milan Luhovy and Michal Bilek, on a penalty kick. Paul Caligiuri, whose goal against Trinidad & Tobago clinched a World Cup bid for the United States, scored for the Americans.

''The first few minutes were very equal and the Americans looked good in the midfield,'' Czechoslovakia Coach Jozef Venglos said. ''But the Americans didn't know how to hold firm at crucial moments while my team showed its great experience.''

Czechoslovakia last won a World Cup match in 1962, going on to reach the final before losing to Brazil. Czechoslovakia meets Austria in their second Group A match on Friday, and a tie virtually would assure it a spot in the second round.

Another potential slaughter looms for the Americans. They next play Thursday against Italy at Rome's Olympic Stadium. The way they played Sunday, an upset like the one the 1950 U.S. team pulled against England seems remote.

-- OTHER MATCHES --

In other World Cup matches Sunday, Careca scored twice to send Brazil to a 2-1 triumph over Sweden in Turin. And Lothar Mathaeus scored twice and Juergen Klinsman and Rudi Voeller each added a goal to power West Germany to a 4-1 victory over Yugoslavia in Milan.

West Germany's victory came hours after some of their fans had clashed in Milan.

Groups of West German fans fought with Yugoslavia supporters and with police in front of the Duomo cathedral. A total of 36 people were detained and at least 14, including four police, sustained minor injuries in four hours of sporadic violence.

Thirteen West Germans also were arrested Saturday night for causing disturbances in neighboring towns of Verona.

In Monday's matches, England plays Ireland in Cagliari and Costa Rica meets Scotland in Genoa.

If England goalkeepr Peter Shilton plays, he will tie former Northern Ireland goalie Pat Jennings' world record of 119 international appearances. England also will try to avenge its loss to Ireland in the 1988 European Championships opener.

Large numbers of English fans began arriving in Cagliari by charter plane to find they are unwelcome guests. Trouble caused this week by hooligans has caused Sardinians to deny English access to many bars and restuarants.

Costa Rica, which has gone through four coaches in the last two years, makes its World Cup finals debut. Scotland is looking to advance to the second round of the World Cup for the first time.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Coast Guard officials say another series of explosions has rocked a burning tanker which is stranded off the coast of Galveston, Texas. Firefighters continue to pump water on the hull of the ship, which is in danger of sinking along with its 38-Million gallons of crude oil. The fires broke out yesterday after an explosion. Coast Guard officials say five large explosions rocked the stern of the burning tanker Mega Borg this afternoon... adding to worries the 853-foot ship could buckle and sink with its cargo of 38-Million gallons of crude oil.

Divers are trying to assess damage to a passenger ship that ran aground in heavy fog today about two miles off Cape Cod, Massachusetts. Reports say NONE of the 11-hundred people on board was hurt, but the ship is leaking fuel. The Coast Guard plans to evacuate the passengers from the Bermuda Star, which was en route from New York City to Provincetown when the incident occurred.

PORTLAND, OR (JUNE 10) UPI - In a matter of moments, Joe Dumars went from feeling the height of elation to the deepest of grief.

Minutes after scoring 33 points to give the Detroit Pistons a 121-106 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers and a 2-1 lead in the NBA Finals, Dumars was told his father, Joe Dumars II, had died earlier Sunday in Natchitoches,Louisiana.

An NBA spokeswoman said the elder Dumars had been in critical condition with a diabetic condition for some time and had had both legs amputated. Detroit captain Isiah Thomas said he was the lone Piston to know of the death during the game.

''I was looking at a guy who was really happy (during the game) and I knew in the next hour or so his world would be shattered,'' Thomas said.

Dumars was not available for comment. When his wife phoned from Detroit to tell him the distressing news, he broke down and left the arena immediately. He boarded Piston owner Bill Davidson's jet.

Dumars was to pick up his wife in Detroit and go on to Louisiana. There was no immediate word on whether he would play in Game 4 Tuesday night.

Dumars helped seal the victory early in the fourth quarter when, with the 24-second clock running down, he dropped a long jumper.

''I looked at him and said to myself, 'Your dad put that one in,''' Thomas said.

The triumph enabled Detroit put and end to almost 16 years of futility in Portland. By taking a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series, the Pistons subdued a raucous crowd at Memorial Coliseum with their first victory in Portland in 21 games since Oct. 19, 1974.

''This was the time and the place to do it,'' Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. ''We were in a precarious situation.''

Dumars, slowed the first two games by a hamstring injury, scored 21 points in the second half. He was complemented by Vinnie Johnson, who awoke from a deep slump to add 21 points, 15 of them coming in the second quarter and 6 coming in the fourth.

The Trail Blazers fell for the first time in 10 home playoff games this season. The defeat also ended any hopes they had of sweeping their three home games, thus capturing the NBA title without making a return to Detroit.

''I don't think there was any letdown (after winning Game 2 in overtime)

'' Portland Coach Rick Adelman said. ''We're in a fight for the world championship. You don't let down.''

Games 4 and 5 of the best-of-seven series will take place Tuesday and Thursday nights in Portland.

The defending NBA champions had dropped four of their previous five road games, and their overtime loss in Game 2 cost them their home-court advantage. Yet they regrouped behind Dumars, who made 11 of 22 shots and sank all 9 of his free throws.

Johnson, who had missed 22 of his previous 25 shots over the previous four games, made 9 of 13 shots. Detroit made 53 percent of its field-goal attempts.

The Trail Blazers were within 90-82 entering the fourth quarter, but missed their first five shots and committed three turnovers. That allowed the Pistons to take their largest lead at 98-82 with 9:12 remaining and they coasted from there.

Isiah Thomas added 21 points for Detroit, which played without injured forward Dennis Rodman. Bill Laimbeer had 11 points and 12 rebounds. The Pistons' bench outscored its Portland counterparts 34-12.

Jerome Kersey paced the Trail Blazers with 20 of his 27 points in the second half.

The victory marked the first time in six games in these playoffs that Detroit won a game in which it surrendered at least 100 points.

The Pistons expanded their 58-51 halftime lead to 75-62 with 5:15 left in the third period when Porter passed up a wide-open 3-pointer, then threw a bad pass inside that turned into a Detroit fastbreak and two Dumars free throws.

Dumars, who had 13 points in the third period, then handed the Pistons their biggest lead to that point at 86-71 with 2 more foul shots with 2:30 to play in the quarter.

However, Kersey struck for 6 of his 14 third-period points, and Drexler added two free throws and a 3-pointer in an 11-4 spurt that carried the Trail Blazers to within 90-82 entering the fourth quarter.

Johnson entered to start the second quarter and quickly nailed his first two jumpers. That bode trouble for the Trail Blazers.

The 6-foot-2 sparkplug, who was 1 of 10 in the first two games, dropped in 13 of the Pistons' first 19 points in the period as Detroit grabbed a 50-39 advantage with 4:42 left in the quarter.

With the visitors ahead 54-45, Laimbeer took an ill-advised 3-pointer, setting up the first of two Kersey fastbreak layups that brought Portland to within 54-50. But the Pistons steadied to lead by 7 at intermission.

With Kevin Duckworth hitting his first 4 shots, the Trail Blazers raced to a 22-16 lead. Thomas, though, made a 3-point play, then slipped around Porter for a jumper to ignite a 15-3 run that pushed Detroit ahead.

The Pistons had seldom-used substitutes David Greenwood and Scott Hastings on the floor at the end of the quarter, in which Detroit shot 57 percent from the field and led 31-27.

(JUNE 10) UPI - More explosions rip through an oil tanker burning off the Texas coast... A cruise ship runs aground off Cape Cod, Massachusetts... A report says a C-I-A tip led to Nelson Mandela's arrest 28 years ago... And President Bush hosts Mexico's president at the White House tonight... This and more news, next, from U-P-I.

The situation is getting worse aboard a Norwegian tanker that's on fire in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Coast Guard says five more explosions occurred today aboard the tanker Mega Borg, which has been on fire since an explosion ripped through it early yesterday. The ship is anchored about 57 miles southeast of Galveston, Texas.

The initial blast left two people dead and two more missing and presumed dead.

Coast Guard Chief Todd Nelson says the new blasts are ''the first solid indication'' that some of the ship's cargo of 38-Million gallons of oil has spilled. He says- ''the crude oil is rolling off the boat into the water aflame.''

Nelson says part of the ship has shifted farther down in the water, but officials DON'T know if it's sinking. He says Coast Guard officials and firefighters are meeting to decide what to do about the new explosions and larger fire.

NO one was injured when a passenger liner with about 11-hundred people aboard ran aground in heavy fog today about two miles off Cape Cod, Massachusetts.

The Coast Guard says the cruise ship Bermuda Star was bound for Provincetown from New York City when it ran aground in a rocky, shallow area called Cleveland Ledge, near Buzzard's Bay.

Coast Guard spokesman Steve Aitkins says the ship took on water for about 90 minutes, but the flooding was brought under control.

The Coast Guard sent several ferry boats to evacuate the passengers to shore.

The ship leaked fuel for several hours, but officials say the leak does NOT pose a major environmental threat.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Scotland Yard investigators think an explosion at a North London British Army headquarters last night may be the work of the Irish Republican Army.

NO one has claimed responsibility for the blast, which injured 17 civilians as they attended a birthday party for a military officer's son.

Anti-terrorist police have sealed off roads and are scouring the area around the Territorial Army headquarters in an effort to track suspects.

Police suspect the I-R-A because, as one officers says- ''Anything with a military connection at the moment is a target'' for the group.

Two women are in the hospital with cuts from flying glass. 15 other people most of them students, were treated for minor injuies at a nearby hospital and released. The injured were among about 40 people attending a black-tie 21st birthday party.

A British Airways pilot had a close call today.

He was nearly sucked out of his jet after a cockpit window shattered.

The plane was cruising at some 24-thousand feet when the window blew out of the flight deck, about 20 minutes after take-off from Birmingham, England's Midland International Airport.

The quick pressure drop aboard the Spain-bound jet pulled Captain Tim Lancaster's upper body out of the broken window.

Crew members struggled... and finally succeeded... in pulling him back in.

The plane made an emergency landing at Eastleigh Airport in Southampton, about 76 miles southwest of London.

Lancaster is listed in good condition at Southampton hospital, where he's being treated for shock, frostbite and several minor fractures.

Civil Aviation investigators doN'T know yet what caused the window to break.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Mexico's President Carlos Salinas de Gortari is scheduled to have dinner with President Bush tonight at the White House. They're are expected to lay the groundwork for historic trade talks.

Formal announcement of the agreement to move ahead with the talks is expected tomorrow. Salinas will promote the trade initiative in meetings with Bush administration officials, members of Congress and American business executives.

The negotiations could lead to a historic opening of the two-thousand-mile U-S-Mexico border to free trade and investment.

The two countries have taken a series of trade expansion steps since 1986, starting with a ''bilateral framework agreement'' in 1987 that committed them to lower tariffs in seven specific areas.

Talk of a trade agreement has raised fears in the United States about Mexican demands for freer movement by Mexican workers to jobs in the United States.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution says a C-I-A tip 28 years ago led to South Africa's arrest of black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela .

A former C-I-A official who requested anonymity says Paul Eckel, a senior C-I-A operative who died in 1986, told him about the agency's role in the arrest shortly after Mandela was seized by South African agents on August 5th, 1962.

The official called it ''one of the most shameful utterly horrid'' incidents in the Cold War struggle between Moscow and Washington for influence in the Third World.

The Atlanta report says at the time of Mandela's arrest, the C-I-A saw the African National Congress as a threat to stability of the friendly South African government.

The 71-year-old Mandela was released from prison in February after serving a 28-year term. He's to arrive in the United States June 20th for a visit.

NEW YORK (JUNE 10) UPI - The Mirage in Las Vegas, Nev., Sunday won promotional rights to the James ''Buster'' Douglas-Evander Holyfield heavyweight championship bout with a bid of $32.1 million and scheduled the fight for Sept. 20.

The World Boxing Association ordered the purse bid because champion Douglas and No. 1 contender Holyfield failed to agree to terms.

In the first purse bidding in history for a heavyweight title bout, Steve Wynn's casino topped a $29.101 million bid by Holyfield's promoter, Dan Duva of Main Events. Douglas will earn $24.075 million - 75 percent of the total purse - for his first title defense, while Holyfield will make $8.025 million.

''The most important thing is the date is set and I'll have the opportunity to win the championship,'' Holyfield said. ''There was a lot of confusion but the WBA stood up and I'll get the opportunity to fight.

''I'm just happy I'll get the opportunity to go for the championship.''

Douglas already had a conditional contract to fight Holyfield at The Mirage for $25 million but it was dependent on him freeing himself of promoter Don King in court.

The champion's manager John Johnson said he was happy The Mirage won the fight but was disappointed that the winning bid wasn't higher ''into the 30s.''

''I'm happy because Don King (originally) offered me 10 million to fight Mike Tyson (in an immediate rematch) and now we're getting at least 24 million to fight Evander Holyfield - that's 24-something plus 75 percent of everything over $35 million,'' Johnson said.

Wynn and Duva were the only bidders. Mirage executive Bob Halloran and attorney Bruce Levin dered the winning bid. Although he was outbid, Duva said he did not feel like a loser. He said before the bid he was hoping to secure at least $8 million for Holyfield.

''I'm very happy. We were in a win, win situation,'' Duva said. ''Our main objective was getting Evander Holyfield a shot at the world championship.

It's a fair purse.

''If Steve Wynn loses three or four million dollars, he can write that off. He can make it up at the casino or write it off as advertising. I can't do that. All I could do was make a realistic bid and hope that if I got outbid, I got outbid by a lot. I didn't want to get outbid by a dollar.''

Holyfield has been the top-ranked contender since March 1989. He signed for a June 18 title bout against Tyson that would have paid $12 million, but the fight was scrapped when Douglas scored a shocking knockout of Tyson Feb. 10 in Tokyo.

''I guess it ain't happened until the day comes,'' Holyfield said. ''When I got here I had butterflies because it was finally going to come. I came into the room feeling something good would happen. I'm satisfied with the outcome.''

Holyfield said he'll start training at the end of July in Houston.

''Douglas is a good fighter, he proved it by beating Tyson. I have to go out and force him into making the mistakes he forced Tyson to make,'' Holyfield said.

The impasse forcing the bid stemmed from Douglas' litigation to escape his exclusive promotional contract with King. The sides are set to go to trial June 26 in New York.

Negotiators for King and Douglas spoke throughout the weekend in Las Vegas in an attempt to reach an agreement without going to purse bids. Negotiations ended with no agreement at 9 a.m. PDT Sunday, four hours before the bid.

WBA legal counsel Jimmy Binns said he expected Douglas and Holyfield will abide by the terms of the purse bid.

Johnson, however, said ''We can't make any decision until we see what the court's going to do. We're at a loss as to who's the boss. I don't know who's in charge.''

Monday, New York district judge Robert Sweet will hold a hearing on King's motion to block the purse bid. King has requested last Tuesday that the judge prevent the purse bid; Sweet did nothing to prevent it but said he would hear arguments on why it should be kept from being ''effectuated.''

PANAMA CITY, PANAMA (JUNE 10) UPI - President Guillermo Endara married a 23-year-old law student at the Metropolitan Cathedral Sunday as hundreds of well-wishers crowded under canvas shelters to get out of a steady rain.

Endara's marriage to Ana Mae Diaz, in a ceremony performed by Papal Nuncio Jose Sebastian Laboa, was a subject of humor for some Panamanians and the cause of controversy for others.

Refugees from the city's El Chorillo neighborhood, where 2,300 families were left homeless by the Dec. 20 U.S. invasion that ousted former military ruler Manuel Noriega, complained that Endara had been distracted from their problems.

The refugees marched recently to the U.S. Embassy, chanting, ''Endara se casa, y El Chorrillo sin casa,'' a Spanish play on words that means ''Endara gets married while El Chorrillo is without houses.''

Only photographers and television cameramen were allowed into the cathedral for the wedding, attended by vice presidents Guillermo Ford and Ricardo Arias Calderon.

Hundreds of well-wishers gathered at the Independence Plaza in downtown Panama City at the cathedral, where they took refuge from the steady rain under refreshment shelters set up for the occasion.

Endara has been described by his bride as ''a gentleman from the times of pure romanticism.''

Diaz said the reception at the presidential palace was going to be a simple affair, with only ''things to pick at and soft drinks.''

Endara's daughter, Marcela, who has been acting first lady since her father took office, said she was pleased to hand over the role to the new bride. ''My father is getting married and I am very happy,'' she said. ''He has every right to start his life over.''

Endara, 54, whose first wife died a year ago, has shrugged off jokes and criticism over his marriage, saying his government is progressing in its plans to rebuild El Chorrillo.

''Thanks to God, many Panamanians are united with women. It is natural. It is what God wants. It is what society wants. I do not see any resistance to this,'' Endara told reporters this week.

The wedding, announced several months ago, has also drawn jokes from Panamanian cartoonists and smiles within gossip circles in the capital.

One cartoon showed Endara plucking petals off a daisy, saying, ''She loves me, she loves me not'' as he ignores government business and phone calls from diplomats.

Some observers say Endara has been acting more like a teenager in love than a head of state.

The Metropolitan Cathedral was the site of Endara's 13-day hunger strike in March, which he described as a Lenten sacrifice to show solidarity with the country's poor.

Others saw the strike as a way to pressure the U.S. government into speeding up emergency aid for the country.

Endara, an amiable labor lawyer with a wide girth and an easy smile, headed a coalition of opposition candidates in last year's presidential election. He was reportedly leading by a margin of 3 to 1 over Noriega-backed candidate Carlos Duque when the electoral tribunal annulled the elections.

Endara was sworn in during the U.S. invasion.

Diaz was active in the university civic movement, a group of students who opposed Noriega's military leadership. The two met during Endara's first hunger strike last September to protest the Noriega regime.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Friends and family bid farewell to Janet Adkins today in Portland, Oregon. The college teacher... who suffered from Alzheimer's disease... used a so-called ''suicide machine'' last week to kill herself, rather than face life with the debilitating disease. Jibril, who was interviewed in Iran, is suspected in the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 that killed 270 people.

(JUNE 10) UPI - Fear grows that a burning oil tanker will sink in the Gulf of Mexico...

A cruise ship runs aground off Cape Cod...

And Peru has a new president...

These stories... and more... next, from U-P-I:

Three fireboats are spraying water to cool the tanker Mega Borg, which is still burning in the Gulf of Mexico about 57 miles southeast of Galveston, Texas.

A private firefighting firm plans an all-out assault on the blaze tomorrow using chemical foam and teams of firefighters who will be sent onto the forward decks.

Officials grew more concerned the ship might sink after five more explosions ripped through the vessel today... pushing the stern a little farther into the water. Officials DON'T know if it's sinking, but Coast Guard Lieutenant Commander Frank Whipple says if it does- quote- ''it's going to pose significant problems.''

The tanker is carrying 38-Million gallons of oil. Up to 10-thousand gallons has already spilled, but the Coast Guard says that should dissipate or evaporate on its own.

The tanker has been burning since an explosion early yesterday that killed two crew members and left two others missing and presumed dead. The bodies of the two crew members were taken off the ship's deck before today's blasts.

The Coast Guard says anywhere from one-thousand to 15-hundred gallons of fuel leaked from a Panamanian-registered cruise ship today when it ran aground off Cape Cod. But they say the leak is NOT a major environmental threat.

The Bermuda Star... bound for Nova Scotia from New York with a stop-off in Provincetown, Massachusetts... struck a rocky bottom this morning as it approached the Cape Cod Canal in dense fog. The ship was being guided by a licensed local navigator when the incident occurred. Visibility at the time was only about 40 yards.

Coast Guard rescuers arrived on the scene to try to dislodge the ship from the ocean floor at high tide. When that didN'T work, they evacuated the stranded vessel's nearly 11-hundred passengers and crew.

The grounding is the second major cruise line mishap along the East Coast in three weeks.

Salinas, who is in the United States for an UNofficial visit, was guest of honor at an evening reception... and then joined Bush for a private dinner in the White House family quarters.

Formal announcement of a decision on trade talks is expected tomorrow... in time for Salinas to promote the initiative in meetings with administration officials, lawmakers and business executives.

The trade talks could lead to a historic opening of the two-thousand-mile-long U-S-Mexican border to freer trade and investment.

Israel's acting Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir won a big victory today.

His conservative Likud party overwhelmingly approved a coalition pact with right-wing and religious parties to form Israel's next government.

The seven-party coalition is expected to go on to win a vote of confidence from the Israeli Parliament tomorrow... but that depends on Shamir's willingness to award jobs to four leaders of Likud bloc factions who are jockeying for ministry positions.

Shamir today told the Central Committee in Tel Aviv that he's all but ruled out any additional appointments to the Cabinet, but said later he would cross that road when he came to it.

The threats by the four leader to withhold support for the coalition highlights its fragility. Shamir has secured only 62 seats in the 120-member chamber to claim a majority.

Israeli newspapers fired off pessimistic editorials about the new coalition- one of the most conservative in the nation's history. Two newspapers warned that a hard-line Israeli stance would lead to increasing confrontation with the United States and the Soviet union.

U-S officials have already flown two planeloads of U-S citizens to safety in the neighboring West African nation of Ivory Coast. A third chartered flight is planned for later tonight.

The evacuation comes as rebels and government troops prepare for peace talks tomorrow in neighboring Sierra Leona. The proposed talks have diffused several days of heavy fighting and reportedly escalating acts of brutality near the capital city of Monrovia.

And while violence has largely subsided, U-S officials are still keeping a close eye on the vast Bridgestone-Firestone rubber plantation plant... where both rebel and government troops are believed to be mobilizing.

(JUNE 10) UPI - A memorial service was held today in Portland, Oregon, for Janet Adkins... the Alzheimer's disease victim who took her own life last week with the help of a Michigan doctor.

Friends who attended the service at Portland's First Unitarian Church supported Adkins' decision. One said ''she lived her life a pioneer, and that is exactly how she died.'' Another said his ''respect for her is greater than ever.''

Adkins, a former teacher at Portland Community College, was a member of the Hemlock Society, a group based in Eugene that supports the right of Officials hope to manufacture marketable semi-conductors aboard Kristall.

The Iranian Parliament today voted to merge the nation's internal security force with other urban and paramilitary rural police to battle drug traffickers near the Pakistani border. Conservatives opposed the move because they think it will lead to the disbandment of the Islamic Revolutionary Komitehs, which was created after the Islamic revolution in 1979.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Bridgestone announced today that it will contribute a total of $500,000 over the next five years to support Operation Roadblock, the anti-drug campaign of the National Association of Truck Stop Operators (NATSO) and the American Truck Stop Foundation (ATSF).

Bridgestone, a division of Bridgestone/Firestone Inc., will contribute $100,000 per year through 1994 to support the program.

Bridgestone is now the single largest financial supporter of Operation

Roadblock, and the only tire company to become involved in the national campaign. Announced earlier this year, NATSO's Operation Roadblock is an education and enforcement effort aimed at eliminating the use and sale of illegal drugs at truck stops and the use of such substances by the nation's truck drivers.

Besides drivers, Operation Roadblock targets truck stop operators and employees, as well as fleet operators. Since the program's inception, ATSF has actively sought donations from association members, truck drivers and from truck stop suppliers, such as Bridgestone.

Attendees at the press conference included Rep. Bob Clement (D-TN), major sponsor of the Drug Free Truck Stop Act (H.R. 3673) now pending in Congress. The bill would set minimum sentencing standards for those convicted of selling illicit drugs within 1,000 feet of a truck stop or highway rest area. Subsequent convictions could result in tripled penalties, according to the bill.

Operation Roadblock has already produced an instructional video on the dangers of drug use, and has aired anti-drug radio public service announcements featuring Richard Sterban of the country music group the Oak Ridge Boys.

Planned in the near future are a toll-free telephone help line for drivers; a comprehensive educational manual for all NATSO member truck stops, which will outline how truck stops can develop effective and wide-ranging anti-drug programs; and distribution of a series of video tapes describing the gravity of, and solutions to, drug abuse in the workplace.

The Bridgestone Division of Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. is based in Nashville, Tenn., and markets a complete line of passenger, high performance, light truck, truck and bus, off-the-road, industrial, agricultural, rally, kart, motorcycle, and motorsport tires, as well as a variety of industrial rubber goods, and aviation tires.

Bridgestone radial passenger, truck and bus tires are manufactured in La Vergne, Tenn. A new $350 million radial truck tire plant is presently under construction in Warren County, Tenn.

Bridgestone/Firestone Inc., headquartered in Akron, Ohio, manufactures and markets Bridgestone, Firestone and Dayton brand tires, and a wide range of industrial and synthetic rubber goods. Bridgestone/Firestone Inc., is a wholly owned subsidiary of Bridgestone Corp., a global tire and rubber manufacturer with headquarters in Tokyo, Japan. Bridgestone Corp. is one of the world's largest tire and rubber companies, and markets its products in more than 150 nations and territories around the world.

NATSO is the legislative and industry representative of the $23 billion truck stop industry in North America. The 1,000 NATSO truck stop members across America are responsible for marketing more than 10 billion gallons, or two-thirds, of the retail diesel fuel sold in America annually.

The ATSF is an educational and charitable foundation, formed in 1989 to pursue projects of interest to the truck stop industry and the general public.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Calera Recognition Systems Inc. Monday unveiled WordScan and WordScan Plus, OCR software that combines Calera's industry-leading omnifont technology with many exclusive features previously available only in high-end OCR systems.

WordScan is also the first omnifont OCR software designed to run on both PC 286 and 386 platforms with only 2 megabytes memory. Calera also introduced WordScan Plus/AT and WordScan Plus/MCA which include a special accelerator board for IBM PC/ATs and compatibles or PS/2s with MCA.

Designed specifically to run under Windows 3.0, the WordScan family gives PC users easy-to-use graphical tools for scanning hardcopy documents into their computer quickly and accurately.

Priced at only $595, WordScan sets a new price point for true omnifont OCR software while WordScan Plus at $995 offers unparalleled features such as the Pop-up Verifier which improves overall throughput by over 50 percent.

With the Pop-up Verifier, users can quickly check and correct, if necessary, recognition errors in half the time required by other OCR products.

Other exclusive features in WordScan Plus include Clipping, Deferred Processing, Multi-Job Processing and Style Sheets that enable users to easily control what goes into their word processing, spreadsheet or database programs.

Founded in 1982, Calera Recognition Systems is the leading manufacturer of document recognition systems and scanners for use in the office environment.

From the beginning, the company has focused its attention on developing the highest performance document recognition technology for uses ranging from desktop to large systems applications.

Today, Calera manufactures products for many leading platforms including IBM PC and compatibles, PS/2 with MCA, Apple Macintosh and Sun workstations at a wide range of price points from $595 to $30,000.

Their products are compatible with all leading scanners and software applications. Calera is based in Santa Clara, with branch offices located in Los Angeles, Dallas, Chicago, Washington, New York and Boston.

Calera serves international markets through authorized dealers and distributors.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Calera Recognition Systems Inc. Monday announced its commitment to incorporate high-end $30,000 recognition technology into OCR software for Macintosh and popular Unix workstations.

Calera, one of the leading suppliers of OCR technology, also introduced today WordScan, its Windows 3.0-based OCR software at prices starting at $595.

Calera is introducing its first series of software-only products today with its WordScan family for IBM PC/ATs and compatibles and PS/2 with MCA machines.

These products are designed to run under Microsoft's recently announced Windows 3.0. Priced at only $595, WordScan sets a new price point for true omnifont OCR software while WordScan Plus at $995 offers exclusive unparalleled features such as Pop-up Verifier that improve overall throughput by over 50 percent.

As part of Calera's intention to offer OCR software for major platforms, Calera will be developing low-priced Macintosh software to be released in the fall of 1990. In addition to the Macintosh products, Calera is developing for release in early 1991 software-only solutions for Unix workstations, beginning with support of Sun's SPARC. Due to advantages in Unix platform cross compatibility, support for other workstations will follow quickly. Other product plans include the release of upgraded versions of its TopScan Professional PC/AT and PS/2 with MCA products to run under Windows 3.0 in the fall 1990.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - SynOptics Communications Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:SNPX), a leading supplier of local area networking products, Monday announced plans to move its corporate headquarters to the Great American Corporate Center in Santa Clara, Calif.

Currently based in Mountain View, SynOptics has seen tremendous growth during its five-year history. Anticipation of continued growth has prompted the company to seek a larger facility in a campus-style layout, where all corporate employees can be housed at the same location.

The Great American Corporate Center, built and owned by Sobrato Development Cos., is a 300,000-square-foot complex of two six-story buildings located at 4301 and 4401 Great America Parkway.

SynOptics will initially occupy 175,000 square feet, with the commitment to occupy a minimum of 250,000 square feet within the next 18 months.

Of SynOptics' 500 employees, approximately 300 will move to the new headquarters in mid-October. These employees in finance and administration, marketing and engineering are currently housed at the company's Middlefield Road facility. The company also has an option to construct a manufacturing facility on the Great American site. The company's manufacturing facility is currently located at 319 North Bernardo Ave. in Mountain View.

Studios Architecture of San Francisco has been contracted to design the interior space. Other local technology companies which have benefited from the designs of Studios Architecture include Apple Computer Inc., 3Com Corp. and Silicon Graphics Inc.

SynOptics Communications Inc. designs, manufactures and markets local area networking products based on its Network Utility Architecture, a value-added product strategy which incorporates network connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions into an integrated networking system.

SynOptics' common stock is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol SNPX. Revenue of $77.3 million was reported for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Earnings for the same period were $9.4 million or $1.22 per share. The company is currently headquartered at 501 E. Middlefield Road, Mountain View, Calif., 94043. Telephone (415) 960-1100.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Managistics Inc., a New York based payroll processing subsidiary of Bank of America, announced Monday the acquisition of the payroll services business of Applied Data Inc. (ADI) in Connecticut.

Managistics will continue payroll and payroll tax processing for ADI clients throughout Connecticut utilizing ADI's existing staff and facilities.

''We are excited to expand our service area in the Northeast by associating with a well-respected company like Applied Data,'' said Jim Barbeau, president of Managistics. ''Our combined resources should enable us to provide the best possible payroll and tax service in Connecticut.''

Managistics is one of the largest providers of payroll services on the East Coast. It serves clients in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

Founded in 1961, ADI has been in the payroll business, meeting its customers' needs for almost 30 years.

''After twenty years in the payroll business,'' said Robert J. McNiff, president of ADI, ''I'm pleased to be affiliated with a company that has such a strong reputation for quality. Bank of America has an excellent history of client retention in the payroll processing industry. I know our clients are in good hands.''

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Gala, a full service catering and event planning company, has opened on the San Francisco peninsula and one of the company's first assignments was a plum job catering a San Francisco Chamber of Commerce mixer.

With a 35,000 square-foot kitchen, the ability to serve up to 10,000 people at a time and the backing of parent Marriott Corp., the new company adds a new dimension to Bay Area catering capabilities.

Gala general manager Janice Crawford, a 25-year veteran of the catering business, says the company will offer ''upscale, personalized service with an understated elegance.'' The company will split its operation into three divisions: social, business and wholesale event planning and catering.

Business affairs will include company picnics and holiday parties, retirement parties, award banquets, grand openings and business lunches, according to Crawford. Gala will have professional event planners who will handle the event from concept to completion.

Because of the huge capacity of its catering operation, Crawford believes Gala will pick up some wholesale business from restaurants and smaller caterers that sometimes take on more than they can handle alone.

Executive chef is Ray Mazotti, formerly executive chef for American Hawaii Cruises and chef for Holland America Lines and the Ritz Old Poodle Dog and Black Horse restaurants in San Francisco.

Crawford promises that service and quality are the priorities for Gala. Each menu will be custom designed. Table appointments will feature silver plate flatware and serving pieces, china and fine stem ware.

Services offered by the company include music and entertainment, floral arrangements, international gourmet and beverage presentations, limousine service, valet service, photographers, security personnel, staging and display and individual monogramming of promotional gift items.

The company will deliver the complete event package to the customers' selected location or suggest such elegant settings as The Flood Mansion, The California Academy of Science, San Francisco Gift Center, Montalvo, Winchester Mystery House or Napa Valley wineries like Inglenook, Charles Krug or Gloria Ferrer.

SIGNAL HILL, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Garrick E. Batt, president and chief executive officer of Randomex Inc., the nation's leading supplier of disk maintenance service, Monday announced the successful acquisition of the assets of Lowell, Mass.-based Scopus Corp.

Scopus, a Randomex competitor in the magnetic-media-service marketplace, reported annualized sales of approximately $3.7 million. With over 30 employees, Scopus concentrated its telemarketing efforts on government organizations and commercial companies primarily on the East Coast.

Randomex employs over 125 people, utilizes a direct field-sales organization and operates out of 35 sales/service offices nationwide.

''In keeping with our plans for aggressive growth in the 1990s, the purchase of their physical and operating assets makes a lot of sense for three reasons,'' Batt said.

''It allows us to immediately increase our presence on the East Coast. Second, since Scopus directed its marketing efforts at a different type of customer, we gained a foothold into a different customer base. Also, we have now acquired manufacturing capability.

''With this purchase, we have solidified our position as the nation's leading disk media service organization,'' Batt stated.

Scopus will be run from the current Lowell headquarters as an operating unit of Randomex. Although the disk-service technology employed by Scopus differs from that used by Randomex (wet vs. dry), the businesses are complementary.

According to Batt, the asset acquisition will be transparent. In general the same qualified technicians will be servicing the same customers in the same professional manner. ''We do not anticipate any significant personnel changes at this time,'' Batt stated.

''In fact, the one-third increase in the size of our customer base as a result of the asset acquisition will most likely result in our having to add even more personnel,'' he said.

Founded in 1971, Randomex is a pioneer in the development, manufacturing and sales of high-quality disk maintenance cleaning and inspection equipment. The dynamic leadership and strategic planning of corporate management over the past several years has positioned the firm as the leading supplier of disk-maintenance services in the United States.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - The Bush Administration can be expected to propose a severe limitation on federal deposit insurance for individual depositors when a Congressionally-mandated study is completed next year, a prominent financial analyst said Monday, June 11.

Allan G. Bortel, a vice president in the Corporate Finance Department of Sutro & Co. Incorporated, said it appears likely that the Administration will seek to limit deposit insurance to $100,000 per individual investor.

If such a ceiling is imposed it would trigger a tremendous increase in demand for U.S. Treasury bills and bonds, Bortel said. Individuals who presently have $100,000 accounts at several banks or savings and loans would be inclined to close all but one and put the withdrawn funds into more secure investments, he said.

''While this wouldn't create a run on the S&Ls, it would certainly put the squeeze on them at a time when they desperately need more deposits from individuals to broaden their capital bases,'' Bortel asserted.

Bortel, a veteran analyst who specializes in the thrift industry, is a key member of the Depository Institutions Financing and Advisory Group at Sutro, a 132-year-old investment banking firm based in San Francisco. He addressed his remarks to The Security Analysts of San Francisco at a luncheon meeting in the Hyatt Regency hotel.

Bortel said the proposal to reduce federal insurance coverage is expected to be made to a Congressional committee as a result of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA).

FIRREA directed the Treasury to recommend ways to reduce the government's exposure on federal deposit insurance, and ordered a report by February 1991.

''When the Bush Administration asks Congress to limit deposit insurance to $100,000 per individual, we can expect a storm of protest from retired persons and their lobbyists,'' Bortel said.

Congress may then attempt to raise the federal assessments that banks and savings and loans must pay on depositors' funds, Bortel said. But these institutions are already heavily assessed and will undoubtedly put up a strong fight against any further increases, he added.

''The upshot is likely to be a compromise that will still impose some limit on deposit insurance,'' Bortel said. ''I would expect to see something like a maximum of $500,000 per individual.

''Even that limitation will cause a problem for many people who have relied on deposit insurance to provide security for their retirement funds.''

Bortel pointed out that Congress contributed heavily to the risk the government now takes in providing deposit insurance.

''In 1980, Congress raised the maximum amount that could be insured from $40,000 to $100,000, thereby exposing the government to dangers no one had even dreamed of,'' Bortel said.

''What it comes down to is that individual depositors will have to pay the price for the mistakes of Congress and the regulators, the mismanagement and misdeeds of so many banks and S&L executives, and the real estate collapse in the Southwest. The depositors are in no way responsible for today's S&L crisis, but they'll have to pick up a big part of the tab for the problem.''

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - 3Com Corp. Monday announced two products for 3+Open networks, a directory service and a menu interface, which are the latest offerings in 3Com's continuing program to add value to LAN Manager networks by providing easier access to a broader range of applications.

3+Open Directory is the only global naming product for LAN Manager systems designed to ease users' access to resources located anywhere on multivendor networks. The directory service platform incorporates features that ease administration of large networks while increasing network dependability and offers a design based on the emerging International Standards Organization and Comite' Consultatif Internationale De Te'Le'Graphique Et Te'Le'Phoneique's (CCITT) X.500 convention for network naming.

3+Open Menus will provide an intelligent workstation menu interface that simplifies users' interaction on multivendor networks. With 3+Open Menus, users can access the applications or information they need without knowledge of network configuration or physical location of the applications.

''The directory and menus services enhance the value of our customer's network systems by ensuring access to multivendor applications and resources around the world,'' said Eugene Buechele, vice president and general manager of 3Com's management, messaging and connectivity division.

''Automatic loading of applications from 3+Open Menus will save time and reduce network complexity for LAN Manager users and 3+Open Directory's distributed database of network information gives customers the ease of use and reliability they need.''

3+Open Directory distributes information among the most efficient and appropriate network resources, but appears to the user as a single repository for such data as network names and addresses.

3Com's directory service automatically synchronizes directory updates across the network, giving users access to consistent information. Moreover, replication of data on multiple servers across the global network gives users virtually uninterrupted access to directory information, despite the possibility of problems on any segment of the network.

The directory services product also provides a smooth migration path from earlier 3Com naming products. 3+Open Directory incorporates the functionality of 3+Name and 3+Open Name, and offers five additional services, including a converter, a name gateway and server-based directory service agents.

These services allow users to convert existing name data to 3+Open Directory and use existing 3+Open application programs, saving administrative time and preserving investment in existing networks.

3+Open Menus adds still more value to LAN Manager networks with a DOS workstation menu interface providing simplified access to applications, network resources and DOS commands. Users select menu items with a keyboard or mouse.

Co-developed with Saber Software Corp., the 3+Open Menus product gives end users access to resources on multivendor networks -- including 3+, 3+Open, Novell NetWare and Banyan Vines -- simply by selecting items from the menu.

The product includes intelligence that adapts its display to present only those options available to the user at a particular workstation. In addition, end users have the option of creating custom menus through an editor that prompts each step of the menu design. These features allow the network administrator to configure menus easily for each user.

''Microsoft is pleased that OEMs such as 3Com continue to add value to LAN Manager with products based on industry standards,'' said Michael Murray, Microsoft Corp.'s general manager of networking business. ''3Com's X.500-based directory service not only meets customers' needs today, but will provide an important platform for compatibility with future X.500 implementations from other vendors.''

3+Open Directory and 3+Open Menus will be available in the fall from 3Com and its worldwide network of resellers and distributors. 3+Open Directory is compatible with 3+Open 1.1 and LAN Manager 2.0, and runs on OS/2 servers. Pricing for both products will be announced upon availability.

3Com Corp. is a leading independent global data networking company, providing multivendor connectivity that spans organizations and businesses worldwide. The company designs, manufactures, markets and supports networking systems based on industry standards and open systems architecture.

COLORADO SPRINGS, CO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Semiconductor manufacturer Atmel Corp. Monday announced its formal entry into the gate array market with a six-device family, termed the ATL series, that features densities up to 157,000 gates.

This high-speed, advanced CMOS (complementary metal-oxide semiconductor) modified sea-of-gates family offers an input/output (I/O) capability of up to 320 pins.

The announcment came during the Silicon Mountain Symposium, a two-day, high-technology media meeting and exhibit being held in Colorado Springs. Atmel, with headquarters in San Jose, Calif., is a major manufacturer of standard and proprietary memory, logic and mixed-signal complex integrated circuits whose domestic wafer fabrication facilities are located in Colorado Springs.

The company's entry into this ASIC (application specific integrated circuit) market segment is the result of two major acquisitions. Last summer Atmel purchased the semiconductor manufacturing facilities of Honeywell's Solid State Electronics Division.

The second expansion move, completed eariler this year, was the purchase from Westinghouse Corp. of its ASIC design capability, called the Chesapeake Design Center. Although Atmel is new to the gate array business, its recently acquired ASIC operation has produced over 650 personalizations including both military and commerical applications.

In addition to these application-specific arays, Atmel designs, develops, manufactures and markets, on a worldwide basis, several families of programmable and random-access memories, custom and programmable logic devices and various custom circuits for the makers of high-performace computers and computer-related systems, for both military and commercial applications.

SAUSALITO, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Computer software leader, Autodesk, (NASDAQ/NMS:ACAD) Monday announced that a new series of innovative education projects, initiated by the company's education department, is now under joint development with educators in three Marin County school districts.

The objective of the initiatives, known as the Marin Education Collaborative (MEC), is to develop educational programs that feature innovative teaching practices, promote the appropriate uses of technology, and support an integrated curriculum.

Officials of Autodesk and the county's education community expect the pilot projects, which commence in September 1990, to develop into national models.

In April, Autodesk sponsored the ''New Ideas/New Schools Forum'' which provided a rare opportunity for MEC partners to exchange information and insight with leaders from progressive schools across the United States.

The leading topics at the forum centered on discussions about restructuring the educational process, and the innovative use of technology. In his closing remarks at the forum, Joe Oakey, education department manager for Autodesk, commented on his company's participation.

All the initiatives are jointly planned with members of the Marin education community and will be implemented in K-12 public schools as resources and readiness allow.

The company is working with teachers and administrators from the Tamalpais Unified High School District, the Novato Unified School District, the San Rafael Unified School Districts to establish the Marin School for Integrated Studies (MSIS).

The students in the MSIS will work on integrated curriculum projects, often in groups, learning to utilize appropriate technology tools in an open environment that eschews traditional time constraints and classroom boundaries.

The project will be housed within San Anselmo's Sir Francis Drake High School and will be open in its initial year, beginning September 1990, to grade ten students.

In collaboration with the Novato Unified School District, Autodesk and district educators are planning a comprehensive elementary/middle school project with the objective of developing innovative writing and mathematics curriculum materials for students in younger age groups.

In related activity, discussion is also underway between Autodesk and the Marin Community Foundation to develop a community service, science education project.

Autodesk develops, markets and supports a family of computer-aided design, engineering and animation software products for desktop computers and workstations.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - National Semiconductor Corp.

Monday announced volume production of the industry's fastest PAL IC, featuring a maximum propagation delay time of 2 nanoseconds (ns).

The ECL PAL10016C4-2 is fabricated with National Semiconductor's Advanced Single-Poly Emitter-Coupled Technology (ASPECT II) process, which uses a tungsten fuse technology to help achieve high speed, without high power consumption.

National's 2ns device is twice as fast as the current ECL PAL products, and draws only 220mA current, a feature that gives it the best ECL speed/power ratio in the industry.

As a result of the decreased power consumption (equivalent amount of power as a standard 24-pin TTL PAL) the new ECL PAL device is now available in a 28-pin plastic leaded chip carrier (PLCC).

The PLCC, with shorter lead lengths, allows a maximum speed solution to packaging very fast ECL PALs, and can save up to 500 picoseconds in propagation delay time.

ECL PAL devices are used in the fastest switching circuits of super-minicomputers, high-end workstations and high-speed test equipment. In such ultra-fast designs, a difference of 1 or 2ns in delay time can translate into a significant improvement in overall system performance.

The PAL10016C4-2 is a combinational device that uses no clocking signals. It accepts 16 input lines, generating four output functions from these signals. Each output contains eight product terms, giving a total of 32 product terms per PAL circuit.

The ECL PAL10016C4-2VC is compatible with all prior ECL PAL products from National Semiconductor and is supported by PLAN II software, which allows automatic pin-list generation and creates the fusemap from the user-defined equations. All of National's PLDs may be programmed using standard third-party hardware and software tools.

Pricing in 100-piece quantities is $60.50 each for the 2-ns ECL PAL10016C4-2VC in a plastic chip carrier. Products are available now from authorized National Semiconductor distributors.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Guy F. Atkinson Co. of California (NASDAQ:ATKN) Monday announced the receipt of a contract with a value of approximately $120 million for construction of the Oakland Federal Building in Oakland, Calif., for the General Services Administration.

The award was made to an Atkinson operating unit, Walsh Construction Co. of Sacramento, Calif.

Walsh Construction, teaming with DWA Fed-Oak Inc. the developer of the project, will act as general contractor for the one-million-square-foot, twin 18-story office towers. Walsh's base contract provides opportunities for increases both in scope of work and contract amount.

The building will be constructed in Oakland's City Center Redevelopment area and will provide office space for Bay Area federal agencies. Construction is scheduled to begin in July 1990, with completion of the project planned for March 1993.

The project development team was selected through a competitive process based on the technical quality of each proposal, team experience, and project cost. As the general contractor, Walsh will provide the team with broad experience in building construction.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Schmid Laboratories, a division of London International Group plc, the world's largest condom manufacturers, breaks ground this week in San Francisco with the first multifaceted outdoor advertising campaign for branded condoms in the United States.

The need for condom advertising, long considered taboo, has emerged because of the public's concern about AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

The two-month condom advertising program has been designed to be creative, informative and will use unusual venues. The condom message, ''For extra protection -- Ramses Condoms'', will be displayed on 75 taxi cabs, 10 cable cars and 23 bus shelters throughout San Francisco.

According to Don Falk, president of Schmid Laboratories, ''The AIDS crisis has created an enormous awareness of the benefits of condoms as a prevention measure against sexually transmitted diseases. The key to knowledge is prevention, and the key to prevention is the correct use of condoms.'' He continued, ''It is our goal to use every vehicle possible to communicate this important message.''

Condom advertising has always had a history of difficulty and controversy. But now, with the AIDS crisis, consumers are looking for messages and Schmid Laboratories has developed a daring, new outdoor advertising campaign that answers their questions. Strategically designed to break in San Francisco during the 6th International Conference on AIDS (June 21-24) the company intentionally used this opportunity to break new ground in condom advertising.

There are over 2,000 journalists and 8,000 attendees expected to attend the conference.

The outdoor condom advertising campaign is one of a few innovations Schmid has offered to the industry. A recent example took place during this year's spring break, when Schmid hired a plane to tow a Ramses banner over Ft. Lauderdale Beach, Fla., and Padre Island, Texas, (both major gathering places for high school and college students).

In addition, radio talk show host, Don Imus, of WFAN in New York, has been talking extemporaneously about Ramses on-air, using a Ramses fact sheet as his script. During one spot alone, he spent a full six minutes promoting condom usage.

Schmid Labs is working closely with Gannet Outdoor on the placement of the bus shelter posters and TDI with the cable car and taxi top campaign.

CHICAGO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Information Resources Inc. (NASDAQ:IRIC) Monday announced it has created an Office of the Chief Executive, encompassing both the position of chief executive officer and chief operating officer.

The duties of the office and the title of chief executive officer will be shared by Gian Fulgoni, who will also retain the title vice chairman, and James Andress, who will also retain the title of president.

John Malec, IRI's chairman, stated: ''While this structure may be unusual for most companies, it makes sense for us. Most companies split the duties vertically; we have split them horizontally, across functional area.

''Gian knows the packaged goods business inside and out, while Jim is the more experienced manager. Both industry knowledge and experienced management are critical to our future success, and, in these two individuals, we have the good fortune to be blessed with personalities that unselfishly cooperate for the company's benefit.''

Chicago-based Information Resources develops and maintains computerized proprietary databases, decision-support software and mathematical models to assist clients, primarily in the consumer packaged goods industry, in testing, monitoring and evaluating their marketing plans for new products, media advertising, pricing and sales promotions.

REDMOND, WA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Microsoft Corp. and Everex Systems Inc. announced Monday that they have cracked a counterfeiting ring responsible for introducing more than 30,000 counterfeit copies of the MS-DOS operating system into the U.S. market.

In a series of lawsuits, the first of which was filed under seal on April 6, 1990, Microsoft and Everex jointly allege that a total of 16 individuals and business entities in New Jersey and northern California have engaged in the manufacture or sale of a counterfeit of the Microsoft MS-DOS product marketed by Everex under the tradename ''ParCorp.'' Everex is licensed by Microsoft to produce its MS-DOS product.

Seizure orders issued in connection with the lawsuits were executed at six separate locations in New Jersey and California between April 10 and May 8 1990. U.S. Marshals participated in some of the raids. Voluminous business records and more than 1,000 units of counterfeit product were seized. Several thousand additional units of the counterfeit and artwork used in its reproduction were subsequently surrendered by four of the defendants in response to an order issued by United States District Court Judge Charles A. Legge.

''Microsoft is committed to supporting its licensees,'' stated Joachim Kempin, Microsoft's vice president of OEM and product support services. ''Our customers are our top priority, and these lawsuits are part of our continuing effort to protect our OEM licensees and end users from counterfeiters.'' Based on a conservative preliminary estimate, the counterfeits involved in the recently filed suits displaced legitimate sales with a value in excess of $1.5 million.

Named as defendants in the lawsuits are J&S International, JIP Design and Joe Fok, all of San Jose, Calif.; American MultiSource Inc. (''AMS''); Manufacturing Service Inc. (''MSI''); Benny S. Lee, Norman Chan and Susan Chan, all of Fremont, Calif.; Micro-Generation, a Division of Continental Technology Inc., located in Edison, N.J., and its corporate officers Thomas Wu, Michael Wu and Frank Ho; and Asia Source Inc., located in San Jose, Calif., and its corporate officers Tai Yen Chu, Robert Young and Christi Liang. Asia Source was a customer of Micro-Generation.

''These lawsuits are part of a vigorous anti-piracy campaign by Microsoft '' said William H. Neukom, Microsoft's vice president of law and corporate affairs. ''We will not tolerate the infringement of our intellectual property rights or the rights of our licensees. Microsoft will take the strongest possible action against anyone who counterfeits its products.'' In addition to pursuing civil remedies, Microsoft and Everex intend to make the evidence gathered in the suits available to the U.S. Attorney and the FBI for possible criminal investigation.

According to Steve Hui, president and CEO of Everex, ''No individual or company other than Everex is authorized to produce the MS-DOS product marketed under the ParCorp tradename. Legitimate ParCorp MS-DOS is only available in conjunction with Everex's private-label computer systems -- it is never legitimately marketed as a standalone product.'' The bogus product looks very similar to the authentic ParCorp version of MS-DOS. It comes in a white box bearing rust-colored and light-brown lettering. The most obvious difference between the counterfeit and the authentic product is the absence of either a bar-code sticker or a date-code sticker on the counterfeit. One or the other is always visible on the outside of every box of genuine ParCorp MS-DOS.

MS-DOS is the most popular operating system for IBM PCs and compatible personal computers. It is in use on more than 30 million microcomputers around the world.

Microsoft Corp. (NASDAQ:''MSFT'') develops, markets and supports a wide range of software for business and professional use, including operating systems, languages and application programs, as well as books, hardware and CD-ROM products for the microcomputer marketplace.

Everex Systems, headquartered in Fremont, Calif., is a leading manufacturer of personal computers and peripheral and enhancement products for the personal computer marketplace. Founded in 1983, Everex markets its products worldwide through a network of value-added dealers and resellers.

ALAMEDA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Servio Corp. Monday announced a new version of GemStone, which was the first commercial object database management system.

GemStone 2.0 features significant performance improvements, high availability, and support for C++. In addition, Servio also announced GemStone Tools with the offering of a visual schema designer to accompany the release of GemStone 2.0.

GemStone, written in C, is based on a client/server architecture and supports all major workstations and servers from IBM, Digital Equipment Corp., Sun Microsystems as well as support for IBM PCs and compatibles and the Apple Computer Macintosh II. In addition, GemStone supports TCP/IP and DECnet protocols.

''As object-oriented technology is absorbed into mainstream computing, companies have the power to model their enterprise -- their data and information -- based on the real world,'' stated Carole Rutter, Servio's vice president of marketing.

''What they are finding is the emergence of a new kind of computing, with new goals and new techniques. Servio is the first company to provide integrated products and services to these companies. Gemstone 2.0 is a major advance in object database technology that encompasses the full functionality of conventional databases.''

GemStone is installed at over 120 commercial, government and educational sites throughout the world. GemStone 2.0 features the following improvements:

Servio has enhanced GemStone's performance, through improved caching, optimized algorithms, and greater flexibility in retrieving complex objects, thereby reducing network overhead. According to Servio, internal testing based on its C and Smalltalk interfaces has demonstrated a three-fold increase in performance.

GemStone was designed to run in a heterogeneous distributed computing environment to maximize the power and flexibility of all available computing resources. GemStone is based on a multi-threaded, client/server architecture and can be configured with clients and servers running on the same or heterogeneous machines, depending on the type of application.

For instance, the GemStone kernel can reside on a Sun workstation along with the application program, or the kernel can reside on the workstation with the application running on a DOS-based machine or Apple Computer Macintosh.

When the application and kernel are run on the same machine they can be linked into a single process for higher performance or run as separate processes to aid in application development. ''Servio is the first object database company to address database integrity and consistency when linking applications into the database,'' stated Dr. Jacob Stein, a senior technologist at Servio. ''GemStone's extensive audit and repair facilities address these concerns.''

In addition to the object-oriented data management kernel, GemStone features a data-definition-and-manipulation language that supports applications written in C, C++, Smalltalk/V, Smalltalk-80, Ada, Cobol, FORTRAN and LISP. GemStone also can interface with the SYBASE relational and DBMS.

Version 2.0 provides 24-hour continuous up-time for GemStone databases. This new functionality is made possible by the introduction of on-line back-up and other system features. ''Continuous up-time greatly broadens the class of applications for which GemStone is suited,'' continued Stein. ''Nonstop availability is another example of the maturity of GemStone.''

MILWAUKEE (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Firstar Corp. officials announced today that Richard W. Schoenke will become president and chief executive officer of Firstar Corporation of Minnesota, effective July 1, 1990.

He joins Senior Vice Presidents Richard A. Hansen and Dean R. Tollefson to complete the executive management team of Firstar Minnesota.

Earlier this year, Schoenke left First Bank System, where he was chief administrative officer.

Ronald A. Bero, senior executive vice president of Firstar Corporation, the parent company, said Schoenke's appointment was a key step in the company's plan to integrate and expand its network of Twin Cities banks.

''Dick Schoenke possesses a wealth of banking experience and a thorough understanding of the Twin Cities market,'' said Bero. ''In addition, his personal integrity and his record of community involvement are very consistent with our corporate values. He is well suited to oversee the consolidation and growth of our banks and to represent the Firstar organization in this important market.''

Bero noted that Firstar Minnesota is in the process of consolidating its ''backroom'' operations at one operations center in Mounds View, Minn., in order to upgrade customer service. In addition, the company plans to merge its Twin Cities area banks into one bank, which he said would result in additional service improvements.

Schoenke said he accepted the position because of Firstar's potential for rapid growth as one of just a few mid-size bank organizations in the market.

''The entrepreneurial aspects of this assignment are very appealing,'' he said. ''In just a few years, Firstar has assembled one of the area's most significant banking franchises. The quality and locations of its banks here present the opportunity for exceptional profitability and growth in the future.''

Schoenke, 46, was an executive of First Bank from 1979 until March, 1990. He held a series of positions leading to his appointment as chairman of First Bank Minneapolis and First Bank St. Paul in 1986. He was deeply involved in the merger of the two banks, renamed First Bank, N.A., in 1988. In late 1988, he was named chief administrative officer of First Bank System.

He holds a bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Wisconsin. He began his banking career in 1966 at Continental Bank, Chicago, Ill. Later, he served as a district manager for American Appraisal Company, Chicago, Ill., and as a senior vice president of Texas Commerce Bank, Houston, Texas, before coming to First Bank.

Schoenke is vice chairman of the Minneapolis Foundation and the Youth Trust. He is a director of Macalester College and the Minneapolis YMCA, for which he serves on the executive committee.

Firstar Corporation of Minnesota currently comprises nine banks with $845 million in assets. The acquisition of a 10th Minnesota bank, the $139 million First Western Bank of St. Louis Park, will be completed this summer. Firstar Corporation is an $8.4 billion bank holding company

BOULDER, CO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Charles G. Truzinski, chairman of the board of directors, announced at the annual meeting of shareholders that Amdura is continuing its efforts to market its stake in Vac-Tec, and that an unidentified party has signed a non-binding letter of intent for the possible purchase of Amdura's interest in the company.

The potential purchaser is now reviewing the company, with the results of that review expected to be completed by the end of June.

The terms of the letter have not been disclosed.

Amdura holds approximately 57 percent of Vac-Tec's outstanding shares of common stock, all of its outstanding preferred stock and intercompany debt owed by Vac-Tec in a principal amount in excess of $11 million.

In response to questions from shareholders, the company indicated that sales of $8-10 million might be achievable in the next 12 months, but that this figure did not constitute a firm forecast. Achievement of this figure would require a substantial increase in the current rate of sales. The company also indicated it does not anticipate a profit for its second quarter of 1990.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Singapore Airlines -- along with other South East Asian carriers Cathay Pacific, Malaysia Airlines and Royal Brunei Airlines -- has decided to become a member of the International Air Transport Association (IATA).

This will be effective July 1, 1990.

The membership, however, will be confined to the trade association of IATA where matters other than tariff development and coordination are dealth with. Singapore Airlines will merely maintain an observer status on the tariff coordination body.

In the past, there was no distinction between the trade association and the tariff coordination body.

IATA is an important organization. Its key role is in the coordination and standardization of activities among airlines on a global basis. IATA will continue to play a vital role in shaping the future infrastructural needs of airlines all over the world.

Even though Singapore Airlines has not been a member of IATA, the carrier has all along participated in a variety of committees of the association. The principal reason for staying out hitherto had been the highly regulated stance of IATA.

IATA has changed sufficiently over the last couple of years to enable carriers like Singapore Airlines, Cathay Pacific, Malaysia Airlines and Royal Brunei Airlines to contemplate joining the association. The last hurdle was cleared when the strict agency accreditation rules were modified in response to market realities, thus enabling airlines to deal virtually with any agent they want.

IATA has around 100 committees and working groups dealing with a host of civil aviation matters ranging from technical and legal to financial and operating procedures. Singapore Airlines will participate actively in areas important to it, especially where it can make a useful contribution.

Membership will give Singapore Airlines a voice in key industry forums, and greater access to the large pool of IATA technical expertise. Membership will also enable Singapore Airlines to enhance its relationship with IATA accredited agents and thus widen its sales distribution network.

The increasing importance of the Asia-Pacific region, in terms of both trade and tourism, was another important consideration for joining the association. The four carriers felt that as IATA members they could play an active role, influencing and shaping the aviation industry of the future, particularly in the Asia-Pacific.

CUPERTINO, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - ''The rebound in the IC market is exactly as we forecasted,'' stated Moshe Handelsman, who for quite a few months has been predicting a recovery that ''is stronger than just seasonal effects'' for the IC industry, starting in mid 1990.

''We continue to believe that the industry is at the beginning of a new business cycle,'' said Dr. Handelsman of Advanced Forecasting, a Silicon Valley firm that quantitatively forecasts the semiconductor and related industries.

''The fact that the Book-to-bill ratio has recently surpassed its last year peak, as we predicted in January, is an indication that a new business cycle is occurring,'' he adds. Advanced Forecasting's new IC Turning-Points Forecast published June 6, 1990, predicts that it will stay around the 1.15 level all through the second quarter of '90.

The main contributors to the upturn are the Computer and Communications end-equipment markets. Handelsman maintains that the current recovery shows a pattern similar to 1986 but the industry should not expect 1990 to be a boom year like 1987. ''Since we are beginning a new business cycle, there is an excellent chance that 1991 will be a marvelous year,'' he adds.

Handelsman is not hiding his joy when he speaks about the proven accuracy of his forecasting models: ''The executives who use our forecasts on a regular basis had already learned about the current upturn in August 1989, when the industry was all gloom and doom. If they have used the information appropriately, they will be laughing now all the way to their bank.

''The reason for our accuracy is using only objective measurements of economic factors. They do not suffer from the biases embedded in information gathered from rumors in the field. Based on the analysis of these factors we are quite confident that a new cycle will thrive in the second half of '90.''

SALT LAKE CITY (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - EFI Electronics Corp. (NASDAQ:EFIC) announced Monday it has repurchased 633,821 shares of the company's common stock from Hospital Corporation of America (HCA) for $1.7 million.

HCA had been the largest stockholder of the company, originating from a venture capital investment made in 1984. The repurchase represents 19.6 percent of EFI's outstanding shares.

''In February of this year, HCA announced its intent to sell the shares throug public or private sales. The reasons were not tied to the performance of EFI but for HCA's internal purposes,'' said Gaylord K. Swim chairman of the board of directors.

''We believe that the purchase of the shares from HCA at a discount from current market prices represents a unique opportunity to remove the adverse effect of the availability of the shares on EFI trading prices.

''Further, the board of directors, subject to stockholder approval, is completing negotiations with a group of managers and key employees to sell a substantial number of the shares repurchased.

''We believe this will strengthen management's long-term commitment to EFI and provide EFI with funds to service the debt incurred. The repurchase will not, in any event, materially affect the working capital of EFI,'' Swim explained.

Founded in 1979, EFI Electronics Corp. markets power surge and transient suppression equipment in the United States and Canada. The company's products are designed to protect computer, telecommunications, and microprocessors-based medical and industrial equipment in a wide-range of applications.

VAN NUYS, CALIF. (JUNE 12) BUSINESS WIRE - In keeping with its seven-year history of progressive expansion, Kenfil Distribution, the largest software-only distributor, Monday announced new additions to its upper-level management team.

Casey Hughes was named vice president of sales and marketing and Mark Holtzman was appointed controller.

Hughes' mission at Kenfil includes reorganizing and expanding sales worldwide, pushing distribution toward a larger reseller community and focusing marketing promotions on the highly publicized and explosive Windows market. Kenfil will continue its tradition of introducing innovative software products into the reseller channel with comprehensive marketing support.

Hughes brings extensive industry experience to his newly created position, most recently as vice president of Tandon Corp., where he played a key role in transforming the OEM manufacturer into a fully integrated manufacturer of PC systems sold through reseller channels worldwide. He also served as director of sales at Kaypro Corp. and chairman of the Advisory Council of ABCD: The Microcomputer Industry Association.

In addition to 10 years of hardware development and sales experience, he acquired an in-depth reseller background as founder and president of Computers Unlimited Inc., one of the first successful computer dealerships in San Diego County.

While undergoing tremendous growth, Kenfil continues to maintain firm financial control. As controller, Holtzman brings seven years accounting and auditing experience as well as a new perspective toward financial control within software distribution.

He was previously controller at Van de Kamp's Bakeries, a food manufacturing and distribution company, an auditor at Owens-Illinois and accounting manager at Continental Food Service, both Fortune 500 companies. Holtzman, a CPA, earned his master's at the University of Michigan and a bachelor's degree at the University of California, Berkeley.

In other key positions, Colleen Kirkpatrick joins Kenfil as district sales manager for the western region with 10 years experience in dealer sales and national account sales. She was previously employed at Victor Technologies as a computer/dealer manager and at Vector Graphic, selling software to the entertainment and aerospace industries. Kirkpatrick also has extensive experience as a systems integrator.

Bob Dumas, southeast district sales manager, brings 10 years management/sales experience selling software to Fortune 500 companies. He was previously employed at Hawkeye Information Systems as a sales account executive in charge of documentation software.

Kenfil Distribution Inc., founded in 1983, is the largest software-only distributor, specializing in business products primarily for the IBM-compatible and Apple Macintosh markets. The privately held company helped pioneer the utilities and forms processing categories of business software and today handles more than 5,000 different titles.

SAUSALITO, CA (JUNE 12) BUSINESS WIRE - Autodesk (NASDAQ, NMS:ACAD) Monday announced the shipment of Autodesk Animator Clips, a new series of clip art and clip animation libraries designed for use with Autodesk Animator, the company's award-winning desktop video program for IBM PCs and compatible computers.

Autodesk is shipping four separate titles -- Business Communication, Animals/Fantasy, and ImageCELs Volumes I and II -- each of which offers customers a wide assortment of ready-to-use clip art or animations. Autodesk Animator Clips are available at computer dealers nationwide for a suggested retail price of U.S. $149 for each title.

Company officials expect Autodesk Animator Clips to facilitate the production of animations created with Autodesk Animator. ''You can think of the clips as similar to style sheets and template for word processing applications, or symbol libraries for CAD programs,'' commented Bob Bennett, multimedia group product manager for Autodesk.

The clip images and animations were created by professional animators to illustrate popular themes or topics. They can be edited within Autodesk Animator using any of the program's drawing tools such as Spray, Fill, Box and Text. Space has been provided on each animation or image for customers to add their own messages or graphics.

ImageCELs Volume I includes man-made textures and objects such as concrete carpet, windows, furniture, cars and other common imagery, while ImageCELs Volume II offers customers natural textures like grass, trees, stone, wood and similar naturally occurring images. Once loaded into Autodesk Animator, these textures and objects can be applied and edited using the program's drawing tools.

Autodesk expects the new product offerings to appeal to both artists and non-artists as well as to AutoCAD customers. Architects and design engineers will appreciate the ability, using Autodesk Animator and the new clips, to add landscaping and other realistic effects to their AutoCAD drawings and models.

Autodesk Inc. develops, markets and supports a family of computer-aided design, engineering and animation software products for desktop computers and workstations.

NEWPORT BEACH, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Commenting on the recent decline in stock price, Carl Gregory III, chairman and chief executive officer of Mortgage Investments Plus Inc. (ASE:MIP), said: ''The recent decline in MIP's share price is not related to any change in the company's condition.

''The fundamental economics of MIP's portfolio remain sound. The recent reduction in the company's dividend reflects the board of directors' belief that a conservative posture is appropriate until the direction of the economy and the real estate markets becomes clear.

''The company's strategy of paying down bank debt and investing only in real estate equities will strengthen the company's financial position for the future.

''I continue to believe that MIP's equity portfolio of completed properties remains an attractive way to invest in the future of California real estate. The overall occupancy of MIP's completed portfolio remains about 84 percent, and leasing efforts are continuing on the balance.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - As part of a continued commitment to the workstation market, Ungermann-Bass Monday introduced a group of network products which enable workstation users to access data resources in today's key operating environments, as well as provide expanded network administration capabilities to network managers.

Included in the worldwide introduction are two 10BASE-T compatible intelligent adapter cards, an Open Data-Link interface (ODI) driver to support Novell's Netware '386 and OS/2, and a LAN Manager 2.0 implementation.

He pointed out that Ungermann-Bass dominates the intelligent adapter card market and that more than 30 percent of the company's revenue comes from its workstation product line. Ungermann-Bass is also unique in offering simultaneous connections to both Novell's Netware and Microsoft's LAN Manager servers, as well as Hewlett-Packard's LMX Unix and IBM's LAN Server.

Enhanced Network Management For network managers, the new products provide an array of administration features - from an active network management agent on the intelligent adapter card to additional server resource statistics in Net/One LAN Manager.

Founded in 1979, Ungermann-Bass Inc. pioneered enterprise networking - the sharing of data resources among dissimilar computer systems throughout an organization. LAS VEGAS, NV (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Goldriver Limited Partnership (''Goldriver''), owner of Sam's Town Gold River Hotel & Gambling Hall in Laughlin, Nevada, Monday announced that its wholly owned subsidiary, Goldriver Finance Corporation (''GFC'') has extended the deadline for bondholders to respond to a consent solicitation to 5:00 p.m. Los Angeles time, on June 15, 1990.

GFC is amending the consent solicitation sent to holders of record as of May 25, 1990 of its 13 7/8 percent first mortgage bonds due May 1, 1997 (''Bonds''). The original consent solicitation requested bondholders to approve an amendment to the bond indenture that would exclude from the partners' equity maintenance requirement any fiscal quarter ending on or prior to June 30, 1990 and called for Goldriver to use its best efforts to raise additional equity. A consent payment of $10 per $1,000 principal amount of bonds will be paid to consenting bondholders if the amendment is approved.

In addition to the consent payment, the amendment will provide for a payment to bondholders of $10 per $1,000 principal amount of bonds then owned if on October 12, 1990, Goldriver has not received written commitments to purchase additional units in an amount equal to 70 percent of the amount, if any, by which partners' equity is below the required total on June 30, 1990. Further, bondholders will be entitled to receive $5 per $1,000 principal amount of bonds then owned if Goldriver has not received such amount at February 1, 1991, assuming requisite approvals from the Nevada gaming authorities have been obtained.

WALTHAM, MA (JUNA 11) BUSINESS WIRE - IPL Systems Inc. today announced an expansion of its facilities to include 9,200 additional square feet of space in Waltham.

Its new headquarters is located at 60 Hickory Dr., close to its Second Avenue facilities.

Robert W. Norton, president and chief excutive officer indicated, ''As a result of our continued growth, IPL is expanding its facilities. Our executive, finance, administrative, marketing and sales departments will move from their existing location to space subleased in a neighboring building. This move will also provide expansion opportunities for our manufacturing, engineering and field service departments.''

IPL Systems Inc., in the past fiscal year, has increased its revenue 76 percent and net income by 46 percent. Since changing its mission in 1985 from a mainframe development and manufacturing company to a developer and marketer of memory upgrades and tape storage subsystems, the company has increased its revenue by 500 percent, showing substantial growth in both the domestic and international markets. In response to this European growth, IPL expanded its facilities this year to Europe, opening a marketing and technical support office in Zaventem, Belgium, a part of metropolitan Brussels.

IPL Systems Inc. designs, manufactures and markets compatible tape driven subsystems and memory products for IBM Systems/3X, 43XX, 30XX and AS/400 computers. The company was founded in 1973 and is located at 360 Second Avenue, Waltham, Mass. 02154, (617) 890-6620. IPL Systems Inc. stock is quoted on the NASDAQ national market system and is traded in the OTC market under the symbol IPLSA.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Ungermann-Bass Monday announced Net/One LAN Manager 2.0, a standards-based network operating system designed to simplify management of multiple servers across large enterprise networks.

The comprehensive package is scheduled to ship in September, however, customers who purchase the enhanced version now, will receive a free copy of Net/One LAN Manager 1.1.

LAN Manager 2.0 is more than a sophisticated network operating system; it is a high performance, fault-tolerant platform which provides fast access to server applications. It fully supports multiprocessor servers, offers disk duplexing and mirroring, provides file replication service and includes enhanced password, logon and other security features.

Ungermann-Bass' implementation enables users to take full advantage of OS/2 at the server and DOS or Windows at the workstation, as well as communicate with Hewlett-Packard's LMX UNIX LAN Manager, Novell's NetWare 286/386 servers or IBM's LAN Server.

New value-added features include an enhanced statistics reporter which consolidates, monitors and analyzes statistics from multiple servers. The type and range of statistics monitored is also expanded. Additional statistics include: hard disk space available, server memory utilization and print server usage.

The company will continue to offer the features of their LAN Manager 1.1 implementation including Transmission Control Protocol/Internet Protocol (TCP/IP) support. In fact, Ungermann-Bass is the only company to provide TCP/IP support fro LAN Manager.

Founded in 1979, Ungermann-Bass Inc. pioneered enterprise networking - the sharing of data resources among dissimilar computer systems throughout an organization. Headquartered in Santa Clara, Calif., Ungermann-Bass is a leading international designer and manufacturer of networking hardware and software data communications systems.

AUSTIN, TX (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - SunRiver Corp., a leading worldwide supplier of workstations and connectivity products for the CAD/CAM, graphics and imaging markets, Monday announced a high-end product for its SunRiver CADSystem family of products.

Called LightStation, the new SunRiver product is a high-performance workstation which offers AutoCAD users automated engineering solutions at an affordable price. It features interactive, multi-user, multi-tasking 32-bit graphics processing, based on the TI 340XX chip family, with 1024 x 768 (16 color) resolution for high speed CAD computations.

The SunRiver LightStation is the first in a line of SunRiver products to provide graphics processing power to SunRiver CADSystem users. When linked to a 386/486 computer over SunRiver's high-speed fiber medium, the LightStation provides a cost-effective, multi-user system for AutoCAD. The LightStation meets user demand for larger drawings with both 16'' and 19'' monitor options and line resolutions of 1024 x 768.

To date, users who could not afford mainframe or minicomputer drafting and design systems have had to settle for multiple, fully loaded, PC stand-alones networked together. The SunRiver LightStation, priced at $3,499, and as an integral part of the SunRiver CADSystem, brings CAD workstation performance to a broad base of users for the first time -- at an affordable price.

Utilizing its high speed fiber connection, the SunRiver CADSystem gives design engineers and technical professionals the ability to use advanced graphics tools without graphics programming overhead.

Computer graphics software has revolutionized the relationship between the design engineer and his design environment by creating an interactive interface to high performance graphics, providing new insight into complex design problems and accelerating the design process.

In a time when concurrent engineering, reduced design cycles, and time to market issues determine competitive edge, the SunRiver CADSystem enables a more fully automated engineering function from design through manufacturing. What results is significantly increased productivity in drafting and design.

SunRiver Corp. is a leading worldwide supplier of workstations and connectivity products for the CAD/CAM, graphics and imaging markets. SunRiver's Fiber Optic Systems, including the CADSystem, provide true multi-user/multi-tasking solutions for graphics intensive application environments such as those found in the engineering, manufacturing and medical fields.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Chalone Inc. (NASAQ:CHLN) Monday announced the signing of a letter of intent to acquire a 50 percent interest in Canoe Ridge Vineyard Inc. (CRVI) of Walla Walla, Wash.

CRVI owns 200 acres of land on a ridge overlooking the Columbia River, approximately 60 miles west of Walla Walla.

Of those acres, 44 have just been planted to Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot and an additional 50 acres will be planted to Merlot and Chardonnay over the next three years.

Under terms of the agreement, Chalone will manage the property. ''Chalone has long had an interest in Eastern Washington State premium wines, as evidenced by our distribution of Woodward Canyon Winery wines,'' stated W. Philip Woodward, chief executive officer of Chalone Inc. (no relation to Woodward Canyon Winery). ''It is a Chalone's intention to build a winery adjacent to the Canoe Ridge Vineyard where it plans to produce Merlot and Chardonnay under the Canoe Ridge label.''

Chalone Inc., a publicly owned company based in San Francisco, produces, markets and sells premium white and red varietal table wines. Chalone currently owns and operates Chalone Vineyard in Monterey County, Acacia Winery and the Carneros District of Napa County, Carmenet Vineyard in Sonoma County, and in conjunction with its joint-venture partner, Paragon Vineyard Co., owns and operates Edna Valley Vineyard in San Louis Obispo County.

Chalone also concluded in April 1989, a cross-investment with Domaines Barons de Rothschild, owners of the Bordeaux estates of Chateau Duhart-Milon, Chateau Rieussec, Chateau L'Evangile and manager of Chateau Lafite Rothschild and Chateau La Cardonne.

CHATSWORTH, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - NMB Technologies Inc. Monday announced a redesigned, low-cost ''clicker'' keyboard for its family of Right Touch keyboards. This new mechanical keyboard provides an audible ''click'' sound in response to contact, and is especially useful for office applications where an audible response is preferred.

''Our new, affordable clicker keyboard is a direct response to market demand for high-quality, responsive keyboards at lower prices,'' said Gary Yomantas, president of NMB Technologies. ''This keyboard is ideal for the personal computer and IBM compatible markets.''

The new clicker keyboard incorporates the same long life and high-reliability switches found in NMB Technologies' original clicker model. Costs have been reduced through the use of a more powerful microprocessor which has eliminated the need for costly peripheral components in the keyboard.

The clicker key feel incorporates a spring return mechanism instead of a traditional rubber boot which significantly extends the switch life beyond industry averages. Clicker keyswitches are rated to 100 million cycles. NMB Technologies offers a streamlined enclosure design, adjustable legs and lower production costs.

In addition to its top-of-the-line clicker model, NMB Technologies offers linear and tactile versions with its RT-101, RT-101+ and RT-102 models. All of NMB Technologies' keyboards are IBM plug-compatible.

NMB Technologies keyboards are available in OEM quantities and to VARs/VADs in smaller lots through the company. The new clicker keyboard is available from stock in 100 piece orders at $39 each.

NMB Technologies is the world's leading supplier of broad-based products for the EDP market. NMB Technologies is the electronics marketing division of NMB (USA) Inc., the North American headquarters of the Minebea Group of Companies. Minebea is one of the world's four largest keyboard suppliers.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - In response to user needs for high-performance 10BASE-T compatible connectivity solutions, Ungermann-Bass Monday introduced two intelligent Ethernet network adapters for IBM PC, PS/2 and compatible personal computers.

The NIUpc/EOTP (Ethernet on Twisted Pair) and NIUps/EOTP act as ''protocol-processors,'' which load and execute the entire network protocol stack - freeing the PC's Central Processing Unit (CPU) and memory for applications.

According to Roger Bertman, vice president of marketing for Ungermann-Bass this memory/processor off-load is especially important in a PC-DOS environment where standard network protocols can consume from 128K to 512K of the already limited 640K DOS memory.

He explained that all network-related processing is performed by the adapter's CPU, and the host's processor is not interrupted until data is buffered and ready for use by an application. This feature is key for OS/2's multi-tasking environments.

Ungermann-Bass' NIUpc/EOTP and NIUps/EOTP have an Intel 80186 microprocessor with 512K memory (expandable to 1 Megabyte). The adapters provide 10 Megabits per second (Mbps) baseband speeds and are IEEE 10BASE-T revision D1-compatible.

An active network management agent monitors and reports data link traffic such as packets sent and received, provides session level statistics for Transmission Control Protocol/Internet Protocol (TCP/IP) and NetBIOS connections and provides enhanced security features through event logging/generation and user authorization.

The intelligent adapters support DOS 3.1 or above, Microsoft's Windows 3.0 and OS/2 in TCP/IP and Xerox Network System (XNS) environments.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Ungermann-Bass Monday announced a series of high performance ODI (Open Data-Link Interface) Drivers which support Novell's NetWare '386 servers and OS/2 workstations.

Ungermann-Bass is the first vendor, other than Novell, to deliver support for NetWare '386.

The new drivers enable users of Ungermann-Bass' Net/One NIUpc and NIUps adapter series to access NetWare servers and Novell's OS/2 Requestor.

Roger Bertman, vice president of marketing for Ungermann-Bass, said that the new drivers are key components in the company's strategy of offering customers open choices and multivendor interoperability in enterprise networking environments.

''Ungermann-Bass chose LAN Manager as our strategic network operating system but our users, most of whom have hundreds or thousands of nodes in their networks, often use NetWare as well as LAN Manager,'' Bertman explained.

Ungermann-Bass' new drivers are designed to support NetWare '386 servers and OS/2 workstations. However, the company will continue to support DOS users with their NetWare 2.15 drivers, which provide simultaneous access to NetWare, Net/One LAN Manager and Transmission Control Protocol/Internet Protocol (TCP/IP) resources.

Ungermann-Bass' NetWare '386 and OS/2 Requestor ODI Drivers are available immediately, at the single quantity U.S. list price of $50.00 per server.

OTTAWA, Ontario (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Compression Labs, Inc. (CLI) (NASDAQ:CLIX) and Bell Canada announced Monday that they had reached an agreement to market CLI videoconferencing systems in Canada.

The three-year agreement, valued at more than $3 million (US), calls for Bell Canada, as a member of Telecom Canada, to represent, install, and service CLI videoconferencing equipment in conjunction with Telecom Canada's network services.

According to Al Solosky, director of business development at Bell Canada, ''Our objective is to offer our customers one-stop-shopping by supplying both the network services and customer premise equipment required to create a complete videoconferencing solution.''

The agreement calls for Bell Canada to represent CLI's Rembrandt line of video codecs, the sophisticated devices that compress video and audio signals for economical transmission over digital transmission facilities; its Gallery line of video room systems; and CLI's multipoint videoconference control unit. The agreement will be offered to other Telecom Canada members.

Bell Canada has considerable experience in providing customers with complete videoconferencing solutions using CLI equipment for both internal and customer applications. CLI has collaborated with Bell Canada to provide videoconferencing capabilities for public and private rooms in Ontario, Quebec and parts of the Northwest Territories.

Bell Canada, the largest Canadian telecommunications operating company, markets a full range of state-of-the-art products and services to more than 6 million business and residential customers in Ontario, Quebec and parts of the Northwest Territories.

Bell Canada is a member of Telecom CanadaQan association of Canada's major telecommunications companies.

CLI is the market leader in full-motion, color videoconferencing systems for use by business, government and education. Headquartered in San Jose, Calif., CLI provides complete videoconferencing solutions, including room systems, codecs and multipoint units.

Considered an effective communications tool for innovative organizations around the world, videoconferencing has emerged as a strategic resource for competing successfully in the 1990s.

AMHERST, NY (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Mark IV Industries Inc. (NYSE:IV) Monday announced that its board of directors has declared a 5 percent stock dividend.

The board also authorized a regular cash dividend with an indicated annual rate of ten cents per share, and has declared the first regular quarterly cash dividend of 2-1/2 cents per share for the quarter ended May 31, 1990, payable on all outstanding common shares, including those to be issued for the stock dividend.

Cash will be paid in lieu of fractional shares.

Both dividends are payable on July 2, to shareholders of record on June 21 1990. After distribution of the stock dividend there will be approximately 14 million shares outstanding.

Sal H. Alfiero, Mark IV's chairman said, ''The declaration of the first regular quarterly cash dividend in Mark IV's history reflects our confidence in the future of the company.

''After 21 years of existence, we feel the company has arrived at a fairly consistent level of performance with regard to earnings, cash flow, and balance sheet characteristics, which allows us to implement a dividend policy with confidence in its sustainability and periodic improvement.

''In addition, we see a stock dividend as a way for our shareholders to participate to an even greater degree in Mark IV's stock price appreciation and cash dividend program. We see both dividend programs as a way to begin compensating our shareholders, other than through stock price appreciation, for their patience and support over the years.''

REDMOND, WA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Microsoft Corp. in conjunction with Adaptec, Compaq, NCR and Western Digital, Monday announced a layered device driver architecture (LADDR) for the OS/2 operating system.

The extensible LADDR architecture provides a standard way for hardware vendors to write OS/2 device drivers for SCSI (Small Computer System Interface), ISA (Industry Standard Architecture), EISA (Extended Industry Standard Architecture), Micro Channel Architecture (MCA) and other device interfaces.

Because of its layered structure, LADDR can reduce by approximately 90 percent the time necessary to develop device drivers. Using LADDR, hardware vendors need only develop code for those portions of a device driver that are specific to their device. Portions of code not specific to the device itself are provided by Microsoft in the LADDR device driver development kit. The LADDR development kit will be available from Microsoft beginning in July, and it can be used to develop either MS OS/2 version 1.2 or 2.0 device drivers.

Hardware vendors will find it significantly easier to develop device drivers using LADDR. Because the architecture includes a standard device driver core, vendors can concentrate their development efforts on the device-dependent portion of the driver. Vendors will be able to bring more devices to market faster, and they can focus their development efforts on maximizing the unique features of each device.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - TeleSoft, one of the world's largest providers of software engineering products and services, Monday announced SDT version 2, its advanced design tool for the creation of large, complex telecommunications and other real-time systems.

Based on an open architecture and adhering to international standards, TeleSoft SDT enables software developers to structure, design, analyze, and simulate alternative system solutions and automatically create documentation without the investment in time and money required by common programming techniques.

TeleSoft SDT offers a foundation for the cooperative communication of system needs between developers and their customers, and enhances productivity. SDT makes it possible to detect errors at an early stage in the software development cycle where they are substantially less costly to correct, and systems designed with SDT exhibit significantly higher quality and lower maintenance costs.

SDT's interactive X Windows and OSF/Motif-based Graphical Editor, Analyzer Simulator-Generator, and Report Generator are fully integrated to provide the perfect environment for the development of real-time, interactive systems. Its open system architecture facilitates integrating tools from third-party vendors.

TeleSoft SDT supports the international standard Specification and Description Language (SDL), a formal description technique developed by CCITT (International Telegraph and Telephone Consultive Committee) for specifying the structure and behavior of complex, real-time telecommunication systems.

Beyond that, SDL's capabilities allow it to be used for developing any real-time telecommunication systems. Beyond that, SDL's capabilities allow it to be used for developing any real-time system having parallel activities communicating through discrete events. The standardization effort guarantees SDL a long lifetime and controlled evolution of the language.

All European national telecommunications companies use SDL, and require that all equipment suppliers support its use in maintaining their products. Leading U.S. and Japanese telecommunications equipment manufacturers and operating companies use SDL for real-time system development.

TeleSoft is the leading international provide of software engineering products and services supporting standards such as Ada, X, Windows, and SDL, and a systems supplier and integrator for the telecommunications, aerospace/defense, and other technical computing markets.

SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Northern Telecom Inc. and Centigram Communications Corp. Monday announced a joint sales and marketing agreement that addresses the voice processing needs of businesses with mixed private branch exchange (PBX) networks, including both Northern Telecom and non-Northern Telecom PBX's.

''Our new relationship with Centigram will enable us to present a truly comprehensive voice messaging strategy to our mutual customers,'' said Jack Maio, director, product line management, Meridian Mail, Northern Telecom Inc.

''This agreement will allow Northern Telecom to focus on new voice processing applications using Meridian Mail while maintaining Northern's commitment to the OPEN (Open Protocol Enhanced Networks) world by capitalizing on Centigram's integration capabilities with non-Northern Telecom PBX's.''

Under the agreement, Centigram will provide modified VoiceMemo II systems for the non-Northern Telecom PBXs within the mixed network. Centigram will develop a special user interface similar to that of Northern's Meridian Mail.

The two companies will also work together to develop an enhanced version of the recently announced AMIS (Audio Message Interchange Standards) intermachine messaging standard. As a result, customers with a mixed network of PBX's can integrate Meridian Mail on their Northern Telecom PBX's with Centigram's VoiceMemo II on other PBX's.

Centigram Communications Corp., with headquarters in San Jose, manufactures and markets telephone-based communications products. The Centigram VoiceMemo II product family provides a sophisticated, fast and accurate way of sending, receiving, redirecting and simultaneously distributing voice messages by means of a touch-tone telephone.

Northern Telecom is the leading global supplier of fully digital telecommunications systems. SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - CAD Solutions Inc. Monday announced the acquisition of CAD Southwest, a leading CAD VAR in Phoenix, Ariz.

CAD Southwest was previously a wholly owned subsidiary of Data Image, headquartered in Dallas. The addition of CAD Southwest to CAD Solutions comes only one month after CSI acquired the Electronic Design Group (EDA) of Advanced Micro Consultants, and exemplifies CSI's commitment to expand its national presence as the CAD industry's leading SuperVAR.

''This is the first of several acquisitions we plan to make outside the Northern California area in establishing our national structure,'' said Steve Steele, chairman of CSI. ''The goal is to find organizations with compatible philosophies and the capabilities to offer customers the constant high quality service synonymous with CSI.''

CAD Solutions raised venture capital last year for the purpose of company expansion.

''This acquisition suits our plans for expansion beautifully,'' said Vic Leventhal, president and chief executive officer of CSI. ''Our customers have told us they would like to see the level of high quality support and service in more locations across the U.S. We are finding many organizations, like CAD Southwest, that are eager to join CSI in providing service and technical support, second to none in the industry.''

CAD Solutions is a ''SuperVAR'' and Systems Integrator, headquartered in San Jose, with regional offices located in San Ramon, Calif., San Francisco and in Phoenix.

CSI's European office opened in Munich, Germany on April 15, 1990. Besides the 100+ products supported, including DOS, Apple, and workstation platforms, CSI develops its own line of software products to fill the specific needs of the Printed Circuit Board CAD market.

TORONTO, ONTARIO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - One of Canada's first independent long-distance resellers, Call-Net, is to install StrataCom FastPacket networking systems in a move set to double the company's bandwidth and improve network efficiency.

In an initial deal worth $1.1 million (C $1.3 million), StrataCom will install 11 IPX FastPacket systems linking the long-distance carrier's hub in Toronto with sites in Montreal, Vancouver and Buffalo, N.Y. The initial installation is due to be complete by the end of June and further nodes are planned as Call-Net expands.

Three-year-old Call-Net, based in Toronto, led Canada's recently won battle for partial deregulation of the telecommunications market.

T1 costs in Canada are typically four to five times those for similar distances in the United States and Call-Net, Canada's largest long-distance reseller, specializes in offering businesses a more cost-effective alternative by allowing several companies to share a T1 link and in providing detailed reporting of telephone usuage.

The company's activities were not endorsed by Bell Canada who threatened the reseller with disconnection on three occassions.

On Mar. 1, however, the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) announced a partial deregulation, allowing companies such as Call-Net to legally resell long-distance lines. The new changes came into effect on June 1.

At one stage during its campaign to stay to stay in business, Call-Net was barred from ordering further T1 lines. So the company turned to StrataCom to help expand its business.

''Originally we looked at StrataCom to put more traffic on the network because the IPX's 4-to-1 voice compression and significant data compression offered us a way to expand our architecture without ordering more lines,'' said Call-Net's director of operations, George Mallen.

''But on June 1, the market was partially deregulated, so we are now looking at the IPX to give us a competitive advantage as other people enter the market.

''With the IPX we can double our traffic and lower our operating costs without sacrificing voice quality. We realized that you have got to offer not only good value, but also good quality and StrataCom offers us the vehicle to get there.''

Call-Net's 2,500 customers are typically small Canadian businesses seeking a way to both save money on long-distance phone bills and accurately track telephone expenses. Currently 90 percent of the traffic carried by the company is voice and facsimile. Ten percent is in-house data.

However, the newly deregulated environment now allows private companies to also resell dedicated -- as well as shared -- lines. In a bid to capture this business, Call-Net has set up a sister company, Lightel, to serve larger companies with higher bandwidth requirements. The balance of traffic on the network from the two companies is expected to stabilize at 60 percent voice and 40 percent data.

PHOENIX (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - AmeriWest Vacations, the vacation package division of America West Airlines (NASDAQ:AWAL; PSE:AWA), has introduced special four night vacation packages combining Phoenix and Las Vegas.

The packages include airfare on America West, two night's accomodations in Phoenix, two nights in Las Vegas and airport-to-hotel transportation. Golf, tennis, horseback riding and spa packages may be added for a minimal charge.

Vacation travelers have a choice of three Pointe Resort locations, at Squaw Peak, Tapatio Cliffs or South Mountain, for their stay in Phoenix. In Las Vegas, travelers may choose from either the Golden Nugget or Las Vegas' newest resort, the Mirage.

''America West is pleased to be able to offer a package with partners the quality of The Pointe Resorts and the Golden Nugget corporations,'' said Mark Beauvais, managing director of sales and marketing programs for America West. ''For customers to have their choice of such exclusive resorts is unequalled in vacation packages.''

The recently opened Mirage resort has set Las Vegas ablaze establishing industry performance and occupancy records. The Golden Nugget also recently posted company revenue and occupancy records with its unsurpassed customer service.

The Pointe Resorts is a luxury all-suite resort company, operating three resorts in Phoenix with a total of 1,840 suites and 10 restaurants. The Pointe Resorts at Squaw Peak and Tapatio Cliffs have both received the American Automobile Association's Five Diamond rating.

Bob Brooks, senior vice president and managing director of The Pointe Resorts, said, ''We look forward to participating in this innovative airline program with AmeriWest Vacations. It provides a unique opportunity for travelers to experience the outstanding facilities of The Pointe Resorts, the Mirage Resorts and the Golden Nugget.''

America West holds the best on-time performance record for 1989, 1988 and since reporting began in 1987. The carrier serves 60 destinations from coast to coast with daily service to Hawaii and western Canada, utilizing an all-Boeing fleet of 92 aircraft including 747s, 757s, 737s and de Havilland Dash 8s.

TROY, MI (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Ameritech Publishing Inc. Monday introduced a new product -- Ameritech Travel Pages.

The 24-page full-color travel directory allows customers to order free brochures from up to 900 vacation spots in the United States and Canada.

Ameritech Publishing, publisher of PagesPlus yellow and white page directories in five Midwestern states, is trialing the new product in Milwaukee.

The travel directory is being delivered to consumers with their 1990-91 PagesPlus directores. If the trial is successful, Ameritech Publishing will introduce Travel Pages in other markets.

''Ameritech Publishing is committed to bringing valuable new services to its directory customers. The new Travel Pages is a useful product that does just that,'' said Gary Drook, president and CEO of Ameritech Publishing.

Travel Pages contains brief introductions to vacation destinations and a list of 900 resorts. Each resort is assigned a code number. Consumers request free informational brochures by writing the code on a postage-paid card included in Travel Pages. There is no limit on the number of brochures that can be ordered.

Ameritech Publishing Inc., based in Troy provides more than 450 Ameritech PagesPlus white and yellow pages directories for the Bell companies in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - SynOptics Communications Inc. (NASDAQ:SNPX) Monday announced it has developed technology to run the high speed Fiber Distributed Data Interface (FDDI) networking protocol over IBM Type 1 shielded twisted pair cable at distances of at least 100 meters, meeting standard building wiring specifications for desktop connectivity.

The company plans to present the technology at the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) meeting to be held in Wichita, Kan., June 18 through 23.

FDDI is a high speed networking access method initially standardized to run over fiber optic cable. It uses a dual redundant ring configuration to move data with a high level of fault-tolerance. At 100 Megabits per second (Mb/s), it is ten times faster than the Ethernet access method. In backbone configurations, FDDI will act as a high capacity data highway for interconnecting LANs of various types.

Trends such as client server computing, as well as desktop hardware advances and the increasing desire to connect workgroups of high performance graphics workstations are exptected to drive the requirements for running FDDI to the desktop. Through the star-wiring of the IBM Cabling System, FDDI workgroups will benefit from inherent fault isolation station manageability and greater flexibility for moves, changes and additions to the network.

SynOptics' shielded twisted pair FDDI technology is fully compatible with the architecture of the ANSI X3T9.5 standard for FDDI as well as existing commercially-available FDDI chip sets. In keeping with its Network Utility Architecture strategy, SynOptics will incorporate shielded twisted pair FDDI modules into the LattisNet System 3000 platform to intermix FDDI, Token Ring and Ethernet within a single intelligent wiring concentrator.

Prototypes of the system are currently being tested with a goal of verifying interoperability.

According to Forrester Research Inc., a Cambridge, Mass.-based market research firm, the average per port cost for FDDI is $11,650, including the cost of fiber optic adapters, hubs, cables and connectors.

Forrester estimates that the U.S. market for fiber optic FDDI end nodes will grow from 3,000 in 1990 to more than 300,000 in 1994. With the availability of products supporting FDDI over shielded twisted pair, SynOptics feels that this market will explode, spawning a market evolution similar to that caused by its introduction of Ethernet over unshielded twisted pair.

To provide its customers with a comprehensive standards-based desktop FDDI solution, SynOptics is currently developing partnerships with leading FDDI vendors, both to promote a standard and to encourage development of network interface cards to connect to the IBM Cabling System.

This strategy will make FDDI over shielded twisted pair both affordable and available for high speed desktop communication applications much in the way SynOptics' created the market for Ethernet over unshielded twisted pair two years ago through partnerships with Ethernet adapter card vendors.

SynOptics Communnications Inc. designs, manufactures and markets local area networking products based on its Network Utility Architecture, a value-added product strategy which incorporates network connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions into an integrated networking system.

SynOptics' common stock is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol SNPX. Revenue of $77.3 million was reported for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Earnings for the same period were $9.4 million or $1.22 per share. The company is headquartered at 501 E. Middlefield Road, Mountain View, Calif., 94043. Telephone (415) 960-1100.

INGLEWOOD, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Brushgard Systems Inc. (OTC) and American Water Resources Inc. (NASDAQ:WATR) announced the signing of a merger agreement subject to the completion of due diligence and approval of the transaction and related corporate matters by the shareholders of both companies.

American Water Resources, as the surviving entity would undertake an 8.64-to-1 reverse split of its approximately 4.5 million shares of common stock outstanding. Thereafter, the shareholders of Brushgard Systems would receive one share of American Water Resources for every one share of Brushgard Systems held.

Approximately 2.95 million shares of Brushgard are presently outstanding. Brushgard option holders would exchange their options on 2,063,223 shares for options on the same amount of shares of American Water Resources at $1 per share to be executed on or before Sept. 29, 1992. In conjunction with the merger agreement, both companies signed an interim loan agreement whereby American Water Resources loaned $200,000 to Brushgard Systems for working capital needs.

Brushgard Systems is the developer, manufacturer and marketer of Brushgard a toothbrush sanitizing system based on its unique formula known as ''Super HP-90'' which has been proven effective against a wide range of bacteria and viruses. The company has begun national marketing to health-food stores and initial test markets to drug chains such as Walgreens, Duane Reed and Thrifty.

In addition, Brushgard initiated foreign marketing efforts. Yata Dental Supply, an Osaka, Japan-based distributor was shipped their first order of 3,600 bottles on June 1. Their initial efforts will be directed to drug chains and dentists.

Brushgard also signed an agreement with Market Australia of Sydney to distribute Brushgard to Australia's 16 million inhabitants through health-food stores and mass marketers. Market Australia's first order will be shipped within the next 30 days and is expected to be for approximately 24,000 bottles.

EVENDALE, OH (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - General Electric Co. Monday introduced a newly designed, highly efficient gas turbine, the LM6000, at the American Society of Mechanical Engineers' trade show on gas turbine technology and equipment in Brussels, Belgium.

The LM6000 will be the most efficient, simple-cycle gas turbine ever built up to 30 percent more efficient than any turbine in its power output range. Its 56,560 horsepower will be able to produce more than 40 megawatts of power at 42.8 percent thermal efficiency, when burning natural gas and injecting steam for pollution control.

The new LM6000 can be used for utility peaking or baseload power generation; for industrial applications such as cogeneration, in-plant generation, independent power production and offshore oil platform power; and for mechanical drive applications such as as gas transmission and gas re-injection.

GE Marine & Industrial Engines and Service (M&IE-S), a division of GE Aircraft Engines, is a world leader in the marketing and manufacture of gas turbine equipment derived from highly reliable jet engines designed for commercial and military aircraft.

''With the U.S. capacity of excess electricity quickly shrinking, the LM6000 is entering the market at just the right time,'' said Dennis R. Little, vice president and general manager for GE M&IE-S, headquartered in Evendale.

GE expects to ship its first production unit at the end of 1991. The first application is anticipated to be a cogeneration power plant scheduled for start-up in late 1992.

The LM6000 is a derivative of the CF6-80C2, GE's most powerful, highly efficient aircraft engine. Already 577-80C2's are in service, which have logged more than 2.5 million flight hours at a takeoff reliability of 99.88 percent and the lowest shop-visit rate of any large aircraft engine flying today.

When the LM6000 is fired with natural gas and equipped with a steam-injection system, its emissions of smog-producing nitrogen oxides (NOx) will be 25 parts per million (ppm) or less; when oil-fired and equipped with a with a water-injection system, LM6000 NOx emissions will be 42 ppm or less. Both limits meet federal guidelines for NOx emissions.

DALLAS (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Interphase Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS: INPH) Monday announced record revenues of $7,184,331 for the second quarter of fiscal 1990, ending April 30, 1990.

Revenues were up significantly from $5,259,496 for the previous quarter and $4,507,051 reported for the second quarter last year. Revenues for the first six months of fiscal 1990 increased 41 percent to $12,443,827 compared to $8,840,991 for the like period last year.

The company incurred a net loss of $299,279, or 9 cents per share for the second quarter as compared to a net loss of $920,236, or 28 cents per share in the first quarter of 1990 and a net profit $77,226, or 3 cents per share in the second quarter of fiscal 1989.

The company's net loss for the first six months of 1990 was $1,219,515 as compared to a net profit of $105,925 for the first six months of fiscal 1989.

''It is very encouraging to show record revenues in our core business, and at the same time see revenues from our majority owned subsudiary, OMNI Slutions, start to flow,'' says Michael E. Cope, president and chief executive officer of Interphase.

''Our core business is profitable. OMNI is still a drain at this point however, OMNI product deliveries are going well, and we expect OMNI to start turning a profit near year end,'' Cope added.

Also, during the second quarter of 1990 Interphase entered into a two-year purchasing agreement with MIPS Computer Systems Inc. for a range of controllers from INterphase's VMEbus line. MIPS Computer Systems Inc., is a leading supplier of computer systems based on Reduced Instruction Set Computer (RISC) technology.

ANAHEIM, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - At the Usenix Association Summer Technical Conference in Anaheim, software developer Mt Xinu Inc. Monday announced it will provide supported Mach operating system source code for Intel 80386-based computer systems.

Mach-for-386 will be available before the end of the third quarter in a distribution that will run on several common AT-bus IBM PCs and on compatibles such as some models from Compaq, Intel and Hewlett-Packard. The software is targeted to the academic research community and to commercial developers interested in creating further software with and for the Mach environment.

Mach is a multiprocessing operating system designed as a foundation on which to build modern UNIX and UNIX-like software systems on new computer architectures. Recently adopted as its base technology by the Open Software Foundation, Mach can become the foundation of many systems with different higher-level interfaces. Mt Xinu's Mach gives developers access to Mach well before OSF software will be available.

Mt Xinu's 2.6 MSD will have the same ''Berkeley UNIX'' (4.3BSD) interface that is a standard in the research community and will be source-compatible with existing 4.3BSD applications. This is the first time standard 4BSD software tools will be available to PC users.

Founded in 1982, Mt Xinu specializes in the development of UNIX system software for the higher education, scientific research and software development markets. In addition, Mt Xinu develops and markets UNIX-to-Macintosh connectivity software. Mt Xinu is a privately held California corporation. PALO ALTO, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Echelon Systems, based in Palo Alto, Monday announced the opening of its European subsidiary, Echelon Europe Ltd., and named Philip Black as the managing director and chief executive officer.

''A key part of Echelon's strategy has been to foster adoption of the LON System around the world. The potential size of the European market makes it vital to our success. Philip Black's management skills and experience helping technology companies establish operations in Europe will be an invaluable asset for Echelon,'' said Echelon chairman and CEO, M. Kenneth Oshman.

Black joins Echelon from London-based Kontact Europe, where he was managing director and a principal of the company, which helps U.S. technology companies become established in Europe. He was also the founder and CEO of Tekelec, a U.S. public company designing and manufacturing telecommunications equipment.

Echelon is developing the LON technology, a new technology platform that will provide the first reliable option for implementing low-cost intelligent distributed control systems.

The technology may be used broadly in applications spanning the gamut from home automation to factory floor control. Echelon expects the technology platform to spawn a vast array of new industries and applications. The products will include technology, development tools, and system components. Detailed product information will be available in fall 1990.

Echelon was founded by A.C. (Mike) Markkula, co-founder of Apple Computer. Echelon's chairman and CEO, Oshman, was previously co-founder and president of Rolm Corp.

Motorola Inc. and Toshiba Corp., two of the world's leading semiconductor companies, have entered into licensing agreements with Echelon to manufacture and sell Echelon ICs (integrated circuits).

Echelon is providing the technology, development tools, and components to construct low-cost intelligent distributed control systems. CLEVELAND (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Olympic Steel Inc., a steel service center chain based here, Monday announced that it has completed the acquisition of certain assets of Eastern Steel & Metal, a steel service center based in Milford, Conn.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

The 150,000 square foot facility opened today as Olympic Steel, Eastern Steel Division. At its peak, the facility sold as much as 144,000 tons of steel annually, with sales volume of more than $70 million. It operates three slitting lines, including a Herr Voss with Strand Extensioner, along with three leveling lines.

''The acquisition of Eastern is an important strategic move in Olympic's growth plans,'' said Michael Siegal, Olympic Steel president. ''We see exceptional synergies and customer benefits between this operation and our existing facility in Philadelphia, as well as additional benefits for customers served by our Greenville, S.C., operation,'' he said.

Siegal said Olympic's Eastern Steel Division will offer a broad product line consisting of hot and cold rolled coil, sheet and plate, as well as stainless steel and alloy products.

''The operation by Olympic of Eastern will assure integrity of service to Eastern's customers and an active economic role in the Milford community, of which Eastern has been a part since 1976,'' said Douglas Goodwin, former president of Eastern and member of the family that has owned and operated the steel service center since its inception in 1932.

Primary geographic markets to be served by the new Eastern Division of Olympic will include New England and the Middle Atlantic region of the U.S. The acquisition is Olympic Steel's third in three years. Earlier this year, it completed the acquisition of Juster Steel Inc., a Minneapolis-based steel service center.

In 1987, it acquired Viking Steel Co., a Chicago-based stainless steel and aluminum distributor. Additionally, the company is currently completing a $10 million capital expansion at its Cleveland facility.

A leader in the steel service center industry, Olympic Steel has demonstrated steady growth since its inception in 1954. It stocks more than 120,000 tons of steel products at all times and maintains the country's largest plate inventory in a single location.

On an annualized basis, Olympic will be operating at a $320 million level during the second half of 1990 as a result of the acquisition.

In addition to Milford, Olympic operates warehouses and processing facilities at its Cleveland headquarters, as well as in Chicago, Philadelphia and Minneapolis. The company has sales offices in Greenville ; Birmingham, Ala.; and Pittsburgh.

Olympic Steel, Eastern Steel Division, is located at 1 Eastern Steel Road, Milford, Conn.

WESTBOROUGH, MA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Proteon Inc. Monday introduced a bridging router that provides new levels of token ring network integration for multi-vendor commercial environments.

The p4100+ Bridging Router is the first multi-protocol router to provide 16 Mbps backbone connectivity, IBM-compatible source routing bridging and diverse LAN/WAN integration. Priced at less than $10,000, the p4100+ Bridging Router delivers four times the price/performance of existing 4 Mbps solutions.

According to Nate Kalowski, Proteon vice president of marketing, ''Until now, the challenge of integrating the commercial token ring environment with multiple types of networks and protocols has been difficult and cost-prohibitive. The p4100+ builds on Proteon's token ring and internetworking expertise to give corporate MIS managers the first cost-effective solution for integrating IBM systems into a mixed LAN/WAN environment.''

Today's Fortune 1000 companies are heterogeneous networking environments that require IBM connectivity, integration with diverse LANs and protocols and wide area network communications. MIS managers are tasked with interconnecting traditional IBM SNA systems with a mix of other application environments such as LAN Manager, Novell, NetWare, DEC VMS and UNIX-based workstations.

The p4100+'s unique combination of mixed LAN/WAN and multi-protocol support; source routing bridging and 16 Mbps back-bone connectivity allows MIS managers to cost-effectively connect corporate headquarters and worldwide offices into a single enterprise-wide network. First 16 Mbps Backbone

The p4100+ Bridging Router works with Protean's proven ProNET-4/16 network to create the first 16 Mbps backbone network architecture. Network managers can now link lower speed departmental LANs such as 4 Mbps token ring and Ethernet over a multi-protocol backbone, providing distributed access to corporate-wide resources.

The p4100+ also offers the first 16 Mbps backbone over fiber optics and unshielded twisted pair (UTP), as well as standard shielded twisted pair cabling. This cabling flexibility gives network managers the ability to choose the solution that best meets their application and systems strategy. The p4100+: Simultaneous Routing and Bridging

To meet the multi-protocol connectivity requirements of today's commercial environments, the p4100+ simultaneously supports both routing and bridging capabilities. The p4100+ takes advantage of Proteon's internetworking expertise to route the industry's most popular protocols, including NetWare/IPX, DECnet, TCP/IP, XNS, AppleTalk, Apollo DOMAIN and OSI. The 4100+'s source routing bridging allows local and remote IBM users on 4/16 Mbps token ring PC LANs to access other LANs as well as IBM mid-range and mainframe systems. With spanning tree bridging, DEC terminals can easily be connected to DEC hosts across local and remote Ethernet networks. Wide Choice of LANs and WANs

For global interconnectivity, the p4100+ Bridging Router offers the industry's broadest range of local and wide area network interfaces, including IEEE 802.5 4/16, Ethernet, T1, and X.25. The p4100+ draws on Proteon's leadership in IBM-compatible token ring LANs to provide high-performance token ring connectivity for commercial environments. p4100+: New Levels of Price/Performance

The p4100+ Bridging Router delivers unequalled token ring network integration at four times the price/performance of existing 4 Mbps solutions. The p4100+ is modular in design, allowing MIS managers to create the router configuration that best meets their needs.

The p4100+ also comes in packaged systems for the most popular applications. Whether it's LAN-WAN connectivity or 16 Mbps backbone requirements, the p4100+ is the most cost-effective solution available today. Pricing and Availability

The p4100+ Bridging Router is priced starting at $5,195 for the base platform, with packaged systems ranging from $6,995 to $9,995. The p4100+ is available this summer, with spanning tree bridging available in late 1990. Proteon: Providing the Token Ring Infrastructure for the 90's

Today's Fortune 1000 companies, predominantly token ring-based, are using network computing as a strategic advantage. These corporate-wide networks require a reliable network infrastructure that can support critical applications.

With a blend of token ring and internetworking expertise, Proteon is uniquely positioned to provide reliable token ring infrastructures for commercial environments. This infrastructure is comprised of token ring adapters, smart hubs and wiring strategies, bridge/router access points, and integrated network management. From its ProNET-4/16 LAN family to its internetworking routers and FDDI support, Proteon is the single solution for token ring infrastructures for today's global businesses.

AMITYVILE, NY (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Nu Horizons Electronics Corp. (AMEX:NUH) Monday announced that National Semiconductor Corp. (National) has terminated is distributor agreement with the company effective July 6.

The company's franchise agreement with National only covered its New York and New Jersey branch locations.

National represented approximately 22 percent of the company's net sales for the fiscal year ended Feb. 28.

The company had previously announced the appointment by Toshiba America Electronic Components Inc. (TOSHIBA) as a distributor for its complete line of semiconductor products covering each of the company's seven branch locations.

The company anticipates that sales may be adversely affected during its current fiscal year. The company intends to seek additional franchise lines with other manufacturers as the opportunity and need arises.

NEPEAN, ONTARIO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Gandalf Technologies Inc., returned to profitability in the third quarter with a net income of $272,000 on revenues of $41,518,000 (all amounts in Canadian dollars).

This improvement, which had been forecasted by management, follows quarterly losses in the first half of the year.

''Our plan for the third quarter was to achieve $40 million in revenues, to break even and to improve our cash position. We met and surpassed these goals,'' said Desmond Cunningham, chairman and chief executive officer.

''This positive news was carried through to our balance sheet, which showed us in a stronger cash position at the end of the quarter. This was the result of improved operating profits and a decrease in receivables and inventory. These factors reduced our net bank debt by 44.3 percent of $9.9 million. Now we look to the fourth quarter and beyond to improve on this and return the company to a healthier further, ''he said.

Gandalf's revenues in the third quarter, which ended on April 28, were $41,518,000 compared to $44,405,000 in the third quarter in fiscal 1989. The net profit of $272,000, or 2 cents a share, compares with $1,104,000, or 9 cents a share, in the previous fiscal year.

Gandalf's nine-month revenues were $117,230,000, compared with the previous year's level of $119,889,000. The net loss for the first nine months was $12,149,000, or $1 a share, compared with a net loss of $1,454,000, or 12 cents a share, last year.

Gandalf Technologies Inc. provides computer communications solutions to end users. The company is a leading international designer, manufacturer and supplier of a broad range of computer and communications systems which it markets through subsidiaries worldwide.

Share of Gandalf Technologies Inc. are listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange (GAN), on The Stock Exchange, London, and traded over-the-counter (NASDAQ: GANDF) in the United States.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Lotus Development Corp. Monday announced the official opening of its Children's Center, an on-site daycare facility for children of its Cambridge-based employees.

The center, which opened with 13 children, will ultimately accommodate 72 children, from three months to five years of age. It is located on the first floor of Lotus' new developers' building, across from corporate headquarters in Cambridge.

''Just over two years ago this center was little more than a set of ideas and a group of Lotus volunteers committed to seeing them become reality. It is very rewarding to see the fruits of all their hard work,'' said Jim Manzi, president and chief executive officer.

''The center is a reflection of Lotus' commitment to help working parents resolve the struggles they face trying to balance their work and family lives.''

Features of the center include a sliding fee scale, so any employee whose child is selected to be in the center (selection is by lottery) will be able to utilize the facility; a commitment to a diverse student body and staff; a ''get-well room'' for children enrolled in the center who are recovering from mild illnesses; and the use of cloth diapers, for ecological reasons.

''With this facility, Lotus is providing some of the best child care available to working parents anywhere in this country,'' said Mike Balloch vice president, Corporate Services. ''It was custom designed from the ground up for children. And we've been able to attract high-quality teachers by paying salaries that are excellent for the industry and offering Lotus' outstanding benefits package.''

Lotus offers a variety of additional programs to support parents. Last winter the company implemented a Dependent Care Tuition Program that allows employees to realize a significant tax savings on expenses for children and elderly dependents. The company also offers child care tuition assistance for employees with a family income below a certain level; job sharing; flexible work arrangements; and access to a child care resource and referral center.

ATLANTA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - D&B Software Advanced Manufacturing International announced Monday the delivery of its Sales Promotion System (SPS), a new module within its AMAPS/3000 Manufacturing System, which runs on the Hewlett-Packard 3000 minicomputer.

SPS enables manufacturers to easily track and manage special sales promotions separate and independent of standard company pricing policy. The system is fully integrated with the AMAPS/3000 Financial System and Order Management System (OMS) and is available immediately.

SPS enables manufacturers to create and manage special product promotions bassed on product categories or items; by geographic regions; by customer type; or specific customer account. In addition, on-line features support discounts based on total invoice; bill-back payables to customers; and allowances for advertising, banners and demonstrations.

D&B Software is the first vendor to offer manufacturers an integrated solution linking OMS ans SPS. Integration with OMS greatly speeds and eases on-line management of orders tied to specific promotions.

Integration with the AMAPS/3000 Financial System streamlines both accounting and payables, ensuring accurate billing conformance and timely and accurate customer bill-back payables without manual or cumbersome system manipulation.

Additionally, significant system enhancements have been made to OMS to support SPS and improve ease of use. Several new features, including on-line available-to-promise by item; price and discount effectivity dating; and commentary text on customer orders, among others, have been added to the system.

D&B Software, a company of The Dun & Bradstreet Corp., develops, markets and supports manufacturing, financial, human resource and materials management software solutions, tools and services. D&B Software serves more than 10,000 customers worldwide, including 75 percent of the Fortune 500.

BRAINTREE, MA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Grossman's Inc. (NASDAQ:GROS) reported May 1990 sales of $78.5 million, 4.1 percent ahead of sales of $75.5 million from ongoing operations in May 1989.

The company was encouraged by the sales results, considering the economic conditions in the Northeast and the inclement weather in May.

The company launched a program early in May offering greater merchandise selection, increased brand names and a lower pricing structure. Customer reaction to the program has been heartening; however, the additional expenses related to the launch and the current economic conditions in the Northeast will result in second quarter earnings being well below the second quarter earnings of 1989.

PORT WASHINGTON, NY (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Compuflight Inc. (NASDAQ:CMFL) Monday reported increases in net income during the company's fiscal second quarter and six months ended April 30.

For the recent quarter, net income amounted to $62,213, up 18.3 percent from $52,586 reported for the comparable three months of 1989. Revenue from service fees for the period was $348,332 as compared with $372,572 for the three months ended April 30, 1989, a decrease of 6.5 percent. Total revenue (service fees and other income, primarily interest income) was $357,477 in the recent quarter, down 6.4 pecent from $380,426 in the prior-year period.

For the six months ended April 30, net income totalled $118,970, up 35 percent from $87,201 for the corresponding 1989 period. Service fees were at $715,273, down 2.4 percent from the $733,048 reported for the comparable six months of 1989. Revenue (service fees and other income, primarily interest income) was at $733,870, as opposed to $748,591 in the prior-year six month period, a decrease of 2 percent.

According to Bert E. Brodsky, chairman of the computerized flight planning firm, ''the small decreases in service fees, primarily caused by one major customer ceasing operations, were more than offset by reduced operating expenses.''

SANTA BARBARA, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - La Paz Mexican Restaurants in Woodland Hills and Calabasas are using sophisticated new computerized cash-register systems installed and maintained by Western Data Systems, according to Oscar Itturalde, proprietor.

Itturalde said he decided to install Sharp 3310 cash registers, replete with inventory controls, food and material cost-analysis functions and a program that makes menu engineering possible because the systems automatically generate savings.

''And such savings,'' he added, ''benefit our customers.''

The two La Paz Mexican Restaurants specialize in seafood and offer visitors fine-dining experiences, he said. Some of the menu items may be regarded as exotic, with prices ranging from $7 to $25, he said.

The new computerized systems help him keep track of the very complex inventory required to offer gourmet dishes.

''If you like octopus burritos, you will find the best at La Paz,'' he said. ''We offer an excellent Mexican bouillabaise. Our shrimp scampi is succulent, special. You will have to study our menu. It contains many delicacies. We specialize in whole fish; we offer whole rock cod.

''And we have a lot of appetizers, some unusual, all very fine. We have to keep track of everything and these new registers, printers, computers and software help us do it.''

He continued: ''They are very good systems. They allow me to know that I am on top of everything and not to worry about it. As a matter of fact, my new CPA just walked out of this office saying, 'It is a great system.' He meant it. When I go home, I can sleep at night.''

Western Data Systems Account Manager Duane Pushkaric said the systems include kitchen printers; registers also interface with computers for comparative cost analysis and menu engineering.

''There are many restaurants that derive their prices from the menus of competitors,'' Pushkaric said, ''with sometimes costly results for them. Such restaurants are unable to adjust as prices for ingredients vary.''

He continued: ''Mr. Itturalde, however, is able to address such fluctuations before they become problems. His computer tells him what the impact will be, for example, when the price for avocados changes -- as happened recently, when the cost for this restaurant staple increased dramatically.

''He is not lost when the price of lettuce does something unexpected. If costs of beef or pork or rice should shift suddenly, he does not have to be the loser. His computer evaluates information and advises him in a timely way so he is able to decide whether to adjust his price, revise his menu, change his recipe or offer a compensatory special.''

Western Data Systems is the authorized sales and service dealer for NCR, ICL Retail Systems (formerly ICL/Datachecker) and Sharp. It sells electronic cash registers and point-of-sale systems, which use the computerized registers as devices to collect and transmit information for analysis. The firm also sells computers, custom software programs and supplies for cash register systems.

''Such sophisticated systems,'' said Chuck Carmichael, Western Data Systems president, ''provide inventory control and analytical pricing and help eliminate waste. Each of these functions increases the profits of businesses using the systems.''

La Paz Restaurants are located at 21040 Victory Blvd. in Woodland Hills and at 4505 Las Virgines Rd. in Calabasas.

Western Data Systems has offices at 4 W. Calle Laureles in Santa Barbara and at 1429 E. Thousand Oaks Blvd. 200 in Thousand Oaks.

DENVER (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - VICORP Restaurants Inc. (NASDAQ: VRES) Monday reported earnings per share for its second quarter and first half of fiscal 1990 about twice as large as those one year ago.

Earnings for the latest periods set a new record high.

For the 12 weeks ended May 13, 1990, net income advanced 95.9 percent to $4,382,000 or 42 cents per share, from $2,237,000, or 21 cents per share, as revenues rose 11.6 percent to $93,644,000 from $83,891,000 in the same period of 1989.

For the first 28 weeks of fiscal 1990, net income gained 88.3 percent to $7,695,000, or 73 cents per share, from $4,086,000, or 37 cents per share. Revenues were up 10.7 percent to $209,550,000 from $189,245,000.

''The second period,'' said Charles R. Frederickson, chairman and chief executive office, ''marks our 13th consecutive quarter of improvement in operating profit. On an operating basis, VICORP shows record high net income and earnings per share for both the second quarter and first half this year.

''Sales growth continued to produce significant improvement in our operating results. Restaurant revenues grew 11.6 percent representing both a 6.2 percent increase in comparable restaurant sales and the contribution from seven restaurants added since last year's second quarter.

''Modifications to our menus were instrumental in increasing per-person expenditures in each of our concepts, a major contributor to the comparable sales increase. Sales volumes in newly added restaurants remained above expectations, further enhancing that growth and encouraging us in our plans for future expansion.

''Restaurant operating income increased 22.5 percent over the comparable quarter of last year, principally due to the increase in sales. The quarterly results were particularly strong in our Bakers Square group. We remain pleased with this rate of improvement, although maintaining this pace will become more difficult as we begin comparisons with the strong operating performance of recent quarters.

''However, the absolute growth in operating income we expect in future quarters should continue to generate significant gains in net income.''

VICORP operates and franchises approximately 400 mid-scale family type restaurants under the names Bakers Square and Village Inn, principally in the Rocky Mountain Region, upper Midwest, Florida, Arizona and California.

BIRMINGHAM, AL (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Birmingham Steel Corp. (NYSE:BIR) Monday announced that it will enter into an option agreement to purchase approximately 1,000 acres of land near the Palo Verde Nuclear Power Station just west of Phoenix, Ariz.

The company is considering the site for the development of a new steel mini-mill facility to produce approximately 500,000 tons annually of steel reinforcing bar and merchant products. The terms of the option agreement were not disclosed.

Birmingham Steel recently stated that it was evaluating several sites for location of a possible greenfield mini-mill to replace the company's Barbary Coast Steel facility in Emeryville, Calif. Under the terms of a 1987 agreement with local authorities, Birmingham Steel must cease operations at the Emeryville facility before the end of calendar 1997.

Concerning the selection of Arizona for location of a new facility, James A. Todd, Jr., president and chief executive officer, stated: ''The western Arizona site offers attractive access to key demand markets for steel products and competitive electric power resources. Local officials have been extremely receptive to the proposed facility, which we expect would employ approximately 250 people.

''Although we continue to evaluate several other locations as possible replacement sites for the Emeryville operation,'' Todd continued, ''we have initiated the process of obtaining environmental and operating approvals required for construction and operation of the Arizona mill. Production at the new facility could begin prior to the end of calendar 1992.''

Birmingham Steel operates steel mini-mills producing steel and steel products, primarily reinforcing bar, and is the largest U.S. manufacturer of steel roof support systems used in underground coal mining. COLUMBUS, OH (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Meret Inc. (NASDAQ:MRET) announced Monday that its board of directors has approved a proposed reverse stock split.

Under the proposed reverse split, each 2,500 presently outstanding shares would be combined into one new share. No fractional shares will be issued. The company instead will pay 30 cents in cash for each presently outstanding share converted into a fractional interest as a result of the reverse split. Shareholders who own 2,500 or more shares will receive one new share for each 2,500 shares owned and 30 cents in cash for any share not converted into a whole share.

The purpose of the proposed reverse split is to reduce the number of Meret shareholders to fewer than 300, which would allow Meret to terminate its registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission and no longer be a public company. Meret is seeking to become a private company primarily in order to eliminate the substantial costs incurred in complying with the reporting requirements of a public company.

In connection with the proposed reverse split, Meret's board of directors retained The Harman Group, a Columbus based investment banking firm, to render an opinion as to the fairness from a financial point of view of the reverse split and the 30 cents price per share to be paid for fractional interests.

Meret expects to hold a special meeting of shareholders later this summer to seek approval of the proposed reverse split. Approval of the reverse split requires the affirmative vote of a majority of Meret's outstanding shares.

Meret owns Retail Planning Associates, one of the world's largest retail consulting and design firms.

The promotion will be advertised nationally in USA Today, travel publications and other media with a series of ads featuring tennis champion Chris Evert, national spokesperson for Payless.

To provide the cellular phones and related equipment, Payless selected Gateway Telephone Co. Inc. (GTI), of St. Louis. GTI is supplying 5,000 of its CP-900 portable cellular phones for the Payless rental fleet.

Industry observers view this promotion as still another example of the aggressive marketing Payless has shown since being acquired by the Sampo Group in September, 1989.

Payless began 1990 by launching a national advertising and promotion program featuring Chris Evert as national spokesperson. The company has also kicked off a far-reaching effort for recruitment of franshisees in keeping with its announced goal to more than double the number of Payless locations to 225.

In addition, the Payless rental fleet is being increased from approximately 10,000 vehicles to 17,000.

Most recently, Payless began expanding with franchises in major hotel, motel and resort chains through a newly-created division to serve the hospitality industry. Hotels, motels, resorts and Payless rental cars will be marketed together.

A press conference is scheduled for May 16th. At this time the new Corporate Vice President that will be heading up Payless International Resorts Division will be named.

Further information about the cellular phone offer is available from Payless toll free at 1-800-PAYLESS.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Phoenix Laser Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:PXLS) Monday announced that the company has filed an IDE application with the FDA for its ophthalmic surgical workstation to commence human clinical testing of the system for corneal refractive surgery.

The announcement was made by H. Alfred Sklar, director of research for the San Francisco-based research and development company.

The Phoenix ophthalmic surgical workstation has been designed for the treatment of nearsightedness, farsightedness and a variety of other eye disorders, many of which cannot be treated with current technology.

The IDE application is designed to establish the safety and efficacy of the opthalmic surgical workstation in making refractive changes using either transepithelial stromal keratectomy (''TSK'' in which the laser system ionizes material to create a cavity within the eye) or wide-area ablation (a technique used by excimer lasers which removes material from the surface of the eye).

The company has already successfully concluded preclinical testing of the workstation using live animals and post-mortem human eyes.

Previously, in April of this year, the company filed a 510 (k) application with the FCA for the use of the ophthalmic surgical workstation in posterior capsultomy procedures.

If and when this 510 (k) application is approved by the FDA, the company will be free to commercially exploit its ophthalmic surgical workstation for posterior capsulotomy without further testing.

GARDEN GROVE, CA (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Dense-Pac Microsystems Inc. (NASDAQ:DPAC) reported a net income for the first quarter ended May 31, 1990, of $148,465, or 3 cents net income per share, on sales of $2,330,809 as compared with net income of $101,504, or 2 cents net income per share, on sales of $2,053,222 for the same period last year.

According to James G. Turner, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, the first quarter represents the highest quarterly sales in the company's history. Included in the sales figure is approximately $390,000 of sales for the interactive video division, which currently has no backlog.

Turner went on to state that the company is continuing to invest in the international market and that the company is well-positioned to expand into that area.

Dense-Pac designs and manufactures a full range of digital and memory surface-mount components and subsystems utilizing the latest CMOS technology. Proprietary packaging technology gives the company a range of products that achieve the highest speeds with the greatest savings of space, weight and cost for its customers.

Space and cost-savings of between four and 20 times are achieved with Dense-Pac products over conventional technology with similar improvements in reliability.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Tiger Media, a leading New Media software development company, announced Monday that the first original optical disc entertainment title, ''Airwave Adventure -- The Case of the Cautious Condor,'' will be available on Commodore International's Commodore Dynamic Total Vision (CDTV)

''Airwave Adventure,'' a 1930s-style murder mystery drama that uses vintage comic book cartoon-drawn characters and scenes, will be available for CDTV, a CD-ROM player introduced at the Summer Consumer Electronics Show in Chicago, which synthesizes compact disc and advanced computer technologies.

The award-winning ''Airwave Adventure,'' which Tiger Media plans to make available for a variety of optical disc platforms in the U.S. and Europe this year, was introduced in Japan last December for Fujitsu's FM/Towns multimedia computer and already has a 10 percent penetration of the installed base for that market.

'''Airwave Adventure' is the first title to be developed specifically with the interactive capabilities of optical disc platforms in mind,'' said Laura Buddine, president of Tiger Media. ''This title is 100 times larger in data and graphic capacity than any other title ever produced for any format. There are three hours of CD-Audio, 700 originally drawn color pictures and 200 kilobytes of program.''

''Airwave Adventure'' takes place aboard the ''Condor,'' a luxury airliner fashioned after Howard Hughes' ''Spruce Goose.'' There has been a murder, all the suspects are aboard the plane and the player has 20 minutes to find the murderer.

Using CDTV's remote control, the player moves the detective from room to room, meeting the characters on the plane and gathering clues. Each segment lasts about two minutes, during which time the detective tries to establish the means, motive and opportunity for each character.

There are more than 1,500 paths that a player can follow; however, only one leads to the murderer.

''Airwave Adventure'' is the culmination of more than two years of market research, creative design and technical innovation. Because the New Media industry is just emerging, Tiger Media had to design for a market and a technology that did not exist. The company essentially had to invent the technology and tools that made this title possible.

The audio and graphics are produced once, digitized once, and then using proprietary tools, the company is able to adapt it for any optical disc platform.

Tiger Media is a leading New Media software development company that designs products for all optical disc formats. The company has headquarters at 10810 Paramount Blvd., Suite 201, Downey, 90241, 213/862-5591.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 11) BUSINESS WIRE - Marvin Goldstein, chairman and chief executive officer of the department store division of the Dayton Hudson Corp., announced today the intended promotion of Gary Witkin to president of the Marshall Field group of department stores.

Witkin has agreed to accept this new position on the closing of the sale of Marshall Field & Co. to the Minneapolis-based Dayton Hudson Corp.

Witkin, 41, joined Marshall Field's in 1983 as senior vice president of stores. A year later, he was promoted to executive vice president of stores with responsibility for the entire Marshall Field's stores organization. He is also currently the vice chairman of the Greater State Street Council in Chicago.

Born in New York, Witkin attended the University of Cincinnati, where he received his B.A. in Management and Economics. His early retail experience was as a buyer and manager with New York's Wallach's Inc. From 1976 to 1977 Witkin lived in Chicago, where he was the managing director for Lord and Taylor's Water Tower store. Just prior to joining Marshall Field's, he was vice president and divisional merchandise manager for Neiman-Marcus in Dallas.

In his new position with the department store division of Dayton Hudson Corp., Witkin will be responsible for the operation of the entire Marshall Field's group, including customer service, sales, expense management, visual presentation and store staffing. Witkin's previous experience in both the buying and the selling area of retailing will be a great asset in this new role.

Witkin resides with his wife Judy and his children Barrett, 12, and Brittany, 9, in Highland Park, Ill.

By WALTER ANDREWS

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - To the average man in the street, last year's 11 million-gallon Alaska oil spill, the worst in U.S. history, is a murky, fading memory.

Few realize, however, that they are helping Exxon Corp. pay for its cleanup to the tune of $800 million.

Legislation was proposed shortly after the spill that would have prevented the world's largest oil company from claiming the usual 34 percent business tax deduction for its $2.5 billion cleanup cost, in addition to at least $450 million Exxon received in spill insurance.

But the controversial spill tax bills have gotten bogged down in the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means committees and have been quietedly gutted of the provision that would have the law apply retroactively to the spill of the Exxon Valdez tanker.

''The votes weren't there,'' said a spokesman for Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., a co-sponsor of the bill. Senators are reluctant to pass retroactive tax measures into law, he said.

Exxon only will admit to expenditures of more than $2 billion to scour the hundreds of miles of Alaska shore fouled by crude oil after the March 24, 1989 spill in pristine Prince William Sound.

But it wrote off $1.68 billion in cleanup costs against 1989 earnings after tax deductions. This means its spent more than $2.5 billion after insurance.

''Although Exxon's expenditures for cleaning up the oil spilled in Prince William Sound by the Exxon Valdez may sound like a lot of money, a large portion of it will be offset by insurance and tax deductions,'' said Ed Rothschild, energy/environment director for the Citizen Action environmental group in Washington.

''This arrangement limits Exxon's real financial exposure and at the same time insulates those managers and board members who acted irresponsibly bu failing to ensure the safe operation of the company's tankers and facilities.''

A similar bill was offered last year in the House of Representatives by Rep. William Lipinski, D-Ill., which a Lipinski spokesman said has more than 100 co-sponsors in the 435-member House.

The measure is bottled up in the tax-writing House Ways and Means committee, he said.

Senate Finance Committee chairman Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, has promised his support for the spill-tax bill as part of overall budget legislation, a spokesman for Reid said.

The overall budget bill currently is the subject of ''budget-summit'' negotiations between Congress and the White House over the deficit and spiraling costs to bail out failing savings and loan institutions.

The spokesman said he thought there was a ''good chance'' the spill-tax portion would survive and not be opposed by the White House.

''Technically, it's not a new tax so it would pass the lip test,'' he said referring to President Bush's no-new-taxes, ''read-my-lips''campaign pledge.

The ''gross numbers would come out of the budget summit. It would then be up to Congress to work out the specifics,'' the Reid spokesman said.

''In these times of deficit spending and budget crisis, this legislation could provide sources of greatly needed revenue without any hardship to the American taxpayer. New money but no new taxes,'' Reid said in a statement.

Even if the proposed legislation was law at the time of the Exxon-Valdez spill, it might not have stopped Exxon from claiming $800 million or more in tax deductions.

The proposed legislation would only prevent an oil company from claiming a tax deduction when it could be shown the company had not made a good-faith effort to clean up a spill.

Otherwise, a cleanup would be considered a normal business expense for tax purposes.

''This is a tough system of incentives that will encourage cleanups and punish misconduct, but will not penalize companies who act swiftly and responsibly to clean up simple accidents,'' Lipinski said.

The House's Democratic Study Group estimates there are between 9,000 and 12,000 oil spills in American waters each year.

The House and Senate have also recently approved separate oil-liability bills that would establish a cleanup trust fund that would be partially paid for by fees on imported oil.

Differences between the two bills are currently being hammered out in a House-Senate conference.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Eighty years after a 55-foot high dam cut them off from their ancestral spawning grounds, record numbers of American Shad are returning to the Susquehanna River in Pennsylvania, wildlife officials say.

More than 10,000 shad have been scooped out of the river below the Conowingo Dam in Maryland this spring and released about 50 miles upriver. And biologists predict more than 15,000 will be trapped and released by the time the spawning season ends in mid-June, a 90 percent increase over last year.

In 1972, the first year of the Conowingo fish lift program, only 182 shad were trapped and released.

Still, those numbers pale in comparison to the millions of shad that migrated up the Susquehanna before the building of four dams virtually ended the spring shad runs on the East Coast's longest river basin.

The dams stretch from Conowingo north to the York Haven Dam near Harrisburg, Pa., and are operated by four separate power companies. The Holtwood Dam, built in 1910, limited shad runs to the lower 25 miles of the river.

In the 1970s, pollution was blamed for a general decline in the shad population along the East Coast. But the runs have increased dramatically in recent years in rivers like the Delaware, where water quality has improved.

In 1980, when the state of Maryland banned shad fishing, there were fewer than 5,000 American Shad in the entire upper basin of the Chesapeake Bay, federal Fish and Wildlife Service officials say. Last year there were 75,000.

But federal and state officials agree that the costly lift program has a long way to go before shad are plentiful in the Susquehanna, which flows into the Chesapeake, and a 10-year fishing ban is lifted.

''The numbers are improving steadily. We're showing a 50 percent per year improvement in stock size,'' said Richard St. Pierre, the Fish and Wildlife Service's Susquehanna River coordinator. ''We're talking about a few thousand fish compared to millions years ago.''

St. Pierre has charted the progress of shad in the Susquehanna since the early 1980s, when state and federal authorities began pressuring the power companies that own the dams to help reintroduce the fish.

The owners of the Holtwood, Safe Harbor and York Haven dams eventually agreed, among other things, to spend $3.7 million to stock shad upstream and to find ways to help young shad make their way downstream.

But Philadelphia Electric Co., which has operated a fish lift at the Conowingo Dam since 1972, resisted pressure to build a permanent fish lift.

Finally, in December 1986, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ordered the company to build a second lift. Construction on that facility, which will cost $12.5 million, began this spring. It is expected to be finished by the fall of 1991.

PE officials say the new lift will still require that shad be trapped and loaded into trucks, then hauled nearly 50 miles past the York Haven dam near Harrisburg. Once released, the shad will have more than 350 miles of unobstructed river to spawn.

After years of fighting the proposal, PE has done an about-face, and is now vigorously working to bring back the shad, according to St. Pierre.

''They used to be the bad guys and now they're the good guys,'' he said.

''We fought them hard and bitterly but they didn't want to spend the money.''

Biologist Chris Freas, whose company, RMC Environmental Services, contracts with PE, said the fish lift is actually like an elevator. He said the fish are drawn into a holding pool, lifted in a bucket and dumped into a sorting tank. The shad are then manually separated and put into transport tanks.

Freas said the lift will someday be able to trap and transport 1.5 million shad and 20 million river herring. And while he is excited about the progress in recent years, he realizes the battle is far from over.

''Ten thousand fish is great news but that's a long way from a restored population of fish,'' he said. ''There's still a long way to go. The ultimate goal is to restore 3 million shad to the base of the Conowingo Dam.''

Freas noted that the recent increase in shad catches may be due in part to favorable river conditions, with an optimal water flow and temperature.

''If we have four bad years of spawning we could be back to square one,'' he said. ''We can't control Mother Nature.''

St. Pierre said the Conowingo fish lift program is only a stop-gap measure. He said for shad to flourish, the owners of the other three dams must also build fish lifts.

''All three of them are working on plans to build passageways,'' he said. ''The next step will be to convince them to put together a construction schedule.''

Shad will only spawn in the rivers where they were born. It is therefore important to establish a population of young shad in the spawning areas, said Art Michaels, who edits ''Pennsylvania Angler,'' a Fish Commission publication.

Michaels said the Pennsylvania Fish Commission stocks shad in the Susquehanna above the York Haven Dam in hopes the fish will be able to make their way downriver and return in four years. He said shad, which are hatched from eggs taken from spawning grounds in the Delaware, Hudson and other rivers, are nurtured at the world's only shad rearing station on the Juniata River.

By MICHAEL MOLINSKI

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (JUNE 8) UPI - The three largest tuna companies in the U.S. market scored a public relations victory recently when they announced they would stop buying tuna caught by netting dolphins.

In the waters off Costa Rica, however, thousands of miles south of where Starkist, Bumble Bee and Chicken of the Sea made their pronouncements, dolphins are still being killed, largely by foreign tuna fishermen oblivious to or uncaring of the conservationist concerns of the American public.

''Nothing will happen until inspectors go on the ships and start enforcing it,'' said Gerardo Huertas, the Costa Rican representative for the World Society for the Protection of Animals.

According to the Costa Rican Agriculture Ministry, some 60,000 tons of tuna are caught in Costa Rica's territorial waters each year. Much of it is caught by boats flagged by Mexico, Ecuador, Panama, Venezuela and Vanuatu.

Costa Rica itself has none of the large tuna boats most responsible for methods that kill dolphin, but gets about $2 million annually on fees from foreign tuna boats fishing in its waters and selling part of their catch to U.S. companies.

Huertas said of the tuna caught in the Western Hemisphere, only Mexican waters produce more than Costa Rican waters, where most tuna is caught by netting dolphins.

For reasons not fully understood, dolphins in the eastern tropical Pacific - the coastal waters from California to Chile - swim with schools of tuna.

Many large tuna boats search for dolphins, herd them together with cherry bombs dropped from helicopters, then send out speedboats to encircle the area in a huge net tied to the main boat and scoop up everything in its path.

Tens of thousands of dolphins die each year from getting caught in the nets and suffocating.

Amid conservationist concerns and U.S. boycotts, Starkist, Chicken of the Sea and Bumble Bee said April 12 they would stop buying tuna caught with dolphins.

In response to the assertions by Huertas, Chicken of the Sea spokeswoman Mitch Meyers in St. Louis noted the firm - affiliated with Indonesian-owned Van Camp Seafood - buys only from U.S.-flagged boats, which are virtually all accompanied by U.S. government observers.

''Our contract states we won't buy tuna caught on dolphin,'' she said.

Starkist spokesman Erik Bloemendaal in Long Beach, Calif. said his company an affiliate of H.J. Heinz in Pittsburgh, buys from foreign and U.S. vessels. He said its policy applied to boats that left port after April 12 and ''our policy is not to buy any tuna caught in association with dolphin.''

He said while there are ''not enough'' international observers on foreign boats, Starkist would only buy tuna ''certified dolphin safe.''

''That's not to say other canners couldn't,'' he said.

Bumble Bee, a Thai-owned company, has said it needs as long as six months to end its contractual obligations before starting the new policy.

Huertas did not name companies buying locally caught tuna and had no figures on how much tuna they buy. But he said any boat could claim not to fish with dolphins.

''The companies can try not to buy tuna with dolphin blood on it, but that's a very difficult thing to do,'' he said, adding the only enforcement inspectors have is to report dolphin killers to tuna companies.

''The decision not to buy dolphin tuna will reduce the amount of killing some, but it will depend on how many inspectors they have,'' Huertas said.

The boycott of dolphin-caught tuna was not well received by Costa Rica's tuna industry.

''It's upsetting the whole industry, including myself,'' said Stewart Heigold, who owns Tesoro del Mar, one of two Costa Rican tuna canneries that sell some of their product to U.S. distributors. ''They (Bumble Bee, Starkist and Chicken of the Sea) are the three most important tuna companies in the world.''

But Heigold said he would buy tuna from anyone because his main market is in Costa Rica, where the public is not concerned with conservation.

Still, he added Costa Rica was ''going to have to make laws'' against fishing with dolphins because ''If we don't, we are going to be sanctioned and if I try to sell my tuna to the United States, I will be turned away.''

Heigold said enforced regulations could prompt different fishing methods.

But Huertas said many boats would move to Mexican waters because ''Mexico does not care about it ... they just do whatever they want.''

Heigold said the U.S. boycott on dolphin tuna is also driving down the international market price for tuna sold by tuna boats openly using the dolphin method.

During most of the 1970s, when accurate figures became available, most dolphins killed by tuna boats where killed by U.S.-flagged boats. In 1972, more than 368,000 dolphins were killed by U.S. vessels, compared to 55,000 by non-U.S. vessels, according to U.S. government statistics.

But with conservationist pressure and regulations such as the U.S. Marine Mammal Protection Act, American boats have been legally held to fewer than 20,500 dolphin deaths for several years.

However, many boats simply changed nationalities, and by 1986 the number of dolphins killed by non-U.S. vessels was more than 100,000.

PERTH, Australia (JUNE 11) - Troubled Australian businessman Alan Bond here Monday announced plans to sell nearly half of his Perth morning newspaper,

The West Australian, to British media magnate Robert Maxwell for 250 million dollars (193.67 million U.S.).

In a statement, Mr. Bond's controlling Bell Group said that subject to the approval of its bankers and Australia's Foreign Investment Review Board, The West Australian will be transferred to a new company.

The company will be 50 percent owned by Bell, 49 percent by Mr. Maxwell and one per cent by what the Bell statement described as a "distinguished Australian citizen."

Mr. Maxwell, owner of Britain's mass-circulation Mirror newspaper group, bought a 14.9 percent interest in Bell from the company's managing director, David Aspinall, in late April.

However, that purchase is subject to a legal challenge by the National Companies and Securities Commission.

Bell said the Mirror Group's purchase price comprised 175 million dollars (135.57 million U.S.) in cash and 75 million dollars (58.10 million U.S.) of assumed Bell debt.

It said the restructuring would include a refinancing of the debts of Bell Publishing Group Pty Ltd, publishers of The West Australian, and a tender offer for 565 million dollars (437.71 million U.S.) in Bell Group convertible bonds at a price to be determined.

"Mirror will assist in the tender by the provision of a credit facility," Bell said.

Shares in Bell last traded at seven cents on Australian stock exchanges.

RIYADH (JUNE 11) - A 22-year-old Saudi woman recently gave birth to triplets in an interval of eight days, a delivery unprecedented in the annals of gynecology, medical sources said.

The woman first gave birth to a 740 gram (1.63 pound) baby girl, followed by a set of male twins weighing 1.075 and 1.175 kilograms (2.36 and 2.59 pounds) eight days later, according to Jeddah gynecologist Michel Georgie.

Dr. Georgie said he could offer no scientific explanation but noted that the woman had been taking medication to combat infertility.

WELLINGTON (JUNE 11) - New Zealand will join the United States in a project to introduce a grain crop as a substitute for coca plants in a South American country, New Zealand Foreign Minister Mike Moore said here Monday.

He would not name the country or the nature of the project, saying he preferred to announce it next week when New Zealand presents a new package on how it deals with the worldwide drug problem.

Cocaine is derived from the coca plant.

Mr. Moore said he initiated the joint project during a meeting he had in March with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and finalized details last week.

He said the project would not cost New Zealand much but would enormously help relations between Washington and Wellington because U.S. President George Bush has listed drugs as his country's greatest problem.

The new anti-drugs package would involve new initiatives from the customs, police and border control agencies, he said.

"While New Zealand is a small market it could become more lucrative because of the tightening noose around drug dealers' necks internationally," Mr. Moore said.

Hamburg (JUNE 11) - The European Community (E.C.) and the Association of South East Asian Nations (Asean) launched three days of talks in this northern West German port city, with discussion expected to focus on closer ties between the two groups.

Hamburg Mayor Henning Voscherau, the official host of the conference, welcomed representatives of Asean and the E.C. Commission with an admonition to the Europeans not to ignore links with other regions as the Community moves toward economic integration.

Voscherau also cautioned West Germany and East Germany not to lose themselves in exclusively German affairs as the two states head toward unification.

The head of the E.C. Commission's North-South Directorate-General, Juan Prat, called for closer relations with Asean. Improved access to Asian government officials for European businesses was also needed, he said.

PORT VILA (JUNE 11) - Vanuatu's economy has recovered significantly from a 1988 depression created by a political upheaval, the South Pacific country's president Frederick Timakata told parliament here Monday.

Mr. Timakata also asked parliament at its opening session to seek a constitutional amendment giving the country's ceremonial chiefs "a greater involvement in national affairs" to ensure political stability.

Gross domestic product (GDP) rose by four per cent over 1989 after a 1988 decline in the wake of a political and constitutional crisis in the archipelago.

The once battered economy had improved markedly and "foreign investor confidence is once again soaring," Mr. Timakata said. "We have turned the clock back and I'm happy to see an improved economic performance in 1989 and in the first quarter of this year."

Mr. Timakata said Vanuatu's export prospects in the 1990's "look optimistic and we are already getting good prices for cocoa, beef, timber, though copra sales are still down."

Vanuatu's exports of around 12 million dollars a year are almost one quarter of what it imports in food, vehicles, manufactured goods, petroleum products and building materials.

Tourism in 1989 peaked at 22.72 million dollars and Mr. Timakata said the government was hopeful that with a new tourist development plan in this island republic "we are into good times in a few years."

Vanuatu's national carrier, Air Vanuatu, which currently flies to Australia and New Zealand, is negotiating for routes into Japan, Fiji and New Caledonia.

Mr.Timakata said another remarkable achievement for the island economy was a decline in inflation after a record 15.9 per cent in late 1987.

The current level stands at 7.7 per cent.

Mr. Timakata told parliament that by allowing the country's ceremonial chiefs and some of its bigger church denominations "a role in national affairs we can ensure maintenance of law and order in the future."

The ceremonial chiefs today have virtually no national powers.

JOHANNESBURG, June 11 (AFP) - Diamond giant De Beers hit the jackpot on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange (JSE) Monday when it floated a new share with a record market capitalisation of 37 billion rands (14.5 billion dollars).

De Beers also sought to list the new unit, linking its domestic operations to overseas operations controlled by a new Swiss-based subsidiary, Centenary AG, on stock markets in London, Zurich, Geneva, Basle, Lausanne, Frankfurt, Paris and Brussels.

When the JSE opened at 10 a.m. (0800 GMT), new certificates representing a linked unit in De Beers South Africa and a depository receipt in Centenary AG began changing hands at 99 rands (38.7 dollars).

This was up from De Beers' closing price on Friday of 97.75 rands, but down on the record 110 rands touched by the stock on May 18 when a consortium of Johannesburg investment houses mooted a plan to implement separate trading of stock in the company's local and foreign divisions.

The plan was later aborted following strong opposition from De Beers chairman Julian Ogilvie Thompson.

According to De Beers, Centenary AG will be centered on diamond marketing and distribution while De Beers SA will hold the diamond mining business and other domestic interests.

Mr. Ogilivie Thompson said in a circular to shareholders that as far as possible the two groups would be administered by identical boards of directors and their securities would be linked.

He said the overall capacity of De BeersCentenary AG to pay dividends would not be affected.

"The only difference will be that unit holders will now receive dividends directly on the Centenary AG depositary receipts as well as their De Beers equity shares instead of only from one source."

Some analysts have described Centenary AG as a conduit to take De Beers wealth out of the country in the event of a nationalisation programme by the African National Congress.

KAMPALA (JUNE 11) - A fresh outbreak of meningitis has hit Uganda's north-western district of Arua, killing among others the medical officer of Arua Hospital, the New Vision newspaper reported Monday.

The paper said that health workers were also among the victims as well as medical officer Dr. William Pondu, who died on June 3 after contracting the disease from patients.

The paper quoted the district medical officer, Dr. Charles Adriko, as saying that a total of 87 people had died from the disease since it first broke out in the district in January this year. He said nearly 360 cases had been reported so far, but the total was certainly higher.

Only 10 per cent of the population, numbering some 600,000, had been vaccinated against the disease and about 100,000 doses of vaccines were urgently required to contain the epidemic, Dr. Adriko said.

According to New Vision, large crowds of panic-stricken people have converged on medical units in Arua, but were turned away for lack of vaccines.

NIAMEY, June 11 (AFP) - A strike against IMF-linked austerity measures in Niger, which has been declared illegal by the government, was being well supported on Monday and there was no sign of police activity or of government reaction.

The central market in Niamey remained closed, taxis and public transport were not operating, and the employees of ministries, banks and insurance companies had not gone to work.

The strike, which has been called by unions for Monday and Tuesday, was being well supported at Maradi 670 kilometres (about 400 miles) east of Niamey, sources in the capital said.

Students have been disrupting their studies since February when police fired on demonstrators. Police said that three people were killed, but students said that 14 people died.

The unions and students are protesting against proposed austerity measures which form part of a structural programme to be negotiated with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and with the World Bank.

The proposals include an end to the recruitment of civil servants, and a programme of privatisation. During the 1980s national income fell sharply in line with a fall in the prise of uranium which is the country's main export.

In 1989 the country registered a cereal shortfall of 350,000 tons.

But observers said that there were signs of deeper dissatisfaction.

A representative of the World Bank, who visited Niger on March 30, said that per capita income had not risen for 25 years.

On May 1 some 29 organisations affiliated to the Union of Trades Unions of Workers in Niger (USTN) called unsuccessfuly for the creation of a multi-party political system.

President Ali saibou, who has described the strikers as "trouble makers" said that "a multi-party system will doubtless appear in its own good time in Niger".

LONDON (JUNE 11) - British wholesale prices rose 0.5 percent in May over the April level, with a year on year increase of 6.2 percent, according to provisional non-seasonally adjusted figures published here Monday.

Wholesale prices had risen one percent in April over the March level, with a year on year rise of 6.1 percent.

The prices of raw materials and energy used by industry fell 1.1 percent in May over the April level and were down 1.3 percent over 12 months, according to seasonally-adjusted figures, the Central Statistical Office said.

They were down 0.9 percent in April over th March level.

The increase in wholesale prices was in line with analysts' expectations, but the fall in energy and raw materials prices was well above forecasts of a 0.2 percent fall.

KHARTOUM (JUNE 11) - A Sudanese military court has sentenced a man to death by hanging for hashish dealings, the al Guwat al Musalaha daily reported Monday.

It said al Fatih Abdul Rahman was caught in Omdurman, one of the three cities that makes up greater Khartoum, with five pounds of hashish in March.

According to the judge, al Fatih had served an earlier one-year sentence for a similar offense.

The same court also gave his colleague Abdel Aziz Khalid Mahgoub a probation period of five years, warning that he would be given ten years in jail if he helped drug pushers again. His crime was that his car was used by al Fatih for ferrying the hashish.

The military government headed by General Omer Beshir imposed the death sentence on drug dealers soon after coming to power a year ago. So far, one man has been hanged for the crime.

KAMPALA (JUNE 11) - Uganda's bid to privatise its ailing state-owned companies has flopped because investors are unwilling to buy them, industrial sources said here Monday.

Not one of the giant firms has found a buyer since the privatisation scheme was launched three years ago at the urging of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, which said the only way to rid Uganda of the inefficient, unwieldy "parastatals" was to sell them to private investors.

But few investors have enough money to buy the firms, which in any case are far from being an attractive business proposition as nearly two decades of mismanagement and corruption have left them with obsolete equipment and broken down factories.

The Uganda Development Corporation (UDC), which virtually took control of Uganda's entire economy when dictator Idi Amin handed it 49 major companies left behind by Asians whom he expelled in 1972, has said it needs 200 million dollars to rehabilitate factories before it can sell them.

The government decided this year to sell more than 7,000 smaller businesses left by the Asians.

But less than 300 have been sold so far, while the rest remain in the hands of the Departed Asians Property Custodian Board, a government organisation frequently accused of mismanagement.

Although many Ugandans can afford the businesses, they are reluctant to buy, preferring to rent them as they fear that if there is another change in government, the new regime, like its predecessors, would confiscate them and give them to their supporters.

Since Idi Amin was ousted in 1979, Uganda has been ruled by a series of different governments, the longest-lived of which has been the current administration of Yoweri Museveni, president since 1986.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 11) - Economic growth in the European Economic Community, the world's biggest trade bloc, will slow slightly in 1990 and 1991 but remain strong and above the world average, the EEC's executive Commission forecast Monday.

The Community's gross domestic product (GDP) is likely to expand by three percent this year and 3.1 percent in 1991, after 3.4 percent in 1989 and 3.8 percent in 1988, it said.

Average world economic growth will be 2.2 percent and 2.7 percent for those years.

"The outlook for the Community economy remains positive," the upbeat report said, predicting that buoyant consumer demand and strong investment would drive the unemployment rate down from nine percent of the workforce in 1989 to 8.3 percent by the end of 1991.

German unification, a boon to the EEC economy, is only likely to spur the Community's growth by 0.25 of a percentage point next year, as its full impact will only be felt in 1992, the Commission said.

On the other hand, the democratisation of eastern Europe will have immediate, beneficial results for EEC exporters, the forecast said.

Demand from countries seeking to rebuild their infrastructure and develop their private sectors will cause the Community's export volume to rise by 6.75 percent this year, after seven percent last year.

Other export markets will stagnate somewhat, under the effect of tighter monetary conditions throughout the industrialised world and the higher exchange rates of EEC currencies.

LONDON (JUNE 11) - British Steel said Monday that its annual pre-tax profit jumped 23.5 percent in the year ending March 31 to 733 million pounds (1.24 billion dollars).

The profit figure, based on turnover of 5.1 billion pounds (8.6 billion dollars), was at the high end of analysts' expectations despite a fall in demand and profit during the second quarter.

British Steel, which was privatized in December 1988, also announced it would pay a 5.5 pence final dividend for a total of 8.25 pence on the year, compared to 7.5 pence the previous year.

"The results were expected but won't be sustained mainly because of the cost-price squeeze facing the company," said Peter DuPont, steel industry analyst with the firm UBS-Phillips and Drew.

British Steel were off 1.5 pence at 147 at 12:30 p.m. (1130 GMT) on the London Stock Exchange.

The final results also included provisions for redundancy and other costs totalling 145 million pounds (246.5 million dollars).

The company noted that raw material costs had risen sharply and that the profit slowdown in the second half had been accentuated by a weaker British currency and high inflation, as well as a downturn in British construction.

British Steel controls around 60 percent of the market share in Britain and has developed a strategy aimed at boosting exports to other European countries, notably in Spain and West Germany.

KUALA LUMPUR (JUNE 11) - Malaysia Mining Corp. Bhd. (MMC), Malaysia's largest mining company, said Monday it might have to close some of its 21 tin mines if prices fell further.

MMC's chairman, Ibrahim Menudin, said the group's production cost was between 16.50 dollars (6.11 U.S.) and 17.00 dollars (6.29 U.S.) a kilogram (2.2 pounds), the same range as current tin prices.

Mr. Ibrahim said after the MMC's annual general meeting that tin, which accounted for about 25 percent of the group's profits in the past financial year, was expected to contribute less to current earnings because of low prices.

The group reported a pre-tax profit of 120.5 million dollars (44.6 million U.S.) for the year ended January 31, up 69 percent from 71.5 million dollars (26.5 million U.S.) the previous year.

The company, which has diversified away from tin, is also involved in diamond mining in Australia through its associate, Ashton Mining Ltd., and in Kalimantan, Indonesia, with joint-venture partners P.T. Aneka Tambang and P.T. Emira Bumi.

Mr. Ibrahim said MMC was discussing the possibilities of mining joint ventures with authorities in China, Burma, Laos and Vietnam.

The group was also looking into prospects for exploring for gold in North America, and gold and tin in Brazil.

THE HAGUE (JUNE 11) - Five European Economic Community (EEC) countries are expected to sign a much-delayed agreement on free circulation between their nations next week, official sources said here Monday.

A final decision on the June 19 signing is expected later Monday, Dutch Foreign Ministry spokesman Robbert van Lanschot said, and a planned further meeting on Thursday could be cancelled as "common ground has been reached on all points."

The Netherlands until June 30 hold the rotating presidency of the so-called Schengen group, whih takes its name from Schengen in Luxembourg where the accord was reached.

The free circulation agreement covers West Germany, France, and the Benelux countries.

The final signing was originally due on December 15, but was delayed as some points had not been resolved, notably the question of judicial aid, where Luxembourg was refusing the inclusion of tax offences, right of asylum and individual freedom, which the Netherlands feared would be curtailed, and the question of German reunification.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND (JUNE 11) - EEC central bank governors have introduced new structures and procedures for the realisation on July 1 of the first stage of economic and monetary union, governors' committee president Karl Otto Poehl said here Monday.

The committee of European Economic Community central bank governors is seen as the key element in a new European central bank system.

It has appointed Gunter D. Baer as its secretary general and set up a committee of alternate members, three sub-committees and an enlarged secretariat.

The sub-committees will deal with exchange rate policy, monetary policy and bank surveillance.

The governors have also appointed five economists -- one each from Britain, Italy, Spain, Belgium and France -- to an economic unit which is to be added to the existing secretariate and will supply analytical support to the committee.

"They are young economists who will be truly independent of the central bank to which they belong," Mr. Poehl said.

"The governors' committee is sure that this reorganisation will help to strengthen cooperation of central banks and coordination of monetary policy," the committee said in a statement.

LONDON (JUNE 11) - Anglian Water, one of 10 British water companies privatised in December, said Monday its taxable profit rose 17 percent in the year to March 31 to 86.1 million pounds (143.5 million dollars) from 73.4 million (122.3 million dollars).

Turnover was up 12.5 percent at 401.3 million pounds (668.8 million dollars) from 356.5 million (594 million dollars).

The profit figure was in line with market expectations and above the 83

SOFIA (JUNE 11) - Several thousand young supporters of the liberal opposition demonstrated here Monday claiming that Sunday's elections were "rigged" in favour of the Bulgarian ex-communist Socialist Party, which appears to have won a clear victory.

The view was contradicted by international observers who said Monday they had found no irregularities during the first round of voting on Sunday.

The protestors who support the fledgling Union of Democratic Forces alliance chanted "Down with the BSP" and "BSP Mafia". One group torn down a Socialist Party banner and set it on fire.

The demonstrators broke through a police cordon outside parliament to gather in front of the entrance to the National Assembly.

During the morning, hundreds of UDF supporters staged a sit-in outside the UDF headquarters in Rakowski Street in the city centre.

Throughout the night demonstrators kept vigil outside the Palace of Culture housing the international press centre and the television studio covering the country's first free election in 44 years.

The UDF was the BSP's main challenger in the election. Estimates published by the West German opinion poll institute Infas, credited the BSP with 47.6 per cent and the UDF with 36.2 per cent of the vote.

The results would give the BSP 98 and the UDF 75 of the 200 seats to be allocated on a proportional basis in the new constituent assembly. Another 200 seats are to be allocated by simple majority after a second round of voting next week.

The Agrarian (centrist) party is third with eight per cent and 16 seats followed by the Turkish minority Movement for Rights and Liberties with 5.7 per cent and 11 seats.

ANKARA (JUNE 11) - Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Shara will pay a three-day visit to Ankara this week to discuss bilateral ties including water-sharing arrangements of the Euphrates River.

The Turkish Foreign Ministry said Mr. Shara will be here from June 14-16 in response to an invitation from his Turkish counterpart Ali Bozer.

An agreement on the sensitive issue of water-sharing has alluded the three countries that benefit from it -- Syria, Turkey and Iraq -- for 30 years.

Earlier this year Turkey diverted the waters of the Euphrates to fill a huge dam it had constructed, depriving Syria and Iraq of the use of the river for a month.

Turkey has invited officials from Syria and Iraq to attend a three-day conference here to discuss the situation amid accusations by Baghdad and Damascus that Ankara was "using the water at its leisure."

It is not clear if Syria will attend the meeting later this month.

Political analysts here also expect the two men to discuss the situation of the Kurdish minority in Turkey.

Ankara has repeatedly said, without directly accusing Damascus, that Kurdish separatists were seeking guerrilla training in camps located in Lebanon's Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley and then entering Turkey illegally through common borders with Syria.

HONG KONG (JUNE 11) - Australia-based media baron Rupert Murdoch is selling 49 percent of local subsidiary South China Morning Post Holdings Ltd., for 2.26 billion Hong Kong dollars (290 million U.S.), the company said Monday.

The offer was made at 3.08 dollars (39 cents U.S.) a share, putting the company's market capitalisation at 4.6 billion dollars (590 million U.S.) as it sought a listing on the local stock exchange.

Trading in the company's shares was scheduled to start on June 29.

The company's chief executive, Lindley Holloway, told reporters the sale would bring a "considerable financial reward" to its Australian parent, News Corp. Ltd., which bought the Hong Kong arm in early 1987 for 230 million U.S. dollars.

Fourteen percent of the shares being offered would go to Singapore interests, with the United Overseas Bank Ltd. paying 415.8 million dollars (53 million U.S.) for a nine percent stake and Singapore Press Holdings Ltd. investing 231 million (about 30 million U.S.) for a ffer of 17.5 perare.

The Murdoch firm would make a public offer of 17.5 percent and place another 17.5 percent with institutional investors, bringing in another 1.62 billion dollars (207 million U.S.)

Its key asset is the local South China Morning Post (SCMP) newspaper, described by Mr. Holloway as a "jewel in the crown" of the Murdoch empire, which would retain a 51 percent majority stake.

"We felt the time has come to take on ... partners" to widen the paper's Asian perspectives, Mr. Holloway said.

He said discussions had been held on possible partnership with local and Japanese investors before the Singapore deals were concluded.

He said it was not yet known whether there would be Singapore directors on the board of SCMP, the leading English-language paper in the British colony, which is due to revert to Chinese rule in 1997.

Singapore Press Holdings (SPH) has government appointees sitting on its board, but Mr. Holloway said "I don't see a Singapore government involvement" in the SCMP.

SCMP Holdings forecast its after-tax profit - before extraordinary items - for the year ending June 30 at 460 million dollars (59 million U.S.)

IOANNINA, Greece (JUNE 11) - Four Albanians asked for political asylum here on Monday after crossing the border on foot, police in this northwest town said.

Two of them, a middle-aged man and woman, from the Greek minority community in Gjirokaster, gave themselves up to authorities in Tsamada. The other two, in their early twenties, from Fier, in southwest Albania, sought asylum in Drymades, near the border.

Five Albanians, three of them Greek and the other two Moslems, sought asylum in Greece on Friday.

MANAMA (JUNE 11) - India has agreed to purchase 45,000 barrels per day of Iraq's Basra light crude during 1990, more than twice the amount it lifted in 1989 and part of which will be in payment for Iraqi debts to India, it was reported Monday.

The authoritative weekly Middle East Economic Survey said it learned that around 30 percent of the volume will be in payment for Iraqi debts to India which are estimated at 400 million dollars.

In 1989 India took 20,000 bd, and 70,000 bd in 1988 of the Basra light crude, the Cyprus-based weekly said.

In a related development, Iraqi Trade Minister Mohammed Mahdi Saleh said Monday that Baghdad has repaid 3.418 billion dollars of its debts to foreign countries in the past four months.

Saleh, who is also acting finance minister told a press conference that the payment was in line with the annual debts payment programme approved by the Iraqi cabinet.

Saleh, who did not reveal the total of Iraq's debts, which piled up during its eight-year war with Iran, halted in 1988, said that according to the programme Baghdad will announce its debts payments every three months.

PARIS (JUNE 11) - The French association SOS Environment called upon authorities here Monday to look into the amount and destination of British meat-based feed imported into France.

The feed is suspected of being behind the "mad cow" disease ravaging

Britain's herds.

In a letter to Agriculture Minister Henri Nallet, SOS Environment also called for the destruction of all existing stocks of the feed in France.

The environmental group reminded the minister that, while the British government banned the feed, made partly with sheep carcases, on July 18, 1988 France continued to import it until August 13, 1989.

"Most, if not all, stocks of meat-based feed imported into France between those two dates must have been consumed," said SOS Environment, adding that it would be possible to ascertain where the disease, called bovine spongiform encephalopathy, might appear based on knowledge of where the feed was sold.

FRANKFURT (JUNE 11) - Saying development aid projects are leading to ecological disaster, a West German cabinet official called here Monday for environmentally sound projects for countries in the Third World and Eastern Europe.

Bonn Environment Minister Klaus Toepfer, speaking at ceremonies marking the 40th anniversary of the German Unesco commission, said going ahead with traditional aid projects would lead to global ecological collapse.

Addressing dignitaries at Frankfurt's historic St. Paul's Church, said ecological costs of industrial development must be calculated into any development aid project.

Unesco secretary-General Federico Mayor, speaking earlier, said unjust economic policies were a threat to world peace because they condemned large portions of the world's population to lives of poverty, famine, malnutrition, disease and ignorance. True peace was possible only once economic injustice and exploitation cease to exist, he added.

In other developments, a new study issued here Monday claimed that over half of all medication distributed in the Third World by West German pharmaceutical companies is ineffective, wrongly comprised and even dangerous.

The study, compiled by two doctors over a five-year period, gave negative effectiveness value readings to 60 percent of nearly 1,300 products from 32 companies now in use in 26 Third World countries.

Only 12 percent fulfilled requirements of the World Health Organization (Who) as indispensible pharmaceuticals, report co-author Hermann a Bremen physician, told delegates to a Frankfurt gathering of 200 West German development aid groups and agencies.

Schulte-Sasse,

BRUSSELS (JUNE 11) - The 12-nation European Community rejected U.S. calls Monday to regulate the international textiles trade with a global quotas system and proposed instead a step-by-step removal of protectionist measures from the World Textiles Agreement.

E.C. officials said the proposals were part of a package being drawn up for the current Uruguay Round of negotiations with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and would be presented to that body's members at Gatt headquarters in Geneva.

Under the reform favoured by Brussels, Gatt member countries would receive a certain amount of time to remove textile-trade barriers and to ease national quotas limiting foreign access to domestic markets.

Gatt's Uruguay Round of talks, aimed at liberalising conditions for world trade, is due to end in December with a final conference in the Belgian capital.

Major obstacles to an accord so far have been the farm-products and textile sectors.

ROME (JUNE 11) - Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, Italy's leading bank, has been transformed into a shareholding company -- albeit still in state control -- as part of the bank's overall strategy, BNL said Monday.

"There is nothing new, we are simply going forward on the road marked out for months," a bank spokesman said.

Treasury Minister Guido Carli has signed a decree changing the bank's statute as part of changes in the Italian banking system announced last year and which are due to see concrete form in a new law currently before parliament.

The state owns most of Italy's leading banks and controls 65 percent of the credit market, but the country's banking system is generally fragmented into small operations, with 1,200 banks operating 13,600 branches.

Italy accounts for 13 establishments among the world's top 200 banks according to the U.S. news magazine Newsweek, but the highest placed, BNL, ranks only 43rd.

The new banking law is aimed at allowing a consolidation of the Italian banking market, Mr. Carli has said.

But it will not mean a relaxation of the state's hold on the banking system. It has been made clear during talks on the new banking law that the state will retain a 51 percent stake in all state-owned banks.

Mr. Carli is nonetheless anxious to see these partial privatisations go through, as an answer to Italy's public debt problem, currently running at 103 percent of gross national product.

BNL's new statute, which will see a minority stake offered to private shareholders, will give the bank increased flexibility in decision-making, bank spokesman said Monday.

The new bank law should enable the formation of two or three large Italian banking groups which would respond better to the needs of the market, BNL says.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 11) - The European Economic Community (EEC) on Tuesday will submit proposals on world textile commerce that will counter a U.S. plan for a 10-year global quota in the trade, the European Commission said Monday.

Outlining the proposals, the EEC executive said the Community insisted on the progressive liberalisation of the Multi-Fibre Arrangement (MFA), which has governed world textile trade since 1974.

Due to expire in July 1991, the protectionist accord is the umbrella under which 45 importing and exporting nations negotiate bilateral agreements in textiles and clothing.

The United States last month urged the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) to set a "global quota" for textiles that would end on December 31 2001.

During the transition period, textile exports from developing countries would expand according to the sensitivity of the product.

The European Commission on Monday reiterated that the U.S. proposal was unacceptable as it did not meet the "need for a progressive reduction" in quotas.

The Community's goal, it said, was the "progressive integration" of textiles into the open trade arena of GATT, which would at the same time submit them to "strengthened rules and disciplines."

Its plan calls for existing MFA arrangements to be retained "in their present conditions" before being subjected to a phase-out.

However, the Community is "willing to negotiate a list of products that could be immediately brought into GATT" without being subject to the transition, the Commission said, without elaborating.

LONDON (JUNE 11) - British bank Barclays said Monday it was expecting to make a provision of around 100 million pounds (168 million dollars) for outstanding credit to the collapsed British and Commonwealth Holdings group.

B and C Holdings and three key subsidiaries were placed in the hands of official administrators last week in the biggest financial collapse to occur in the City. The group has debts exceeding 1.3 billion pounds (2.2 billion dollars).

Barclays' decision Monday was the first major repercussion of the B and C affair in the British banking system.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 11) - The European Commission is likely to file formal objections this month to a joint venture linking British Airways plc, Sabena SA of Belgium and KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, a spokesman for the European Economic Community's executive said Monday.

"A statement of objection is likely to be sent by the end of the month," describing the tie-up as a prima facie violation of EEC competition rules, the spokesman said.

Commission officials in charge of enforcing competition have already drawn up the document, which will need the approval of the entire 17-member executive, reliable sources said.

The joint venture, Sabena World Airways (SWA), started operating in January with the aim of developing a large Brussels-based network to serve Europe.

British Airways and KLM each took a 20-per-cent stake in the operation, at a cost of two billion Belgian francs (57.4 million dollars) apiece. Sabena, Belgium's ailing state-owned carrier, raised the rest of the capital.

A Commission objection traditionally marks the opening shot in tough negotiations between the EEC executive and the companies involved, who want to avoid lengthy arbitration at the European Court of Justice.

The Commission is already embroiled in talks with Air France over its takeover of the private carrier Union de Transports Aeriens, which indirectly gave the state airline control of the French domestic airline Air Inter.

The spokesman declined to confirm a report in The Sunday Times of London that said Sir Leon Brittan, the Commissioner in charge of competition, would demand KLM's withdrawal from the deal.

Previous anti-trust moves by the Commission have centered on a restructuring of such deals rather than a pullout by one of the partners.

In 1987, the Commission forced British Airways to divest itself of some routes after it bought British Caledonian Airways.

The three-way Sabena project has already run headlong into other legal obstacles.

A Brussels court is to rule on Wednesday on a complaint filed by a small Belgian airline, Trans European Airways SA, while the British monopolies and mergers commission is expected to submit its own anti-trust report on June 28.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 11) - Demonstrators calling for the ouster of communists from top posts in a reforming Romania met with government officials Monday on the 51st day of their Bucharest sit-in.

The meeting, held at the foreign ministry, was the first since the protest started in April in University Square in the capital.

It grouped nine representatives of movements who initiated the protest and three hunger strikers who later joined the sit-in, as well as four officials including Sever Georgescu, the government's chief of staff, and Deputy Health Minister Radu Dop.

At the outset of their protest demonstrators said communist officials formerly linked to the hardline regime of the late president Nicolae

Ceausescu must go if Romania were to become a real democracy.

They carried on their protest after Romanian leader Ion Iliescu and his National Salvation Front grouping swept the country's first multi-party election in over 40 years last month. Protestors say the front includes many former communists.

BASEL, Switzerland (JUNE 11) - Albania wants to regain its position as a shareholder in the Bank for International Settlements (BIS), which it left in 1976, its central bank president Qirjako Mihali, said here Monday.

Mr. Mihali told Agence-France Presse on the sidelines of the BIS annual meeting that the presence here of Albania's central bank president for the first time since 1976 was a gesture reflecting his country's recent decision in favour of economic reforms.

"We are interested in having shares" in the BIS, he said.

The meeting offered a "great deal of opportunities for exchanges with different central banks," Mr. Mihali added.

But BIS president Wim Duisenberg threw cold water on the idea of Albania again becoming a shareholder. The structure of the BIS shareholding "is not under discussion," he told a press conference.

He stressed however that this did not prevent the BIS from having relations "with any country," as the bank made "no distinction between shareholders and non-shareholders."

COPENHAGEN (JUNE 11) - Five European countries plan Wednesday, well ahead of schedule, to put a draft final declaration to a 35-nation human rights conference in the Danish capital, Czechoslovak delegate Jiri Hajek said on Monday.

Mr. Hajek told the 'human dimension' meeting of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) that the draft would be put by the "pentagon" group his country has formed with Austria, Hungary, Italy and Yugoslavia.

A former leading dissident in the Czechoslovak human rights group Charter 77, Mr. Hajek was speaking only five days after the start of the meeting in the Danish capital, which is not due to end until June 29.

He called on the participants, which include Canada and the United States as well as West and East European countries, to take part in "a broad and informal exchange of views on the tone of the final document".

Diplomatic sources commented that the early proposal for a final statement bore witness to the spirit of detente prevailing in Europe since the political upheavals in the communist bloc last year.

They added that the draft would feature items on free elections, multiparty politics and the safeguarding of the rights of minorities.

THE HAGUE (JUNE 11) - The Dutch cabinet on Monday approved the abolition of tax on profits on stock transactions from July 1, the finance ministry said in a statement.

The cabinet authorised parliament to put a draft law on the matter to Queen Beatrix.

The move is designed to improve the Netherlands' competitiveness in the stock market sector and strengthen Amsterdam's position as a financial centre, the statement said.

It should notably lead to a revival in trading in Amsterdam in Dutch state bonds, some 40 percent of which or 30 billion guilders' (16 billion dollars) worth were traded last year in London, where the transactions are not taxed.

The Dutch Government receives some 97 million guilder (49 million dollars) a year in tax on stock transactions.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 11) - Namibian President Sam Nujoma on Monday officially opened Namibia's first open-cast gold mine at Navachab, near Karibib some 200 kilometres (120 miles) northwest of Windhoek.

The 13-year project, which went into production last December, will produce some 1,900 kilograms (4,180 pounds) of gold at full capacity.

With yield of only 2.6 grams per ton lower grade ore is being stockpiled for processing towards the end of the lifespan, although there is speculation that if grades increase with depth the mine could be extended beyond the planned 160 metres (yards).

Anglo American Corporation (AAC) has a two-thirds share in Namibian company Erongo Mining and Exploration, a 70 percent stakeholder in the project.

AAC chairman Julian Ogilvie Thompson said at Monday's opening the mine would employ 300 people and pay more than 50 percent in taxes on distributable profits from turnover of some 60 million rands (22.5 million dollars) a year.

The 20 percent stake held by Metall Mining Corporation of Canada, a subsidiary of Metallgesellschaft of West Germany, was a "significant and welcome new foreign investment in Namibia," Mr. Ogilvie Thompson said.

He hailed the mine as an "excellent example of what free enterprise can achieve in an investment environment where a sensible balance is found between the respective interests of the shareholders, the State, labour and the community in general."

JAMMU, INDIA (JUNE 11) - More than 200 doctors in Kashmir began a "fast unto death" Monday to protest the dismissal of Moslem colleagues, while 5,000 Hindu state government employees refused to return to work, citing danger to their lives.

Moslem militants meanwhile killed four people, including two security troopers, and abducted two policemen elsewhere in the region, officials and press reports said.

Some 280 doctors and paramedical staff in Srinagar went on what they called a "fast unto death" to protest the dismissal of some 150 of their colleagues on charges of links with Moslem militancy.

A spokesman for the protestors from the prestigious Sheri Kashmir Institute of Medical Sciences and the Maharaja Hari Hospital, both government-run, said that they would not end the fast until about 150 dismissed Moslem employees from the two establishments were taken back.

In a related development, some 5,000 Kashmiri Hindus employed by the state government in a resolution adopted at an assembly decided to reject a government directive to return to duty in Srinagar by next Friday.

The protestors squatted on the highway here for some five hours blocking the traffic before dispersing peacefully.

Spokesmen for the Hindus said they would not resume duty unless the government ensured "protection" of their lives.

Most state government activities recently shifted from Jammu, the northern state's winter capital, to predominantly Moslem Srinagar, the summer capital and the hub of miltant violence.

But the Hindu employees refused to move to work in Srinagar amid the unrest, particularly in the wake of a number of killings of Hindus.

MANCHESTER, England (JUNE 11) - The governor of Strangeways jail wanted to attack inmates who had taken control of the prison last April but was denied dpermission because of risks of injuries, an inquiry was told here Monday.

Governor Brendan O'Friel "considered it would be justifiable to attack, despite the fact there were the risks of casualties," Michael Latham, counsel for the Lord Justice Woolf inquiry, said in opening remarks to the inquiry.

Morale among prison staff who were preparing for an assault on the facility in this northern city dropped immediately when Brian Emes, deputy director-general of the prison service, ruled in London that the attack was too dangerous and could not go ahead, Mr. Latham said.

The prison siege, the longest in British history, began on April 1 when more than 100 inmates took control of the jail after five prison guards were overpowered in the prison chapel.

It was not until three weeks later, on April 22, that there appeared "to have been the urgency to produce a definitive attack plan," Mr. Latham said.

The prison authorities came under sharp criticism from some officials and in the media for failing to take tough and decisivie action to bring the riot to an end shortly after it erupted.

By the time authorities regained control of the facility on April 25 there were only six inmates holding out against teams of prison staff in riot gear.

"Perhaps the most important question which will have to be considered about the way the disturbance was handled will not necessarily be the decision on the second day, essential though it was to the story, but the fact no further full-scale attack would appear to have been planned until at least April 17," Mr. Latham said.

"One would have to consider carefully whether one was even contemplated," he added.

As the inmates at Strangeways remained in control of the jail, several less serious uprisings at other jails in England and Wales erupted and critics of the authorities said failure to end the Manchester siege had led to "copy cat" revolts.

BERLIN (JUNE 11) - A suspected West German terrorist arrested here last Wednesday worked for the past two years in a Soviet nuclear research centre near Moscow, East German state radio reported Monday.

Susanne Albrecht, believed to be a former leader of the Red Army Faction terrorist group, moved to East Germany in 1980 under a false name and obtained an East German passport the same year.

Ms. Albrecht, 39, was moved to the Soviet Union in 1987 by the East German secret police, Stasi, the public radio network's correspondent in Moscow reported.

Ms. Albrecht was apparently moved to the Soviet Union because some of her work colleagues in East Germany had recognized her while watching a West German television program.

The United Institute of Nuclear Research, in Dubna outside Moscow, would confirm only that a physicist by the name of Becker - Ms. Albrecht's husband is Claus Becker - had recently been employed at the research centre.

The institute, whose staff includes nationals from Warsaw Pact countries and Cuba, Vietnam, Mongolia and North Korea, is considered one of the world's most important nuclear research centres.

According to East German radio, there is no evidence that Moscow's KGB secret police used the services of Ms. Albrecht, who seems to have been employed at the centre as a laboratory assistant.

Ms. Albrecht is a suspect in the 1977 murder of West German banker Juergen Ponto. East German police issued an arrest order for murder and attempted murder against Ms. Albrecht, who according to West German police broke her terrorist ties in the late 1970s and today is a mother.

Still, West Germany has demanded Mr. Albrecht's extradition.

GENOA (JUNE 11) - Costa Rica, playing in the World Cup finals for the first time, beat Scotland 1-0 here Monday with a 49th minute goal from Juan-Arnoldo Cayasso.

Claudio Jara's back-heel fooled the Scottish defence, already guilty of loose marking, and Cayasso cooly slipped the ball under goalkeeper Jim Mo Johnston had a great chance to equalise after 65 minutes but goalkeeper Gabelo Conejo blocked his point-blank shot.

It was the most humiliating defeat in Scotland's chequered history.

These are Scotland's fifth successive World Cup finals but even manager Andy Roxburgh could not believe what he was watching.

Scotland's previous worst start to a World Cup was in Argentina in 1978 when they drew 1-1 with Iran.

Now they have to play Sweden and Brazil in an attempt to qualify for the second round, something they have never achieved before.

NEW DELHI (JUNE 11) - Suspected Sikh militants reportedly tortured and hanged a home guard platoon commander in India's troubled Punjab state, as authorities put a Sikh student leader under house arrest to prevent violence over the killing of a leading separatist.

The Press Trust of India said 10 other killings, all apparently connected to the violent campaign for a separate Sikh homeland, were reported in Punjab in the past 24 hours.

The body of the paramilitary home guard, who was not identified, was found hanging from a tree early Monday and bore signs of torture, PTI said. He had been abducted from his home in Amritsar district while on leave.

In the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, Manjit Singh, president of the All India Sikh Students' Federation and known to be sympathetic to the militants, was placed under house arrest early Monday.

Police said Mr. Manjit Singh had plans to lead a protest march to the police station in Kairon village, also in Amritsar district, to demand the body of a leading member of the Bhindranwale Tiger's Force of Khalistan, who was shot dead in a gunbattle with security forces Sunday.

The dead militant, Bakhsish Singh, had a price of 4,500 dollars on his head. Police say he was involved in more than 100 killings in the state.

The 10 killed across Punjab include four civilians shot dead by militants and four militants, two of whom were killed in gunfights with security forces, PTI said.

Two other militants died in a factional fight, police quoted by PTI said.

Separately, Sikh militants gunned down a paramilitary home guard, while alleged intruders from Pakistan were shot dead in a gunfight with Indian forces on the Punjab border, PTI said.

Nearly 1,000 people have died in violence linked to the bloody Sikh militant campaign for an independent homeland called Khalistan, or land of the pure, in Punjab this year.

MOSCOW (JUNE 11) - Siberian oil workers in the Tyumen region are to cut oil output by 10,000 tons a day to protest the government's failure to implement promised reforms, the government Izvestia newspaper reported Monday.

The Tyumen regional trade union had threatened last April to call out its 700,000 members who produce 60 percent of Soviet oil and gas if the government failed to improve living standards.

Eight of 12 points dealing with living and working conditions, on which the council of ministers had promised radical reform, have not been fulfilled, the newspaper said.

The decision by the oilmen in Nizhnevartovsk was supported by workers throughout the Tyumen region, though oil supplies had not yet been affected, the paper added.

Representatives of the oil workers were to meet with the leadership of the council of ministers on Tuesday, and a conference of delegates from the Tyumen region has been called for Friday, Izvestia said.

A conference of representatives from various coal-mining strike committees started Monday in Donetz, Ukraine, to discuss miners' grievances, Tass news agency reported.

The rains caused flash floods in the Zardi and Sarghilan valleys, damaging crops and hundreds of houses and leaving 2,500 head of cattle dead, the official news agency of the mujahedeen interim government said.

TUNIS (JUNE 11) - Some 98.2 percent of the votes in Tunisia's municipal elections on Sunday went to the ruling Democratic Constitutional Movement (Rcd), the government announced Monday. The elections were largely boycotted by the opposition parties.

The information ministry said that 79.7 percent of Tunisia's 1.7 million registered voters went to the polls.

Organizations independent of the government put up candidates in only 12 of the country's nearly 250 constituencies, leaving the field almost solely to the Rcd under head of state Zine el-Abidine Ben Ali.

The opposition explained its boycott by saying all seats in last year's general election had fallen to the Rcd because of Tunisia's unjust electoral system.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 11) - With gold rapidly losing its glitter, the future of South Africa's most marginal mine, East Rand Proprietory Mines (ERPM), rests with a judge plunged into the deeps of the world bullion market.

A plummeting gold price has forced Pretoria, already strapped for cash to finance political reforms, to reassess whether it can continue to subsidise a mine which lost 20 million rands (7.78 million dollars) in the first quarter.

But even Mineral and Energy Affairs Minister Dawie de Villiers has shrunk at sounding the death knell for the 97-year-old mine and putting 10,000 mostly black workers out of work.

Instead he has appointed Mr. Justice David Melamet to advise if the mine should be closed, mothballed or kept going with government aid. He starts work next Monday.

The government has already loaned the mine 220 million rands (83 million dollars) and rendered a guarantee for deferred interest payments of up to another 67 million rands (25 million dollars.)

Mr. Melamet's decision is expected to have a ripple effect on another 14 marginal gold mines in South Africa as well as on world gold markets generally, where ERPM is closely watched and hedge-traded as a barometer of world economic environment.

If the government is not willing to continue bailing out ERPM, which has huge but low-grade reserves, the outlook is bleak for other mines that have worked out their areas and whose ore grades are declining.

Faced with production costs in excess of the predicted gold price for the year of 33,400 rands per kilogram (about 395 dollars an ounce), marginal mines will most certainly be forced into closure, analysts say.

The other option, chosen recently by the giant Freegold mine in Orange Free State Province, is to mothball unproductive shafts until the gold price stages a recovery.

But because of the extreme depths of South Africa's mines -- up to four kilometres (two-and-a-half miles) -- analysts say most shafts are beyond being placed on a care-and-maintenance routine.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 11) - A 28 million rand (10.5 million dollar) inquiry into the deaths of 159 people in South Africa's "Helderberg" air disaster was submitted to Transport Minister George Bartlett on Monday.

The "Helderberg", a South African Airlines Boeing 747, disappeared over the Indian Ocean on November 28, 1987 with 140 passengers and 19 crew on a flight from Taipei to Mauritius.

State-run radio said Monday the report would be made public Tuesday.

MONROVIA (JUNE 11) - Leaders of the Liberian Council of Churches (LCC) and Muslim Council on Monday called on government troops and rebel forces to stop "brutual and senseless" murders against innocent people.

LCC acting president Bishop William Dixon told a prayer service held at the Providence Baptist Church here that he had received "continuous reports of atrocities" by government forces and the National Patriotic Front (NPFL) rebels in areas under their control.

Bishop Dixon said he had learned that the NPFL rebels have set up a court at the West-German run Bong Mining Company 70 kilometers (45 miles) northwest of here where they are trying and executing people. The rebels took control of the mine on Wednesday.

He said a prominent contractor there whom he did not name was executed on Sunday after a court trial. He did not say what was the man tried for, but said the man belonged to the Vai ethnic group and was apparently mistaken by the rebels for being from the Mandingo tribe.

The insurgents are said to be killing Mandingos, who are accused of supporting the government, and members of President Samuel Doe's Krahn tribe in areas under rebel-held areas in retaliation for murders of Gios and Manos, accused of being rebels, by soldiers.

Bishop Dixon also called on troops to stop killing innocent people in the Monrovia area, and condemned the killing of Clay-Ashland Mayor R. Vanjah Richards.

The bodies of Mr. Richards and eight others were discovered in Clay-Ashland 22 kilometers (14 miles) from the capital where men in military uniform abducted them last Tuesday.

"Give peace a chance," he told some 100 Christians attending a prayer service organized by a group calling itself Christians United for Peace.

The prayer service was preceded by a peace march in the major streets of Monrovia to coincide with preparations for ceasefire talks to start late Monday or Tuesday in the Sierra Leone capital Freetown.

BELGRADE (JUNE 11) - One of the two men implicated in the murder of Archduke Franz-Ferdinand in Sarajevo in 1914, the opening shot in World War I, died in Belgrade on Monday at the age of 94.

Born in 1897 in Bosnia, annexed by the Austro-Hungarian Empire in 1908, Vaso Cubrilovic, an ethnic Serbian, when he was very young joined the "Young Bosnia" revolutionary organization which wanted independence and supported Serbian royalty.

Irritated by the "ostentatious and provocative" walk-about in Sarajevo by the heir to the Hapsburg throne on June 28, St. Bede's day, a special day for Orthodox Serbs, Gavrilo Princips, 18, shot dead Franz Ferdinand and his wife Sophie.

At Princips's side was Vaso Cubrilovic, then 17. He was sentenced to 16 years in prison.

When the war ended in 1918, the Austro-Hungarian Empire crumbled and Cubrilovic was freed.

A member of the Academy of Sciences of Serbia and the author of numerous history books, the last surviving member of the murder plot had always refused to talk about the historic events in Sarajevo.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 11) - Demonstrators calling for the ouster of communists from top posts in a reforming Romania met with government officials Monday on the 51st day of their Bucharest sit-in.

The meeting, which lasted more than an hour at the foreign ministry, was the first since the protest started in April in University Square in the capital.

The only tangible result was the decision by hunger strikers to end their strike after an agreement was reached with the government to establish an independent and private televsion station.

The meeting grouped six representatives of movements who initiated the protest and three hunger strikers who later joined the sit-in, as well as four officials including Sever Georgescu, the government's chief of staff, and Deputy Health Minister Radu Dop.

In the late afternoon, police and army personnnel intervened to push back a crowd of protesters assembled at the foot of the steps leading to the foreign ministry building, but no violence occurred.

The crowd, grew to about several hundred protesters in nearby Victory Square with shouts of "the only solution, a new revolution," and calls for the resignation of National Salvation Front leader Ion Iliescu.

At the outset of their protest in April, demonstrators said communist officials formerly linked to the hardline regime of the late president Nicolae Ceausescu must go if Romania were to become a real democracy.

They carried on their protest after Romanian leader Ion Iliescu and his National Salvation Front grouping swept the country's first multi-party election in over 40 years last month. Protestors say the front includes many former communists.

After the meeting, one of the three representatives of the hunger strikers said he had obtained an agreement to their only demand -- the creation of a private and independent television station.

The agreement was later confirmed in a government communique.

When the meeting began, representatives of the strikers asked about a hundred people demonstrating in front of the government headquarters to return to University Square.

BONN (JUNE 11) - For the first time since the creation of West Germany in 1949, West Berlin voters will have a voice in the Bonn parliament, a West German government spokesman announced.

The three Western allies occupying West Germany since 1945 - the United States, Britain, and France - have traditionally been opposed to West Berlin representation in Bonn.

Their governments sent a joint letter to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl over the weekend,, however, in which they said they were no longer against West Berliners being elected to the Bundestag, or lower house, and the Bundesrat, or upper house composed of delegates from the federated states.

The three countries, who with the Soviet Union oversee Berlin, also said they were no longer opposed to West Berliners directly electing members to the Bundestag, said West German government spokesman Hans Klein. West Berliners sitting in the Bundestag have until now been appointed.

At present, West Berlin's 1.6 million voters can elect only a council that administers the western part of the city.

On the other side of the now-collapsed Berlin Wall, East Berliners have since 1979 been able to directly elect deputies to the People's Council. The Soviet Union accorded that right without consulting the three Western allies.

West Berlin deputies to the Bundesrat could have a vote in the upper chamber as early as the next sitting at the end of the month, said Mr. Klein.

Since West Berlin is governed by a coalition of Social Democrats and ecologists, the Social Democrats should be able to consolidate the majority in the Bundesrat the party won during the last regional elections in Lower Saxony.

The 22 West Berliners appointed to the more powerful Bundestag will not immediately get to vote on bills because of a number of constitutional obstacles, said Mr. Klein.

Early this month, the West German parliament enacted an electoral law giving West Berlin voters the right to elect 16 deputies. The law does not apply to the next legislative elections, however.

The U.S., France, and Great Britain will retain a number of powers in the administration of Berlin, including consent on West German laws affecting the administration of West Berlin.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) - The evacuation of U.S. citizens from Liberia continued Monday as government and rebel forces in the African nation engaged in "sporadic fighting," the State Department said Monday.

Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said negotiations between the government of President Samuel Doe and the rebels, which had been scheduled at the U.S. Embassy in Freetown, had not yet begun. Representatives of the two sides were still on their way to Sierre Leone, she said.

Miss Tutwiler reiterated that the United States did not intend to play any role in the negotiations to end the six-month insurgency, other than provide the venue for the talks.

She also recalled that the United States "has always called for a political settlement" of the uprising led by former civil servant Charles Taylor. She pointed out that U.S. Navy ships sent to the region last week had remained outside Liberian waters.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said about 400 U.S. citizens had left Liberia and nearly 1,600 remained, revising upward an earlier estimate of 1,200 still there.

CAGLIARI (JUNE 11) - About 200 English fans attacked 50 Irish supporters just before their two countries met in a World Cup match here Monday.

Riot police rushed to the scene and surrounded the English. Irish fans were seen to be kicked and punched as they fell when they tried to flee.

There were no arrests and no-one was seriously hurt, a police spokesman said.

Trouble started when a police escort was withdrawn near the ground and the English fans faced up to the Irish who had been waiting peacefully for the ground to open.

The English chanted "No Surrender, No Surrender, No Surrender to the IRA" before charging into the Irish.

Three police helicopters hovered overhead and fans had to pass a checkpoint several hundred metres from the ground where they were searched by police.

Some English fans had travelled to Sardinia without tickets but were unable to afford the prices demanded by local touts.

About 3,500 policemen were on duty for the match.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) - The United States congratulated Czechoslovakia Monday for organizing free and fair elections, but delayed commenting on Bulgarian elections until it received official vote tallies.

"We congratulate the Czechoslovakian people on their achievement in holding free and fair elections and in their hard-fought battle for representative democracy," said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

She said preliminary results showed that the Czechoslovakian people -- with a 90 percent voter turnout -- "have elected a parliament that will uphold that country's democratic pluralistic tradition."

In Prague, a spokesman for President Vaclav Havel said that the leader would meet Tuesday with the heads of political parties designated to form a coalition government.

"We do not have yet the official election results and are waiting for reports from the various international and Bulgarian organizations which monitored the election before we make any statement on Bulgaria," Miss Tutwiler said.

Early results showed that the ex-communist Socialist Party had won the election but several thousand young supporters of the liberal opposition demonstrated in Sofia claiming the elections were "rigged."

The view was contradicted by international observers who said they had found no irregularities during the first round of voting Sunday.

TUNIS (JUNE 11) - The ruling Democratic Constitutional Rally (RCD) won a resounding 98 percent of the vote in Tunisian municipal council elections, the Interior Ministry announced Monday.

A surprising 79.73 percent of the voters turned out for the elections, despite calls for a boycott by opposition parties to "end the monopoly of the party in power" led by President Zine Ben Ali.

In announcing the official results, Interior Minister Abdel Hamid Eschiek said participation in the municipal elections was greater than during legislative elections in 1989 (76.46 percent), which he considered a clear rebuke to the opposition.

Independent candidates took only 34 of the 3,768 seats being contested, with 1.8 of the popular vote.

A list of independent candidates in Chebba won a majority with 13 of 16 seats on the municipal council.

Some independent candidates complained of election irregularities, and some candidates withdrew from the election in the south and west of the country.

There were reports of pressure being applied and threats to voters by RCD leaders.

The minister of the interior played down the irregularities, but said he would not hesitate to apply the law if they had indeed taken place.

HAMBURG (JUNE 11) - The Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) called on European companies Monday to increase their investment in Asia.

On the opening day of an ASEAN-European Economic Community conference in this northern West German city, ASEAN head Ngian Yet Chong said European business leaders should consider Asia as a "profit centre."

Mr. Chong noted that European investments in ASEAN member countries - Indonesia, Thailand, Malaysia, Brunei, the Philippines, and Singapore - is below the investment level of Japan and the United States.

Juan Prat, director of the North-South department of the European Commission, executive wing of the EEC, said European business investment in Asia will surpass current levels. He recommended that semi-public firms with input from Asian governments should be created.

Trade between the EEC and ASEAN countries amounted to 33.5 billion dollars in 1989, or about 1.5 percent of the EEC's total trade relations. For ASEAN, the trade figure with Europe represents 15 percent of its total trade.

FREETOWN (JUNE 11) - Ceasefire talks between the Liberian government and rebels of the National Patriotic Front, which were due to have started in Sierra Leone Monday, were held up because the Npf delegation has not yet arrived here, according to a report by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The U.S. embassy here has set aside a room with three tables and four chairs each for the delegations of the Liberian government, the Npf and the Liberian Council of Churches which is trying to mediate.

Rebel leader Charles Taylor has demanded that Liberian President Samuel Doe step down immediately or ''I will lose my patience.'' His rebels are already 50 kilometres from Monrovia and Taylor threatened to march them into the capital within days if the talks fail.

He told the French newspaper Le Figaro that the sole purpose of the Freetown talks was to prevent a bloodbath.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 11) - Protesters calling for the ouster of communists from top government posts moved from outside Romanian government headquarters late Monday to join the demonstration in University Square that is in its 51st day.

Several hundred onlookers were hanging about in groups in the square, where large numbers of policemen and armed soldiers were stationed.

A group of hunger strikers, whose representatives met with government officials Monday, announced that they would continue their action until their demands were met.

It was earlier reported that the hunger strikers had agreed to end their strike after agreement was reached to set up an independent, private television station.

The strikers said, however, that they had only a "promise," and they were still waiting for "official authorisation" for the television station.

On Monday afternoon, about 700 protesters demonstrated in front of the government headquarters, shouting "Iliescu must resign."

The protesters are calling for the resignation of President Ion Iliescu because they say his ruling National Salvation Front is in the hands of former communists under the dictatorship of Nicolae Ceaucescu.

The front scored a massive victory last month in Romania's first free poll in four decades.

The demonstrators later joined about 4,000 others in University Square.

In a press statement, the government said it was "determined" to punish all violent and illegal acts, adding that it was prepared to enter into discussions with demonstrators ready for "dialogue in a climate of calm."

In an earlier statement, a government spokesman said the demonstrators had "attacked" a government building and that police had been "physically assaulted."

Monday's demonstration was the first time protesters had assembled in front of government headquarters.

Several dozen youths brandishing Romanian flags climbed atop the armoured vehicles arriving at the site, obliging them to halt. Military police came and removed the youths from the tanks.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 11) - A seemingly-jinxed Indian communications satellite was to be launched from here Tuesday atop a Delta rocket.

The 80-million-dollar Insat satellite was damaged once in a launch pad accident and then by a powerful earthquake which shook northern California

"Through this particular satellite, we would like to spread education and knowledge, science and new culture to hundreds and thousands of those who have been out of the mainstream of life," said Abid Hussain, India's ambassador to the United States.

The satellite is to become operational in mid-July, replacing one that was deployed in 1983 on the shuttle Challenger.

It will relay voice and video signals to weather, television, radio and disaster warning receivers throughout India.

It is the fourth and final in a series of India's Insat 1 satellites.

MANILA (JUNE 12) - The Philippines may be forced to import more than half a million tonnes of rice this year because of a severe drought that ran into the second quarter, the Business World newspaper said here Tuesday.

The daily, citing agriculture department figures, said production of rough rice was expected to fall to 262,000 tons in the April to June quarter, down 16.9 percent from the same period in 1989.

This may force the government to import more than 519,000 tons of rice this year, topping a record set in 1986, the economic daily said.

The figures could not be officially confirmed because Tuesday is a public holiday in the Philippines.

Manila has so far authorized 400,000 tons in imports from various sources, including the United States, to build up a buffer stock to stabilize domestic supply and prices of the nation's staple cereal.

Business World said corn production was expected to decrease by four percent in the second quarter because of the drought, which began in November.

ANKARA (JUNE 11) EFE - At least 20 people have died in southeastern Turkey in the bloodiest Kurdish rebel attack on civilians in two years, the semi-official Anatolia news agency reported Monday.

The news agency blamed the killings Sunday night in the town of Cevrimli, 50 km north of the Syrian border, on the Marxist Kurdish Workers Party (PKK), which is waging an increasingly violent armed uprising against the Turkish government.

In 1988, PKK separatists killed 25 civilians in a village massacre.

ALGIERS (JUNE 11) EFE - On the eve of the country's first multi-party elections, Algeria's ruling party Monday was hoping to win support for its drive to move the nation out of a desperate economic crisis while heading off Moslem fundamentalists aiming to turn the country into an Islamic republic.

The National Liberation Front (FLN), which has governed since Algeria's won its independence from France in 1962, will be facing the Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) and 10 other parties and independent candidates for control of regional assemblies and municipal councils in voting Tuesday.

Two of the country's largest opposition parties, the Socialist Forces Front and the Movement for Democracy, are boycotting the elections on the grounds that the FLN has manipulated the campaign to its advantage.

Although legislative elections are not slated for another two years, analysts see Tuesday's local balloting as a taste of things to come as the FLN struggles to complete economic and social reforms.

President Chadli Benjedid implemented the reforms after an October 1988 revolt by unemployed Algerians and Moslem fundamentalists demanding political changes forced voting that led to the 1989 constitution ending single-party rule.

The FIS, the first fundamentalist party to be legalized in the Arab world after Jordan, is expected to garner 25 percent of the votes behind the FLN's 50 or 60 percent.

The FIS has the largest percentage of young voters, who feel betrayed by the FLN as they have suffered the brunt of the nation's growing unemployment.

Algeria's dlrs 22 billion foreign debt and rising poverty might also sway support away from the FLN.

The FIS has an estimated three million members and its policies are aimed at making Algeria an Islamic state where the laws of the Koran would rule.

We are the nation of the Koran. We are the nation of Mohammed...the only power we respect is God's and not man's. Democracy is a sin. We own the book of God and we do not need the West", FIS leader Iman Ali Belhay said at a recent rally.

Belhay has also threatened to kill anyone "who strays from Islamic teachings".

International interest in Tuesday's elections has taken the country by surprise. More than 1000 foreign correspondents are to cover the vote.

Algeria's neighbors, Tunisia and Morocco, are particularly interested in the results, expected to be announced Wednesday, as their leaders fear similar fundamentalist movements at home.

MOSCOW (JUNE 11) EFE - Residents of the Soviet Central Asian republic of Kirghizia observed an official day of mourning Monday for 116 people who died last week in a flare-up of ethnic violence, an Interior Ministry spokesman said.

The spokesman added that normalcy was slowly returning to the region, and the Soviet news agency TASS reported that the situation was stabilizing, following a week of clashes between the Kirghiz majority and Uzbek minority.

At least 468 people were injured and hundreds of homes set ablaze in the ethnic unrest which broke out a week ago over the distribution of much needed homestead land in the southern Kirghiz city of Osh, near the Uzbekistan border.

Flags flew at half-mast in the republic Monday, and most official acts were cancelled, though stores and industry began to reopen and public transportation renewed services.

On Sunday night, Soviet Army troops stationed in Osh thwarted an attack by an unidentified group to seize their weapons.

Moscow had rushed some 1,500 troops to beef up security forces in the border regions after the violence broke out.

In Frunze, capital of Kirghizia, TASS reported that a relative calm had not been broken since Thursday when authorities declared a curfew for fear that the violence could escalate into full-scale conflict between the two republics.

In Andizhan, a border region in Uzbekistan also under curfew, several hundred people gathered Sunday to cross over into the neighboring province to join other Uzbeks in protest.

Some 47 percent of Kirghizia's four million people are Kirghiz, while Uzbeks account for only 22 percent.

Ethnic tensions are aggravated by sub-standard living conditions in two of the Soviet Union's poorest republics and a chronic lack of housing.

KUWAIT (JUNE 11) EFE - Final results in Kuwaiti elections were announced Monday, a day after the Gulf state's 62,000 all-male electorate went to the polls to choose 50 delegates to a 75-seat National Council.

The names of the 50 successful candidates, chosen from a list of 348 pro-government supporters, were announced by the Interior Ministry.

The remaining 25 delegates are to be appointed by the Emir, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, before the council's opening session in August.

Opposition candidates boycotted Sunday's elections in protest at the Emir's dissolution of the democratically-elected Kuwaiti parliament in 1986.

Officials said turnout was about 60 percent, a claim dismissed by the opposition, which said less than 50 percent of people bothered to vote.

The Emir, who took power in 1977, abolished parliament on the pretext that he had uncovered a foreign conspiracy to destabilize the country during the 1980-88 Gulf War, in which Kuwait backed Iraq against Iran.

The National Council, set up by the Emir to replace parliament, is to run until 1994, when new parliamentary elections are to be held.

But a group of 32 opposition leaders, who were members of the dissolved parliament, have said the council is unconstitutional, and have demanded the 1986 parliament be reconvened.-EFE

(JUNE 11) UPI - Both Darryl Strawberry and the Mets awakened from their comatose states in their four-game series with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In New York's 8-3 rout of Pittsburgh on Sunday, Strawberry contributed his fourth home run in four games and New York, still 6 1-2 games behind the Pirates in the NL East, took its third out of four games with the division leaders.

''I'm attacking the ball now,'' Strawberry said. ''I'm going the other way. Before I was too laid back, not aggressive enough.''

This season is the worst in recent memory for the Mets. The 1986 World Champions are in fourth place in the NL East and Strawberry's woes contributed to the firing of Manager Davey Johnson.

But after narrowly dropping their first game in the series Thursday, the Mets turned it around and outscored the Pirates 24-7 in their next three meetings.

''As a team, it came to us that it was time to play some baseball,'' Strawberry said. ''We have to challenge Pittsburgh and we kind of knew we were going to win three out of four.''

Pittsburgh starter Walt Terrell, 2-5, wishes Strawberry and the Mets had played to their previous form. Terrell, who was pitching for the first time against the team for which he made his major-league debut, held the Mets without a hit until the fourth inning when things started to unravel.

Terrell walked Dave Magadan, then shortstop Rafael Belliard and left fielder Bobby Bonds misplayed a pop fly to short left by Gregg Jefferies that dropped between them for a hit. Strawberry then blasted a 1-1 pitch over the wall in left-center for his 12th homer of the season and a 3-2 Mets lead.

Poor play by the Pirates' infield in the fifth inning completed Terrell's downfall, as the Mets scored three unearned runs to take a 6-2 lead.

''We felt we could get to Terrell and we did,'' said Jefferies.

''We got our tail whipped three out of four,'' said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland. ''Maybe it isn't as bad as the numbers looked, but we still got our tail whipped.''

In other NL games, St. Louis defeated Montreal 5-3, San Francisco pounded Atlanta 9-3, Chicago pummeled Philadelphia 7-3, Houston beat Cincinnati 4-2, and San Diego nipped Los Angeles 2-1.

In the AL it was: Cleveland 4, Boston 0; Detroit 4, Seattle 3; New York 5, Baltimore 2; Chicago 5, Minnesota 3; Oakland 3, Kansas City 2; Texas 2, California 1; and Toronto 13, Milwaukee 5.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Cardinals 5, Expos 3

At Montreal, Denny Walling drove in three runs and Joe Magrane recorded only his third victory of the season, to help St. Louis prevent a four-game sweep by the Expos. Magrane, 3-8, worked 6 2-3 innings for the win. Lee Smith pitched two innings for his sixth save. Oil Can Boyd, 3-3, absorbed the loss.

Giants 9, Braves 3

At Atlanta, rookie John Burkett tossed a five-hitter and Matt Williams homered and drove in four runs to power San Francisco. Burkett, 6-1, struck out a career-high seven and walked one over eight innings. Pete Smith, gave up seven runs in 3 1-3 innings and fell to 5-5.

Cubs 7, Phillies 3

At Chicago, Andre Dawson and Joe Girardi homered during a four-run second inning to propel the Cubs. Steve Wilson, 1-4, making his first start in more than a month, scattered eight hits over six-plus innings for the win. Les Lancaster pitched three innings to notch his second save. Bruce Ruffin 3-6, gave up all seven runs to take the loss.

Astros 4, Reds 2

At Houston, Casey Candaele's triple in the seventh inning drove in the go-ahead run to lift the Astros. Danny Darwin, 2-1, picked up the victory, tossing three innings in relief. Jack Armstrong, 8-3, suffered the loss, giving up six hits and striking out a career-high nine in 6 1-3 innings.

Padres 2, Dodgers 1, 10 innings

At San Diego, Roberto Alomar singled home Bip Roberts from second with one out in the 10th, lifting the Padres. Greg Harris, 4-1, picked up the victory, working the 10th. Jay Howell, who entered the game in the 10th, absorbed the loss and fell to 2-4. Alomar also tied the game in the eighth inning with an RBI double.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Playing in 1,307 consecutive major league baseball games might seem like a great accomplishment, but not to Cal Ripken.

''I look at it as playing every day, not as a streak,'' the Baltimore Orioles shortstop said Sunday after reaching the mark in a 5-2 loss to the New York Yankees.

''It's a desire to go out and play and I'm proud of it,'' Ripken said. ''I'm proud of being relied upon every game.''

Ripken, 29, tied Everett Scott for the second-longest streak of consecutive games. New York Yankee Lou Gehrig is the leader with 2,130 games in a row.

The milestone comes in a difficult stage of Ripken's journey through the majors. He is mired in a batting slump, although he singled and walked in four at-bats Sunday.

''I take it one day at a time,'' Ripken said. ''I never set out to do this play this many games in a row. I just like to be in the middle of the action. I pride myself on being able to go out and be in the lineup every day.''

Jesse Barfield drove in three runs and Jimmy Jones, 1-0, got the win with relief help from Jeff Robinson, Lee Guetterman and Dave Righetti.

''It feels great to get the monkey off our backs,'' Yankees Manager Stump Merrill said after New York broke an eight-game losing streak. ''Now we can relax and play some baseball. It will make Monday a short day for me.''

The New York losing streak was its longest since an eight-game skid September 13-20, 1985.

''I brought a positive attitude with me,'' said Jimmy Jones, 1-0, who was recalled from Columbus on Saturday. Jones walked five, struck out five and gave up three hits over five innings.

Barfield had a pair of doubles, the first driving in two runs during a four-run third inning off Jay Tibbs, 2-7.

Dave Righetti pitched the ninth inning for his 11th save and Steve Sax had three hits, scoring twice.

In other AL games, Cleveland shutout Boston 4-0, Detroit edged Seattle 4-3 Chicago bumped Minnesota 5-3, Oakland held off Kansas City 3-2; Texas nipped California 2-1; and Toronto stomped Milwaukee 13-5.

In the NL it was: St. Louis 5, Montreal 3; San Francisco 9, Atlanta 3; Chicago 7, Philadelphia 3; Houston 4, Cincinnati 2; and San Diego 2, Los Angeles 1.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Indians 4, Red Sox 0

At Boston, Tom Candiotti and Doug Jones combined on a five-hitter and Candy Maldonado belted an RBI double to help Cleveland snap a six-game losing streak and nip the Red Sox' seven-game winning streak. Candiotti, 6-3, struck out three and walked one in 8 1-3 innings. He retired 17 in a row. Jones got the last two outs for his 19th save. Wes Gardner, 0-3, took the losss.

Tigers 4, Mariners 3

At Detroit, Mark Salas ended an 0-for-19 slump with a sixth-inning solo homer, lifting the Tigers. Salas broke a 3-3 tie when he sent a pitch from Brian Holman, 7-4, into the first row of the upper deck in right field. Jack Morris, 5-7, won his third straight start by scattering seven hits over six innings. Mike Henneman pitched two shutout innings for his 15th save.

White Sox 5, Twins 3

At Minneapolis, Ivan Calderon and Lance Johnson each drove in two runs to help the the Chicago White Sox complete a three-game sweep over the Minnesota Twins. Greg Hibbard, 5-4, went seven innings, giving up six hits walking three and striking out six. Bobby Thigpen pitched the ninth for his 20th save. Roy Smith, 4-6, allowed eight hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Rangers 2, Angels 1

At Anaheim, Calif., Kevin Brown tossed a five-hitter en route to his first complete game in 12 starts and Ruben Sierra drove in both runs to lift Texas. Brown, 7-4, outdueled California's Mark Langston for the victory.

Brown struck out two and walked one. Langston, 4-6, allowed four hits in eight innings, striking out a season-high 12.

Athletics 3, Royals 2

At Oakland, Calif., Bob Welch scattered six hits over 7 2-3 innings and Willie Randolph drove in the go-ahead run with a bases-loaded groundout lifting the Athletics. Welch, 9-2, allowed two runs in the first inning but settled down, striking out five and walking three. Dennis Eckersley finished up for his 20th save in 20 chances. Steve Farr, 4-3, gave up three runs and five hits in five innings.

Blue Jays 13, Brewers 5

At Milwaukee, Junior Felix and Mookie Wilson each singled and doubled during a 10-run fourth inning, powering Toronto to its fourth straight victory. Toronto sent 15 men to the plate in the fourth inning, scoring 10 times to take a 12-0 lead. David Wells, 4-1, was the winner, giving up five runs and eight hits in six innings. Jamie Navarro, 2-2, took the loss allowing five runs and six hits in 3 1-3 innings.

LAGOS (JUNE 11) XINHUA - LIFE EXPECTANCY IN THE DEVELOPING COUNTRIES ROSE TO 62 YEARS AT PRESENT FROM 46 YEARS IN 1960, SAID A UNDP (UNITED NATIONS DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM) REPORT.

ACCORDING TO THE UNDP 1990 REPORT ON HUMAN DEVELOPMENT, WHICH WAS OBTAINED HERE TODAY, AFRICA'S AVERAGE LIFE EXPECTANCY IS ONLY 51 YEARS, RANGING FROM 42 YEARS IN ETHIOPIA AND SIERRA LEONE TO 69 YEARS IN MAURITIUS.

ASIA'S AVERAGE LIFE EXPECTANCY IS 64 YEARS WHILE LATIN- AMERICA'S 67 YEARS FAIRLY CLOSE TO THE INDUSTRIAL NATIONS' AVERAGE OF 69 YEARS IN 1960. NINE LATIN AMERICAN AND CARRIBBEAN COUNTRIES JOINED THE GROUP OF 18 DEVELOPING COUNTRIES THAT ALREADY HAVE A LIFE EXPECTANCY OF 70 YEARS.

THE REPORT ATTRIBUTED THE HIGHER LIFE EXPECTANCY TO THE PROGRESS IN REDUCING THE DEATHS OF CHILDREN UNDER FIVE, ESPECIALLY INFANTS.

DAMASCUS (JUNE 11) XINHUA - SYRIAN PRESIDENT HAFEZ ASSAD TODAY CALLED FOR EFFECTIVE ARAB SOLIDARITY, NOTING THAT THE SITUATION IN THE MIDDLE EAST REGION REQUIRES ACTION, NOT ARGUMENT.

"WITH UNITY AND SOLIDARITY, WE CAN ENSURE MUCH SECURITY," ASSAD SAID IN A SPEECH AT THE OPENING SESSION OF THE NEW PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY (PARLIAMENT).

ASSAD CHARGED THAT ISRAEL DOES NOT WANT PEACE AND HAS REFUSED TO HALT ITS OCCUPATION OF ARAB TERRITORIES.

HE WARNED THAT AS ISRAEL IS TECHNOLOGICALLY SUPERIOR, "IT CAN CAUSE DISASTER TO THE ARABS."

BUT THE ARABS CAN RETALIATE. "IF A WAR ERUPTS, ISRAEL WILL SUFFER MUCH MORE THAN THE ARABS," SAID ASSAD.

ASSAD MADE THESE REMARKS IN THE WAKE OF THE FORMATION IN ISRAEL OF A RIGHT-WING CABINET WHICH VOWED IN ITS GUIDELINES TO STRENGTHEN THE ISRAELI ARMY AND "UPROOT" THE 31-MONTH PALESTINIAN UPRISING IN THE OCCUPIED TERRITORIES.

ON THE SITUATION IN LEBANON, ASSAD SAID THAT SYRIA WILL CONTINUE ITS SUPPORT FOR THE LEBANESE LEGITIMACY UNDER ALL CIRCUMSTANCES.

SYRIA HAS SOME 35,000 TROOPS STATIONED IN LEBANON UNDER A 1976 ARAB LEAGUE PEACEKEEPING MANDATE.

WASHINGTON, JUNE 11 (XINHUA) -- NEVADA AND ARIZONA WILL SHOW THE FASTEST GROWTH RATES IN TOTAL PERSONAL INCOME, JOBS AND POPULATION BETWEEN 1988 AND 2000, WHILE CALIFORNIA WILL ACCOUNT FOR ONE OF EVERY SIX JOBS CREATED.

THESE ARE THE PROJECTIONS RELEASED TODAY BY THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT'S BUREAU OF ECONOMIC ANALYSIS ON STATE ECONOMY AND POPULATION TO THE YEAR 2000.

CALIFORNIA WILL CONTINUE TO HAVE THE HIGHEST TOTAL PERSONAL INCOME AND THE LARGEST POPULATION AND NUMBER OF JOBS, AND CONNECTICUT WILL CONTINUE TO HAVE THE HIGHEST PER CAPITA INCOME, ACCORDING TO THE PROJECTIONS, BASED ON PAST ECONOMIC TRENDS.

THE PROJECTED GROWTH IN NEVADA AND ARIZONA REFLECTS RAPID POPULATION GROWTH AND STRENGTH IN THEIR ECONOMIES.

IN NEVADA, TOTAL PERSONAL INCOME IS PROJECTED TO GROW 46.2 PERCENT BETWEEN 1988 AND 2000, WELL ABOVE THE PROJECTED NATIONAL INCREASE OF 26.2 PERCENT. THE INCOME PROJECTIONS ARE IN CONSTANT 1982 DOLLARS.

IN ARIZONA, PERSONAL INCOME IS PROJECTED TO RISE 40.6 PERCENT. BY THE YEAR 2000, FOUR STATES -- CALIFORNIA, NEW YORK, TEXAS AND FLORIDA -- ARE PROJECTED TO ACCOUNT FOR ONE-THIRD OF THE NATION'S 4.1-TRILLION-DOLLAR TOTAL PERSONAL INCOME.

PERSONAL INCOME IN CALIFORNIA IS PROJECTED TO BE THE HIGHEST IN THE NATION AT 568 BILLION DOLLARS. PERSONAL INCOME IN NEW YORK IS PROJECTED TO BE 330 BILLION DOLLARS WHILE IN TEXAS, IT WILL BE 250 BILLION DOLLARS AND IN FLORIDA, 226 BILLION DOLLARS.

IN THE YEAR 2000, CONNECTICUT, NEW JERSEY, MASSACHUSETTS AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA ARE PROJECTED TO HAVE PER CAPITA INCOMES THAT ARE MORE THAN 20 PERCENT ABOVE THE NATIONAL AVERAGE OF 15,345 DOLLARS.

CONNECTICUT IS PROJECTED TO HAVE THE HIGHEST PER CAPITA INCOME OF 20,503

DOLLARS, 34 PERCENT ABOVE THE NATIONAL AVERAGE.

TWO-THIRDS OF THE STATES ARE PROJECTED TO HAVE PER CAPITA INCOMES BELOW THE NATIONAL AVERAGE, AND 11 STATES -- PREDOMINANTLY IN THE SOUTH -- ARE PROJECTED TO HAVE PER CAPITA INCOMES THAT ARE 20 PERCENT OR MORE BELOW THE NATIONAL AVERAGE.

MISSISSIPPI IS PROJECTED TO HAVE THE LOWEST PER CAPITA INCOME, 10,631 DOLLARS, ABOUT HALF OF THAT PROJECTED FOR CONNECTICUT.

CALIFORNIA IS EXPECTED TO HAVE 3.4 MILLION OF THE 18.9 MILLION NEW JOBS CREATED NATIONWIDE FROM 1988 TO 2000.

IN NEVADA, THE NUMBER OF JOBS WILL INCREASE 31.5 PERCENT BY THE YEAR 2000, COMPARED WITH THE NATIONAL INCREASE OF 14.3 PERCENT. IN ARIZONA, THE NUMBER OF JOBS WILL SURGE 26.7 PERCENT.

POPULATION IN NEVADA IS PROJECTED TO INCREASE THE FASTEST, 29.8 PERCENT, FOLLOWED BY ARIZONA AND FLORIDA, 21.4 PERCENT AND 18.2 PERCENT, RESPECTIVELY. FOR THE NATION, POPULATION IS EXPECTED TO INCREASE 8.9 PERCENT.

IN WYOMING, WEST VIRGINIA AND LOUISIANA, POPULATION IS PROJECTED TO DECLINE SLIGHTLY. ALL OTHER STATES ARE PROJECTED TO HAVE POPULATION INCREASES.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 11) XINHUA - THE DUTCH GOVERNMENT WAS READY TO SIGN A LANDMARK PACT NEXT WEEK, SCRAPPING BORDERS BETWEEN FRANCE, THE FEDERAL GERMANY, BELGIUM, THE NETHERLANDS AND LUXEMBOURG, ACCORDING TO THE NEWS REACHING HERE TODAY.

THE DUTCH FOREIGN MINISTRY AND JUSTICE MINISTRY HAD SENT A LETTER TO PARLIAMENT, ANNOUNCING THAT THE GOVERNMENT PLANNED TO SIGN THE PACT IN THE TOWN OF SCHENGEN IN LUXEMBOURG ON JUNE 19, A SPOKESMAN OF THE FOREIGN MINISTRY SAID.

HE ALSO SAID THAT THE FINAL NEGOTIATIONS AMONG THE FIVE NATIONS WERE UNDER WAY IN BRUSSELS AT THE MOMENT TO SOLVE THE REMAINING PROBLEMS AND THE DUTCH CABINET, OPTIMISTIC OF THE SUCCESS OF THE TALKS, BELIEVED THAT THE PACT COULD BE SIGNED AS EXPECTED.

HE POINTED OUT THAT AFTER THE BORDERS EASED, THE DUTCH GOVERNMENT WOULD INCREASE CROSS-BORDER POLICE COOPERATION BETWEEN THE FIVE NATIONS ON ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION AND DRUGS AND WEAPON TRFFICKING.

THE PROJECT, DUE TO BE RATIFIED BEFORE THE START OF 1992, IS REGARDED AS AN EXERCISE FOR THE ELIMINATION OF ALL BORDERS BETWEEN THE 12 MEMBERS.

This Week with David Brinkley (ABC) June 10, 1990

Women in Politics: We do know, from polls and otherwise, that there is a high level of dissatisfaction with the performance of this country's political leadership. Is that why women are doing better at the polls, because voters think they will clean up the mess made mainly by men? More women are in office and running for office than ever before. California has just nominated a woman for governor. If women hold the power, will they use it any better than men have? Roundtable discussion topics include the Russian parliament's declaration that its laws supersede those of the Soviet Union, the state of the federation in Canada, the ''suicide machine'' invented by a doctor in Michigan, and the obscenity prosecutions in Florida for sales of a 2 Live Crew rap album. Mr. Brinkley's final commentary has to do with the 16 oil spills which occurred in the previous two weeks, in places like the Gulf of Mexico, New York Harbor and the coast of China. Father & Daughter Married? / Vegetarian Diet: Pro-Health & Environment: Jimmy Hendry met and married Trina. After several months of marriage, Trina's brother brought charges of incest against the couple, claiming Jimmy had married his mother and been his and Trina's father. Trina had always been told her stepfather was her true father. When they get enough money, the couple will have a genetic test done to settle the question. For now, they have suspended sexual relations. Whatever the test reveals, they say they will always remain close and Jimmy will stay on Trina's daughter's birth certificate as her father (though he is not her biological father). Mr. King's other guests this evening are both authors of books on the benefits of vegetarianism. They make a strong case against the massive environmental damage and waste of natural resources that occur due to the raising of animals for human consumption -- products that have proven to contribute to the number one cause of death in this country. A slower economy may be good for interest rates, but investors are now awakening to the fact it may be bad for earnings; the Bush Administration is expected to be receptive to free trade with Mexico, but labor is afraid of losing jobs to cheaper labor from the South; stock mutual funds heavy with cash and fund managers could throw the markets off balance should they decide to spend all that money at once; the public will be the driving force behind the market in the '90s -- that is the opinion of Stefan Abrams, Managing Director and investment strategist for Kidder Peabody; Japan's Prime Minister needs support from the country's urban consumers to push through economic reform; Dan Dorfman discusses takeover stocks; promoters of the World Cup Soccer championship are hoping new corporate interest will boost soccer's fortunes in the United States. The U.S. Department of Agriculture helped build an experimental Florida house to learn how roaches think and behave and why they infest man's homes. It's packed with electronic motion sensors that go off any time a roach passes underneath. These are linked to a computer system that keeps track of where the roaches congregate, when they start to roam, and what they like to eat; some at NASA are calling this the picture of the century the first photograph of Earth and its neighboring planets taken by a camera at the edge of our solar system; some people who swim in the ocean worry about shark attacks, but there is actually a more deadly threat lurking under the waves -- rip currents, or riptides, as they are sometimes called, are a little thought of danger; from office mainframes to high-speed PCs the latest in computers went on display in Atlanta this week; advances from the world of computers quickly make their way into high-tech consumer goods -- some examples were on display in Chicago this week; at Auburn University, researchers are building new electronic devices that may be ideally suited for use in space -- the technology involves growing a very thick film of synthetic diamond on a silicon wafer. Until recently, it was possible to deposit the diamond only as a uniform film over the entire wafer. Now, the Auburn team has devised a way to build individual diamond structures on selected areas of the microchip; for hundreds of years, people have looked for quicker and easier ways to cross the English Channel. Working is moving along on a tunnel under the channel to link France and England, but the so-called ''chunnel'' is being challenged by a new type of high-speed ferry boat. (Transcript #18)

The Trump empire may be crumbling -- there is speculation that Trump may be forced to spin off some of his most prized assets; after four years as Vice Chairman of the powerful Federal Reserve Board and six years as a senior Treasury official, Manuel Johnson said he is stepping down from public life; General Motors and Soviet car maker Volga Auto Works have signed a seven-year, $1 billion joint venture agreement -- GM will supply Volga with pollution control devices for automobile engines; when the question is asked where to turn for capital, the answer many economists are giving is Japan; completion of the billion-dollar Pathe Communications-MGM/UA deal still remains illusive, and has all the twists and turns of a movie; computer users have blamed various health problems on hours spent in front of computer screens -- now a leading computer magazine has linked some forms of cancer to color computer monitors; a hard-hitting, anti- smoking campaign has hit the airwaves in California; while on the surface an advertising ban might appear deadly to the tobacco industry, some analysts can see benefits. (Transcript #23)

What may become the first reliable biochemical test for Alzheimer's Disease was reported this week. The only reliable diagnosis up to now has been after death, with direct examination of the brain tissue; a nationwide hospital survey shows an unprecedented drop in blood transfusions in the '80s may be due to fears of AIDS being transmitted that way; the Centers for Disease Control this week reported that the culprit in a mysterious three-year outbreak of 26 cases of Legionnaires' Disease in a South Dakota hospital was the shower system; Americans spend $13 billion a year seeking relief from low back pain. Transcutaneous Electrical Nerve Stimulation, or TENS for short, is based on the theory that low-power electrical pulses can interfere with pain signals. Now, researchers say people with lower back pain would do better to save the money they spend on TENS; when the poor need medical care, they turn to Medicaid, but if Medicaid runs out of money, who will resuscitate this crucial but beleaguered system? This perplexing question faces the nation's Medicaid Directors' meeting in Washington and the administration's top doctor has no quick cure for the Medicaid malaise; states are facing another crunch, specifically with their youngest citizens, many of whom are mentally retarded or developmentally delayed -- some prevention is possible, but it will be costly; for several years now, doctors in China have been performing vasectomies without a scalpel -- instead, they use special instruments that make the operation faster and, according to one American doctor who has tried it, a lot simpler. Although

TOKYO (JUNE 11) KYODO - EFFORTS BY FOREIGN FIRMS TO KEEP JAPAN'S IMPORT PRICES HIGH -- A PRACTICE SUPPORTED BY JAPANESE RETAILERS -- ARE CAUSING LARGE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THE PRICE OF IMPORTED GOODS SOLD IN JAPAN AND THOSE SOLD ELSEWHERE, A REPORT RELEASED MONDAY BY THE FAIR TRADE COMMISSION SAYS.

THE REPORT IS BASED ON A RECENT PRICE SURVEY OF NINE TYPES OF PRODUCTS -- INSTANT COFFEE, RAW SPAGHETTI, MENS' COATS, DESIGNER BAG, TABLEWARE, GOLF BALLS, CAMERAS, ELECTRIC SHAVERS, AND PASSENGER CARS -- SOLD IN TOKYO AND IN FOUR OTHER CITIES IN THE UNITED STATES AND EUROPE.

PRICE GAPS ARE ESPECIALLY WIDE ON IMPORTED GOODS SUCH AS MENS' COATS, DESIGNER BAGS, AND TABLEWARE, THE REPORT SAID, THOUGH THERE WERE NO SIGNIFICANT DIFFERENCES IN THE PRICES OF JAPANESE-MADE PRODUCTS, INCLUDING CARS AND CAMERAS.

BRITISH-MADE COATS, FOR EXAMPLE, WERE 40 PERCENT TO 100 PERCENT HIGHER IN PRICE IN TOKYO THAN IN THE FOUR OTHER CITIES -- NEW YORK, LONDON, PARIS, AND FRANKFURT. FRENCH-MADE BAGS COST UP TO 30 PERCENT MORE IN TOKYO THAN IN THE OTHER CITIES.

THE REPORT SAID SUCH PRICE-SUPPORTING PRACTICES AS REBATES, MAKER-SETTING PRICES, AND THE PRACTICE OF RETAILERS RETURNING UNSOLD GOODS TO MAKERS OR EXPORTERS, OFTEN SERVE AS A FIRM FLOOR FOR IMPORT PRICES.

RETAILERS TEND TO COOPERATE WITH THEIR FOREIGN SUPPLIERS IN THE EFFORTS TO PROP UP PRICES, EITHER WILLINGLY OR IN FEAR OF RETALIATION, DISCOURAGING LOWER PRICING THE REPORT SAID.

RETAILERS OFTEN SET PRICES, FOR EXAMPLE, JUST AS THE SUPPLIERS REQUEST TO PROTECT BRAND IMAGES TO LESSEN COMPETITION.

FOREIGN EXPORTERS ALSO HAVE THE TENDENCY TO AVOID DOING BUSINESS WITH DISCOUNT STORES, VIRTUALLY CONFINING THEIR SUPPLIES TO UPSCALE OR DEPARTMENT STORES.

REBATES OFTEN ARE USED BY EXPORTERS ON A CASE-BY-CASE BASIS, CREATING FEAR AMONG RETAILERS OF MISTREATMENT IF THEY DO NOT GO ALONG WITH SUPPLIERS ON PRICE-SETTING STRATEGIES.

BESIDES STRICT ENFORCEMENT OF THE ANTIMONOPLOLY LAW, THE REPORT URGED THE FTC TO MAKE ITS POLICY ON SUCH TRADE PRACTICES MORE CLEAR TO THE PUBLIC.

TOKYO (JUNE 11) KYODO - A HIGH-RANKING OFFICIAL OF THE FRENCH MINISTRY OF POSTAL SERVICES, TELECOMMUNICATIONS, AND SPACE SAID HERE MONDAY THAT FRANCE TELECOM PLANS TO INTRODUCE ITS PICTORIAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE TO JAPAN IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

JEAN-JACQUES DAMLAMIAN, HEAD OF THE FRENCH MINISTRY'S DIRECTORATE OF INTERNATIONAL AND INDUSTRIAL AFFAIRS, TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE THAT FRANCE TELECOM ATTACHES GREAT IMPORTANCE TO THE JAPANESE TELECOMMUNICATIONS MARKET AS PART OF A PLAN TO EXPAND ITS OVERSEAS BUSINESS.

HE SAID FRANCE TELECOM ALSO PLANS TO EXTEND BUSINESS TO THIRD NATIONS FROM JAPAN.

DAMLAMIAN SAID FRANCE TELECOM'S JAPANESE SUBSIDIARY HAS ALREADY LAUNCHED MARKET STUDIES IN CONNECTION WITH THE PLAN TO SELL THE PICTORIAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE, CALLED ''TELETEL,'' IN JAPAN.

HE SAID FRANCE TELECOM HOPES ITS OVERSEAS SERVICE WOULD BE EARNING 10 PERCENT OF THE COMPANY'S TOTAL INCOME BY THE YEAR 2000. FRANCE TELECOM IS SCHEDULED TO BECOME INDEPENDENT FROM THE MINISTRY AS A STATE-RUN ENTERPRISE IN JANUARY 1991.

TOKYO (JUNE 11) KYODO - THE ONGOING U.S.-JAPAN TALKS ON STRUCTURAL TRADE BARRIERS WILL TOP THE AGENDA WHEN THE COUNTRIES' FOREIGN MINISTERS MEET IN SAN FRANCISCO THIS WEEK, FOREIGN MINISTRY SOURCES SAID MONDAY.

THE JAPANESE AGENDA FOR THE TALKS ON FRIDAY ALSO INCLUDES PROPOSALS FOR REGULAR CONSULTATIONS BETWEEN BOTH NATIONS' FOREIGN AND DEFENSE HEADS.

JAPAN HAS REJECTED U.S. DEMANDS FOR IT TO SPECIFY FUTURE PUBLIC SPENDING AS A PERCENTAGE OF ITS GNP AND AGREE TO MONITORING SESSIONS IN A FINAL REPORT ON THE STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII) TRADE TALKS.

BUT OFFICIALS ARE EAGER TO CLEAR AWAY THE DISAGREEMENTS BEFORE THE FINAL SET OF TALKS SLATED FOR JUNE 25-26. "WE WANT TO CLEAR THE PATH TO A SOLUTION IN THE FOREIGN MINISTERS' MEETING," A SENIOR FOREIGN MINISTRY OFFICIAL SAID.

PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU HAS TWICE REJECTED SPECIFYING A GNP FIGURE, SAYING THAT THE LISTING OF AN AGGREGATE PROJECTED AMOUNT OF PUBLIC SPENDING DURING THE NEXT 10 YEARS WAS AGREED ON IN THE SII INTERIM REPORT IN APRIL. THE U.S. IS SEEKING EXPENDITURE EQUAL TO 9 PERCENT OF GNP BY 1995 AND 10 PERCENT BY THE YEAR 2000.

JAPANESE OFFICIALS HAVE TURNED DOWN U.S. REQUESTS FOR SESSIONS FOUR TIMES

A YEAR TO MONITOR THE PROGRESS OF SII AGREEMENTS, CONTENDING AT LEAST A YEAR SHOULD ELAPSE BEFORE ANY FOLLOW-UP ASSESSMENT IS MADE.

ONE GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL, REQUESTING ANONYMITY, SAID SUCH SESSIONS WOULD ONLY "LEAD TO THE CONTINUATION OF SII."

JAPAN WILL ALSO PROPOSE CONSULTATIONS BETWEEN THE FOUR HEADS OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND DEFENSE ESTABLISHMENTS AND AMONG PROMINENT INTELLECTUALS IN THIS WEEK'S METTING BETWEEN NAKAYAMA AND BAKER, AS A STEP TO STRENGTHENING POLITICAL DIALOGUE.

OTHER TOPICS FOR DISCUSSION INCLUDE THE REOPENING OF AN 810 BILLION YEN LOAN PACKAGE FOR CHINA, JAPANESE SUPPORT FOR CENTRAL AMERICAN NATIONS AND RECENT DEVELOPMENTS ADDING TO TENSIONS ON THE KOREAN PENINSULA.

SINGAPORE (JUNE 11) KYODO - A SINGAPORE COMPANY DEALING IN WATCHES, JEWELLERY, AND PERFUME HAS SET UP A JOINT VENTURE WITH A KYOTO-BASED FIRM, AMITA CORP. TO GAIN ACCESS TO JAPANESE AND OTHER OVERSEAS MARKETS.

A COMPANY ANNOUNCEMENT SAID MONDAY THE HOUR GLASS GROUP HAS A 51 PERCENT STAKE WHILE AMITA HOLDS THE REMAINING STAKE IN THE WHOLESALE COMPANY CALLED AMITA-HOUR GLASS.

FORMED LAST MONTH, THE COMPANY HAS A PAID-UP CAPITAL OF 200,000 SINGAPORE DOLLARS.

"WE SEE A LOT OF SYNERGY IN WORKING WITH A JAPANESE GROUP AS OUR TARGET IS JAPANESE BUYERS WHOM WE BELIEVE HAVE A LOT OF PURCHASING POWER," SAID AN HOUR GLASS OFFICIAL.

THE NEW COMPANY IS NOW OPERATING FROM A SPACE IN ASIA'S FIRST MEGA WHOLESALE CENTER, INTERNATIONAL MERCHANDISE MART, WHICH OPENED IN SINGAPORE LAST MONTH.

THE JAPANESE RETAILING GROUP YAOHAN HAS A 70 PERCENT STAKE IN THE MART WHICH AIMS TO HOUSE WHOLESALERS AND MANUFACTURERS FROM SOME 45 COUNTRIES.

THE NEW COMPANY HAS ALREADY STARTED SELLING WATCHES, INCLUDING THE SINGAPORE COMPANY'S OWN "MERLION" BRAND CASUAL AND SPORTS WATCH, AND FRENCH PERFUMES FROM THE 1,000-SQUARE-FOOT SHOP SPACE, AN OFFICIAL SAID.

THE OFFICIAL SAID THE TWO COMPANIES ARE ALSO DISCUSSING THE PROSPECT OF A PARTNERSHIP IN JAPAN WHERE AMITA, A DIVERSE TRADING COMPANY THAT ALSO MANUFACTURES GIFT ITEMS, HAS RETAIL OUTLETS.

THE HOUR GLASS ITSELF OPERATES SIX RETAIL OUTLETS FOR WATCHES AND JEWELLERY IN SINGAPORE WHERE IT IS THE DEALER FOR IMPORTED BRAND NAME WATCHES SUCH AS "CARTIER" AND "ROLEX."

TOKYO (JUNE 11) KYODO - A GOVERNMENT BAN ON TRADE INSURANCE FOR EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET UNION HAS PROVOKED FEARS OF A FURTHER SLOWDOWN IN EXPORTS TO THAT COUNTRY, TRADERS SAID MONDAY.

OFFICIALS AT TRADING HOUSES SAID THAT EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET UNION MIGHT DROP BECAUSE OF THE DECISION BY THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY NOT TO PROVIDE TRADE INSURANCE FOR SOVIET-BOUND EXPORTS UNLESS EXPORTERS GET LETTERS OF CREDIT FROM SOVIET BANKS.

A LETTER OF CREDIT IS A DOCUMENT ISSUED BY A BANK TO GUARANTEE THE PAYMENT OF AN IMPORTER'S DRAFTS, ELIMINATING THE SELLER'S RISK.

MITI'S ACTION CAME IN REACTION TO INCREASING DELINQUENT SOVIET PAYMENTS FOR GOODS IMPORTED FROM JAPAN, WHICH AMOUNTED TO 255 MILLION DOLLARS AT THE END OF APRIL, THE EQUIVALENT OF ROUGHLY 7 PERCENT OF TOTAL ANNUAL EXPORTS TO THAT COUNTRY. THE DEFICIENCY IS REPORTEDLY BECAUSE OF DWINDLING SOVIET FOREIGN EXCHANGE RESERVES.

THE MITI DECISION FOLLOWS A DOUBLING OF FEES ON TRADE INSURANCE FOR EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET UNION LAST MAY. THAT MOVE MET WITH SOVIET DISSATISFACTION.

CITING THE SOVIET COMPLAINT ABOUT THE INCREASED TRADE INSURANCE COST, AN OFFICIAL AT ONE TRADING HOUSE SAID THE SOVIET UNION WOULD REFRAIN FROM PURCHASING GOODS FROM JAPAN BECAUSE THE LETTER OF CREDIT REQUIREMENT WOULD FORCE THE SOVIETS TO PAY MORE FOR IMPORTING GOODS.

"WE'LL NOT BE ABLE TO DO BUSINESS WITH THAT COUNTRY IF THEY SAY THEY WILL IMPORT GOODS FROM OTHER COUNTRIES," THE OFFICIAL SAID ON CONDITION OF ANONYMITY.

ACCORDING TO THE JAPAN ASSOCIATION FOR TRADE WITH THE SOVIET UNION AND SOCIALIST COUNTRIES OF EUROPE, A TRADE GROUP FOR COMPANIES DOING BUSINESS WITH THE EASTERN BLOC, JAPAN'S EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET UNION FELL 14.2 PERCENT IN THE JANUARY-APRIL PERIOD FROM A YEAR EARLIER TO 937.73 MILLION DOLLARS.

TOKYO (JUNE 11) KYODO - JAPAN ELECTRONIC COMPUTER CO. WILL ISSUE 30 MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF PRIVATELY PLACED STRAIGHT BONDS IN THE UNITED STATES, COMPANY OFFICIALS SAID MONDAY.

THE TOKYO-BASED COMPUTER RENTAL COMPANY IS THE FIRST JAPANESE FIRM TO ISSUE PRIVATELY PLACED BONDS SINCE THE U.S. SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION (SEC) IN APRIL EASED THE CURBS ON THE RESALE OF SUCH BONDS IN THE U.S.

THE OFFICIALS SAID THE COUPON RATE IS 9.25 PERCENT PER ANNUM. THE NEW YORK-BASED INDUSTRIAL BANK OF JAPAN TRUST COMPANY IS THE ARRANGER IN THE BOND ISSUE, AND DAI-ICHI KANGYO BANK IS GUARANTOR, THEY SAID.

THE BONDS ARE BEING OFFERED MAINLY TO SPECIFIED MAJOR INSTITUTIONAL INVESTORS IN THE U.S.

JAPANESE CORPORATIONS ARE EXPECTED TO ACTIVELY ISSUE PRIVATELY-PLACED BONDS IN THE U.S. IN THE COMING MONTHS AS INSTITUTIONAL INVESTORS WITH PORTFOLIOS WORTH MORE THAN 100 MILLION DOLLARS ARE NOW FREE TO TRADE IN SUCH BONDS BECAUSE OF THE SEC'S EASING OF RESTRICTIONS.

TOKYO (JUNE 11) KYODO - KOMEITO, THE NO. 2 OPPOSITION PARTY, MONDAY BROKE RANKS WITH MAINSTREAM POLITICS OVER THE ISSUE OF LIBERALIZATION OF THE RICE MARKET WITH A PROPOSAL TO A LAUNCH AN OPEN DEBATE ON WHETHER JAPAN CAN AFFORD TO SHUT OUT RICE IMPORTS.

"IT IS ONLY NATURAL THAT WE SHOULD DEBATE ON POLICY IF WE CLAIM TO BE A POLITICAL PARTY," YUICHI ICHIKAWA, KOMEITO SECRETARY-GENERAL, SAID IN AN ADDRESS TO THE PARTY'S PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION.

ICHIKAWA SAID KOMEITO IS STILL AGAINST OPENING UP JAPAN'S RICE MARKET BUT THE PARTY SHOULD NOT REGARD THE POLICY AS UNTOUCHABLE.

IT WOULD APPEAR STRANGE TO THE OUTSIDE IF ALL POLITICAL PARTIES IN JAPAN -- FROM THE RULING LIBERAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY TO THE COMMUNIST PARTY -- "SAY IN CHORUS" THAT NO RICE WILL BE ALLOWED INTO JAPAN, HE SAID.

JAPAN IS UNDER PRESSURE FROM THE UNITED STATES TO OPEN UP ITS RICE MARKET, AN ISSUE THAT IS BEING ADDRESSED IN THE CURRENT URUGUAY ROUND OF MULTILATERAL TRADE TALKS.

ICHIKAWA ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THE NO-IMPORT POLICY IS BACKED BY A DIET RESOLUTION UNANIMOUSLY ENDORSED BY ALL POLITICAL PARTIES BUT ARGUED THAT NO DIET RESOLUTION IS SACROSANCT.

A DIET RESOLUTION IS MEANT TO SERVE THE NEEDS OF THE PEOPLE, AND NOT THE OTHER WAY ROUND, HE SAID.

#90162m0001 06/11/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys
FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 11) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2)MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The Nikkei falls 1.37%, losing 453 points to 32,540.18. ... London and other world stocks also are lower. U.S. bond prices lose 7/8 points in overseas trading. ... TEXAS INSTRUMENTS blames Defense Department spending cuts in announcing plans to cut its work force by 1,000 over the next year. GENERAL DYNAMICS says it plans cuts of 500 to 800 people from its Fort Worth division for the same reason. ... AMES DEPARTMENT STORES announced plans to close 221 stores and lay off 17,500 employees as it struggles to emerge from bankruptcy protection. ... "USA Today" received 6,406 telephone calls from Friday morning to yesterday afternoon in its attempt to learn how America feels about DONALD TRUMP. The results: 19% said Trump symbolizes the things that are wrong with this country and 81% said he symbolizes what makes America great.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

The LABOR DEPARTMENT issues its two main inflation indicators this week, producer prices on Thursday and consumer prices on Friday. Among the other economic reports due out this week are retail sales on Wednesday, business inventories and sales on Thursday and, on Friday, industrial production, capacity utilization and the merchandise trade balance.

FROM THE BULLS:

"The pullback reflects a 'normal consolidation' and is not a surprise," says bullish money manager NORMAN YU, who heads his own firm in Newport Beach, Calif. "The stock market can't go up in a straight line. Despite the reaction, the trend is still up. ... The worst I can see on this pullback is 2825. Following that, I expect another sharp advance. For the year, I believe the Dow could hit 3500." ("Investor's Daily", 6/11)

FROM THE BEARS:

PETER GRANCICH, chief market strategist for AFM INVESTMENTS, notes that he turned bearish on the stock market last August - deciding it was "better to be a live chicken than a dead duck." And then last Thursday he went bearish again, expecting another 150-point or so drop. He says that just "as Stump Merrill is not going to be the last [New York] Yankee manager, program trading will once again cause us, unfortunately, to have another major, major down day. And that's basically what we saw these last two days, especially today [Friday]." He says there probably will be a bounce up today or tomorrow, "but I think the market is heading lower." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/8)

STOCK MARKET:

"We're at a point now where this market will have to prove itself and if it does not broaden out like it did not broaden out in '87, then I think one should take a very cautious look at the market and perhaps play a few key stocks, but really start to pull in your horns," says GAIL DUDAK of S.G. WARBURG. She notes that 60% of the Standard and Poor blue chip stocks are underperforming and that 24% of the S&P stocks are below their January lows. "This a very selective market that is creating all kinds of divergences. We've seen this in the past and we've seen them last for quite a while, but there is always a correction down the road." ("Wall Street Week", 6/8)

"The little stocks are doing great," says PETER CANELO, strategist at BEAR STEARNS & CO. He says that defuses the bears' argument that the market's rise hasn't been broad-based and is vulnerable to a plunge. STAN WEINSTEIN, editor of the "Professional Tape Reader" newsletter says, "The market is supposed to find value and right now a lot of blue chips are overvalued and a lot of [small stocks] are undervalued." ("USA Today", 6/11)

"I feel the market is probably going to run into some more trouble this week," says EUGENE PERONI JR. of JANNEY MONTGOMERY SCOTT who looks for the Dow to find its base somewhere in the high 2700s over the next few weeks. Meanwhile, he believes there will be opportunities to buy blue chips and quality secondary stocks on weakness. "But I wouldn't chase any strength right now," advises Peroni, who doesn't see much progress on the upside until after early July. (FNN "World Business Update", 6/11)

"We saw some profit-taking and, certainly, sell programs were an important part of [Friday's] activity. But this is healthy," says KIDDER, PEABODY's DENNIS JARRETT. "We haven't done any major damage, it's part of a nice healthy scenario representing the consolidation of gains after a rally." (UPI, 6/8)

"This [Friday] was the first day for real significant profit-taking, but there is no indication that anything has changed," says LASZLO BIRINYI, head of BIRINYI ASSOCIATES. (NYT, 6/10)

Although Friday's fall was sharper than declines of the previous three sessions, analysts remain fairly optimistic about a resumption of the rally. "As of now, I don't think it means much," says ROBERT STOVALL, president of STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS. KENNETH SPENCE, director of SALOMON BROTHERS' technical analysis group, says, "They ran it up very hard, very fast, and I think we're seeing some profit- taking." (Reuters, 6/8)

"I think the correction has further to go, here," says STEFAN ABRAMS of KIDDER, PEABODY. "I think these first four days have indicated that the short trend of the month of May has now been changed." Abrams anticipates the Dow will find support at the 2750 to 2800 level. (CNN "Moneyline", 6/8)

"I think this is a pause in a very strong rally," says CARTER RANDALL. "I think we will go back to new all-time highs again, and maybe even surpass 3000" on the Dow in the short-term because of so much cash on the sidelines. However, he says he is worried about a market "encore" because the economy is weaker than many realize, with a negative impact on corporate profits. "I'm not bearish, I'm just cautious." ("Wall Street Week", 6/8)

BERNADETTE MURPHY of M. KIMELMAN, CO. needs more confirmation before she can believe in this market. "We have not had the volume ... and we have not had a succession of days of a broad number of advancing issues. We have had several days of good issue participation, but not to the extent that we've had at other turning points in the past." (CNN "Moneyline", 6/8)

WISCONSIN COMMISSIONER OF SECURITIES WALTER WHITE is advising unsophisticated investors to be wary of getting into foreign stocks not listed on the major exchanges, even though it is now easier to do so with the over-the-counter market's new "Bulletin Board" that enables dealers to electronically indicate twice daily what they are willing to pay for hundreds of foreign securities. "We're coming out of a period where we have just witnessed substantial abuses and losses of individuals' money in the savings and loan scandal," says White. "We run the risk of similar catastrophes if Americans, without firmly understanding their risks, get involved in overseas investments." (WSJ, 6/11)

"There are increasing concerns or expectations that maybe the economy is slower" than previously thought says ERIC MILLER of DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE. "So, perhaps there will be some interest-shifting towards some of the slower-growing areas or recession-resistant sectors, perhaps, in anticipation that the federal reserve will be easing soon." (CNN "Moneyline", 6/8)

STOCK TIPS:

MERRY-GO-ROUND ENTERPRISES INC. gets a big write-up in the Sunday edition of "The New York Times." It is described as a company with "a consistent knack for spotting [fashion] fads long before other retailers do so." "They're always out there beating the bushes for new ideas," says ALICE RUTH, a retail analyst for MONTGOMERY SECURITIES. "By the time Macy's picks up on a product, Merry-Go- Round has often moved on." (NYT, 6/10)

PRESCOTT BALL & TURBEN analyst JERRY HERMAN says MAYTAG CORP. is one of only two "pure plays in the U.S. appliance industry" and has been a buyout possibility since 1984. The stock rose 2 to 19 on five times normal trading volume Friday. Herman says it is worth 24 to 30 a share as a buyout. ("Investor's Daily", 6/11)

WHITMAN CORP. is featured in "Barron's" this week as a stock that is undervalued relative to its underlying assets. "Estimates of Whitman's real asset value vary all over the place, but all are considerably higher than the stock's current market price," the article says. ("Barron's", 6/11)

CNN's DAN DORFMAN reports that traders are initiating takeover rumors in this laggard market to make some quick money. Dorfman says we're suffering from "takeover madness in a lousy market, and my view is you have to be mad to buy these stocks on any stories." Dorfman's story stocks are MAYTAG, SAATCHI & SAATCHI, CAMPBELL SOUP, H.H. ROBERTSON and UPJOHN. (CNN "Moneyline", 6/8)

"The market still has a lot of undervalued situations out there," says TED ROSENBERG of THE BURNEY CO. His favorite stocks are COCA- COLA, INTERNATIONAL PAPER, CONSOLIDATED PAPER, ITT and DUPONT. ("Nightly Business Report", 6/8)

APPLE COMPUTER INC. slipped 3/4 to 38 1/4 Friday on what analysts say were concerns its monitors may emit higher levels of radiation than other computer screens. Traders say a "Cable News Network" piece based on a July cover story in the trade publication "Macworld" triggered selling. Also, DILLON READ & CO. analyst JOHN MAXWELL 3 lowered his 1990 earnings forecast from "outperform" to "underperform." ("Investor's Daily", 6/11)

STEVEN ARONOFF of the AARP CAPITAL GROWTH FUND is a believer in the cellular telephone industry. His favorite stock now is a German company called MANNESMANN AG. Best known for heavy capital goods, the company also is the majority owner of the only private cellular phone license for Germany. ("Barron's", 6/11)

The "Heard on the Street" column in "The Wall Street Journal" this morning notes that RJR NABISCO INC. warrants, which made their debut on the New York Stock Exchange Friday closed the day at 7 1/4, up 45% from their value when the company went private in 1989. While the warrants are doing well, some of the company's "junk bonds" have traded as low as 69 cents on the dollar. "Something's odd," says RAY GAREA, an analyst at DONALDSON,

LUFKIN & JENRETTE. "You wouldn't think this could happen." (WSJ, 6/11)

NORMAN YU of Newport Beach, Calif., who manages $40 million, has registered a 21.7% increase in his accounts this year versus a 3% gain in the S&P 500. His holdings include MICROSOFT CORP., TOYS 'R' US INC., WAL-MART STORES INC., BOEING, FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION and REUTERS LTD. ("Investor's Daily", 6/11)

RICHARD FISHER, president of FEDERATED SECURITIES, likes IBM, CONSOLIDATED EDISON, SAN DIEGO GAS & ELECTRIC, FLORIDA POWER & LIGHT and MCI He stays away from small cap stocks. ("Wall Street Week", 6/8)

"While it's a big event for the industry to see another deal, it's not a big event for CONAGRA's stock," says analyst JOHN McMILLIN of PRUDENTIAL-BACHE. "I'm not changing my [earnings] estimates." He was commenting on ConAgra's purchase of Beatrice Co. in a deal announced last Thursday. ConAgra stock rose 1 1/4 to 33 1/4 Friday. ("Investor's Daily", 6/11)

DAN DORFMAN writes in "USA Today" that "it's goose-'em time on Wall Street" and says the latest example of a stock gaining on "deal" talk is KODAK. He notes the stock was up 2 1/4 for the week last week, to 41 3/4. Among other things, Dorfman cites reports that investor WARREN BUFFETT is buying big chunks "possibly as a prelude to his taking a major, friendly stake." But SMITH BARNEY analyst PETER ENDERLIN tells Dorfman he would sell Kodak, predicting "it'll be in the high 30s six to 12 months out." ("USA Today", 6/11)

MICROSOFT co-founder PAUL ALLEN disclosed to the SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION last month that he planned to sell 200,000 shares of Microsoft stock for $13.65 million on May 18. "USA Today" said it could not be confirmed whether he followed through, but noted that insiders who reveal such plans on SEC forms usually carry through with them. ("USA Today", 6/11)

#90162m0002 06/11/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 11) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"Despite excessive swings in market sentiment this year, Federal Reserve policy remains locked in place, supporting an 8.25% Federal funds rate," say senior analysts at SALOMON BROTHERS INC. ("Investor's Daily", 6/11)

STEFAN ABRAMS of KIDDER, PEABODY says it's unlikely the Fed will ease anytime soon. "I think the Fed has indicated that that's not in the cards." (CNN "Moneyline", 6/8)

"Our forecast of a near-term policy easing and corresponding decline in rates along the yield curve remains unchanged," says DONALD MAUDE, president of MAUDE CAPITAL MARKET CONSULTANTS INC. "In effect, we are undaunted by recent comments of some Federal Reserve officials suggesting that they don't feel a policy easing is appropriate at this time. As such our fixed-income portfolio strategy remains postured for further declines in interest rates." ("Investor's Daily", 6/11)

"Right now, the American fixed-income market is extremely expensive" relative to other markets, says ROGER PORTNOY, chief global strategist for TECHNICAL DATA, a bond market advisory and analysis firm in London. "You can move from a 10-year Treasury note into a 10-year German bond and pick up about 15 basis points in the process. If you moved out of two-year Treasuries into two-year German notes, you would pick up 60 basis points. The only other time you could do that was in the early 1970s." Mr. Portnoy also says, "The perception among foreign investors of the political and economic climate in the United States is positive. Also, since the Federal Reserve Board moved sooner and more aggressively to deal with inflation than other central banks, there is a perception abroad that inflation is not as bad here as it is elsewhere." (NYT, 6/11)

"As we take a look at the weeks ahead, I think its unlikely we're going to get another major rally in the bond market," says ABBY COHEN of BARCLAYS DE ZOETE WEDD, who believes the economy has stabilized after a period of deceleration. "Unless we have additional signs of weakness or additional signs that inflation has moved dramatically lower, I think bond prices are going to stay just about where they are." Cohen does not expect the Fed to ease monetary policy anytime in the near future. (FNN "World Business Update", 6/11)

"Around the globe, there is a fairly broad anticipation that investors who put money in dollar-denominated fixed-income securities are more likely to see interest rates decline along with economic weakness and therefore sustain a capital gain," says BRIAN FABBRI, chief economist at MIDLAND MONTAGUE ECONOMICS. Due to uncertainties about German reunification, the dollar is likely to remain stronger than economic fundamentals might warrant, says Mr. Fabbri. Because of the dollar's strength "global investors may be forced to keep a bigger part of their portfolio in the United States than they otherwise might." (NYT, 6/11)

DONALD TRUMP has reached a tentative agreement with his major bankers that will give him time and money to restructure his real estate and casino empire. "The Wall Street Journal" reports this morning that people familiar with the talks say the banks would lend Trump about $50 million and let him suspend interest payments on about $2 billion in existing bank loans. (WSJ, 6/11)

THE ECONOMY:

"I think the figures will be roughly in line with a 4.0% annual inflation rate," says JAY GOLDINGER of CAPITAL INSIGHT, in commenting on the Labor Department statistics due out later in the week. "It will take something better than that to get the bond market to rally." (NYT, 6/10)

"We're getting increasing signs of weakness in the economy in many ways ... I think there is some concern as to whether the earnings are there ... [and] that's what the market is bothered about," says BILL WOLMAN, chief economist at "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC." And at the same time, there is no great cheap money party going on in terms of the Fed, so people are very worried." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/8)

"I doubt we have credit conditions that would keep the economy from experiencing modest growth," says WILLIAM SULLIVAN JR., director of money market research at DEAN WITTER. (NYT, 6/10)

MONTE GORDON of DREYFUS CORP. says some "very positive things are underway that are very fundamental" in which the U.S. economy is "cleansing itself of the speculative risks and excesses that were built in during the 1980s. ... You have to do that if you are to maintain the vibrancy of the economy. ... So I regard this process as holding great positive elements as far as the long-term is concerned." ("Wall Street Week", 6/8)

IN WASHINGTON:

White House economic adviser MICHAEL BOSKIN says the Bush administration plans to cut its forecast for 1990 economic growth next month to about 2.2% - down from the 2.6% it estimated in February. "I will be issuing the full details of that on July 15," says Boskin. (NBC, "Meet The Press" 6/10)

PRESIDENT BUSH is expected to announce that the United States will begin preparing for free trade talks with Mexico, according to senior administration officials. American officials have long favored the principle of free trade between the two countries, but opposition in Mexico has until recent months made the issue moot. PRESIDENT SALINAS of Mexico, however, abruptly reversed the situation this spring by calling for free trade. (NYT, 6/11)

The SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION is quietly prodding Wall Street to give investors the option of bringing disputes with brokers to independent arbitration forums rather than just to arbitration panels sponsored by the exchanges themselves. (WSJ, 6/11)

A new analysis by PROF. ELIYAHU KANOVSKY of the WASHINGTON INSTITUTE FOR NEAR EAST POLICY predicts "stable or declining" oil prices. Columnist HOBART ROWEN features the expert's opinions in his Sunday column in "The Washington Post," noting that Kanovsky "correctly scoffed at OPEC's ability to sustain inflated prices in earlier periods." ("The Washington Post", 6/10)

Savings and loan bailout officials are racing to fashion a new policy to sell off real estate in scores of $500 million blocks at a time over the next few years. WILLIAM SEIDMAN, chairman of the RESOLUTION TRUST CORP. and the FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORP. is enthusiastic about the plan. His FDIC predecessor, WILLIAM ISAAC, is not. "This will just give the mega-investor a sweetheart deal," says Isaac. (WSJ, 6/11)

ST. LOUIS (JUNE 9) PR NEWSWIRE - General Dynamics said today that it has given to the United States Navy a proposed delay in the first flight and follow-on production of the Navy's new A-12 aircraft. Correspondingly, a major program review is under way to estimate the cost impact, and may result in a material charge against second quarter earnings.

The schedule delays permit completing the strong technical basis of the program before conclusion of final tooling and production of the development test aircraft. The A-12 industry team is confident that the basic operational requirements of the A-12 will be met.

Further detail is unavailable as the program is classified, but General Dynamics emphasizes that the A-12 will be a superb high technology aircraft for the Navy.

DETROIT (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Chrysler Motors Chairman Bennett Bidwell has confirmed that he plans to retire Jan. 1 at age 63 for personal reasons, according to an article in the June 11 issue of Automotive News.

Bidwell told Automotive News in an interview that health problems are not forcing his departure. But he acknowledged that he seeks a slower pace to improve his health. Bidwell also told the publication he wants time for family and personal pursuits.

Bidwell's retirement confirmation follows by a week the sudden departure of Chrysler Corp. Vice Chairman Gerald Greenwald, who resigned May 30 to lead an airline union buyout of UAL Corp., parent of United Airlines. Asked if his decision to retire Jan. 1 is irreversible, Bidwell said, "Nothing is irreversible, but it is my plan to retire," the trade paper reports.

Bidwell told Automotive News that in the fall of 1989 he negotiated a salary and workload reduction with the Chrysler Corp. board of directors to become effective Jan. 1, 1990. But efforts to work part time this year have failed because of the intensity of business demands, he said.

The part-time arrangement was a compromise reached with the board and Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca after Bidwell asked to retire Jan. 1, 1990. Bidwell subsequently asked to retire July 1, 1990, and the Jan. 1, 1991, date was established.

SPOKANE, WA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Pegasus Gold Inc. (AMEX, Toronto: PGU) today announced the purchase of the Black Pine Gold property in Cassia County, Idaho, from Noranda Exploration Inc. The purchase price was $6.5 million of which $4.5 million is in cash and the remainder in Pegasus common stock.

The fully permitted property is currently in an advanced development stage. The mineable reserve of 6.0 million tons grading 0.049 ounces of gold per ton has substantial upside potential. Metallurgical work carried out by both Lakefield and Kappes, Cassiday has indicated heap-leach recoveries of greater than 70 percent.

The Black Pine property consists of approximately 10,500 acres. Geologically, the property is a sediment hosted Carlin-type gold deposit. Pegasus has agreed to spend $250,000 per year during the next two years in exploring the potential of the area. Pegasus has also agreed that Noranda will have a one-time option to back into the property after 500,000 ounces have been recovered by Pegasus. Noranda may elect to acquire a 49 percent non-operating participating interest by paying $4 million and the capital costs necessary to maintain the annual level of gold production.

John M. Willson, president and chief executive officer of Pegasus, commented, "We are very pleased with this acquisition because of its fit to our strategies as to location, type of property and stage of development. We are paying approximately $22 per ounce of mineable reserves which is very favorable compared to industry averages. We anticipate it to be in production by mid-1991 at an annual level of 50,000 ounces per year."

Pegasus Gold Inc. is a major North American gold producer that currently produces over 340,000 ounces of gold annually from six mines in the western United States. The company also produces significant quantities of silver, lead and zinc. Pegasus Gold common shares are traded on the American Stock Exchange and the Toronto Stock Exchange under the symbol PGU. Options on the company's common shares are traded on the Chicago Board Options Exchange and the Montreal Stock Exchange.

SPOKANE, WA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Pegasus Gold Inc. (AMEX, Toronto: PGU) announced that Michael L. Clark was elected to the position of executive vice presidnet and chief operating officer of the company following its Annual General Meeting in Vancouver, British Columbia, last Friday.

Clark has served the company as its vice president Operations since joining Pegasus in 1986. During that period he has been responsible for the successful start-up and operation of four new mines: Florida Canyon, Relief Canyon, Montana Tunnels mines, and the development and operation of the Beal Mountain mine. He was also responsible for the effective transfer of the Basin Creek mine into Pegasus' operations.

In addition, Clark is responsible for Pegasus' four development projects. These include the recently announced 100 percent-owned Black Pine Property in Idaho, the sulfide project at Pegasus' oldest mine, Zortman/Landusky, the Ortiz joint venture with LAC Minerals in New Mexico, and the Quartz Mountain joint venture with Quartz Mountain Gold in Oregon.

Clark's outstanding leadership has ensured that Pegasus' operations have come to represent a world standard for open-pit, heap-leaching operations, confirmed by its below-average cash cost per ounce relative to the North American average.

EL SEGUNDO, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - INFONET announced today that it is extending its leading international value-added network to Ireland. A new INFONET communications facility in Dublin will be fully operational in August. The Irish business community will then have direct access to the INFONET network for world-wide data, E-mail, store and forward, fax and telex transmissions.

"Multinational companies in Ireland will be able to reach their international locations and business partners in more than 100 companies via the INFONET network," explained Michael J. Timmins, INFONET's vice president for Europe, Africa and the Middle East.

An interconnect is being established between the INFONET global network and the PostNET public data network in Ireland as well. Once completed, PostNET subscribers will have direct local access to the INFONET network from all of the major business centers in Ireland.

PostNET is operated by PostGEM, which recently signed an agreement to provide local telecommunications service and support for INFONET customers in Ireland. A subsidiary of An Post headquartered in Dublin, PostGEM is Ireland's leading national provider of electronic data interchange (EDI) and messaging services.

PostGEM will connect customers to INFONET's network and NOTICE 400 global messaging service and install NOTICE 400 PC E-mail software at their sites. "We will hold on-site education and training classes and provide ongoing service and support, complete with a telephone hot line," said PostGEM Director David O'Meara.

PostGEM will also design, install and maintain private and hybrid networks with integrated voice, data and image capabilities for INFONET's Enterprise-Defined Network Services clients in Ireland. "All told, PostGEM's excellent, long-standing track record of support will allow us to greatly expand the world-class communications services we offer the Irish business community," said Timmins.

Established in 1970, INFONET is the leading standards-based international value-added network services company. It provides communication and computer services and directly supports those services throughout the world. The company is jointly owned by MCI and 10 major telecommunication administrations in Europe and the Asia-Pacific.

TORRANCE, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - The 1990 Lexus LS 400 has set a new standard of excellence, according to a study conducted for Car and Driver magazine.

The "Car and Driver New Car Buyers Study" surveyed about 600 buyers each for 17 different luxury cars in 10 separate areas regarding satisfaction with their purchase. The LS 400 topped six categories, including overall customer satisfaction, and tied for first in two others. The survey was conducted by Market Probe International, Inc., an independent research company.

"The 9.7 overall average (on a scale of 1-10) is the highest ever recorded since we started doing studies back in the mid-'70s," said Donald M. Hufford, vice president and publisher of Car and Driver. "The LS 400 also set new all-time highs for workmanship (9.8) and value (9.4) ratings."

The LS 400 scored near-perfect 9.9 ratings in door fit and hood fit. Other scores included paint job (9.7), absence of wind noise (9.6), trunk/tailgate fit (9.8), absence of squeaks/rattles (9.7), and mileage compared to EPA estimate (8.5).

Among the other models included in the survey were the Mercedes-Benz 300E, Acura Legend, Jaguar XJ6, BMW 535i, Lincoln Continental and Town Car, Cadillac Sedan de Ville and the Chrysler New Yorker.

LAGUNA HILLS, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Advantage Life Products Inc. (NASDAQ: ADVT) today introduced Smokers Choice(TM), a proprietary over-the-counter smokers gum and lozenge product targeted to the nation's 53 million increasingly restricted smokers.

Smokers Choice will be marketed and distributed by Smoking Alternative Products Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Advantage Life Products Inc. Smokers Choice is positioned, packaged and designed to be merchandised with tobacco products and will begin national roll-out in November 1990.

"Through extensive smoker and tobacco distributor focus group research, our company has determined that a potential market, valued in excess of $250 million per year, exists for products providing smokers a temporary nicotine-free, non-addictive choice when they want to smoke but can't," said Charles Sleichter, president and chief executive officer of Advantage Life Products. "Smokers Choice utilizes a natural nicotine analog to help curb the craving to smoke brought on by the increasing restrictions where and when a smoker can't light up," he added.

Sleichter noted that the long term market for such products could be far more than $250 million annually. "Our current estimates on the potential market size for this type of product represent 1 percent of yearly cigarette sales. As restrictions on smoking increase, the market should enlarge," he said.

Advantage will market the Smokers Choice product line through its existing sales and distribution network, supplemented by a nationwide network of candy and tobacco distributors. Smokers Choice, which is packaged in an elegant, European-style cigarette sized-box, will be sold alongside cigarettes, and will be available as a gum and lozenge. A previously announced $5 million off-balance sheet national ad and PR budget has been established.

Don Danks, Advantage senior vice president and co-founder, added that "retailer and distributor focus groups enthusiastically supported the Smokers Choice concept. Smokers Choice will help offset declining tobacco sales as well as offer significantly higher margins than cigarettes," he explained. He added that "the initial suggested retail price would be $1.99 per unit, competitively priced with cigarettes, and that focus group research has indicated pricing in line with consumer, distributor and retailer expectations."

In addition to Smokers Choice, Advantage Life Products markets the retail CigArrest Stop Smoking product line which holds an 80 percent share of over-the-counter smoking cessation market.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - BBN Advanced Computers Inc.,

announced today that it has signed an agreement under which ARGO Graphics Corporation will be a distributor for the BBN TC2000 massively parallel computer system in Japan.

ARGO Graphics, based in Tokyo, markets a select portfolio of high technology products to the Japanese marketplace. Since its inception in 1985, ARGO has grown to become a profitable mulitmillion dollar company.

ARGO's customers include Sumitomo Metals, Sony, Nikon, Canon, JVC, Matsushita Electronics, Honda, Yamaha and Nissan. ARGO was recently honored by the United States Department of Commerce as a leading exporter of U.S.-made high technology equipment to Japan.

BBN Advanced Computers currently has BBN TC2000 systems installed in two major electronics manufacturers in Japan. About the BBN TC2000 Computer

The BBN TC2000 system's MIMD architecture is uniquely suited to applications that can be parallelized for execution on a large number of closely coupled processors in a shared-memory environment. The system's scalable performance allows a dramatic increase in total throughput to an architectural limit of 504 processors, 10,000 peak MFLOPS, 8,604 MBytes of memory and 2,520 MBytes/second of I/O bandwidth. Developers can group multiple processors into functional clusters, applying processing power simultaneously to both program development and application execution.

BBN's nX implementation of UNIX 4.3 BSD is complemented by a unique set of advanced software development tools created by BBN. These tools enable programmers to interactively debug parallel software, easily setting and examining variables across multiple processors, as well as to conduct performance analysis tasks.

Unlike other massively parallel systems, the TC2000 computer automatically balances the computing load across the system, without the necessity of writing configuration-specific code. The BBN TC2000 parallel processing system also conforms to industry standards, including POSIX, the X Window System, and NFS.

BBN Advanced Computers Inc. develops and markets high-performance multiprocessing computer systems for both supercomputing and realtime applications. BBN has installed more than 200 parallel computing systems worldwide at major aerospace, industrial, government and university sites.

Headquartered in Cambridge, Mass., BBN Advanced Computers is a wholly owned subsidiary of Bolt Beranek and Newman Inc. (NYSE: BBN). For its fiscal year ended June 30, 1989, BBN had sales of $292 million.

DAYTON, OH (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Huffy Corporation (NYSE: HUF) today announced the successful outcome of litigation with respect to the U.S. Customs Service collection of excess duties on bicycle tire and tube combinations imported into the United States. This litigation includes bicycle tires and tubes imported from 1982 to the early part of 1990.

The company expects the duty refund, after consideration of legal fees and taxes, to be approximately $700,000, or $.07 per fully diluted share. This amount will be significantly offset by an increase in the company's reserve for bad debts. The reserve increase is reflective of the negative financial news reported in recent months by several of the nation's more significant retailers. It is expected that the net of these two transactions will have a favorable impact on operating results during the second quarter of about $.03 per fully diluted share.

In addition, Huffy announced that on June 8, 1990, the Huffy Bicycle Company and the United Steel Workers of America, Local 5369, reached agreement on the terms of a new three-year labor contract.

Huffy is a major manufacturer of bicycles, juvenile and basketball products, and a nationwide supplier of assembly and inventory services to retailers.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Standley H. Hoch, chairman, president and chief executive officer of General Public Utilities (NYSE: GPU) announced today that Michael B. Roche will be the director for the transmission line project previously announced by GPU and DQE Inc. (NYSE: DQE) of Pittsburgh.

Roche, who has an extensive environmental background, will be elected a vice president of GPU Service Corp. Currently, he is vice president and director of GPU's Three Mile Island (TMI) Unit 2. He has been responsible for the technologically challenging defueling of the damaged nuclear plant. His new assignment begins on July 1, 1990.

Hoch said that Dr. Robert L. Long, vice president and director of corporate services for GPU Nuclear, will assume Roche's responsibility for the final phases of the TMI-2 clean up.

Dr. Long has more than 28 years of nuclear experience. He was named to his current position in 1989 after having served more than five years as the vice president with responsibility for nuclear quality assurance and training. Before joining GPU, he was a professor and chairman of the Chemical Nuclear Engineering Department at the University of New Mexico.

Dr. Long holds a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Bucknell University. He received his master's and Ph.D. degrees in nuclear engineering from Purdue University.

In April, GPU and DQE Inc. announced their agreement to build a 200- mile, 500,000-volt transmission line with the capability of transferring 1,500 megawatts of power. The agreement also includes DQE's sale to GPU of 500 megawatts of electricity. The line will run from DQE's Phillips Station northwest of Pittsburgh to TMI, near Harrisburg, Pa. It is expected to be in service in 1996 at an estimated cost of $480 million.

Roche will be putting together a project team from across the two utility systems.

An electric utility holding company, GPU's three operating subsidiaries, Jersey Central Power & Light, Pennsylvania Electric and Metropolitan Edison, provide about 39 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity to more than 1.8 million customers in a service territory encompassing about half the land area of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. GPU has two service subsidiaries, GPU Service, which provides integrated system plans and services, and GPU Nuclear, which operates the subsidiaries' nuclear plants.

STAMFORD, CT (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - The commonwealth of Virginia has introduced a new program to provide cost-effective school bus financing for municipalities, which will streamline the financing approval process and expedite the procurement of vehicles.

The Department of Education named Chrysler Capital Public Finance Corporation as the official lessor in the program. Chrysler Capital Public Finance, based in Kansas City, Mo., was the low bidder in a competitive bid for the contract.

The program is expected to alleviate the burden of paperwork and the time-consuming search for financing, which should translate into cost savings for municipalities that participate.

The program offers municipalities the opportunity to finance school buses under terms that have been negotiated on behalf of all participants, and many municipalities have pre-approved credit with Chrysler Capital Public Finance. The Department of Education will provide the necessary documents and a contract form that has been approved by the commonwealth and Chrysler Capital Public Finance. In the past, each municipality was responsible for selecting its own financing source, negotiating its own transactions and developing its own documentation.

"This innovative financing structure will benefit many municipalities in Virginia," said Gary Simmons, senior vice president and national sales manager of Chrysler Capital Public Finance. "In teaming up with the state we are providing a service that could save municipalities time and money."

Forty-nine municipalities have expressed an interest in the program, and Chrysler Capital Public Finance has committed to fund $24 million for 763 school buses in these localities.

Dennis M. McDermott, Southeast regional manager, has been working closely with the commonwealth of Virginia to structure this school bus financing. "We hope to see other municipalities take advantage of the program," he said. "This is a good opportunity for everyone involved, and we think other states might follow Virginia's lead." Chrysler Capital Public Finance is contracted with the commonwealth of Virginia through 1991.

LANSING, MI (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Oldsmobile Division of General Motors has announced a $1,000 consumer rebate on Silhouette multi-purpose minivan beginning June 9 and continuing through Aug. 2 under the current "New Generation Sell-A-Bration III" program. Current consumer rebates of $2,500 for 1990 Toronado models and $1,000 on Cutlass Ciera models also continue through Aug. 2.

In lieu of these consumer rebates on Silhouettes, Toronados and Cutlass Cieras, buyers may take advantage of a special 7.9-percent GMAC finance rate for contracts up to 48 months and 10.9 percent for 49- through 60-month contracts. Oldsmobile also is continuing to provide dealers cash back on most of its other car lines.

"The sales success that we have experienced with the Silhouette is further enhanced by offering the consumer increased value in the form of various purchase options," said David E. Lahti, general sales and service manger for Oldsmobile. "Our Silhouette provides space for passengers and cargo and functional fun in a contemporary styled multi- purpose minivan."

Like all other 1990 Oldsmobiles, Silhouettes, Cutlass Cieras and Toronados are covered under the exclusive Oldsmobile Edge Customer Satisfaction program that allows buyers who are not completely satisfied with their vehicle to return it within 30 days or 1,500 miles for full credit toward the purchase of another Oldsmobile.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Isramco, Inc. (NASDAQ: ISRL) reported today earnings of $453,845 or 5 cents a share on revenues of $1,604,994 for fiscal 1990, ended March 31, compared to a loss of $1,560,224 or 21 cents a share on revenues of $690,977 in fiscal 1989. There were 8,681,639 weighted average shares outstanding at the end of fiscal 1990 and 7,437,391 (weighted) the year before.

In fiscal 1989 expenses were approximately $1.3 million, representing a writedown of oil and gas properties, whereas in 1990 no such writedown occurred. General and administrative expenses for 1990 increased approximately 31 percent ($1,102,380 in 1990 vs. $836,020 in 1989), due to increased activities as operator of the Negev Venture 2.

In reporting the results, Dr. Joseph Elmaleh, chairman, said, "Production tests are now being conducted at the 17,400 foot level of the Yam 2, where light oil (condensate) and gas were present. In addition the partners will decide whether to test the 17,100-foot level of the Yam 2, where natural gas was found, and after that, production tests will be conducted at the 12,900-foot level where natural gas was encountered. If the results indicate a commercial discovery, Isramco's portion of the proven reserves in the Yam structure should significantly increase the asset value of its oil and gas properties."

DANBURY, CT (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Acquisition of the SELEXOL gas treating business from the Chemical Process Products group of Norton Company (NYSE: NRT), Worcester, Mass., was announced today by Union Carbide Chemicals and Plastics Company Inc. (UCC&P).

SELEXOL solvent is used to remove contaminants such as hydrogen sulfide and carbon dioxide from natural gas, refinery gases and synthesis gas streams. It is also one of the major processes used for landfill gas treating.

Eugene J. Boros, vice president and general manager of UCC&P's Specialty Chemicals Division, said that SELEXOL, which is a physical solvent, will be integrated with UCC&P's UCARSOL chemical solvent gas treating business.

"Union Carbide has been in the forefront of gas treating technology for over 60 years," he explained. "UCARSOL chemical solvents are used worldwide to selectively remove contaminants such as carbon dioxide, hydrogen sulfide and mercaptans from a variety of natural and synthetic gas systems."

Dr. Boros said: "This acquisition is an example of our emphasis on finding high growth, high value business and technology opportunities that build on UCC&P's worldwide leadership position in specific fields."

Martin F. Cohen, Carbide's business manager for gas treating services and products, said that under the agreement UCC&P obtains the SELEXOL trademark and rights to the technology and patents. "We are now able to supply our customers with a complete line of chemical and physical high performance gas treating solvents, and we have the ability to meet a broad range of customer operating requirements," he said.

UCC&P, a wholly owned subsidiary of Union Carbide Corporation (NYSE: UK), is a leading, diversified chemical company manufacturing a wide range of basic and specialized chemicals and plastics sold throughout the world.

PRINCETON, NJ (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Benefitting from an aggressive new products focus and profitable entry into the rapidly growing computer workstation market, Dataram Corp. (AMEX: DTM) considerably improved revenues, net earnings and earnings per share for both the fourth quarter and full year of fiscal 1990.

For the fiscal year ended April 30, 1990, the developer, manufacturer and marketer of computer memory and peripheral products reported revenues of $20.2 million compared to the $14.4 million recorded in fiscal 1989. Net earnings were $2,522,000 or $1.41 per share, vs. $1,537,000 or $.80 per share, achieved in the previous fiscal year.

For the fourth quarter ended April 30, 1990, revenues reached a record high of $6.6 million compared to the $4 million recorded in the year-earlier period. Net earnings were $796,000 or $.64 per share, vs. $493,000 or $.26 per share in last year's fourth quarter.

Fourth quarter fiscal 1990 net earnings per share were based on 1.2 million shares outstanding compared to 1.9 million shares outstanding for the fiscal 1989 fourth quarter, because on Feb. 1, 1990, the company purchased and retired 739,347 shares.

Robert V. Tarantino, president and chief executive officer, said the record fourth quarter revenues and the improved earnings largely reflected the widespread and increasing customer acceptance of Dataram's memory-enhancing workstation products.

"Our products upgrade the performance of computer workstations produced by such major manufacturers as Digital Equipment Corporation (DEC), Hewlett-Packard (HP) and SUN Microsystems," Tarantino said. "We expanded our engineering and sales capabilities during the past year to quickly develop, manufacture and sell many new workstation offerings. We also added eight new sales offices in strategic locations throughout the country to better serve our expanding customer base."

Tarantino said the company continues to successfully serve the minicomputer memory market, particularly users of DEC equipment. He cited the introduction of several DEC-compatible minicomputer memory products during fiscal 1990 which have been well received in the marketplace.

RALEIGH, NC (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Carolina Power & Light Co.'s (NYSE: CPL) Brunswick plant near Southport will begin operation again tonight after a three-week outage. Plant management had removed the plant's two units from service to conduct additional training for plant operators after a number of operators had not performed successfully on one of the four tests of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's operator requalification exam.

"We congratulate the operators for their good performance on the tests conducted this weekend, and we appreciate the diligent commitment of operators and trainers during the past few weeks," said Russ Starkey, Brunswick Nuclear Project Vice President.

"I am proud of the commitment and performance of our employees, and in particular the operators and training staff, in addressing the training concerns and enabling us to return the unit to service," said Sherwood Smith, CP&L's Chairman and President.

During the plant outage, Starkey said necessary maintenance and equipment testing had been performed which could only be done while the Brunswick units were not operating. "This should reduce the work scope and length of futrue outages," he said.

BEAVERTON, OR (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - FPS Computing (NYSE: FLP) today announced that it has executed a letter of intent with an institutional investor for a $14.5 million investment in the form of a new series of convertible preferred stock. The investor will purchase approximately 9.67 million shares of the preferred stock, priced at $1.50 per share, which would be convertible at the investor's option into the common stock of the company on a share-for-share basis. There are currently slightly more than 9.94 million shares of common stock issued and outstanding. The transaction is subject to negotiation and execution of definitive agreements on terms acceptable to both parties.

"Our Model 500EA UNIX supercomputer product line has received growing acceptance by engineers and scientists around the world," said Howard Thrailkill, FPS Computing president and chief executive officer. "This investment recognizes the potential of this product line and its future extensions." The company stated that proceeds from the investment will be used to provide working capital, to fund continued product development, and to expand sales and marketing activities. A portion of the financing will be used to reduce the company's long- and short-term debt and debt servicing expenses.

FPS Computing has one of the largest installed bases of high performance computing equipment in the industry. LOUISVILLE, KY (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Brown-Forman Corporation (AMEX: BF.A BF.B) today reported that net income for the 1990 fiscal year ended April 30th, before nonrecurring items, rose 9 pct. to $139.6 million or $4.97 per share, compared to $127.6 million or $4.54 per share the previous year. Including nonrecurring items, reported fiscal 1990 net income was $92.5 million, or $3.29 per share compared to $144.5 million, or $5.15 per share in the prior year.

The largest of the nonrecurring items was a charge of $59.9 million for a write-off of the remaining intangible assets of California Cooler. The Company also adopted FASB Statement No. 96 which resulted in the reduction of Brown-Forman's deferred tax liability and increased earnings by $11.5 million. In fiscal 1989, two nonrecurring items were also reported which increased net income in that year by $16.9 million.

Operating income for Brown-Forman's wine and spirits segment improved 14 pct. to a record $204.5 million in fiscal 1990. The improvement in segment profits was largely due to strong worldwide growth of the Company's leading spirit brands -- principally Jack Daniel's, Southern Comfort and Early Times. During fiscal 1990, Brown-Forman's core beverage brands outperformed the domestic market and captured market share within their respective categories. Overseas, these brands achieved record sales levels in virtually every market.

Operating income for the Company's consumer durables segment, comprised of china, crystal, and leather products marketed by Lenox and Hartmann, declined 17 pct. to $39.4 million. The Lenox company-owned retail and direct response marketing businesses realized greater sales and operating profits during the year, continuing to indicate the positive response of consumers to Lenox products in these channels of distribution. However, this strong performance was more than offset by weaker sales both within the Lenox traditional department store channel of distribution and at Hartmann Luggage.

Brown-Forman Corporation is a diversified producer and marketer of fine quality consumer products, including Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey, Canadian Mist, Southern Comfort, Korbel California Champagnes, Lenox China and Crystal, and Hartmann Luggage.

BRANCHBURG, N.J. (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Air & Water Technologies Corporation (AMEX: AWT) reported earnings per share of 9 cents for the second quarter ended April 30, 1990 compared to a 15 cents per share loss for the comparable period of 1989. Operating income for the second quarter was up 27 percent over the prior year at $12.6 million. For the comparable six month period, operating income of $21.5 million represents a 31 percent increase over 1989.

Gross sales for the second quarter were $148 million which is approximately equal to the second quarter of 1989. Improved earnings on the comparable level of sales are due to changes in the mix of business and improved operating income margins in each business segment. Increased sales volumes experienced in the air pollution control and residuals management segments were offset by lower pass through sales at the Metcalf & Eddy subsidiary. Metcalf & Eddy net revenues, however, which represent work performed by the company, were higher in the second quarter of 1990 compared to 1989.

Improved operating income results were accomplished in all three of the company's business units, Metcalf & Eddy Companies Inc., Research-Cottrell and the Residuals Management Group. Metcalf & Eddy Companies, Inc., an 83 percent owned subsidiary, showed an operating income increase of 13 percent for the quarter during which the company increased significantly its marketing efforts and project development costs. Research-Cottrell, the company's air pollution control group, improved 27 percent over the comparable 1989 period despite significant ongoing spending in research, internal development activities and marketing efforts as the group positions itself for the acid rain market. Operating income in the Residuals Management Group more than doubled in the second quarter of 1990 when compared to 1989 due to higher volume.

The loss per share of 1 cent for the first six months of 1990 is an improvement over 1989's loss per share of 55 cents. Included in the loss per share for both 1990 and 1989 are 17 cents and 23 cents respectively, of non-cash charges related to goodwill amortization.

Air & Water Technologies Corporation, through its operating units, Research-Cottrell, Inc., Metcalf & Eddy Companies Inc. (NASDAQ: METC), and Residuals Management Group, provides a broad range of environmental services in the areas of air pollution control, water resource management, and waste by-product disposal and reuse.

DALLAS (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Edisto Resources Corporation (AMEX: EDS) announced today it had signed a letter of intent to acquire Tulsa-based ESCO Energy, Inc. The letter of intent contemplates that all of the outstanding common stock of ESCO will be acquired by Edisto for an aggregate of approximately $9.2 million in cash and approximately 1.324 million shares of Edisto common stock.

Consummation of the transaction is subject to certain conditions, including execution of a definitive agreement (which is expected to be executed within the next few days) and receipt of any requisite government and stockholder approvals.

ESCO Energy, Inc. is a privately held integrated energy company engaged in independent gas marketing, oil and gas exploration and production, property acquisitions and pipeline transportation. Its activities are carried out through three subsidiary companies: Vesta Energy Company, Omega Pipeline Company and ESCO Exploration, Inc.

James R. McNab, Jr., chairman of the board of Edisto, stated: "We expect this acquisition will strengthen Edisto's position in the natural gas market by providing added value past the wellhead for our rapidly expanding gas delivery capacity. ESCO's pipeline projects and gas marketing have opened up major industrial markets in the Midwest where the market share for natural gas should expand significantly in the 1990s."

Edisto Resources Corporation is a Dallas-based, Delaware corporation incorporated in 1970. Edisto's consolidated activities include the production of oil and gas, the exploration for, and development of, oil and gas reserves and the acquisition of oil and gas properties.

BRANCHBURG, NJ (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Metcalf & Eddy Companies Inc. (NASDAQ: METC) reported earnings today of 34 cents per share for the second quarter of 1990 compared to 31 cents per share for the second quarter of 1989. This brings earnings for the first six months of 1990 to 63 cents per share, a 24 percent increase over the comparable period of 1989.

Gross revenues were slightly lower than the comparable period in 1989 due to lower direct project expenses that are passed through to the company's clients. Net revenues, which represent work the company performs directly of $49 million were 18 percent higher than the comaparable second quarter of 1989. General and administrative expenses increased as a percent of net revenues from 34 percent for the second quarter of 1989 to 38 percent in the second quarter of 1990, reflecting increased labor-related costs and increased marketing, sales and project development expenditures. Operating and net income for the second quarter increased by 13 percent and 6 percent, respectively over the comparable period in 1989.

Eckardt C. Beck, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Metcalf & Eddy Companies pointed to the results as "positive given general economic conditions. While the growth rates are not as dramatic as prior quarters, they are certainly favorable. Given the slowdown in the economy and competitive conditions, we are looking at slower rates of growth in the municipal market in the nearterm, while the industrial market remains strong. Longer-term, we continue to be very enthusiastic about the markets, our strategy and our future."

Metcalf & Eddy Companies, Inc., an Air & Water Technologies company, provides a comprehensive range of environmental treatment services to governmental, commercial and industrial clients directed principally at the protection of the integrity of water resources. Air & Water Technologies provides comprehensive solutions to air and water environmental issues and is traded on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol AWT.

KANSAS CITY, MO (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - SAZTEC International, Inc. (NASDAQ: SAZZ), a world leader in information technology, and Imaginetix, a company specializing in research and development of image based technology, have signed a joint venture agreement to develop a product family for the data entry market called MODE.

MODE, which stands for Mixed Object Data Entry, is an image based data entry system which encompasses raw document image capture, Heads Up data entry from images and Intelligent Character Recognition (ICR) from document images.

According to Gary Abernathy, vice chairman of SAZTEC, MODE will give a significant advantage when used in conjunction with Information Conversion Express (ICE)(SM) -- SAZTEC's new technology that utilizes high-speed image communication capabilities.

"A new concept in data based management of hypertex is needed. The agreement with Imaginetix to develop MODE will allow this to become a reality," said Abernathy. "Acting as a natural adjunct to ICE, MODE will give one more advantage to SAZTEC and our customers. It will not only increase the speed and accuracy of keying information by 25 percent, but it will also greatly reduce the amount of re-keying necessary for a job in general."

Features which distinguish the MODE concept from other information technologies are the inexpensive starter configurations which can be expanded into systems with as many as 30 workstations, full optical archiving facility and split screen capability; optional mixed erasable optical and WORM drives; Heads Up volume entry keyboarding from full documents, rejection of specific field images, and omnifront ICR options with learning mode and document reject threshholding on poor recognition sampling.

"Combining Imaginetix' research and product development capabilities with SAZTEC's expertise in the area of information conversion, we plan to provide a capability in the next year that will open new doors in the area of information technology," said Abernathy.

SAZTEC, an international leader in the use of computer technology, provides comprehensive services to convert information for use on computer systems.

Imaginetix, located in Pacific Grove, Calif., specializes in research and development of image-based technology, and is formed by a number of companies with mutual interests in the continued research, product development and exploitation of hypermedia object-oriented database technology.

ST. THOMAS, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Following the announcement made by the United States Virgin Islands Government to work towards "saving the planet" and emphasizing conservation efforts, Coral World Marine Park and Underwater Observatory in St. Thomas has pledged to increase its numerous efforts to save the marine environment.

Coral World has undertaken a number of projects and has started research programs and conservation awareness programs that have made it the Caribbean's leader in conservation efforts.

Its Reef Protection Program, designed to help clean up the formations around St. Thomas, is Coral World's latest endeavor. The program is twofold: a series of dives to collect trash around the reefs will be followed by a plan where dive shops have the opportunity to adopt reefs and be responsible for maintaining them.

Seventy-five pounds of debris were collected in the first dive. Results of all the dives will be registered with the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, and the information will be used for future clean-ups.

"Coral World tries to generate public awareness of pollution in the ocean " said Sandy Dunn, manager of sales and marketing for the facility. "Debris in the water is even more dangerous than on land because it kills the ocean's inhabitants," she said.

Coral World is currently working with the Virgin Islands Planning and Natural Resources Department to lobby for the protection of shallow reefs and seagrass beds. A video documentary depicting the problems has recently premiered at the marine park.

Researchers at Coral World are presently experimenting with growing phytoplankton and zooplankton, organisms that feed and nourish coral reefs. They are also studying rare fish, including the Goatee Blenny (Coral World has two of the 21 ever held in captivity).

Coral World Marine Park & Underwater Observatory in St. Thomas is part of Coral World International with other parks in Eilat, Israel and Nassau, Bahamas.

ATLANTA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Home Federal Savings Bank of Atlanta and Anchor Savings Bank FSB (NASDAQ: ABKR) today announced an agreement whereby Home Federal will acquire Anchor's Northwest branch on the corner of Northside Parkway and West Paces Ferry Road in Atlanta, subject to approval by the Office of Thrift Supervision.

The application calls for Home Federal to buy the two-story office building in which the Anchor branch is located and to accept all qualified branch assets and liabilities. The acquisition price was not disclosed.

"We are extremely pleased with the prospects of strengthening our market position in the Northside area, which we think is one of the prime financial markets in Atlanta," said Robert F. Tomain, president of Home Federal. "It is a location we have been considering for quite some time and the availability of the Anchor branch makes this the right time to expand."

Home Federal's main office is at 79 West Paces Ferry Road in Buckhead, four miles from the Anchor Northside Parkway branch.

According to James M. Large Jr., chairman of Anchor Savings Bank FSB, "We are confident that our customers will continue to receive the same level of quality service. Naturally, all accounts will continue to be federally insured to $100,000." Large also stated that "the sale is consistent with Anchor's plan of strategic repositioning and capital enhancements."

The branch, which has approximately $29 million in deposits, opened in 1963 as Standard Federal Savings and Loan and was purchased by Anchor Savings Bank in 1983.

Home Federal has 11 branches in Cobb, Cherokee, DeKalb, Gwinnett and Fulton counties. The bank reported 1989 earnings of $3 million with a return on average assets of .93. The 61-year-old savings bank has had a record 57 consecutive quarters of profitability.

CHICAGO (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Morton International (NYSE: MII) today announced the opening of a new salt processing facility in Port Canaveral, Fla. Operations at the facility will include receiving, processing, packaging and warehousing salt produced at Morton's solar evaporation ponds on Great Inagua Island in the Bahamas.

"One of the keys to Morton's success as a salt producer is strategically locating their salt supplies near transportation systems," said William E. Johnston, president of Morton's salt group. "The Port Canaveral operation meets that criterion. Its location provides the opportunity to realize significant efficiencies in transportation and production, as well as a high degree of flexibility for better customer service."

The impact of this facility on the economy of Central Florida will be positive. Twenty-four full-time employees constitute the initial workforce, representing 18 new Florida jobs. Additionally, the facility will be used as a supply point for ocean shipment of food, water and other necessities for the more than 1,000 inhabitants of Great Inagua Island, where Morton maintains a salt facility. These supplies will amount to approximately $7 to $8 million per year, all purchased locally.

Morton's previous salt warehouse, located in Tampa, and its ship supply operation in Brunswick, Ga., will be closed. The six employees from the Tampa facility now work at the Port Canaveral operation.

Morton International is a Chicago-based manufacturer and marketer of specialty chemicals, inflatable restraint systems and salt.

ORLANDO, FL (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Holiday RV Superstores, Inc. (NASDAQ: RVEE) today reported record second quarter fiscal 1990 net earnings of $412,145 on revenues of $13,276,115 or 6 cents per share on 7,340,000 shares outstanding as compared to 1989 second quarter earnings of $380,635 on revenues of $13,701,324 or 5 cents per share on 7,140,000 shares outstanding. Holiday RV Superstores, Inc.'s second quarter ended April 30 1990.

W. Hardee McAlhaney, vice president and chief financial officer of Holiday RV Superstores, Inc. said that "As a result of a recent acquisition in Greenville, S.C. this past quarter, we accomplished the highest quarterly earnings in our corporate history. We are particulary proud of this fact in light of lower than expected first quarter earnings and the relatively flat market for recreational vehicles and marine products nationally. Additionally, all divisions of the company experienced improved gross profit margins." The company currently has under evaluation several additional dealership acquisition candidates.

Holiday RV Superstores, Inc. is the nation's only publicly traded recreational vehicle and marine products dealership that sells and services RVs and boats from major manufacturers. The company operates its dealership network in Florida, Georgia and South Carolina.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - CIGNA Corp. (NYSE: CG) today announced that one of its international property and casualty insurance subsidiaries, Brussels-based CIGNA Insurance Company of Europe S.A.-N.V. (CIGNA Europe), is among the first non-German insurance companies to be granted permission by East German authorities to open a representative office there.

According to CIGNA Europe Chairman H. Edward Hanway, the company expects to open an East Berlin office on July 2, the day the Inter- German Treaty becomes effective. The Inter-German Treaty is a broad pact that links the two German economies and effectively removes barriers for companies -- including insurers -- to operate in East Germany.

"This is an exciting development for CIGNA Europe," Hanway said. "We're committed to a business strategy in Eastern Europe that will enable us to mirror the marketing successes we've had in other parts of the world, including Western Europe, the Far East and Latin America. Our East Berlin representative office is a logical step in that direction."

According to Gerhard Hornig, senior vice president and country manager in West Germany, the East Berlin office will be headed by Hans- Dieter Krischer, who currently is in charge of CIGNA Europe's marine underwriting department in Cologne. Krischer will report to Norbert Lobe, branch manager of the company's Hamburg office.

"We expect substantial West German and European investment in East Germany " said Hornig, who added that CIGNA Europe plans to open a second East German office, in Leipzig, by next year. "Basically, we will follow our brokers and customers."

The opening of an East German office will be CIGNA's second major initiative in Central and Eastern Europe. In April, CIGNA Europe announced the opening of a liaison office in Vienna, headed by Vice President Finley Middleton, that primarily will be responsible for developing business opportunities in Eastern and Central Europe.

The CIGNA companies are leading providers of insurance, health care, employee benefits, pension and investment management, and related financial services, to businesses and individuals in some 70 countries worldwide.

SMITHFIELD, VA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Smithfield Foods, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: SFDS) today announced that net income in the fiscal year ended April 29, 1990 fell to $7,060,000, or 95 cents per share, from $9,814,000, or $1.20 per share, a year ago.

The company had net income of $2,833,000, or 39 cents per share, in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, compared to a loss of $73,000, or 1 cent per share, in the fourth quarter of the prior year.

The 1990 fourth quarter and full fiscal year net income included a non-recurring net gain of $1,140,000 (15 cents per share) from the settlement of litigation.

The 1989 fourth quarter and full fiscal year net income and net income per share figures were retroactively restated to reflect a change in accounting method of valuing certain inventories of the company from the last-in-first-out method to the first-in-first-out method.

The 1990 fourth quarter and full fiscal year net income per share figures were computed on 7.9 percent and 8.8 percent fewer average shares outstanding, respectively.

Dollar sales in fiscal 1990 rose to $853,401,000 from $774,790,000 a year ago. Dollar sales in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 were $225,108,000, up from $181,159,000 in the corresponding quarter of fiscal 1989. The increase in dollar sales in both the 1990 fourth quarter and full fiscal year were attributable to a combination of higher unit selling prices for the company's products due to higher raw material costs and to increased sales tonnage of processed meats.

Joseph W. Luter III, chairman, president and chief executive officer, said that the drop in earnings reflected severe pressure on fresh meat margins throughout the year which he attributed to excess slaughter capacity in the pork packing industry and smaller hog supplies.

Investment adviser commentary:

-- Bond markets worldwide sprung back to life in May after a dismal showing during the first four months of the year. Foreign bond markets climbed as the U.S. dollar declined relative to foreign currencies, and the U.S. market rallied on growing perceptions that the U.S. economy is weak and inflation is losing momentum. May's activity has convinced many participants that interest rates around the world may have peaked.

-- The U.S. government market performed well during May, bringing yields under 8.5 percent. The investment adviser's fairly bullish posture in this sector benefited the fund nicely during May. There were no calls written to limit the fund's upside potential.

-- The investment adviser maintains a fairly bullish outlook, believing inflation may have moderated for now and rates could head further downward.

-- Overseas, foreign government markets also rallied, spurred by declining interest rates in most major countries. The investment adviser has shifted some assets into Italy, Denmark and New Zealand to take advantage of higher nominal yields relative to U.S. dollar denominated securities.

-- The high yield market was solid and stable during May, with a number of traditional equity investors actively buying.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - MCI Communications Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MCIC) today announced a two-year, multimillion-dollar agreement with American National Can Company (ANC) for MCI to replace AT&T and become ANC's primary data communications carrier.

Under the terms of the agreement, MCI will provide the company with its Digital Private Line and Corporate Account Plus Service, allowing the Chicago-based firm to communicate data information and voice overflow to over 100 of its locations throughout the United States.

"MCI has demonstrated outstanding planning assistance and administrative support in its efforts to provide our firm with reliable data communications facilities," said Donald Brungard, American National Can Company's vice president of management information systems. "These cost-effective services will allow for high quality data communications between our many U.S. locations."

"ANC's selection of MCI as its primary provider of data communications further demonstrates our capabilities as the premier data communications provider in the industry," said Bert C. Roberts Jr., president and chief operating officer for MCI.

ANC is one of the world's largest packaging manufacturers and marketers, producing a wide range of metal, glass and plastics products.

MCI provides a full range of global telecommunications services to businesses, residences and governmental agencies. The company owns and operates the world's second-largest communications network, employing advanced fiber optics, digital microwave, satellite and digital switching technologies.

MONTREAL (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Sand Technology Systems International (NASDAQ: SNDCF) today reported a net income of $43,947, or slightly more than $0.009 per share on sales amounting to $7,371,901, for the fiscal third quarter ended April 30, 1990 as compared to a net loss of $158,338 or less than $0.033 per share, on revenues of $9,267,152 for the period ended April 30, 1989.

Revenues for the first nine months ended April 30, 1990 were $29,152,125 compared to $29,862,322 for the first nine months of fiscal 1989. For the fiscal 1990 third quarter Selling, General & Administration (SG&A) figures were $1,234,855 or 16.75 percent of sales, compared to $1,313,256 or 14.2 percent of sales in the third quarter of the last fiscal year. SG&A expenses were reduced as a result of ongoing cost reduction efforts, despite unusual costs for professional fees.

Net interest income for the quarter was $79,791 compared to a net interest expense of $22,758 for the same period last year. This reflects an increase in cash and reduced debt levels due to the elimination of external borrowings.

The corporation realized a loss from operations of $1,050,251 for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 as compared to a profit of $10,817 from operations for the third quarter of fiscal 1989. The operating loss is primarily attributable to a continued downturn in Sand USA's business, due to product supply problems and substantial inventory write downs. The secondary problem was related to a decrease in sales to HDS Canada, coupled with reserves against bad debt and inventory writedowns at the parent level. In Sand's fiscal third quarter there was a profit recorded in its affiliated HDS Canada of $1,027,227 compared to a net loss of $158,338 for the third quarter of fiscal 1989. This is the reason for the increased net profit in this quarter.

Sand Technology Systems International markets complete large-scale IBM compatible computer systems in Canada and computer printers and sophisticated information systems products in the U.S.A. To date Sand and its affiliates have installed equipment valued in excess of $350 million.

DANBURY, CT (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Grolier Incorporated today announced the formation of a new imprint, Grolier Press, within its Grolier Publishing Company. A non-fiction, adult trade book imprint, Grolier Press will focus on the relationships and issues facing families in the 1990s.

In making the announcement, Richard J. Casabonne, president of Grolier Publishing Company, stated, "Today's parents no longer have extended families to rely on for information; therefore, they look increasingly to books for guidance. Grolier Press will publish books that encompass aspects of family life at all ages and stages. They will lend support, encouragement, and advice to parents, as well as continually update them on the newest developments in child rearing, family life, and personal growth."

Judith L. Rothman has been named publisher of Grolier Press. Prior to joining Grolier, Rothman was editor in chief of Harper & Row's college division. She also held key executive positions at Random House; Holt, Rinehart & Winston, Inc.; Prentice Hall, and Appleton- Century-Crofts. Honored by the Women's National Book Association as one of the women who have made a difference in the world of book publishing, Rothman brings extensive knowledge and expertise to this position.

Grolier Publishing Company, a unit of the publishing group of Grolier, will now comprise Grolier Press, New York; Franklin Watts, Inc., New York; Franklin Watts, Ltd., London; Orchard Books, New York and London, and Grolier Educational Corporation, Danbury.

The publishing group of Grolier, headed by Robert F. Palmerton, group vice president-publishing, includes Grolier Publishing Company, New York and Danbury; Childrens Press, Chicago, and Scarecrow Press, Metuchen, N.J.

Grolier Incorporated, a subsidiary of Hachette S.A., is a leading worldwide publisher and marketer of encyclopedias, children's books, reference sets, educational materials, health information, and electronic publishing products.

Hachette is a Paris-based international publishing and communications company. The company is engaged in book publishing; magazine publishing; book, magazine, and newspaper distribution; radio broadcasting, theatrical film and television production, and outdoor advertising.

SOMERS, NY (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Pepsi-Cola Co. today announced a new commercial for Mountain Dew Sport starring athlete extraordinaire Bo Jackson.

The ad will debut today in spot rotation in Minneapolis, San Diego and Eau Claire, Wis., cities where the refreshing sports and exercise drink bottled by Pepsi-Cola Co. is in test market. An ad schedule is set to follow in Philadelphia, the fourth market in which "Sport" is in test.

"The connection between Bo Jackson and Mountain Dew Sport is a natural," said Mike Simpson, executive vice president of marketing and national sales. "Both Bo and Dew Sport are winners among consumers and stand out from the competition."

In the 30-second commercial titled "Gator," Jackson, who has achieved unparalleled feats by excelling in both professional baseball and football takes on a tough new competitor -- an alligator, a humorous reference to Mountain Dew Sport's competitor. Throughout the spot, former Heisman trophy winner Jackson, known as the "perfect athlete," outperforms the competition in a series of sports including football, track, swimming and basketball. The spot ends on a humorous note at a swimming pool when Jackson lines up on the diving blocks next to the alligator, thinks better of it, and opts out with a "See you later, alligator."

"Gator" was filmed on location at the University of Kansas' Lawrence Campus over the course of three days. Jackson's co-star, Morris the alligator, measures 10 feet long and weighs 650 pounds. Despite their heated competition, by the end of the shoot, Jackson and Morris were getting along like old friends with Jackson petting the alligator -- under the watchful eye of his five trainers.

Mountain Dew Sport, available in regular and diet version, combines the refreshing taste of Mountain Dew with a special formula that includes Vitamin C and electrolyte sources -- natural elements which are lost when the body perspires. In addition, regular Mountain Dew Sport has an optimal carbohydrate level to provide quick energy. Mountain Dew Sport is available in 12-ounce cans and 16- and 32-ounce bottles. Mountain Dew Sport was introduced in Eau Claire, in September 1989.

MT. PROSPECT, IL (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Zenith Data Systems (ZDS) today introduced an enhanced model of its MinisPort(A) notebook personal computer (PC) that features a fast 20-megabyte (MB) 2.5-inch hard disk drive, a new crystal bright screen and a faster processor. "We've made the MinisPort HD the thinnest notebook PC with a hard disk drive by eliminating all unnecessary size and weight," said ZDS President and Chief Executive Officer John P. Frank. "As a result, this system is ideal for even the most mobile computer user, and is powerful enough for both business and education applications."

The MinisPort HD features a 2.5-inch, 20MB hard disk drive developed by Connor Peripherals, San Jose, Calif. This hard disk is no larger than a deck of playing cards and offers quick data accesses rated at 23 milliseconds with 1:1 interleave. "This level of performance is typically found only on high-performance desktop systems," Frank said.

To minimize size and weight, the MinisPort HD features an external 3.5-inch floppy drive that runs off the system's power. "Since users rely primarily on the hard drive, we don't make you carry the added weight of an internal floppy drive," Frank said.

The 6-pound (with battery) MinisPort HD has a new crystal bright screen that displays black characters against a backlit bright white background. This new CGA screen can display eight shades -- from light grey to black -- and is brighter than the display of the other MinisPort models.

The MinisPort HD operates for about three hours using its easily removable nickel-cadmium (NiCad) battery pack, which recharges in less than 2.5 hours.

The system has 1MB of memory, of which 360 kilobytes can be allocated as an ultra-fast "silicon disk drive." Rupp Corp.'s FastLynx LX(A) (an easy-to-use, self-uploading data transfer program) and an abridged version of MS-DOS(A) 3.3 Plus is stored in the system's non- erasable read-only-memory. A complete copy of MS-DOS also is factory- installed on the hard disk. Also featured are standard I/O ports, including serial parallel, floppy disk drive and color monitor ports.

The MinisPort HD also features a 10-megahertz 80C88 microprocessor, which is switchable to 4.77 MHz, and a FastLynx LX cable.

The suggested retail price for the MinisPort Model 20 is $2,799. ZDS has begun shipping the MinisPort HD, which measures 12.4 inches wide by 9.8 inches deep by 1.3 inches deep.

ZDS, a Groupe Bull company, is a leading manufacturer and marketer of portable and desktop microcomputers and monitors for single- and multi-user applications. With headquarters in Mount Prospect, Ill., and principal final assembly operations in St. Joseph, Mich., ZDS has manufacturing and sales facilities in more than 20 countries.

SUNNYVALE, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - New bus interface logic families are under development by both Philips Components-Signetics and Texas Instruments.

In an alternate source agreement announced today, both companies will offer these families with matching specifications, performance and features. Each company's family will be fabricated using its own proprietary advanced BiCMOS process technology.

Designated "ABT" for advanced BiCMOS TTL interface logic, the product families will consist initially of 39 bus interface logic functions including 8, 9, and 10-bit buffers, transceivers, latches, flip-flops and latched transceivers. The families are designed to complement the extensive bipolar and CMOS logic product offerings of both companies.

The new products will be optimized for high-performance bus interface applications that require a combination of high speed, high- output current, and low-power consumption. Typical applications are found in high-speed computing, data and voice communications and a variety of complex digital systems based on advanced microprocessor technology.

"Bus interface logic functions are growing in volume and importance," said Frank Schneider, Philips Components-Signetics vice president of standard products.

"New systems, with their higher processor speed and cache memory place a challenge on chip suppliers to deal with bus speed as well as system problems such as ground bounce and radio frequency interference (RFI). Philips Components-Signetics and TI together pioneered patented methods to minimize these problems. This agreement ensures that there will be a reliable source for the type of logic devices that will be critical to the next generation of high- performance systems.

"As leaders in bus interface logic and BiCMOS technology, Philips Components-Signetics and TI are well positioned to support this market growth with their ABT product families."

"We are confident that the performance and features of the TI and Philips Components-Signetics ABT families will make them the bus interface solutions of choice for new system designs," continued Dwain Chaffin, TI Semiconductor Group vice president and manager of general purpose logic products. "Moreover, our two companies have a proven track record together. Our four-year old advanced CMOS logic (ACL) agreement sets a successful precedent for this alternate source agreement because we have already established a mutual understanding of each other's test methodologies, process characterization techniques and product specification procedures. This ongoing relationship underscores our ability to work together in meeting our customers' future needs."

Philips Components-Signetics is currently sampling its first three ABT logic devices: the 74ABT244 octal buffer line driver, the 74ABT245 octal transceiver and the 74ABT374 octal D-type flip- flop. Production releases are scheduled for this month.

The first three devices TI will offer will be the 74ABT245 octal transceiver, the 74ABT374 octal D-type flip-flop and the 74ABT646 octal registered transceiver. TI will begin sampling all the devices during the third quarter of 1990. Production releases are planned for the fourth quarter of 1990.

MT. KISCO, NY (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - TWA Getaway Vacations increased the value of its Hawaii vacations today by adding a free champagne breakfast cruise for all passengers taking a two- or seven- night package to Oahu.

The cruise departs from Diamond Head and sails along Waikiki Beach, with a continental breakfast and champagne served on board. Passengers have a choice of an 8 a.m. or 9 a.m. sailing, and are free to choose the day for the cruise.

TWA Getaway Vacations offers seven-night packages to Oahu and a Freestyle program with two nights in Oahu, which may be combined with visits to the outer islands. The free cruise is available on both packages.

The offer is valid for any bookings made after May 20, 1990, and for travel completed by Nov. 20, 1990.

Following its move in April to lift the midweek peak season surcharges on its Hawaii programs, today TWA Getaway Vacations lifted the weekend peak season surcharge for travel on Fridays and Sundays between June 15 and

Aug. 31, 1990.

The normal peak season surcharge is $60 per person, roundtrip, for travel to Hawaii between June 15 and Aug. 31, 1990. By lifting the surcharge for travel on Fridays and Sundays, in addition to the previous lifting of the surcharge on Tuesday and Wednesdays, TWA Getaway Hawaii passengers will realize a $60 savings per person for travel on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday or Sunday. The surcharge remains in effect for travel on Monday, Thursday or Saturday.

Currently TWA Getaway is offering a $599 special with limited mid- week departures from all cities east of St. Louis. The price includes roundtrip airfare, seven nights hotel accommodations, transfers to and from the airport, lei greeting and breakfast briefing. The last departure date is Aug. 22, 1990.

SOUTHFIELD, MI (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Allied-Signal Automotive has established a new Office of Business Development in Europe led by a noted automotive supplier industry leader to pursue emerging opportunities in the rapidly changing markets of Europe, concentrating especially on Eastern Europe and the Middle East.

John W. Day, president of Allied-Signal Automotive, said Andre Furia, chairman and chief executive officer of Bendix Europe, will assume the new responsibilities of group vice president of European business development. The operation will have headquarters in Paris.

"The rapid changes sweeping Europe -- especially Eastern Europe -- are presenting tremendous business opportunities to companies like ours, if those companies are strategically positioned with the resources, knowledge and insight to take advantage of the market dynamics shaping this emerging economic giant," said Day.

"Allied-Signal Automotive has excellent potential for capitalizing on these opportunities because of our extensive experience in Europe, but to assure our ability to succeed in this volatile new business climate, we are creating a high-level office dedicated to guiding our future development on the continent."

Key executives supporting Furia will include Jerome Sionnest, vice president of strategic planning, and Michel Marinescu, director of business development. Sionnest had served as vice president of strategy, planning and licensing for Bendix Europe since 1988, and Marinescu was director of manufacturing facilities and investments for Bendix Europe since 1986.

Furia, who will continue as chairman of Bendix Europe, an operating unit of Allied-Signal Automotive, is president of the French Federation of Vehicle Equipment Manufacturers (FIEV) and a past president of the French Society of Automotive Engineers (SIA) and the French Association for Quality (AFCIQ).

He joined the Bendix European organization in 1957 as an engineer and has held a variety of key engineering and managerial positions, including president of Bendix France and group vice president of the Bendix Automotive Systems Group. He earned a doctor of engineering degree from the University of Palermo, Italy.

Sionnest joined Bendix Europe in 1979 as marketing and sales director of Division Mecanique. He was named director of marketing, strategies and business planning for Bendix France in 1981 and group director of strategy planning and licensing in 1986.

Marinescu, who has served the Bendix Europe organization for a total of nearly 12 years, has held various positions at Bendix France and Bendix Italia in addition to his most recent duties for Bendix Europe.

GAINESVILLE, FL (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Pharmatec Inc. (NASDAQ: PHTC) today announced it received Orphan Drug designation from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for a new form of penicillin for the treatment of neurosyphilis in AIDS patients.

Orphan Drug status, which applies to diseases affecting less than 200,000 persons, confers special tax advantages, accelerated regulatory review by the FDA and a minimum of seven years marketing exclusivity following FDA approval to market the product.

Many drugs, including antibiotics such as penicillin, cannot adequately reach the brain, as they do not effectively penetrate the blood-brain barrier, a tightly packed layer of cells which separates the brain from the rest of the body. Combining penicillin with Pharmatec's patented carrier enables the combination to cross the blood-brain barrier and reach the brain, where the penicillin is released to treat the infection.

Syphilis and its brain-related disorder, neurosyphilis, are opportunistic bacterial infections which frequently occur in AIDS patients and can be fatal. By markedly increasing the level of penicillin in the brain, it may now be possible to successfully treat neurosyphilis and other bacterial infections of the brain. Additionally, the new penicillin-carrier combination may be useful in treating the brain damage caused by Lyme disease, a tick-borne disorder occurring most commonly in the northeastern United States.

The company estimates the worldwide market for its new form of penicillin, when approved for sale by the FDA and other governments, will be approximately $40 million annually.

Pharmatec is a research-based pharmaceutical company specializing in the development of two novel technologies -- a carrier system for increasing the delivery of drugs to the brain and MOLECUSOL(R) brand cyclodextrins for increasing the solubility and stability of drugs.

LONG BEACH, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Jack J. Schoustra, chairman and chief executive officer of The Earth Technology Corp. (USA), (NASDAQ: ETC0), today projected that the company's fiscal 1990 third quarter net income will be impacted by several non-operating items.

Schoustra stated that for the quarter ended May 25, 1990 the company's net income will be reduced by approximately $100,000 or $.03 per share, due to several non-operating factors including absorption of a percentage of a re-stated operating loss at Waste Processor Industries in which Earth Technology holds a 24 percent interest and a valuation adjustment relating to a deferred compensation arrangement in the acquisition of Alternative Ways Inc.

Schoustra indicated that despite the non-operating charges against net income during the period, the company's revenues and earnings from operations were per corporate plan, and the outlook for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 and into fiscal 1991 is very positive. It is expected that fiscal 1990 third quarter financial results will be released in approximately 10 days, he said.

AUSTIN, TX (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Motorola's (NYSE: MOT) Microprocessor Products Group today announced architectural enhancements to the 68302 (302) Integrated Multiprotocol Processor, which was first introduced in September 1989.

Based on Motorola's 68000 microprocessor, the 302 is a general purpose controller targeted at communication applications.

It is the first single chip controller to support five major communication protocols, including those used in IBM and Digital Equipment Corp. networks. The 302 enhancements include support for DRAM refresh, better data rate adaption support via the transmission of fractional stop bits in UART mode, a Centronics parallel interface and Signalling System No. 7 (SS7) protocol support.

The 302 integrates, on a single chip, the functions of several dozen peripheral chips while providing the high-performance of the 68000 microprocessor to a variety of communication applications. The device supports integrated services digital network (ISDN) standards, making it ideal for computer terminals, facsimile machines and terminal adaptors.

The latest revisions to the 302 allow configuration of the communications processor to handle the DRAM refresh task without any intervention from the 68000 core and without any external glue logic. Additionally, the ability to transmit fractional stop bits in the UART mode was added to better support rate adaption schemes in ISDN and modem-type applications.

The 302's ability to execute microcode programs out of the on-chip dual-port RAM has allowed for the development of two new optional enhancements: Centronics parallel interface and Signalling System No. 7 protocol. The communications processor implements a Centronics parallel interface using the parallel I/O lines. The Centronics parallel interface option requires a license available from Motorola at a one time charge of $2,000. The Signalling System No. 7 support option requires a license also available from Motorola at a one time charge of $5,000.

The 302 is available now and is priced at $39.60 in 1,000 unit quantities in surface mount packaging. The 302 is also available in a 132-pin grid array. The enhanced 302 will become the sole 68302 product offering when it goes into volume product late in the third quarter of 1990. Sampling of the enhanced version will begin in July. Pricing and packaging will remain consistent with the current version.

CHICAGO (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Midway Airlines (NYSE: MDW) today announced the successful conclusion of negotiations on additional aircraft hangar facilities at the Chicago Midway Airport. Under this 22-year lease (which includes a 10-year renewal option), the company has agreed to expend up to $8 million during the first four years on a substantial refurbishment and upgrading of the facility. The hangar will house the company's first heavy aircraft overhaul/maintenance operation in the city of Chicago, according to David R. Hinson, chairman and chief executive officer.

As earlier announced, The Chicago facility will result in substantial new job opportunities in Chicago over the next three years. The new facility is needed as additional MD-80 aircraft enter service with the company. Currently, all heavy maintenance and overhaul operations are conducted at the company's facility at Miami International Airport in Florida. The Florida operation will continue.

"Given the rapid increase in the size of Midway's jet fleet, the company has decided to suspend its third party contract operations in Florida in order to insure adequate capacity for the maintenance of its own aircraft " said Hinson. Initially, the elimination of third-party contract work in Miami will result in a modest reduction in the overall level of Midway's engineering work force. However, staffing in the maintenance and engineering group is expected to increase beginning later in the year with the delivery of additional MD-80 aircraft.

Midway Airlines offers coast-to-coast service from its hubs at Chicago's close-in Midway Airport and Philadelphia International Airport. Midway Airlines and its wholly owned subsidiary, the Midway Commuter, serve 59 destinations in the United States, Canada, U.S. Virgin Islands and the Bahamas.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - The Bank of New York announced today that Banesto, the second largest bank in Spain, has selected the Bank of New York as the depositary for its new American Depositary Receipt (ADR) facility. The new ADRs have been declared effective by the Securities and Exchange Commission. They will trade on the over- the-counter market.

Banesto has established its ADR program at a time of rapid deregulation of the Spanish financial system. Increased competition and the growing importance of the Spanish securities markets are motivating the bank to diversify its shareholder base with ADRs.

Banesto was established in 1902 and has grown rapidly in the past several years. Today the bank ranks second among Spanish commercial banks with year-end 1989 assets of $35 billion. Banesto offers a broad range of retail and corporate services through its network of 2,225 branches in Spain and 24 offices and affiliates located elsewhere in Europe, North America and the rest of the world.

The Bank of New York is the largest issuer of ADRs in the country and is the depositary for more than 600 ADR programs. Its parent, the Bank of New York Company, Inc. (NYSE: BK), is the 13th largest bank holding company in the country with $48 billion in consolidated assets at March 31 1990. The company conducts major businesses in corporate and retail banking, securities processing, trust and investment management, and financial market services.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - CF Partners L.P. (NYSE: CFI), a Los Angeles-based master limited partnership, announced today the election of Jeffrey H. Lynford as the vice chairman and chief financial officer of CF Management Corp., the general partner of CF Income Partners. He will be succeeding Raymond H. Olinger as chief financial officer, who will be retiring on July 1, 1990. Olinger will continue to provide consulting services to CF Income Partners.

Lynford is the chairman of Wellsford Group Inc., an affiliate of Wellsford Capital Partners L.P., which acquired 20 percent of CF Management Corp. at the end of 1989. Prior to the formation of Wellsford, Lynford spent almost a decade as an investment banker, becoming a managing director of A.G. Becker Paribas in 1982 and a partner of Bear Stearns & Co. in 1985. During his tenure on Wall Street, Lynford was known for his innovative transactions involving real estate development, finance and investment.

Currently Lynford serves as a board member of Real Estate Securities Income Fund Inc., a publicly traded closed-end investment company, a trustee of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and as an editorial board member of Real Estate Finance. He regularly speaks and writes on various topical issues, including the securitization of the real estate markets, federal tax policy and capital formation.

The general partner also announced its intention to utilize a portion of the partnership's cash reserves to repurchase up to one million units from time to time in the open market. The decision to repurchase units reflects the general partner's view that the units are being undervalued by the market. "Repurchasing units will reduce the future cash flow needs of the partnership," said R. Craig Overturf, president of CF Management Corp. The purchases will be made through a broker in compliance with the requirements of applicable securities laws.

CF Income Partners L.P. is a publicly traded master limited partnership which has invested in income producing multi-family residential, commercial and industrial properties.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Canal Capital Corporation (NYSE: COW) today reported a net loss of $1,561,000, or 43 cents per common share, for the six months ended April 30, 1990, as compared with net income of $543,000, resulting in a loss of 3 cents per common share, for the same period in 1989.

The 1989 results include income from discontinued operations of $656,000 related to Canal's stockyards operations, which were sold in October 1989, while the 1990 results include an extraordinary gain of $140,000 on the retirement of debt, net of income taxes.

The 1990 loss was caused by softer than anticipated results from the art, real estate and securities trading and investing operations, as well as slightly higher than anticipated interest expense. These were somewhat offset by stronger results from the agribusiness operations and lower general and administrative expenses.

Revenues from continuing operations, which include gross sales from each of Canal's art, real estate and agribusiness operations as well as the income or loss from the company's investment program, were $4,726,000 for the first six months of 1990, as compared with $10,642,000 for the same period in 1989. It should be noted that the 1989 revenues from continuing operations exclude revenue from stockyards operations, which are presented as discontinued operations.

For the second quarter of 1990, Canal reported a net loss of $827,000, or 23 cents per common share, on revenues of $2,285,000, as compared with a net loss of $137,000, or 11 cents per common share, on revenues of $4,979,000 for the same period in 1989. The 1990 results include an extraordinary gain of $148,000 on the retirement of debt, net of income taxes, while 1989 results include income from discontinued stockyard operations of $256,000.

Income (loss) from Canal's securities trading and investing operation included unrealized depreciation in the market value of its market securities portfolio of $758,000 and $295,000 for the six months ended April 30, 1990, and 1989, respectively. There was also unrealized depreciation of $953,000 and $183,000 for the three-month periods ended April 30, 1990, and 1989, respectively, in the market value of Canal's marketable securities portfolio.

Raymond French, chairman of the board and CEO of Canal, said that although the operating results for the first half of fiscal 1990 were disappointing the company is continuing in its search to establish new profit centers, primarily in its arts operations. Additionally, he said that the company continues in its efforts to reduce overhead.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Erwin T. Straw, president and chief executive officer of Prime Bancorp Inc. (NASDAQ: PSAB) and its principal operating subsidiary, Prime Savings Bank, fsb, announced today that the board of directors of Prime Bancorp Inc. has approved a plan to purchase up to 69,145 shares of its common stock in the market.

Prime Bancorp was formed in connection with the merger of Cheltenham Federal Savings and Loan Association and Northeast Federal Savings and Loan Association and their conversion from the mutual form to the stock form of ownership in 1988. The holding company recently announced its earnings and the results of its operations for the quarter ended March 31, 1990. The net income for the three-month period was $933,766 or $.68 per share compared to $1,153,369 for the same period in 1989. The book value was $26.78 per share on March 31, 1990.

Prime Savings Bank, fsb, had a ratio of tangible capital to assets of 11.26 percent on March 31, 1990, or 7.5 times the ratio required for thrifts on that date by FIRREA.

The board of directors, according to Straw, is of the opinion that the stock, at its current price, is undervalued and the purchase of the shares will enhance the per-share value to the remaining stockholders. It is not the intention of the board to create a support level for the stock, but it did set a maximum price that it will pay for the shares at $13.50. It reserves the right to discontinue the program without notice and, if the purchase of the 69,145 shares has not been accomplished by Dec. 9, 1990, the program shall automatically terminate.

Straw said that notice of the holding company's intention had been timely filed with the Office of Thrift Supervision in Washington and in the Third District. Notice has also been filed with the National Association of Securities Dealers.

Prime Bancorp is traded on the NASDAQ Market. The shares were originally sold for $11.50 per share in the subscription and community offering in November of 1988 and sold at a high of $18.50 in August of 1989. The last sale was at $11.50 on June 8, 1990.

MIDDLETOWN, PA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Three Mile Island Unit 1's outstanding 1989 operational performance has earned the plant recognition in two more publications that report on the nuclear power industry, it was announced today.

The April issue of the British-based magazine Nuclear Engineering International ranked TMI-1 No. 1 for load factor, or efficiency, among 339 nuclear power plants in the Western World and Hungary.

According to the article, "Interestingly, Unit 1 of the Three Mile Island station was the world's top performer in 1989, recording a remarkable 100 per cent load factor -- further testimony to the turn- round that has been achieved at TMI since the 1979 accident at unit 2."

Additionally, TMI-1 was cited in the May issue of Nuclear News, an independent national publication, as the U.S. plant having the most improved efficiency rating over the past three years.

The newsletter reported that TMI-1's efficiency rating jumped from 26.1 percent during 1984 to 1986, to 82.2 percent during 1987 to 1989. TMI-1 was shut down during most of the initial reporting period. However, TMI-1's 82.2 percent three-year, 1987-89 average ranked 12th overall in the nation and 16.4 percentage points above the industry median of 65.8 for the period.

TMI-1's first-in-the-world performance for 1989 was first announced in February by Nucleonics Week, an independent newsletter that tracks the nuclear industry.

TMI-1 is operated by GPU Nuclear Corp. and is owned by Metropolitan Edison Co., Pennsylvania Electric Co. and Jersey Central Power and Light Co., subsidiaries of General Public Utilities Corp. (NYSE: GPU).

The plant produces enough electricity to supply 10 towns of 50,000 homes each.

ST. PAUL, MN (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Northwest Airlines today named Barry A. Kotar executive vice president and chief information officer.

Kotar will oversee Northwest's computer and communications operations, including the executive information service, telecommunications and systems development for computer applications in all of the airline's departments and divisions. This includes systems for cargo tracking, flight information, passenger revenue accounting, marketing, passenger handling and aircraft maintenance.

Kotar, 44, joins Northwest from his position as president and chief executive officer of Covia, the computerized reservations system of United Airlines and several other airlines. He held that position since the company's inception in 1987.

Prior to that, he served United for 20 years in a variety of management positions, including senior vice president of management information systems, vice president of Apollo (computerized reservations) services and vice president of customer services.

Al Checchi, Northwest chairman, said Kotar adds to an increasingly strong senior management team.

"Barry is the premiere automation expert in the airline industry, and he is an important part of the executive team we have assembled over the last several months," Checchi said. "Our ability to attract such a talented group of people furthers our confidence that we will succeed in our objectives of becoming the airline of customer preference for travelers and the best place to work for our employees."

Northwest is America's fourth largest airline. Its route system spans 21 counties on three continents -- Asia, Europe and North America.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - United Press International and Financial News Network Inc. (FNN) have formed UPI Financial Information Services, a joint venture that will provide business and financial news and information, according to William F. Hackett, UPI senior vice president for news and information products.

Financial Information Services' first major customer will be Shark Information Services Corporation, which is expected to announce a new financial markets-oriented video product tomorrow, prior to the commencement of the Securities Industry Association in New York City, Hackett said.

Hackett announced Jonathan Fram will serve as president of UPI Financial Information Services. Fram is president of Institutional Research Network (IRN), which is owned by UPI's parent company, Infotechnology, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: ITCH).

"UPI's new venture with FNN means expanded coverage of business, financial and economic matters for news media, corporate and government clients," he continued.

"This move is consistent with the UPI strategic business plan developed in 1988. One step toward this venture was taken in October, when UPI established strategic business units for Sports, Business & Finance, International and News Photos & Graphics.

"This joint venture affords UPI clients benefit of more then 140 skilled FNN staff, as well as the broad telecommunications and data processing resources that are key to entering new markets with new UPI products and services," Hackett explained. UPI has a 50 percent share of the venture.

UPI has recently pursued a number of ventures with such organizations as States News Service, Financial World magazine and Basys Inc., the latter a leader in broadcast newsroom computer systems.

UPI has 200 bureaus and is represented in 97 nations. UPI is owned by New York-based Infotechnology, Inc., the integrated information and communications company that wholly owns Shark Information Services Corporation and Institutional Research Network; and which owns 47 percent of Financial News Network Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: FNNI). FNN is a cable television network currently serving more than 33 million subscribers.

DENVER (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - VICORP Restaurants, Inc. (NASDAQ: VRES) today reported earnings per share for its second quarter and first half of fiscal 1990 about twice as large as those one year ago. Earnings for the latest period set a new record high.

For the 12 weeks ended May 13, 1990, net income advanced 95.9 percent to $4,382,000, or 42 cents per share, from $2,237,000, or 21 cents per share, as revenues rose 11.6 percent to $93,644,000 from $83,891,000 in the same period of 1989.

For the first 28 weeks of fiscal 1990, net income gained 88.3 percent to $7,695,000, or 73 cents per share, from $4,086,000, or 37 cents per share. Revenues were up 10.7 percent to $209,550,000 from $189,245,000.

"The second period," said Charles R. Frederickson, chairman and chief executive officer, "marks our 13th consecutive quarter of improvement in operating profit. On an operating basis, VICORP shows record high net income and earnings per share for both the second quarter and first half this year.

"Sales growth continued to produce significant improvement in our operating results. Restaurant revenues grew 11.6 percent, representing both a 6.2 percent increase in comparable restaurant sales and the contribution from seven restaurants added since last year's second quarter. Modifications to our menus were instrumental in increasing per-person expenditures in each of our concepts, a major contributor to the comparable sales increase. Sales volumes in newly added restaurants remained above expectations, further enhancing that growth and encouraging us in our plans for future expansion.

"Restaurant operating income increased 22.5 percent over the comparable quarter of last year, principally due to the increase in sales. The quarterly results were particularly strong in our Bakers Square group. We remain pleased with this rate of improvement, although maintaining this pace will become more difficult as we begin comparisons with the strong operating performance of recent quarters. However, the absolute growth in operating income we expect in future quarters should continue to generate significant gains in net income."

VICORP operates and franchises approximately 400 mid-scale family type restaurants under the names Bakers Square and Village Inn, principally in the Rocky Mountain region, upper Midwest, Florida, Arizona and California.

DALLAS (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Grace Energy Corporation (NYSE: GEG) and M.A. Hanna Company (NYSE: MAH) and Coors Energy Company jointly announced today that Colowyo Coal Company, the Grace/Hanna partnership, has signed a five-year sales contract to supply coal to Coors. Beginning July 1, 1990 Coors will purchase 330,000 tons of coal per year (280,000 tons of steam coal, 50,000 tons of stoker coal), assuring Colowyo of sales of 1,650,000 tons of coal through June 30, 1995. Colowyo has supplied Coors with coal for several years under both spot and intermediate term contracts and is pleased to have the opportunity of continuing to supply Coors on a longer-term basis.

Colowyo, which is headquartered in Meeker, Colo., operates the largest surface coal mine in Colorado. This mine produced 4.2 million tons of low-sulfur, high-BTU coal in 1989. Most of its coal is sold under long-term contracts.

The Coors contract, combined with Colowyo's other existing contracts, equates to 4.2 million tons of annual production over the next five years.

Grace Energy Corporation, headquartered in Dallas, is a diversified energy holding company whose subsidiaries are engaged in supplying services and equipment to the petroleum industry; in the exploration for and development of oil and natural gas, and in coal mining.

M.A. Hanna Company, headquartered in Cleveland, is a specialty chemicals company engaged in the processing and distribution of formulated polymers.

Coors Energy Company is a wholly owned subsidiary of Adolph Coors Company, the third largest brewery in the United States. Coors uses coal to heat boilers at its facility in Golden, Colo.

TORRANCE, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - International Technology Corporation (IT) (NYSE: ITX) announced today that it has executed a joint venture agreement with Northumbrian Water Group PLC (NW), a regional water authority located in Gosforth, England.

International Technology Europe PLC and Northumbrian Environmental Management Limited, wholly owned subsidiaries of IT and NW, respectively, each own 50 percent of the company formed to carry out the joint venture activities.

The joint venture has been formed for the permitting, design, construction and operation of two integrated waste treatment facilities, which will have capabilities to provide chemical treatment for dealing with liquid wastes, as well as physical and thermal treatment, detoxification and destruction of a wide range of hazardous and industrial wastes and sewage sludge. The facilities are planned to be located at Howdon on the River Tyne and Portrack on the River Tees, in the Northeast of England. NW currently provides the handling and disposal services for the sewage sludge anticipated to be treated by the facilities. Preliminary indications are that project financing will be available for the venture.

Applications for planning permission for the two integrated waste treatment facilities have been filed and denied by the regional development authorities. These decisions have been appealed to the Secretary of the Environment, and appeal hearings are scheduled for September of this year.

"The joint venture with Northumbrian Water Group provides the Company the opportunity for international expansion," said Murray H. Hutchison, chairman and chief executive officer. "The proposed treatment facilities should help solve the increasingly complex environmental problems in the United Kingdom that will result from the recent European Economic Community (EEC) directive banning the dumping of sewage sludge in the North Sea and the ocean incineration and dumping of hazardous chemical waste."

International Technology Corporation, based in Torrance, is a leading environmental management company providing services to government and industry. The Company's common stock is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol ITX.

CHICAGO (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Bernard F. Brennan, chairman and chief executive officer of Montgomery Ward & Co., announced today organization changes designed to support the company's growth plans.

"Over the last several months, we have begun to reorganize the company to prepare for growth opportunities in the 1990s, including the opening of 53 new full line specialty stores during the next 18 months," according to Brennan. "Recently, we have appointed Dom Mangone as president-hardlines merchandising and financial services and Spencer Heine as senior vice president-legal and real estate, two key positions in our expansion plans. In addition, we have restructured to have Edwin Pohlmann, senior vice president-finance, report directly to me. These moves significantly strengthen our top management team."

Mangone, 40, was previously president-Montgomery Ward Financial Services. He started with the company in 1978 as vice president and controller of the Montgomery Ward Insurance Group. Heine, 47, had been senior vice president and general counsel and began his career with Montgomery Ward's legal department in 1973 as a senior attorney in the company's Washington office. Pohlmann, 42, previously reported to Mangone and joined the company in 1986 as vice president-merchandise planning and control.

Additionally Brennan announced the appointment of two new officers. William J. McCarthy was appointed president-marketing, and Richard C. Rusthoven was appointed vice president and general merchandise manager-men's apparel, footwear and accessories. The appointments are effective immediately.

"The addition of these two officers will bring a keen understanding of our company from their prior executive positions with Montgomery Ward, as well as their subsequent advanced executive level skills, including that of CEO " said Brennan. "As the company continues its growth trend with its specialty store strategies, these skills will be essential to our ability to expand as we move into the 1990s."

McCarthy, 54, is responsible for all advertising, store presentation and credit services operations of the national specialty store retailing chain. He replaces Bernard W. Andrews, who recently left the company.

McCarthy first joined Montgomery Ward in 1958 as a management trainee, and subsequently rose through various field management assignments of increasing responsibility. In 1977 he was appointed Chicago metropolitan district manager, and in 1980 was elected vice president/retail merchandise manager.

He was promoted to vice president-Eastern region in 1982, and the following year to senior vice president-store operations. In 1985, he became executive vice president-operations.

McCarthy left Montgomery Ward in 1986 to join Midas as president and chief executive officer of U.S. operations in Chicago. In 1989, he became senior vice president of client relations specializing in retail marketing campaigns for the advertising firm Ogilvie & Mather in Chicago, the position he held until returning to Montgomery Ward in his new assignment.

McCarthy is a graduate of St. Joseph's College in Rensselaer, Ind.
Rusthoven, 49, reports directly to Daniel H. Levy, president-Apparel Group and has responsibility for total sales and return on investment performance for all merchandise in the men's apparel, footwear and accessories lines.

He was formerly president and chief operating officer of Baddour, Inc., parent company of Fred's Dollar Stores in Memphis, Tenn. He began his retail career in 1964 as division manager of smallwares for F&R Lazarus in Columbus, Ohio. He was appointed division manager of men's at W.H. Block in 1974, and became vice president and general merchandise manager of all softlines with May D&F in Denver in 1976. He was named president of Stix, Baer and Fuller in St. Louis in 1979, and chairman and CEO of United Department Stores in 1981.

He joined Montgomery Ward in 1982 as vice president and division merchandise manager men's, shoes and children's. He left that position in 1984 to take the position of president and CEO of T.G.&Y. Stores.

Rusthoven is a graduate of Michigan State University, where he earned an M.B.A. in 1964.

PHOENIX, AZ (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - StatesWest Airlines Inc. (NASDAQ: SWAL) reported May 1990 passenger enplanements were 11,503, up 14.9 percent compared to 10,009 for May 1989. The carrier's May 1990 traffic capacity was 6,287,252 available seat miles (ASM) producing a load factor of 37.8 percent. ASMs for May 1989 totaled 4,025,790 producing a load factor for that period of 50.8 percent. Traffic increased 16.1 percent to 2,374,559 revenue passenger miles compared to 2,044,977 for May 1989.

StatesWest's president W. James Lane stated, "May passenger enplanements broke all the airline's previous enplanement records. Fares and yields for the month were strong as well as advanced bookings. We added Santa Barbara to our system in May and the traffic base is building. We expect the load factor to increase as Santa Barbara continues to develop and we become part of USAir's system."

StatesWest Airlines commenced flight operations Oct. 1, 1986 and on April 5, 1990 entered into a joint marketing service agreement with USAir to become effective July 15, 1990. USAir (NYSE: U) is the dominant major carrier in California. As part of the agreement StatesWest will operate under the name USAir Express and all of the company's flights will carry USAir's designator code in the airline reservation systems.

The company operates one of the newest fleets of regional prop-jet aircraft in the United States. Present destinations include the Southern California locations of Burbank, Los Angeles, Orange County, San Diego and Santa Barbara, along with the Arizona cities of Phoenix, Tucson, Lake Havasu City, Sierra Vista/Ft. Huachuca, and Laughlin, Nev./Bullhead City, Ariz. StatesWest operates 88 daily departures between these locations.

WILMINGTON, DE (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Du Pont (NYSE: DD) today announced a new benefit that will make it easier for employees to care for the needs of their children and older relatives.

Beginning July 2, the company will offer nationwide child care, school program and elder care information and referral services. Employees will be able to access the services by dialing a toll-free 800 number six days a week, or by calling local agencies that are part of a national network administered by Work/Family Directions Inc. of Boston.

The referral services are paid for by Du Pont and offered free to employees and their spouses as many times as needed.

"Employees tell us it is often difficult and time-consuming to gather the information they need to make informed choices on dependent care providers and schools," said John W. Himes, vice president-human resources. "We believe these programs will greatly improve access to quality information and eliminate some headaches that are taxing to the individual and can eat away at productivity. We think these programs will be good for our employees and good for our business," he said.

Designed to help employees balance work and family responsibilities, the program includes three services geared to families with differing needs:

-- The Child Care Resource and Referral Service is designed to help parents find child care programs for children under 15. Through a nationwide network of 260 child care subcontractors, it offers information on local child care providers, including day care centers, summer camps, family day care homes, before/after school programs and in-home care.

Once an employee's needs and interests are determined, a counselor will identify local care givers with confirmed openings. The employee makes the final decision on the best care giver to meet his or her needs.

The national organization also provides specific follow-up educational materials geared to the age of the child and develops new child care providers in communities where Du Pont has facilities.

-- The Elder Care Consultation and Referral Service helps employees who have some responsibility for the care of elderly relatives 60 years or older or those who suffer from Alzheimer's or other age-related diseases. It also can assist employees in planning their own retirement needs.

The service provides information on local community organizations that provide assistance in medical and financial planning, emergency treatment, transportation, companionship, adult day care, legal assistance, and other services. It does this through agencies located in the communities where elderly relatives live, no matter where the employee lives or works.

-- "SchoolMatch" helps parents match a school system with the needs of their children. Particularly valuable for employees who are transferred or moving to a new location, "SchoolMatch" has information on more than 15,000 public school systems and 7,000 individual accredited private and parochial schools across the country. Parents can evaluate SAT scoring, student/teacher ratios, special education programs and other factors.

The nationwide child care, school program and elder care information and referral services are the latest of Du Pont's family of benefits, which include medical and dental care, life insurance, vacation and holidays, pension program and a savings and investment plan.

PRINCETON, NJ (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - George W. Ebright, chairman and chief executive officer of Cytogen Corp. (NASDAQ: CYTO), today announced the appointment of Dr. Thomas J. McKearn, M.D., Ph.D., to the newly created position of executive vice president.

In this role, Dr. McKearn will be responsible for manufacturing, purchasing and facilities in addition to his current responsibilities in research and development. Dr. McKearn is the first full-time employee of Cytogen Corp. and formerly served as senior vice president of scientific affairs.

Dr. McKearn began employment at Cytogen in July 1981 as vice president of research and development. He is a member of the company's Scientific Advisory Board and he has been a director of Cytogen since 1981. Dr. McKearn holds a B.A. degree from Indiana University, a Ph.D. degree in immunology from the University of Chicago and a M.D. degree from the Pritzker School of Medicine at the University of Chicago. He also retains a position of adjunct associate professor in the Department of Pathology at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. McKearn is regarded as a principal architect of the company's strong scientific base. His vision has moved Cytogen to the scientific forefront in using monoclonal antibodies to target imaging and therapy agents to human cancers.

In commenting on the appointment, Ebright noted, "This much deserved promotion is in recognition of Tom McKearn's numerous contributions to the evolution of our organization. In the 15 months that I have been with Cytogen, Tom has demonstrated both the leadership skills and command of business issues necessary to assume this important new assignment. As our company completes its transition to product commercialization, Tom will play an increasing role in ensuring the successful implementation of commercial manufacturing in addition to his existing responsibilities. This managerial move is being made at this time to ensure an orderly succession plan for the foreseeable future."

Cytogen Corp. is a biopharmaceutical company which has developed proprietary systems for linking drugs and diagnostic agents to monoclonal antibodies in order to optimize the function of the antibody as a delivery vehicle. With major emphasis on human cancer, current product development efforts at Cytogen are focused on improved cancer diagnostic imaging agents and the targeted delivery of cancer therapeutic agents directly to tumor sites.

EAST CHICAGO, IN (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - The Inland Steel Flat Products Co. division of Inland Steel Co. has won Ford Motor Co.'s top supplier award, the only North American integrated steel company ever to be so honored.

Ford's "Q1" Preferred Quality Award was presented here today to employees of the Inland Steel Flat Products Co. (ISFPC) in ceremonies featuring top Ford officials.

Representatives from Ford's North American Automotive Operations staff, Dearborn, Mich., and the Ford stamping plant in Chicago Heights, Ill., presented a Q1 flag and plaque to Joseph D. Corso, president of ISFPC, and Jim Robinson, representing the leadership of United Steelworkers Local 1010.

Ford, in announcing its Q1 honors nationally, said, "The Q1 Preferred Quality Award is a special tribute to suppliers who are helping us in our goal to build the highest quality cars and trucks in the world."

To qualify for the award, Inland had to obtain Q1 certification in several categories from each of the eight Ford plants in four states that it supplies with cold-rolled and coated-sheet steel. All eight plants had to agree that Inland's quality, delivery, and service were superior.

"We feel very honored to be the first integrated steel company to achieve Ford's Q1 Preferred Supplier status," Corso said. "It's a tribute to a lot of hard work by our 13,000 people."

Corso thanked both the employees at Inland's Indiana Harbor Works steel plant here and the companies that supply raw materials, energy, and other goods and services to Inland -- many of them in the Calumet region.

"The Q1 award," Corso said, "is a two-part challenge for the future: First it is not a one-shot award. Q1 is reviewed annually and Ford demands continuous improvement. So, we'll have to strengthen our capabilities every year. Second, it's a big milestone on a longer path: We have many other customers with whom we want to accomplish the same quality goals."

The Q1 Award evaluation criteria entail a comprehensive review of plant quality practices and performance. The satisfaction of customers -- both Ford assembly plants and the ultimate retail customer -- is a major consideration of the ad hoc team that determines if the award should be given. Included on the team are specialists from both the "customer" plants and the product engineering office that designs the parts.

Ford pays particular attention to the plant's ability to maintain quality while implementing new manufacturing processes. The use of statistical methods to control manufacturing techniques is also important. These statistical methods focus on preventing defects, rather than finding defects at the end of the line. The methods increase quality and productivity by reducing the need for redundant testing, inspection, product rework, and material scrappage.

Other important aspects of the Q1 certification process are: the commitment of the supplier plant's management to continuous improvement in quality; quality of the parts received; absence of significant problems at the Ford plant using the parts, and an absence of serious problems in the field.

Inland Steel Co. is a subsidiary of Chicago-based Inland Steel Industries, Inc. (NYSE: IAD).

SEATTLE (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Immunex Corp. (NASDAQ: IMNX) today announced the appointment of Don C. Stark to the new position of marketing director.

Stark, 36, brings to Immunex seven years of experience in marketing cancer products for Bristol-Myers. As group product director, Stark managed a major segment of Bristol-Myers' oncology business and was involved in the launch of such products as carboplatin and ifosfamide.

His responsibilities will include the launch of Immunex's first product following its approval by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Immunex submitted Product License and Establishment License Applications for granulocyte-macrophage colony stimulating factor (GM-CSF) to the FDA in February 1990. Medical interest in GM-CSF centers on its effect on the growth and differentiation of the white blood cells called granulocytes and macrophages.

"Don's proven ability, experience, and knowledge of the oncology market will help make Immunex a leader in cancer therapy," said John Spears,

Immunex's vice president of sales and marketing. "He's a valuable addition to our rapidly growing sales and marketing staff and is a critical hire for the successful commercialization of all Immunex products under development."

FULLERTON, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Wynn's International Inc. (NYSE: WN) announced today that the board of directors had authorized the company to repurchase up to 200,000 shares of the company's common stock at prevailing market prices. Initial funding for the buyback will come from existing cash, internally generated funds, or through the issuance of short-term debt. Any shares repurchased initially will be held as treasury shares and may be used in connection with the company's stock option program, its obligations under outstanding convertible subordinated notes, its obligations arising out of past acquisitions and for other general corporate purposes.

James Carroll, president and chief executive officer of the company, stated, "The board of directors believes that the company's shares are undervalued in the marketplace and that repurchasing the company's shares is an excellent investment at this time."

The company also announced that the board of directors had amended its shareholder rights plan to provide that any person whose share ownership exceeds 25 percent as a direct consequence of the company's share repurchase program will not be deemed to have triggered a distribution of the rights. However, if such person subsequently acquires an additional 1 percent or more of the outstanding voting power of the company, then the rights will be distributed in accordance with the provisions of the shareholder rights plant. The company noted that entities controlled by New York money manager Mario J. Gabelli currently own approximately 24.7 percent of the outstanding common stock of the company. Carroll said that the purpose of the amendment to the shareholder rights plan was to ensure that Gabelli's current share ownership position would not involuntarily trigger a distribution of the rights as a consequence of the company's share repurchase program.

WILMINGTON, DE (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Du Pont (NYSE: DD) will phase out its "Orlon" acrylic fiber business as soon as possible, the company announced today.

The company said the phaseout will have no effect on its global acrylonitrile business. Du Pont will work closely with its customers to obtain alternate sources of supply.

Du Pont introduced "Orlon" in July 1950. The product is produced at Camden, S.C., and Waynesboro, Va.

"Significant overcapacity, partially attributed to high import growth and consumer preference for polyester and cotton in traditional end uses, has eroded the acrylic fiber business," said Paul G. Gillease, director - textile division. "As a result, the business has not been sufficiently profitable in recent years."

"We feel strongly that focusing resources on 'Lycra' spandex fiber, nylon and 'Dacron' polyester fiber, all of which present significant growth opportunities, will be more beneficial to the long-term interests of Du Pont and its customers and will strengthen our position in the U.S.

apparel market."

"Du Pont's principal concern during the phaseout is employees, customers and licensees," Gillease said.

About 775 people are involved in the worldwide acrylic business. The goal is to provide employment options to as many full-time Du Pont employees as possible. The company will work closely with customers to ensure a smooth transition to new suppliers.

Because of their high quality, Koll properties have a reputation for attracting and keeping leasing client even during periods of softness in the real-estate market.

Partners in Koll projects include Aetna Realty Investors, CIGNA, Connecticut Retirement Fund, Copley Real Estate Advisors, The Irvine Company, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, Teachers Insurance and Annuity, and Weyerhaeuser Mortgage Company.

In 1967, Koll initiated the first Southern California joint venture involving a real-estate developer and a finacial firm when Aetna became a partner in the development of Airport Business Center, a 68-building, multi-tenant industrial and office complex near John Wayne Airport in Orange County. Until then, financial firms had only loaned money for such projects, not invested in them.

The Koll-Aetna partnership went on to purchase, in 1972, the site for the development of Koll Center Newport, with 1.4 million square feet in low- and mid-rise office buildings, the Meridien Hotel and several restaurants. In 1981 ground was broken for The Koll Company's largest undertaking, $1 billion Koll Center Irvine, a 95-acre, mixed-use complex with 4.4 million square feet of office space in 17 buildings, 1,850 rooms in four hotels, an athletic club, cinemas and stores. Scheduled to be completed in 1992, the Irvine complex is on both sides of the San Diego Freeway.

Koll Company recently acquired a $300 million real-estate portfolio from Wells Fargo Mortgage and Equity Trust. It includes 42 different office, industrial and residential properties that comprised the entire Wells Fargo real-estate investment trust.

Among Koll Company's current projects are a $200 million, 28-story office tower in the financial district of Los Angeles, a $200 million office and retail center in Anaheim, Calif., and a $100 million office building in downtown San Diego. Other projects include industrial parks, research and development facilities, corporate headquarters, hotels, medical facilities and retirement complexes.

Henley Properties has 15 residential, commercial and industrial properties in Southern California, all of which are part of its Signal Landmark Holdings unit, based in Irvine. Henley Properties also has real-estate interests in Hawaii, Illinois, Michigan, New Hampshire and Wisconsin.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Pittsburgh City Center and the Grand Bay Management Company have formed a joint venture to build a 17-story deluxe Grand Bay Hotel at the corner of Sixth and Grand streets in Pittsburgh.

The Grand Bay Management Company also will operate the luxurious new hotel which is scheduled to open in Spring of 1993. The hotel's 300,000 square feet of interior space will include 330 guest rooms and suites, 8,500 square feet of ballroom space, corporate meeting rooms, an elegant restaurant, a cafe and a lounge.

"The distinctive decor, accented with original art and antiques, add to the qualities that will make the Grand Bay Pittsburgh's premiere hotel," said Jack S. Lightbody, managing director of Pittsburgh City Center.

Pittsburgh City Center's agreement with the Grand Bay Management Company replaces a previous hotel management contract with the Ritz Carlton Company, which was terminated by mutual consent of both parties.

The Grand Bay Management Company is a joint venture of The Continental Companies (TCC) and Tobishima Associates, Ltd.

"We are delighted to be bringing the Grand Bay standard of excellence to Pittsburgh," said TCC Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Sherwood M. Weiser. "We pride ourselves on the superior facilities and service we provide at all of our hotels, including the Mobil five-star Grand Bay Hotel in Miami and the landmark Stanhope Hotel in New York."

Tobishima Associates is a New York subsidiary of Tobishima Corporation of Japan. The parent company is a large and prominent international general engineering and construction firm, listed on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. Tobishima Corporation is in the midst of expanding its global real estate network, with strong commitments to each region in which it conducts business.

The Continental Companies, which was founded in 1970, currently has more than 50 hotels operating and/or under construction with approximately 16,000 rooms under management. Its hotels are located throughout the United States, Canada, the Caribbean, Latin America and Europe.

TORONTO, ONTARIO (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Morton Bahr, president of the Communications Workers of America (CWA), and Fred Pomeroy, president of the Communications and Electrical Workers of Canada (CWC), announced today a formal alliance entered into by the two unions representing U.S. and Canadian telecommunications workers.

The agreement is believed to be the first of its kind between a Canadian and a U.S. union. It covers collective bargaining, organizing, mobilization and political action, while recognizing the full autonomy and national rights of each union's members and organizations.

"Because the employers we work for are large, transnational corporations, today we are establishing a formal alliance with our Canadian sisters and brothers in the telecommunications industry to facilitate pursuit of our common interests," said CWA President Morton Bahr. "To our knowledge, this is the first formal agreement of its kind between major U.S. and Canadian labor unions, and we expect it to set a new precedent for international labor cooperation."

Pomeroy said: "This is a logical next step in our relationship. We've worked well in the past, but this alliance will solidify our ability to work together to achieve our members' goals."

Shirley Carr, president of the Canadian Labour Congress (CLC), said: "This is essential because of the mobility of the employers. If our employers want to deal in a global economy, they now must recognize labor's solidarity around the world."

The CWC is Canada's leading telecommunications union, representing 40,000 working people. CWA represents 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada. The announcement was made at CWA's annual convention, which is being held at the Metro Toronto Convention Centre, Monday through Wednesday, June 11-13.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Failure of the U.S. Senate to override President Bush's veto of Amtrak funding legislation could have serious short- and long-term consequences for Maine's railroads, shippers, commuters and the almost 5,000 active and retired rail employees in the state, according to the unions representing the state's railroad workers.

The vote to override the veto of H.R. 2364 -- the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990 -- is scheduled for tomorrow at 6:15 p.m. The vote is the first serious test of the president's veto power in Congress. The House has already voted to override, and if the Senate concurs it will mark the first successful override of a veto by President Bush.

President Bush vetoed the bill over a provision that closes a loophole in current law by granting the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to scrutinize acquisitions of major railroads by "non- railroad" companies. This provision would only subject non-railroad companies to the same regulatory scrutiny that railroad carriers face during sale transactions.

"President Bush's veto is frivolous and has serious public and transportation policy implications," declared Richard I. Kilroy, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association. "It is ridiculous to kill important Amtrak funding legislation over a provision that charges the ICC with oversight authority on railroad purchases by non-rail companies to ensure such transactions do not pose threats to interstate commerce."

According to Kilroy, the extension of commuter service into New Hampshire and Maine could be jeopardized unless the present loophole is closed, since commuter service would travel over Boston and Maine Railroad tracks. Currently, a non-railroad company could acquire and dismantle the B&M without federal scrutiny.

In addition to the ICC provision, the bill extends Amtrak funding through fiscal year 1992 and protects railroad workers whose duties force them to travel through more than one state from paying taxes to more than one state.

"Maine's elected senators who face tomorrow's override vote I am sure will understand that this bill makes sense for the people of Maine," stated

Kilroy. "H.R. 2364 not only provides necessary Amtrak funding, but addresses important transportation and tax policies that impact on thousands of workers and commuters in Maine."

ST. LOUIS (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - A modified F-15 became the first fighter to make a short landing with the assistance of two- dimensional, thrust-reversing engine nozzles.

The U.S. Air Force-McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) F-15 Short Takeoff and Landing/Maneuver Technology Demonstrator (STOL/MTD) concluded a 60-minute test flight last month by landing in less than 1,650 feet, corrected for test conditions, on a runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., home of the Air Force Flight Test Center. This is approximately one-third to one-half the distance required by most of today's operational fighters.

McDonnell Douglas test pilot Larry Walker commanded the two-seat aircraft during the mission. Maj. Erwin "Bud" Jenschke Jr., the Air Force's chief test pilot for the F-15 S/MTD program, flew in the rear cockpit.

The short landing distance is made possible by new Pratt and Whitney thrust-vectoring and reversing engine nozzles coupled to a new McDonnell Douglas flight control system. For short landings, the primary exhaust area is blocked, forcing the engine exhaust to vent through louvers at the top and bottom of the nozzle. During approach, the louvers are controlled to establish the landing speed selected by the pilot. Upon touchdown, the louvers direct the flow forward, providing full reverse thrust to limit ground roll distance.

"The loss of friendly runways early in a conflict is very probable, since airfields are a high-priority target," said Lt. Col. Felix Sanchez, STOL/MTD program manager for the Air Force. "This short landing test demonstrates that using thrust-reversing engine nozzles to land on a small strip of runway, or even on the Autobahn, can solve the runway denial problem and allow our fighters to continue to fly and fight."

The F-15 STOL/MTD's thrust-reversing, thrust-vectoring engine nozzles were designed and built by Pratt and Whitney's Government Engine Business unit in West Palm Beach, Fla. McDonnell Douglas of St. Louis, is the F-15 Eagle prime contractor.

The STOL/MTD program is managed by the Air Force Flight Dynamics Laboratory of the Aeronautical Systems Division's Wright Research and Development Center at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio.

SINGAPORE (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Asia's population growth and continuing economic expansion have combined to make the region a formidable competitor in world petrochemical markets, but there are still many hurdles to overcome, the president of Amoco Chemicals Far East Limited said here today.

"The challenges facing the petrochemical industry in Asia are similar to those faced by the industry in Europe and North America at various times in the past," Kevin P. Lynch told the Oil Daily/International Herald Tribune petrochemical conference.

"As the history of the petrochemical industry demonstrates," he said, "technological innovations have led manufacturers almost invariably through a cycle of rapid growth, overcapacity, and rationalization."

Lynch noted that the United States built its industry primarily to serve domestic consumption, but many countries -- including those in Asia -- don't have the luxury of domestic markets where strong local demand already exists.

"Thus," he said, "we see countries that possess crude oil building world-scale petrochemical manufacturing capacity for export markets which are already in a state of oversupply."

This leads to a temporary oversupply situation that is followed by rationalization, Lynch said.

"Entrenched producers are likely to present a stiff challenge to new Southeast Asian manufacturers bent on building capacity for export to areas that are already oversupplied.

"For example, within Asia," he said, "entrenched producers in Japan, Taiwan, and Korea are unlikely to allow new producers in Southeast Asia to displace them as suppliers to traditional export markets."

Lynch said that a successful global enterprise understands business conditions worldwide and conducts its manufacturing, marketing, distribution, and service activities -- as well as its research and development, and design and engineering efforts -- on a globally optimized basis.

Another challenge facing the Asian petrochemical industry is the growing concern for the global environment. Lynch added that the environmental pressures could affect the availability and costs of feedstocks for petrochemicals as well as raise production costs for all manufacturers.

"Because environmental protection now extends to nearly every country on earth," Lynch said, "no competitive advantage accrues to manufacturers who fail to conduct their operations responsibly."

In addition to concern for the global environment, the globalization of commodities markets has prompted petrochemical manufacturers to think and act internationally.

In closing, Lynch said that "Asia has before it a bright and prosperous future in petrochemicals. Those who participate in this prosperity will be those who remain committed to avoiding past mistakes and take a global view."

RENO, NEV. (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Porsche Cars North America Inc. announced it will recall 19 of its 1990 Porsche 928 S4 and 928 GT models to correct a defect in a plastic mounting nut.

The fuel tanks of these vehicles are fitted with a fuel gauge sending unit mounting nut which could crack. Under certain fuel level and operating conditions, fuel may leak from the fuel tank due to the defective nut. A fire could result if the fuel were to contact a hot exhaust system.

Porsche said no incidents of fires have been reported. There have been no reports of accidents or injuries relating to the defect.

Porsche said today that it notified the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and Porsche dealers nationwide of its plan to recall the vehicles. Owners of the affected vehicles will be notified by mail. The company has a toll-free number to answer consumers' questions about the recall, which will be listed in customer notification letters.

BETHESDA, MD (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Martin Marietta Corporation (NYSE: ML) has been awarded a $145.7 million competitive contract from the Navy to develop and produce advanced model towed array sonars for U.S. submarines.

The work will be performed at Martin Marietta Aero & Naval Systems' Glen Burnie, Md., facility.

Towed array sonars consist of large numbers of sensitive listening devices called hydrophones, embedded in long hoses that are towed behind surface ships and submarines. They are used to detect other vessels.

The initial $42.6 million full-scale engineering development contract includes delivery of two engineering development models of the TB-12X towed array and signal receiver and various test equipment items. The award also includes six production signal receivers. Options in the five-year contract call for production of an additional 40 arrays and 38 receivers to be delivered by 1995.

DENVER (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Coral Companies, Inc. (NASDAQ: COCI), today reported gains in revenues and earnings for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended March 31, 1990.

"The substantial investment in people, programs and services made during the past two years began to generate rewarding returns in the fiscal 1990 fourth quarter and heighten our optimism for the future," Paul M. Lionti, president and chief executive officer, said. "While sales for the quarter were modestly above the prior year's level, the product mix generated significantly greater profit margins," he added.

Fourth quarter net income reached $294,016 or two cents per share on revenues of $1,203,243 compared to a net loss of $12,641 or less than one-cent per share on revenues of $1,118,437 for the same period last year.

For the year, net income was $136,979 or one-cent per share on revenues of $7,966,381 versus a net loss of $180,242 or one-cent per share on revenues of $5,593,105 for fiscal 1989.

During the fourth quarter, Coral Companies began providing the General Business Systems division of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. with an interfaced combination of its primary products, Profile 90 and Profile 2000 direct marketing and telemarketing software, for the business-to-business catalogue and telemarketing operations of AT&T Direct.

Coral also installed a $500,000 Unisys computer at APAC Telemarketing, Inc., Chicago. This was the second telemarketing system purchased by APAC from Coral, and will use UNIX-based software introduced by Coral in December 1989. APAC ranks in the top 25 outbound telemarketing organizations in the United States.

In addition, the company formed a strategic alliance with Unisys

Corporation, under which it was appointed a Value-Added Reseller of Unisys. Unisys will assist Coral in marketing the Profile Series direct marketing software throughout the United States and Europe.

"The company is in its best financial condition in history and we are well positioned for the period of substantial growth that lies ahead," Lionti, commented. At March 31, 1990, Coral Companies had total assets of $6.7 million compared to $2.7 million at the close of fiscal 1989 and shareholders' equity rose to $4.6 million from $1.3 million a year earlier.

Coral Companies specializes in the global marketing of hardware and software business solutions to companies involved in distribution, direct marketing and telephone sales, including catalog and fulfillment companies.

DETROIT (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Auto affordability has declined 32 percent since 1972, according to a new index developed by Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, which measures consumers' ability to purchase and finance new automobiles.

"The Auto Affordability Index indicates that the total cost of a car has significantly out-paced family growth from 1972 through 1989," said David G. Sowerby, second vice president and economist, Manufacturers Bank.

"Passage of the pending Clean Air Bill will lead to further declines in auto affordability by as much as $700 per motor vehicle," Sowerby added.

The Auto Affordability Index is based on median family income divided by the total cost of an auto. Total cost includes both price and finance charges and was derived by calculating the average down payment plus average monthly payments over the life of the loan.

The Auto Affordability Index is calculated with 1972 as base year equal to 100, and depicts the declining affordability of an average automobile based on price increases and finance costs. Specifically, the Auto Affordability Index has decreased from 100 in 1972 to 67.9 in 1989, a 32.1-percent decline. As a result, in 1972, the average family had to spend 20.8 weeks of its annual income to purchase a car. By 1989, that figure had risen to 30.7 weeks.

A graph of the Index shows that the auto affordability suffered its steepest declines from 1980 through 1982, due to high interest rates and to price increases significantly above the inflation rate. The price increases resulted in part from voluntary export restraints and environment regulation.

LA JOLLA, CA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Triton Group Ltd. (NYSE: TGL) today reported results of operations for its first fiscal quarter ended April 30 1990. While revenues increased to $72 million, up 70 percent from $43 million in the first quarter last year, the Company sustained a loss of $12.8 million, or $1.01 per share, compared to a loss of $730,000, or $.07 per share, in the first quarter of the prior year.

The increase in revenues reflects the acquisition of Liquor Barn in October 1989. The loss is attributable to budgeted interest expense and amortization of acquisition costs at Western Sizzlin and Liquor Barn, and to adjustment of marketable security investments to realizable values. The Company also noted that its $140 million investment in Fuqua Industries, Inc., returned less than 5 percent on an annualized basis during the quarter.

Charles R. Scott, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, commented in reviewing the results, "Except for the nonrecurring investment writedowns, our operating results for the first quarter were close to plan. We knew when Western Sizzlin and Liquor Barn were acquired that interest costs and amortization would result in losses during the building phase.

"Our other companies are operating profitably, although the effects of the softening economy are beginning to appear. The improvement in first quarter operating performance reported by Fuqua is also encouraging. We believe that most of Triton's 'bad news' is over but, because of the new acquisitions, we do not expect the company to be profitable at the bottom line for fiscal 1991."

Triton Group is a diversified holding company. Its operating businesses are Liquor Barn, Inc., the nation's largest specialty retailer of wine, beer, spirits and related products; National Airmotive Corporation, which distributes and overhauls turbine engines for aviation, marine and industrial applications; Western Metal Lath, which produces metal lath and studs and other construction industry products; and Western Sizzlin, Inc., one of the nation's largest franchised family steak restaurant chains.

Triton's controlling shareholder, Intermark, Inc. (AMEX: IMI) is an operating/holding company whose business is to own control of and add value to well-established, mid- sized American growth companies operating in broadly diverse industries.

Triton and Intermark have entered into an Agreement and Plan of Merger and Reorganization calling for the combination of the two companies. BETHESDA, MD (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Rice University and the Howard Hughes Medical Institute today announced a long-term collaborative agreement for conducting medical research at the university with an initial focus on cancer and birth defects.

Richard H. Gomer, Ph.D., has been appointed to a three-year term as an HHMI investigator. He will become a full-time employee of the institute while retaining his appointment as assistant professor of biochemistry at Rice.

HHMI investigators spend at least three-fourths of their time in research, free to choose their own lines of scientific investigation. The remaining one-fourth of their time is devoted to academic duties.

"We are pleased to undertake this new collaboration with Rice University and are excited by the promise it holds for broadening our understanding of basic biochemical processes," said HHMI President Purnell W. Choppin, M.D. "An important long-term goal of our collective research activities is to apply what we learn in the laboratory to the prevention and treatment of disease."

Rice President George Rupp said: "We are honored that Rice was selected to participate in this medical collaboration. We are most pleased that Richard's research in cellular growth will be contributing to crucial discoveries in medical research."

Gomer's research involves some of the basic questions of cellular growth and differentiation. In a major line of investigation, his laboratory is seeking a more complete understanding of how cells within a tissue can sense the mass of the entire tissue. This mass-sensing mechanism helps guide wound healing and tissue regeneration. But if the process goes awry, it can lead to tumor formation.

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute, established in 1953, employs scientists in the fields of cell biology, genetics, immunology, neuroscience and structural biology. HHMI investigators conduct medical research in laboratories at outstanding academic medical centers and universities throughout the United States. The institute also supports science education through its grants program.

PALISADES PARK, NJ (June 11) PR Newswire - Metrobank Financial Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: MFGR), the parent company of Metrobank For Savings, FSB, today announced a net loss of $903,000, or $.49 per share, for the three months ended March 31, 1990, as compared to a profit of $250,000, or $.14 per share, for the same quarter in 1989.

The company attributed the loss for the first quarter of 1990 to the depression in the real estate markets in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, which resulted in increases in the level of non-performing loans and decreases in the levels of income from loan origination and real estate development activities. Overall non-interest income, which includes income from loan origination and real estate development activities, decreased $2.1 million, or 62.5 percent, to $1.3 million for the first quarter of 1990 from $3.4 million for the comparable quarter in 1989. At March 31, 1990, non-performing loans, exclusive of real estate acquired in settlement of loans and before loss allowances provided, increased to $61.5 million, or 11.51 percent of assets, from $23 million, or 3.89 percent of assets, for the same date in 1989. The company had established $22.9 million in allowances for losses on loans and foreclosed real estate at March 31, 1990, as compared to $2.9 million at March 31, 1989.

The company also reported a reduction in operating expenses of $927,000, or 17.6 percent, as compared to the first quarter of 1989. The reduction in expenses was due, in part, to a decrease in compensation, which reflects a reduction in the number of employees.

As previously reported, Metrobank does not meet the new minimum capital requirements imposed on all savings associations by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989. As a result, Metrobank must submit a regulatory capital plan to the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) for approval and may be subject to regulatory or supervisory action by federal regulators. The bank is preparing its regulatory capital plan for filing with the OTS as soon as practical.

At March 31, 1990, the company's stockholders' equity was $13.7 million, or 2.56 percent of total assets. Total assets at March 31, 1990, were $534.5 million. The book value of Metrobank Financial Group, Inc. stock per share at year end was $7.40, based upon 1.85 million shares outstanding.

Metrobank For Savings, FSB is an FDIC-insured institution headquartered in Palisades Park and maintains branch offices in Fort Lee, Cliffside Park and Bayonne, N.J.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Gordon Armstrong has been named president of marketing for Morgan Creek Productions, it was announced today by James G. Robinson, president, chief executive officer of the independent film production company.

Armstrong will begin his new position on July 2nd.

An industry veteran, Armstrong joins Morgan Creek following ten years with MCA Inc. where he was v.p. advertising, publicity and promotion of Universal Pictures for five years and executive v.p. marketing for MCA Recreation Services.

During his tenure at Universal Pictures he implemented the marketing campaigns for such films as "E.T.," "On Golden Pond," "Coal Miners Daughter," and "The Blues Brothers," among others. Under his leadership at MCA Recreation, Universal Studios Hollywood established new annual attendance records from 1986-89 with their annual revenue increasing from $48 million to $142 million. Armstrong also developed marketing strategy for Universal Studios Florida.

In making the announcement Robinson said the addition of Armstrong would bring "an expanded dimension to the marketing of Morgan Creek's films at a time when the company is embarking on a new $200 million, nine picture slate."

As part of Armstrong's duties and objectives he will be further developing the promotional areas as well as supervising music and book tie-ins.

"We look forward to Gordon developing inventive and exciting new plans to maximize exposure for Morgan Creek product utilizing the experience and techniques he's honed both at Universal in the motion picture department and the recreational areas over the last ten years. With advertising becoming more costly and the market place becoming crowded we feel that it's essential for Morgan Creek to begin strategic planning a year prior to the film's release and for other merchandising and marketing areas to be fully explored and utilized in the future," Robinson continued.

Armstrong was previously president of worldwide marketing for Dino De Laurentiis Productions where he created worldwide marketing campaigns for such films as "King Kong", "Serpico" and "Three Days of the Condor" and spent six years at 20th Century Fox in New York in various executive marketing positions in the film division.

PHOENIX, AZ (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Accuride Corporation, a unit of Phelps Dodge Industries, today announced a $48 million, five-year capital investment program to improve significantly its productivity and to enhance its market position. Accuride Corporation is North America's leading manufacturer and marketer of steel and aluminum wheels and rims for trucks, trailers and buses.

Gerald T. O'Neill, President of Accuride, said that the program signals a major capital commitment by Phelps Dodge to Accuride's manufacturing facilities at the company's plants in Henderson, Kentucky and London, Ontario, Canada.

"This undoubtedly is the most significant single investment in capital equipment ever undertaken by a North American wheel manufacturer," stated Mr. O'Neill. "The five-year modernization program will strengthen Accuride's ability to provide world class product quality, customer service and competitiveness across the complete Accuride line of rims and wheels for light, medium and heavy trucks, trailers and buses. The new capital equipment at Accuride's Henderson and London plants will improve overall flexibility, reduce lead time and increase productivity through automation, state-of-the-art manufacturing and handling systems, and, together with DC rim welding and enhanced statistical process control, will give Accuride the most advanced wheel production lines in North America. These changes will permit major reductions in line changeover time, work-in-process inventories and scrapped materials. As a result, Accuride will offer its customers improved just-in-time delivery. This increased productivity will enable Accuride to remain North America's lowest cost wheel and rim manufacturer while improving its industry-leading reputation for product quality and reliability."

Mr. O'Neill said the $48 million budgeted for the five-year program is in addition to Accuride's annual maintenance capital expenditures at its two manufacturing plants.

Phelps Dodge is North America's largest producer of copper. The company is also the world's second largest producer of carbon blacks, the leading North American fabricator of wheels and rims for medium and heavy trucks, a major manufacturer of magnet wire and specialty conductors, and has investments overseas in mines and wire and cable manufacturing facilities. The company's operations are located throughout the United States and in twenty-two foreign countries.

DEERFIELD, IL (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Sara Lee Bakery announced today that it intends to close its 26-year-old production facility in Deerfield by March 1, 1991.

Sara Lee Bakery headquarters, research and development and technical services will remain in the Chicago area, said C. Steven McMillan, senior vice president of Sara Lee Corporation (NYSE: SLE) responsible for U.S.-based food operations, and chief executive officer of Sara Lee Bakery. Sara Lee Bakery is a division of Chicago-based Sara Lee Corporation.

The Deerfield plant currently employs approximately 500 people. The plant's production of Sara Lee frozen baked goods will be shifted to other facilities. Sara Lee Bakery operates plants in Dubois, Ind.; New Hampton Iowa; Kansas City, Kan.; Traverse City, Mich.; Forest, Miss.; Tarboro, N.C.; Greenville, S.C.; as well as in Canada, the United Kingdom and Australia.

"This was a difficult decision to make because of Sara Lee Bakery's long-standing presence in Deerfield and our loyal, dedicated work force," McMillan said. "However, the closing is necessary for us to remain competitive and maintain an industry leadership position."

He stated, "A principal reason for announcing the plant closing at this time is to give our employees significant advance notice, so we can work cooperatively with them and their representatives to plan for the future."

The Deerfield production facility was originally built to handle a relatively narrow product line. "The reality today is that we have newer and more flexible production facilities that are better able to handle current and future requirements for the broad range of baked goods we produce," McMillan said. "Our other facilities are also equipped to produce baked goods better suited to changing consumer preferences."

In addition to announcing the plant closing, McMillan said that Sara Lee Bakery is reducing its administrative work force by approximately 100 people.

BOCA RATON, FL (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Cascade International, Inc. (NASDAQ: KOSM), announced today that it made a tentative offer to the management of Conston Corporation (AMEX: KCS) by which Cascade proposed to make an equity investment of $12 million in Conston Corporation for use as working capital.

Cascade also offered to provide interim financing of up to $5 million for working capital purposes upon receipt of adequate collateral. As part of this transaction, Cascade proposed to purchase the controlling stock interest of the Conston Family and to provide funds for the payment of a cash dividend of $.50 cents per share to the public shareholders other than the Conston Family and its associates after closing the transaction.

The interim financing arrangement was proposed to enable Conston Corporation to continue operations as a specialty retailer of women's clothing and accessories focusing on large size women's apparel in approximately 330 locations. With the financing, Cascade plans to install a seasoned and highly experienced management team to operate Conston which reported a net loss of $10,481,000 ($1.38) per share) on gross sales of $170,286,000 for its fiscal year ended March 3, 1990. At the time of the press release, the offer has not been accepted or rejected by Conston's board of directors.

The interim financing to be provided is intended to enable Conston Corporation to operate until closing of this transaction. Cascade anticipates a formal agreement could be signed within approximately two weeks after conclusion of Due Diligence to be conducted by the New Management team. The closing of the transaction could be completed by July 29, 1990.

Cascade, a diversified holding company, operating through its wholly owned subsidiaries is a broad line retailer of cosmetics, skin care products, designer fragrances and women's apparel. Cascade operates retail outlets in 20 states.

Its principal subsidiaries are Jean Cosmetics; J.B. Boutiques; Boutiques Allison and Boutiques Diana. For the nine months ended March 31, 1990, Cascade reported net income of $5,290,499 ($.29 cents per share) on gross sales of $32,289,000.

RICHMOND, BRITISH COLUMBIA (JUNE 11) PR NEWSWIRE - Charles Sanida, President of Richmond Steel Recycling of Vancouver, British Columbia, today announced his intention to install and operate a scrap preparation facility on Oahu. Sanida said that metal recycling is attractive on Oahu for two reasons, the availability of scrap and the presence of a local consumer of ferrous scrap, Hawaiian Western Steel. The majority of scrap available in the islands is automotive scrap, which would be made into usable steel, thus contributing to the beauty of the islands and providing a means of recycling unsightly used goods.

Hawaiian Western Steel consumes approximately 30-40,000 tons of scrap per year producing steel products that aid the local construction industry, while providing jobs for up to 100 local residents. The new scrap preparation facility is expected to employ between 12 and 15 people. Sanida noted that scrap generated in excess of Hawaiian Western Steel's needs would be exported.

''We are very confident about a scrap processing endeavor utilizing state of the art preparation equipment in Hawaii'', said. Sanida, ''and we expect this facility to be a smaller version of our Vancouver operation.''

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 11) UPI - Interior Minister Richard Sacher knew months ago where to find missing files on the deputy president of Parliament who was revealed to be a secret police collaborator, a key legislator said.

Parliamentary deputy Jaruslav Lis, chairman of the Defense and Security Committee, told United Press International Sunday that Sacher had personal knowledge of the whereabouts of Josef Bartoncik's files for three months after they disappeared from ministry files in January.

The files were missing during a period in which political figures were being investigated as part of a voluntary program by all political parties to rid from public life former collaborators with the secret police.

The program already has prompted the resignations of Jan Budaj, chairman of the pro-democracy Public Against Violence, Deputy Prime Minister Josef Hromadka and Deputy Foreign Minister Vera Bartoskova.

The revelations are expected to be another blow to the credibility of the People's Party, of which Bartoncik was chairman.

The party is one of three Christian Democratic coalition partners that the Civic Forum, which won the country's weekend elections, is expected to woo to enter into a government coalition.

Sacher is the People's Party's highest-placed official in the government. His failure to act more quickly in firing or reassigning secret policemen after the force was disbanded late last year had already put his job in jeopardy.

At a news conference, Civic Forum spokesman Petr Kucera said he hoped ''the crisis will be resolved so (the party) can become a trustworthy and reliable partner'' in the government.

Bartoncik was hospitalized with what doctors described as a heart condition Wednesday, the day after Deputy Interior Minister Jan Ruml said he had been presented with the charges and had promised to withdraw from public life.

Bartoncik has neither admitted nor denied that he was an agent code-named ''Hajek'' who spied on activists for the dissident Charter 77 group, including his colleague, Vaclav Benda, head of the Christian Democratic Party of Moravia and Bohemia. Ruml, who was accused by the People's Party of violating campaign rules by announcing the findings at the last minute, said Bartoncik's files disappeared from the ministry in January.

Ruml said he learned the information only Tuesday when Bartoncik's former secret police commander volunteered the information.

The revelation is widely believed to have been a major factor in the Christian Democrats' poor showing, putting them in third place behind the Communist Party in the Czech Republic. The People's Party is one of three Christian Democratic parties in coalition.

Bartoncik, deputy president of Parliament, has refused to step down either as party chairman or as a parliamentary deputy.

OTTAWA (JUNE 11) UPI - The future of a constitutional amendment aimed at keeping Quebec in Canada rested with Newfoundland, an island with deep hostilities toward the French-speaking province.

The constitutional amendment, formally called the Meech Lake Accord, recognizes Quebec as a distinct society and empowers it to promote and preserve its French language and culture.

It was negotiated by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and Canada's 10 provincial premiers after Quebec refused to sign the 1982 constitution on grounds it did not recognize the province as a distinct society.

But the other provinces disagreed over the powers the proposed amendment would give Quebec, threatening the fragile and often hostile relationship between Quebec and the rest of Canada.

Quebec, home to 6.2 million French-speaking people, has threatened to consider seceding if the Meech Lake Accord is not approved.

Early Sunday, after seven days of marathon negotiations that neared collapse several times, Mulroney and the 10 provinces signed an agreement endorsing the original Meech Lake Accord and agreeing to try to reform the Senate.

Manitoba and New Brunswick, two provinces that had opposed the accord, said they would ensure it was approved in their legislatures before a June 23 deadline.

But Newfoundland Premier Clyde Wells, a Liberal and constitutional lawyer, said his signature on the agreement was conditional on the results of a province-wide referendum, or free vote, in the provincial legislature. Opinion polls indicate the majority of Newfoundlanders oppose the accord.

The accord is likely to face tough sledding in the province. Newfoundland and its region of Labrador, both on the east coast of Canada's mainland next to Quebec, together comprise 2.2 percent of the nation's population.

It is the poorest of Canada's provinces and has the largest unemployment rate. Nonetheless, Newfoundland has a history of charting its own course despite pressure from the rest of the country.

The first of Britain's overseas colonies, Newfoundland refused to join the confederation until 1949. It is still bitter about the 1763 Treaty of Paris that gave to France the tiny islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off Newfoundland's south coast. The islands are noted for their lucrative fish stocks.

An even greater cause of resentment for Newfoundland was its agreement to sell Churchill Falls electricity produced in Labrador to Hydro Quebec. Under the terms of the contract, Hydro Quebec gets the power at less than market value and exports it, at several times the cost, to markets in the United States. Quebec refuses to renegotiate the contract, which costs Newfoundland an estimated $800 million a year in lost revenues.

Mulroney will likely pay a political price for the secretive negotiations and his repeated threats to premiers that Quebec would leave if they failed to endorse the Meech Lake Accord.

The majority of English-speaking Canadians oppose the accord on grounds Quebec will use its special powers to pass laws that benefit the French, but violate the rights of English-speaking minorities.

Wells unsuccessfully attempted to have a provision added to the accord that would allow for periodic reviews to ensure the distinct society clause does not override the national Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Quebec opposed the measure.

Mulroney said the agreement ''will allow us to turn a page on the history of the constitution and start ... building a stronger future for all our children.''

Wells, who became a hero to the majority of English-speaking Canadians opposed to the accord, said in an impassioned speech that he recognized Quebec was a distinct society, but he remained concerned about the special powers it would receive through passage of the constitutional amendment.

Quebecers, he said, must ''place Canada first and recognize that, like all of the other provinces, Quebec is second.''

Opinion polls indicate that the majority of those outside Quebec oppose the Meech Lake Accord because it gives the province a special status. Polls have shown that most Canadians believe Quebec will separate from Canada regardless of what happens to the Meech Lake Accord.

Quebec opinion polls confirm that sentiment, with the majority of Francophones, including the business community, supporting secession.

(JUNE 11) UPI - The company fighting the blaze aboard the 38-Million-gallon Norwegian oil tanker riding at anchor 57 miles southeast of Galveston, Texas, plans to circle the vessel with six fireboats Monday. Smit America said Sunday it would launch a full-fledged effort to douse the inferno fueled by leaking crude oil. Officials have expressed fears the ship may sink and lose its cargo if the fire is NOT extinguished.

A severe thunderstorm which dumped up to one-and-a-half inches of rain on the Las Vegas Valley Sunday sparked flash flooding that resulted in the death of an elderly woman. The UNidentified woman was killed when a wall of water swept her car down a wash near McCarran International Airport. The car eventually lodged beneath an overpass. A torrent of water also swept an airport shuttle bus about one block. Firefighters rescued 13 passengers trapped in the bus.

Japanese revelers hoisted glasses of rice wine and unfurled a Peruvian flag to celebrate the electoral victory scored Sunday by Alberto Fujimori. Peruvian voters gave Fujimori... the son of Japanese immigrants... the nod over opponent Mario Vargas Llosa. One pollster showed Fujimori netting more than 56 percent of the vote compared to the 36-point-six percent garnered by his foe. Vargas Llosa conceded defeat hours after the polls closed.

West Germany says it will help bail out the Soviet economy. (JUNE 11) UPI - A previously unknown World War Two S-S bunker was found last week by East German border troops digging in East Berlin's Postdamer Platz, a former crossing point of the now-defunct Berlin Wall. The troops discovered the bunker while working to restore the site prior to a charity concert. Inside, they found rifles and ammunition, as well as murals glorifying the Nazis. The bunker is 50 yards from the site where Hitler spent his last days before committing suicide in April 1945.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Alberto Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants, rode a tidal wave of economic discontent and deep disillusionment in Peru's traditional political parties to emerge as the winner in Sunday's presidential election.

Fujimori, 50, rose from virtual obscurity two months ago to challenge novelist Mario Vargas Llosa by promising a break from politics as usual and a gentler path toward revitalizing Peru's hobbling economy.

An agricultural engineer, Fujimori was barely noticeable in public opinion surveys preceding an April 8 first-round presidential vote. But in the final days of the campaign, he earned a new nickname as the ''Japanese Tsunami,'' stepping forward as the only alternative to Vargas Llosa and the political right.

Fujimori forged his own political party in 1988, Change '90, as an alternative to the established parties that were no longer palatable for many Peruvians. He invited prominent Protestants and evangelical Christians to join him, along with small business owners and medium-size industrialists.

Their common thread was a distaste for traditional politics and criticism of Vargas Llosa's plans to inflict economic ''shock treatment'' on Peru to pull it out of its economic doldrums.

A party campaign pamphlet described Change '90 as ''a movement of independent citizens under the imperative of their faith in God, love for the country, hope for a better future and pushed by a firm vocation of service, arriving to confront in a technical manner the profound economic, political and social crisis that oppresses the Peruvian people.''

But Fujimori's own economic proposals were vague. He promised to restart the nation's manufacturing sector and invigorate agriculture without offering details of how that would be carried out.

In a debate during the last week of the campaign, Fujimori also said he would create a new monetary unit on par with the dollar in an effort to control galloping inflation, which reached 2,775 percent in 1989.

Fujimori received the backing of the left and President Alan Garcia as well as the ruling American Popular Revolutionary Alliance after the first-round vote.

A confrontation between the Roman Catholic Church and Protestants marked the two-month campaign leading to the Sunday vote, in what became known as a ''dirty war.'' Fujimori came under attack in the overwhelmingly Catholic country because of his heavy evangelical support.

The Catholic Church sent thousands into the streets after handbills appeared that attacked Catholic beliefs, purportedly produced by Protestants. Fujimori supporters said the handbills were the work of provocateurs trying to stir up Catholic sentiment in favor of Vargas Llosa.

But Fujimori was forced to reaffirm his faith in the Catholic Church publicly and said he would not change existing state-church laws.

His campaign also accused Vargas Llosa supporters of racism for attacks on Fujimori's Japanese ancestry. And there were charges that Vargas Llosa was pitting the white elite of Peruvian society against the ''brown'' majority descendants of mixed Indian-European ancestry.

Curiously, Fujimori was affectionately known as ''El Chinito,'' or the ''little Chinaman,'' despite his Japanese ancestry.

Fujimori was born in Lima July 28, 1939, Peru's Independence Day, to Noachi and Mutsue Fujimori, immigrants from Kumamoto, Japan. That will also be the date for his inauguration.

He graduated with a degree in agricultural engineering in 1960 from the National Agrarian University. He did post-graduate work at the University of Wisconsin in 1970 in the United States and at the University of Strasbourg in France.

He was president of the National Agrarian University at La Molina between 1984 and 1989 and president of the National University Rectors Assembly from 1987-1989.

Fujimori married Susana Higushi in 1974. They have four children, Keiko Sofia, Hiro Alberto, Sachi Marcela and Kenji Gerardo.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (JUNE 11) UPI - Actress Elizabeth Taylor's recovery from the pneumonia and depression that have kept her in the hospital for nearly two months was helped along during the weekend by the visit of a 23-year-old Detroit man with whom she is ''romantically linked,'' a spokeswoman said.

Taylor, 58, underwent an abdominal biopsy using a tiny camera inserted through an incision on Saturday when doctors feared new infection. Nothing was found, the Oscar-winning actress's spokeswoman, Chen Sam, said Sunday from New York.

Sam said Julian Lee Hobbs flew in from Detroit and spent the weekend at Taylor's side, which the spokeswoman said helped her deal with the depression that had hindered her recovery from the near-fatal bout with pneumonia.

''They are romantically linked, yes,'' Sam said, adding that Taylor and Hobbs would spend some time at her Bel-Air mansion when she is released in about two weeks. The couple will then fly to her home in Switzerland because her doctors have prescribed ''a fresher climate,'' Sam said. The spokeswoman said Taylor has lost about 25 pounds during her hospitalization.

Taylor was admitted to St. John's Hospital and Health Center April 16 after being transferred from another hospital where she had been undergoing treatment since April 9 for a sinus infection and high fever.

Taylor's health problems date back to her childhood, when she was injured in a fall from a horse while filming the 1945 movie, ''National Velvet.'' She nearly died of pneumonia in the early 1960s and has admitted to a long dependence of alcohol and such drugs as Demerol and Valium.

She won best-actress Oscars for ''Butterfield 8'' and ''Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?'' and has been married seven times, twice to the late actor Richard Burton. She was romantically linked to publishing magnate Malcolm Forbes, who died recently.

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (JUNE 11) UPI - Coast Guard investigators want to know why a 617-foot ocean liner was more than one mile outside a shipping lane when it ran aground off Cape Cod in dense fog and leaked more than 1,000 gallons of fuel oil into the Atlantic.

None of the more than 687 vacationing passengers and 380 crew members were injured when the Bermuda Star struck bottom about 2 miles from the cape Sunday morning, ripping two holes in its hull, as it headed for Nova Scotia from New York City.

The ship, which took on water for about 90 minutes before the flooding was brought under control, remained grounded for nearly 13 hours before being pulled free by tugboats.

Coast Guard officials said the oil spill was contained to an area around the ship and caused no major environmental damage. But the ship's operator Bermuda Star Lines of Teaneck, N.J., was charged with violating the federal Clean Water Act, which is punishable by up to a $50,000 fine, the Coast Guard said.

At least three members of the mostly foreign crew, and a local pilot who was guiding the ship at the time, underwent drug and alcohol tests after the accident, but the results were not expected until later in the week, officials said.

A spokesman for the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office said, however, none of the officers appeared to be drunk or otherwise impaired.

The grounding was the second major cruise line mishap along the East Coast in three weeks. The Regent Star, returning to Philadelphia from a cruise to the Bahamas, ran aground in the Delaware Bay last month when an electrical fire knocked out its power. The 900 passengers were kept aboard nearly two extra days.

The Bermuda Star, which was approaching the Cape Cod Canal at the beginning of the peninsula, was at least one mile outside the bay's shipping channel when Sunday's accident occurred about 8:30 a.m., officials said.

The Coast Guard's Office of Marine Safety in Providence, R.I., immediately began looking into the cause of the grounding.

''It's unusual. They usually don't get that far out of the channel. I don't know what they were doing out there,'' said Gregg Peterson, a Coast Guard senior quartermaster at Woods Hole.

Visibility at the time of the accident was reduced to about 40 yards and the ship was waiting for fog to clear before entering the canal, a waterway separating the hook-shaped cape from the mainland, officials said.

The ship was headed to Halifax, Nova Scotia, after a scheduled stop in Provincetown on the tip of Cape Cod. The local navigator, a member of the New England Marine Pilots Association, boarded the ship as it passed Newport, R.I., about 30 miles before it ran aground, the Coast Guard said.

''We aren't sure if he was anchored and the anchor drifted, or if he was just going around in circles when he hit,'' said Fred Danhauser, a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers.

The channel in the area is marked by buoys that lead ships north through Buzzard's Bay to the canal, which spans the cape east to west. It is common for ships to wait for fog to clear before trying to navigate the narrow channel, officials said.

''You're supposed to 'mill about smartly,' as it's called: maintaining your basic position by going around in small circles. And that probably wasn't done,'' said Petty Officer 1st Class Dan Vineski at the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office.

The Coast Guard initially denied the captain's request to evacuate passengers from the vessel, hoping to pull the ship free on the incoming tide. When that effort failed, several ferries were used to evacuate the passengers, who were later bused to hotels in Boston for the night.

''We were eating breakfast and the eggs fell onto the floor, so we knew something was wrong,'' recalled passenger Leo Brown, 74, of Norristown, Pa., who said he had ''a lot of fun'' despite the accident.

But others were not so happy.

''This was my first cruise and it might be my last cruise,'' said Dorothy Rubright of Denver.

''We didn't like the trip, so we're glad it ended half way through,'' added Howard Perry of Charleston, S.C.

The ship, which leaked between 1,000 and 1,500 gallons of No. 6 from its ruptured 9,500-gallon tank, was finally pulled free by tugboats about 9:10 p.m. and moored nearby for further inspection and repairs, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... the latest news from U-P-I.

The United States and Mexico are working on a free-trade agreement that's modeled after the 18-month-old pact between the U-S and Canada. U-S officials say it will be harder to open trade with Mexico than with Canada because of wider economic and political disparities. President Bush and Mexican President Salinas de Gortari agreed in principle yesterday to lift import barriers such as tariffs to each other's products.

The first... and possibly the last... East German leader to visit the White House will get the red carpet treatment today. President Bush will welcome East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere. A unified Germany will be the chief topic. Bush says he's looking forward to a lot of discussion about German unification.

The Japanese ruling party suffered a setback in a parliamentary by-election yesterday. And that sent Tokyo stock prices and the yen tumbling today. Prime Minister Kaifu's conservative Liberal Democratic Party lost a seat in the upper house of parliament by-election in southern Japan. A member of the Japan Socialist Party won the election.

Three separate projections show Alberto Fujimori will be the new president of Peru. The agricultural engineer who became a politician has an almost 20 percent margin over novelist Mario Vargas Llosa. Fujimori is the son of Japanese immigrants to Japan. Today has been declared a holiday in his ancestral home.

Bulgaria apparently is keeping its former Communist Party in power. A West German polling firm and a Bulgarian watchdog group project that official results will show Bulgaria has given the ex-communists... now known as socialists... a clear victory in parliamentary elections. Final results are expected today.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Tunisia's ruling party appears headed for victory in yesterday's municipal elections. Seven key opposition groups boycotted the election... claiming it would NOT be fair. Only 328 independent opposition candidates ran against 37-hundred 74 government-backed candidates.

Homicide detectives in Arlington, Virginia, have charged a man in the murder of one of seven Washington-area prostitutes killed in the past 13 months. Police are NOT saying what led them to the suspect... identified as 21-year-old Chandar Matta. The woman he's accused of killing was found dead in Arlington May 26th.

A woman was crushed to death on the aerial lift bridge in Duluth, Minnesota, yesterday. Police say the 50-year-old woman stayed on the bridge while it was being raised to let boats pass in the canal below. She was caught in the bridge-raising mechanism. LIMA, Peru (JUNE 11) UPI - President-elect Alberto Fujimori says his economic program to pull Peru out of steep economic tailspin is open to negotiation and anti-cocaine policies are failing and must change.

A political unknown two months ago, Fujimori, 50, the son of Japanese immigrants, won election Sunday after a bitter campaign battle against novelist Mario Vargas Llosa.

Vargas Llosa, leading a center-right coalition, conceded defeat less than three hours after the polls closed. Vote projections by public opinion research companies gave Fujimori about 56 percent of the vote to 36 percent for Vargas Llosa, with the rest of the ballots left blank or annulled.

Fujimori, an agricultural engineer, succeeds unpopular President Alan Garcia July 28 without his Change '90 party holding a majority in congress. He will inherit an inflation rate that soared to 2,775 percent in 1989 and to 350 percent in the first five months of 1990.

He arrived at the presidency after a campaign in which he spoke broadly of his plans for reviving the economy without offering specifics.

''This economic plan is open to discussion with the country's principal political and productive forces,'' he told reporters Sunday.

The government says only about 18 percent of the work force is meaningfully employed and about one-third of Peruvians live in poverty.

Fujimori had scored points with the electorate by sowing fears of the consequences of what he labeled as Vargas Llosa's ''shock'' economic plan to curb inflation and right the economy. He said the plan would close industries, cause more unemployment and hurt the poor the most.

Referring to the ''shock'' plan after the vote, Fujimori said, ''in place of affecting savings, we are going to stimulate them so they can be used for financing investment.''

He also reiterated his proposal to create a new monetary unit to battle inflation.

Because his party does not hold a congressional majority, Fujimori will have to negotiate pacts to allow him to govern.

''Negotiating does not necessarily mean giving in,'' he said. ''No political party has an absolute majority.''

Fujimori and Vargas Llosa called for unity after the bitter campaign in which the two sides exchanged charges of a ''dirty war.'' The campaign saw accusations of dirty tricks, racism and religious intolerance.

Vargas Llosa urged the ''healing of the wounds'' to consolidate Peru's ''fragile democracy,'' and Fujimori called for a national unity government.

In the small Japanese town of Kawachi, Fujimori's ancestral home, revelers broke out the sake and chanted banzai cheers Monday in celebration.

In Tokyo, Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said, ''I extend my hearty congratulations to the president-elect, chosen by the public.''

Fujimori seemed to reject the current anti-cocaine policy for Peru, the world's largest producer of the coca leaf, cocaine's main ingredient. He criticized the militarization of the anti-cocaine effort.

''We cannot continue in the form in which we have been operating,'' Fujimori said. ''Using only repressive measures, the area of coca cultivated in the last 10 years has increased in approximately 100,000 hectares (247,000 acres). The repressive methods have erradicated only 5,000 hectares (12,300 acres).''

He called for opening markets to Peruvian agricultural products, apparently part of a substitution plan to exchange the coca leaf for food crops.

In an apparent reference to the United States, Fujimori also said ''we will not permit military intervention or direct participation.'' The United States has committed millions of dollars in assistance to Peru in its efforts to combat drug trafficking.

He also has said a rural economic development program was needed to fight the powerful Maoist Shining Path guerrilla movement, which dominates a large part of the national territory.

Fujimori was a political unknown just two weeks before an April 8 first-round vote. But he surged ahead of the traditional political parties in the last week weeks before that vote, apparently because he offered voters a fresh face in Peruvian politics.

Fujimori was supported after his April 8 surprise showing by the left and Garcia's American Popular Revolutionary Alliance party. The government openly intervened in his favor during the campaign, taking out newspaper advertisements and attacking Vargas Llosa on the state-owned television channel.

But Fujimori insisted Sunday his party was independent and he pledged to wipe out government corruption.

LONDON (JUNE 11) UPI - Ahmed Jibril, the guerrilla leader suspected in the 1988 bombing of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, threatened to attack Jews leaving the Soviet Union for Israel, The Independent newspaper reported.

The newspaper reported Sunday that Jibril, head of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, said the group is planning to target Soviet Jews to stop their immigration.

''If we are satisfied that the United States will continue helping Israel financially and in all other ways to continue this immigration, then we will use every possible means we can, including the armed struggle, to stop this immigration,'' Jibril told the newspaper in an interview in Tehran, Iran.

There are currently about 30,000 Soviet Jews entering Israel each month, with a total of 150,000 expected for the entire year, the paper said. The swelling numbers have angered the Arab world.

Other estimates on Jews leaving the Soviet Union for Israel are more conservative. Israel's Jewish Agency, a quasi-governmental body responsible for immigration and absorption, reported that 49,000 Soviet Jews have arrived in Israel since April 1989. The Israeli government said 37,000 had arrived in first five months of this year.

Jibril's threat was similar to a warning issued 10 days ago by Israel's chief of military intelligence that the Jewish emigrants from the Soviet Union would be a terrorist target, the paper said.

Jibril said his group was working to halt the flow of Soviet Jews into Israeli occupied territories, but warned their means would intensify if it did not stop.

''We are using diplomatic means now, and political efforts, but when we feel we cannot make any progress in this manner, we will try to find another way,'' he said.

British investigators said in December they believed Jibril's pro-Syrian command was involved in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, which killed all 259 people aboard and 11 Lockerbie residents on the ground Dec. 21, 1988.

Citing intelligence sources, the newspaper said Jibril's group organized the bombing for Iran, which paid them $3 million plus expenses. The bombing was believed to be in retaliation for the shooting down of an Iranian Airbus airliner by the USS Vincennes during the Gulf War, the newspaper said.

Jibril has repeatedly denied any connection with the Pan Am bombing.

SYDNEY, Australia (JUNE 11) UPI - Two American women, rescued after languishing for three days aboard their sinking yacht in rough seas off the northeast Australian coast, said Monday there were times when they thought they would not survive.

Jeannie Talley and Joy-Beth Smith, both from Crescent City, Fla., were rescued by a Taiwanese cargo vessel Sunday from their damaged 36-foot yacht Banshee after being spotted by searching aircraft about 390 miles east of Rockhampton, Queensland state.

A spokesman for the Federal Sea Safety Center in Canberra said the women's yacht was found wallowing in 20-foot seas driven by a 50 mph gale.

They were later airlifted by army helicopter from the cargo ship to a hospital in Gladstone, near Rockhampton.

Talley was uninjured during the 72-hour ordeal but Smith suffered a possible broken leg.

''There were times we didn't think we were going to make it,'' Talley told the Sydney Daily Telegraph. ''We got hit (by heavy seas) and we sent out a distress signal on Thursday night, then we just had to hang in there as best we could.

''We never gave up hope, but it was hell out there.''

An air force Orion aircraft spotted the yacht, on a voyage from Bundaberg, north of Brisbane, to the southwest Pacific island nation of Vanuatu, shortly after the distress signal. As night fell, it dropped a radio beacon and a life raft near the yacht, but searchers were unable to relocate the vessel Friday or Saturday.

OLONGAPO, Philippines (JUNE 11) UPI - Police filed charges Monday against six Filipinos, including a policeman and a navy sailor, in connection with last month's slaying of a U.S. Marine sergeant.

The charges of attempted robbery with homicide and illegal possession of firearm in the May 4 killing of Gunnery Sgt. John Fredette of Buena Park, Calif., carry a maximum penalty of 30 years in jail, said assistant prosecutor Nini Alcala.

Alcala said she would schedule a preliminary investigation soon to determine if the case warranted formal trial before a civilian criminal court.

Principal suspects named in the charge sheet prepared by police were Wilfredo Corpus, 20, and Rosauro Otian, 25. In the course of the police investigation, the two confessed to killing Fredette.

Named as accomplices were police patrolman Necitas Itchon, Philippine navy seaman Orlando Mystica, Rodante Trinidad and Nicomedes Fabro. The accomplices, who are under police custody, allegedly either supplied or hid the .38-caliber revolver used in the killing. The gun has been recovered.

Fredette was walking in Olongapo's entertainment district outside the U.S. Subic Bay Naval base when two men shot and killed him. His slaying was not considered to be politically motivated.

Corpus and Otian were arrested as suspects in a string of robbery cases in Olongapo, 50 miles northwest of Manila.

Two other American servicemen were killed last month outside the U.S. Clark Air Base near Subic. The 19,000-member communist New People's Army has taken responsibility for the killing of the two Americans.

In all, 10 U.S. nationals have been killed in the Philippines in politically motivated killings over the past three years.

The NPA, which is waging a 21-year rebellion, has vowed to kill more Americans unless the United States dismantles its six facilities in the Philippines. The leases on the facilities expire next year.

Also Monday, police said gunmen firing from a van shot and killed Philippine air force Col. Saturnino Dumlao in suburban Paranaque town as he was driving to his office at Camp Aguinaldo where he was assigned to the intelligence service.

Police were investigating if guerrillas were involved.

At least 77 killings of lawmen and civilians in metropolitan Manila this year have been blamed on the NPA.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Scattered showers and occasional thunderstorms dampened the nation's midsection early Monday, causing flooding problems in Kansas, while cooler temperatures chilled the Middle Atlantic states.

Temperatures in the Central Plains dropped to the 50s under partly cloudy skies early Monday as thunderstorms rumbled across North Dakota and light showers drifted through central Iowa, the National Weather Service said.

Heavy rains caused flooding along the Marais des Cygnes river in east-central Kansas. The river early Monday at Quenemo was nearing 25 feet or 8 feet above flood stage, threatening adjacent farmland and roads.

Partly cloudy skies covered the Southern Plains states, where scattered showers fell in the central, east and southeast Texas. Scattered thunderstorms also rolled into parts of eastern Oklahoma.

Cloudy skies blanketed much of New Mexico as scattered showers and thunderstorms pushed through the state.

Colorado had only scattered clouds Monday following the departure of powerful storms that spawned 11 tornadoes Saturday in eastern Colorado. No injuries were reported.

In the Midwest, Chicago and Green Bay, Wis., were clear with temperatures of 55 degrees early Monday. Downstate Illinois reported more clouds, and Springfield's temperature held at 64.

In Michigan's Upper Peninsula, Gwinn dipped to 45 degrees, while further south in Missouri and to the west in Minnesota, skies were variably cloudy and temperatures remained in the mid 60s to low 70s.

Fair weather warmed much of the South, with some scattered thundershowers. Early morning temperatures ranged from 78 in Miami to 70 in Atlanta and 65 in Knoxville, Tenn.

In the mid-Atlantic states, skies were partly cloudy overnight in Maryland as temperatures turned cooler. The mercury ranged from the mid 40s in the extreme west to near 60 in the southern part of the state.

Cloudy and cool weather in West Virginia kept overnight lows in the 40s and 50s.

Skies were cloudy and temperatures cool Monday in New England, with periods of rain and drizzle. Early morning temperatures ranged in the 50s from Portland, Maine, to Boston.

The West Coast was blasted by powerful thunderstorms over the weekend. In Las Vegas, flash-flooding Sunday in wake of a thunderstorm that dumped up to 1 1/2 inches of rain swept an elderly woman to her death in her car.

Flooding was reported at major intersections throughout the Las Vegas valley, where cars stalled and numerous others were involved in weather-related accidents, police said.

In the Pacific Northwest, winds to 25 mph stirred dust in some regions, and there were isolated thundershowers. Lingering showers and low temperatures were expected in the area through midweek.

In California, showers fell in San Diego County and in the mountains and desert regions in southern California, while it was mostly sunny in northern and central California. More sunshine expected through the week.

(JUNE 11) UPI - A tanker carrying 38-Million gallons of crude oil continues to burn in the Gulf of Mexico... East Germany's prime minister visits the White House today... those stories and more, coming up next from United Press International.

An all-out assault on a fire aboard an oil tanker in the Gulf of Mexico is due to start at daybreak.

Smit America will use chemical foam on the blazing tanker Mega Borg, which carries 38-Million gallons of crude oil.

The company plans to circle the Mega Borg with six fireboats and send teams onto the forward decks in the blitz against the flames. In the meantime, three fireboats are cooling the blaze by spraying water on it.

Explosions racked the stern of the burning tanker Mega Borg yesterday... adding to fears that the 853-foot ship could buckle, sink and spill its cargo. The explosions sent oil rolling off the ship in flames. A burning slick streamed behind the vessel.

The Mega Borg is listing at anchor 57 miles southeast of Galveston, Texas. The Coast Guard says there's NO indication the oil will reach the Texas beaches.

The cause of the explosion Saturday morning has NOT been established. It occurred when the Mega Borg was pumping crude oil into a smaller tanker for transport up the Houston Ship Channel, a procedure known as ''lightering.'' Two crew members were killed and two others are missing.

The ship is owned by a Norwegian company and the oil is owned by a French firm.

A White House meeting today is the first... and could be the last... of its kind.

President Bush will welcome East German Prime Minister de Maiziere . Never before has an East German leader been welcomed at the White House. And the occasion might NOT rise again because of the near-certain German unification.

The hard-line communist leader ousted last year in the peaceful East German revolution- Erich Honecker- tried for years to wrangle an invitation to the White House to legitimize the division of Germany. De Maiziere's visit underscores the inevitability of the unification Honecker thought impossible.

Bush says the meeting is just one more step that demonstrates what he calls the ''magnificent changes'' that have taken place in the past year.

Bush says he expects to do a lot of talking about German unification during his meeting with de Maiziere. De Maiziere shares the Western view that German membership in NATO could be a stabilizing force.

(JUNE 11) UPI - About four-thousand Nicaraguan Contra rebels remain armed despite the passing of a disarmament deadline. Officials of the Organization of American States say that by yesterday morning, more than nine-thousand Contras had laid down their weapons.

The Contra demobilization has been delayed by negotiations between rebel leaders and the government of Nicaraguan President Chamorro . Rebel leaders are working out financial deals and other concessions from Chamorro's government.

Some of the rebels who've already surrendered their arms did so at Saturday's ceremony and Catholic Mass in a small jungle town. Chamorro spoke at the outdoor gathering and told more than one-thousand Contras it was her dream to see the end of Nicaragua's nine-year civil war.

Chamorro was scheduled to announce reductions in the Sandinista army that the Contras and other Sandinista opponents had called for. A presidential spokesman says the announcement has been tentatively rescheduled for Wednesday so Chamorro can better study reduction proposals.

Czechoslovakia's newly re-confirmed president is trying to form a coalition government.

President Havel's Civic Forum and its Slovak counterpart won clear majorities in the federal parliament during the election Saturday. Now they intend to invite the Christian Democrats to join in a coalition government.

The final results from the elections were a blow to the Christian Democrats, who had expected a much stronger showing in both republics. They were victimized by a scandal over revelations that one of their leaders collaborated with the secret police of the former communist government.

Several other Czechoslovak leaders were forced to resign recently for the same reason.

All major parties that participated in the campaign agreed to undergo voluntary background checks of their parliamentary candidates in order to purge from public office any collaborators.

(JUNE 11) UPI - John Poindexter, Ronald Reagan's former national security adviser, finds out today if he has to go to jail for his involvement in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Poindexter, convicted in April of all five felony charges against him, will be sentenced in Washington today by Judge Harold Green. Poindexter faces up to 25 years in prison and fines as high as one-point-two-five-Million dollars.

Defense lawyers say Poindexter has suffered enough and should be spared a prison sentence. Defense lawyer Richard Beckler notes of all the Iran-Contra defendants, none has been sent to jail.

In court papers filed last Thursay, Beckler argued his client ''lost a bright and promising career in the Navy, endured public ridicule of the Congress and the media, and has suffered financial hardship.

But special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh says the former national security adviser should go to prison for what he terms- ''the diet of lies'' he fed Congress regarding the Iran-Contra affair.

A cruise line mishap occurred along the East Coast yesterday, the second such accident in three weeks. The cruise ship Bermuda Star struck ground about two miles off Cap Cod and leaked more than one-thousand gallons of fuel oil into the Atlantic Ocean.

More than 687 vacationing passengers had to be evacuated from the ship when initial efforts to pull the vessel off the reef failed. The 617-foot oceanliner remained grounded for nearly 13 hours when tugboats were finally able to pull it free.

Coast Guard investigators are trying to determine why the cruise liner was more than one mile outside a shipping lane. Officials say visibility at the time of the accident was reduced to 40 yards because of dense fog... and the ship was waiting for conditions to clear before entering the canal.

At least three crewmembers of the mostly foreign crew, and a local marine pilot who was guiding the ship at the time, underwent drug and alcohol tests. A Coast Guard spokesman says the officers did NOT appear to be drunk or otherwise impaired.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Emergency officials continue to fight a raging blaze aboard a Norwegian tanker anchored in the Gulf of Mexico. The tanker is loaded with 38-Million gallons of crude oil. Five explosions rocked the ship yesterday, raising concerns that the vessel will sink and cause the largest oil spill ever in U-S waters if the fire is NOT extinguished soon. The giant tanker first exploded early Saturday, killing two crewmen and leaving two others presumed dead.

Coast Guard investigators are trying to figure out how a cruise ship strayed more than one mile outside a shipping lane and ran aground two miles off Cape Cod. More than 687 passengers vacationing aboard the Bermuda Star had to be evacuated yesterday and it took tugboats nearly 13 hours to free the grounded ship. PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (JUNE 11) UPI - President Vaclav Havel is expected to ask Prime Minister Marian Calfa, a former communist, to form the new government despite the overwhelming victory of Havel's pro-democracy Civic Forum in parliamentary elections.

''I personally assume it is highly probable that he (Calfa) will be entrusted with the task of forming the new government,'' presidential spokesman Michael Zantovsky said at his first news briefing following the elections Friday and Saturday.

The pro-democracy Civic Forum and its Slovak sister movement, Public Against Violence, were the clear winners in Czechoslovakia's first free elections in 44 years, official final results showed Sunday.

The Communist Party, which ruled alone for 42 years until it was toppled by November's Velvet Revolution, finished second in the Czech Republic. The Christian Democratic Movement of Slovakia was second in the Slovak Republic.

The two republics make up Czechoslovakia, each with their own parliaments and representatives to the national Parliament, called the Federal Assembly.

Zantovsky said the Forum will ask the three Christian Democratic parties to join the government despite their poor showing in the elections.

He also warned that it was by no means assured that Havel would continue as president, hinting the popular president could resign if Calfa's new government were rejected by Parliament.

Havel was expected to ask Calfa Wednesday to stay on as prime minister and form the government. The premier then would have the task of putting together a Cabinet and a general program to present to the new Federal Assembly, or Parliament, at the beginning of July.

Zantovsky said if Parliament rejected the Cabinet, then Havel would consider it a personal failure and ''would not be the guarantor of a government with which he could not agree.''

Havel's great moral authority as reluctant leader of the November revolution is practically revered among Czechoslovaks and if he were to resign, it would plunge the foundling democracy into chaos.

Havel said last week that he considered the formation of the new government the greatest task of his career as president, which began with his inauguration Dec. 29.

One political analyst said Havel was using his moral leadership as a sort of political blackmail to persuade the potential coalition partners - particularly the Christian Democrats - to put the task of the nation above their political quarrels.

Deputy Prime Minister Jan Carnogursky, leader of the Christian Democratic Movement of Slovakia, has said he would not serve in the new government as a ''fifth violin'' and his party would not be a member of the federal government.

Carnogursky had been talked of as a potential prime minister if the Christian Democrats had made a stronger showing.

But Zantovsky said he believes Carnogursky's party in Slovakia as well as the Christian Democratic Union, a coalition of the two Christian Democratic parties in the Czech Republic, must be partners in the coalition.

''If the parties and their leaderships would be motivated by national interest, there would be no problems'' in forming a government, the spokesman said.

He said one of the first tasks of the new government would be ''building a state of two entirely and equally responsible nations - the Czech Republic and the Slovak Republic.''

The unexpected strength in Slovakia of the Slovak National Party, which seeks independence, and the emergence of a party representing 4 million Moravians and Silesians who want greater autonomy in the Czech Republic, has unearthed nationalistic tensions that have been simmering for four decades of communist rule.

In the area of economic reforms, he said the nation will start moving toward privatization of the economy. The first phase will start in the fall, when state companies will be transformed into public firms and their shares sold to local and foreign entrepreneurs and company workers.

As for foreign aid, Zantovsky said negotiations were under way with the international community on standby loans to tide the country over through the painful economic transitions to a market economy.

''I think Czechoslovakia will expect foreign capitalists to think of investing in this country as in any stable and democratic country,'' he said.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 11) UPI - A fire apparently caused by propane gas being used to heat food at a birthday party in a hotel killed one man and caused numerous injuries, two of them serious, officials said.

The three-alarm explosion and fire apparently started shortly after 10 p.m. Sunday when a propane heater unit under a buffet table at a Howard Johnson Hotel in Cambridge began leaking and then exploded, sending a fireball racing along the ceiling and walls of the function room.

About 30 of some 90 people attending the party remained when the fire broke out. Between 250 and 300 guests at the hotel were evacuated.

About two dozen people required treatment at area hospitals, some for smoke inhalation and some for bruises and other injuries suffered in the rush to get out of the hotel.

An elderly man found in a stairwell apparently suffered a heart attack and was taken to Mount Auburn hospital, where he was declared dead, officials said. His identity was withheld pending notification of relatives.

One person was taken to Beth Israel Hospital for treatment of serious burns and a hotel worker was at Massachusetts General Hospital with second-degree burns.

Cambridge Fire Chief Gerald Reardon said guests attending the 60th birthday party for Boston attorney Morton Brown of Belmont reported smelling propane gas coming from a warming table.

He said a hotel worker was there ''about 15 seconds when the thing exploded.'' He said a second explosion blew out a large picture window, spewing glass over Memorial Drive below.

One of the guests at the party, Ron Corcillo, 24, of Somerville, said flames spread through the room quickly.

''The flames were huge, all the way from the floor to the ceiling,'' he said.''There were a few old people, and a few fell and had to go to the hospital for twisted ankles.''

NORFOLK, VA (JUNE 11) UPI - The Navy and Coast Guard searched Monday for the pilot of F/A-18 Hornet that crashed Sunday night off the Virginia coast while flying from the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise.

The aircraft crashed at about 9:20 p.m. Sunday in the Atlantic Ocean, between 50 and 100 miles off shore, said Lt. Cmdr. Mike John, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Naval Air Force in Norfolk. The jet was conducting routine training operations at the time of the crash.

Two helicopters were immediately dispatched from the Enterprise to search for the pilot. Skies were cloudy with good visibility and seas were calm at the time of the accident, said John.

Debris from the aircraft has been found but no sign of the pilot had been seen as of early Monday morning, John said. The pilot's identity was withheld pending notification of his family.

John said the Enterprise was about 80 miles east of Norfolk when the crash occurred. He said the jet crashed near the carrier.

The jet is assigned to VFA-106 at Cecil Field Naval Air Station in Florida. It is believed the pilot was flying from the carrier to Oceana

Naval Air Station in Virginia Beach when the accident occurred, John said.

The 180-foot Coast Guard cutter Laurel was assisting the Navy in the search for the pilot Monday, said Lt. Andy Blomme of the 5th District Coast Guard.

Last Tuesday, two Navy pilots escaped serious injury when they ejected from an F-14 Tomcat fighter that went down less than 60 miles from the Virginia Beach coast.

The pilot and radar-intercept officer parachuted into the water and were picked up by an SH-60 Seahawk helicopter.

Both accidents are under investigation, Navy officials said.

BEIJING (JUNE 11) UPI - Two state-run newspapers Monday offered diverging opinions concerning the status of China's foreign trade.

New customs figures showed imports and exports totaling $39.4 billion in the first five months of 1990 and May's foreign trade reaching a 1990 high of $9.4 billion.

"May import-export figures look good," the government's flagship People's Daily said in its overseas editions. "Total figures reach highest level this year." But pessimism seemed to prevail at the English-language China Daily. "Foreign trade drops in wake of falling imports," a headline said.

Western analysts said the new data support both interpretations, but the pessimistic view provides a more realistic picture. A 20-month-old anti-inflation austerity plan has slashed China's imports by as much as 25 percent.

The May import-export figure indeed was the highest for 1990, but analysts said this adheres to a familiar pattern of trade building through the calendar year, reaching its peak in autumn as manufacturers make a final export push for the Christmas season.

China's overall foreign trade figures have not returned to the levels seen in 1988 and early 1989, despite huge increases in exports since mid-1989.

Exports from January through May of this year boomed to $20.6 billion, the customs statistics showed, up 14 percent over the same period in 1989, but imports plummeted 17 percent to $18.8 billion over the same period.

China's combined import-export total of $39.4 billion in the first five months of 1990 represented a dip of 3.2 percent over last year's comparable figure. The May foreign trade figure of $9.5 billion, while the highest for the year, still marked a drop of 2.1 percent from May 1989.

The import squeeze - achieved by reigning in foreign exchange allocations and stepping up screening of import applications - has added about $1 billion a month to China's foreign exchange reserves, earmarked for key international loan payments.

But some analysts have questioned whether the growing export income could be better used for productive domestic investments. The continuing austerity program has accomplished the primary goal of curbing inflation but has exacted a worrisome price in slowed economic growth and mounting unemployment.

RANGOON, BURMA (JUNE 11) UPI - Student leaders called Monday for the newly elected Parliament to take power from the military this month now that the opposition election victory is official.

The executive committee of the victorious National League for Democracy held further meetings but gave no indication it was ready to start pressing the military to hand over power.

The All Rangoon Students Union argued in a press statement that the purpose of the May 27 elections was to form a new Parliament and a new government.

Since the people have given the mandate to their elected representatives, the powers of the state now belong to the Parliament and no longer in the ruling military junta, the statement said.

The military seized power in 1988 and set up a government run by top officers calling themselves the State Law and Order Restoration Council.

A council spokesman has acknowledged the military-led government lost badly in the May elections but did not indicate when it would hand over power to the civilians. The military had promised before the elections it would give up its rule if it lost in the elections.

''We would ask that the new Parliament be convened within one month from the date of counting of votes as required by the constitution of 1947, and that the SLORC hand over power to the government formed by this Parliament '' the statement said.

Students formed a major part of the support for the National League for Democracy.

The winning party, however, has given no indication that it has taken up the question with the military.

Its 10-member central executive committee met Monday, but the statement issued at the end of the meeting merely said the party was working without rest to carry out the mandate of the people to set up a democratic state in Burma.

Earlier, party spokesman Kyi Maung had said the party would wait until the official results showed that the party had won a firm majority in the 492-seat Parliament.

The official election commission has announced the results in 306 constituencies, confirming victories for the National League for Democracy in 266 races. The pro-military National Unity Party has won only six seats.

TOKYO (JUNE 11) UPI - The Ministry of International Trade and Industry has decided not to provide new insurance for exports to the Soviet Union without letters of credit issued by the Soviet government bank, news reports said Sunday.

The major economic daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun and Kyodo News Service indicated the decision, which has been conveyed to Japanese traders, is aimed at easing commercial risk amid reports that Moscow has delayed payments for imports from Japan. Nihon Keizai said the ministry's decision is in line with similar action taken by British and French governments.

Hiroshi Saito, president of the Japan Iron and Steel Federation, referring to the delay in Soviet payments predicted last month that Japanese steel exports to the Soviet Union would decline in the months ahead. The federation said Japan's steel exports to the Soviet Union in April dropped 26.9 percent from a year ago to 60,000 tons.

Japan's four major steel pipe makers have suspended production of pipes ordered from the Soviet Union pending the settlement of payments for pipes already shipped to Moscow, Kyodo said.

Japanese traders have asked the Soviet Bank of Foreign Economic Affairs to guarantee payment by issuing letters of credit to importers, it said. The Soviet Union owed Japanese traders an estimated $225 million at the end of April, or over 7.0 percent of Japan's annual exports to Moscow totaling about $3 billion, the reports said.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (JUNE 11) UPI - Police arrested a white mine official in connection with a bomb blast that wrecked an office of the black National Union of Mineworkers in the racially tense mining town of Welkom, threatening a fragile peace between feuding miners, authorities said Monday.

Commissioner of Police Gen. Johan van der Merwe issued a statement saying a 30-year-old white mine official was arrested Sunday, 24 hours after the blast in the empty building. A quantity of explosives also was seized from the suspect, it said.

The suspect, who was not immediately identified, was to appear ''in court as soon as possible,'' the statement said.

Cyril Ramaphosa, general secretary of the black mineworkers union, representing some 500,000 miners nationwide, had called the blast a ''provocative outrage'' that would test police sincerity ''by their commitment to bringing the culprits to justice.''

''Unless the Minister (of Law and Order, Adriaan Vlok) gives immediate satisfaction and disarms all right-wing vigilante groups of their guns and bombs, we shall call upon our members to decide on how best to protect their union,'' Ramaphosa said.

White Security, the local vigilante group that in early May fired up smoldering racial tension in the ultra-conservative town with a series of assaults on blacks, Monday denied complicity in the blast.

White mine security officials and black miners clashed on May 16 at the President Steyn gold mine, which left two guards dead and 12 workers injured.

Police sealed off the flashpoint No. 1 Shaft at the mine but black and white worker groups staged sporadic strikes elsewhere, accusing each other of intimidation and violence, with the black union charging police had failed to control the white vigilantes.

Tension peaked again May 20 when police killed 11 black protesters in Welkom's Thabong township after a mass meeting by residents to decide whether to end a two-week consumer boycott of white stores aimed at forcing whites to condemn right-wing violence.

Vlok directly intervened in Welkom at least three times, speaking to black union officials and representatives of White Security and its national sponsor, the extremist Afrikaner Resistance Movement, to try to calm the atmosphere. But particularly at the No. 1 Shaft, whites and blacks have been working together uneasily.

The troubles in Welkom, a mid-sized Orange Free State province town with 55,000 whites and 150,000 blacks, have been called symbolic of a growing right-wing backlash against the racial reforms of President Frederik de Klerk.

De Klerk in February launched his sweeping reforms in a bid to normalize the political climate and draw blacks into talks over a post-apartheid constitution, which has sparked an outcry from the official right-wing parliamentary opposition and its allies.

ATHENS, GREECE (JUNE 11) UPI - A rocket stolen earlier from an army depot smashed through the second floor window of the offices of a Procter & Gamble but failed to explode and injured no one, police said Monday.

No one claimed responsiblity for the attack, which occured late Sunday. But the November 17 terrorist group earlier claimed responsiblity for the theft of the anti-tank type missile, which was stolen from an army depot in the central Greek town of Larissa seven months ago. Police said there was strong evidence suggesting the group was behind Sunday's attack.

The rocket tore a 4-inch hole in a window of the offices of the Procter & Gamble company. Police said the Italian car company Fiat had their offices in the same building.

A Procter & Gamble employee said he did not know why the offices were targeted.

But November 17, whose demands include removal of U.S. military bases from Greece, has attacked a number of U.S. targets in the past and has killed U.S. military officials. The group takes its name from a 1973 student uprising that helped oust Greece's military junta.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND (JUNE 11) UPI - A renewed rise in U.S. deficits and parallel increases in Japanese and West German surpluses was forecast Monday by the Bank for International Settlements.

"Although the current account imbalances of the United States and Japan have continued to narrow, indeed by more than seemed likely a year ago, the outlook for further progress is not bright," the BIS said in its annual report. "European imbalances have (also) widened appreciably," it said.

The BIS is the main clearing house for transactions between the world's main central banks. The annual report was signed by general manager Alexandre Lamfalussy.

In the seven years from 1983, the report said, the cumulative U.S. current-account deficit reached $770 billion. At the same time, Japan had a surplus of $415 billion and West Germany $220 billion.

"Since the peak in 1987 the annual U.S. deficit has declined by one-quarter and the Japanese surplus by one-third," the BIS said. "The German surplus has risen further but it no longer corresponds to any significant extent to the U.S. deficit and its counterpart is rather to be found in Europe."

However, the BIS indicated these trends are diminishing and the situation will again become worse, the BIS said. "If one could be sure that progress in the right direction would continue, there would not be any great cause for concern," the report said.

"But few observers expect further substantial reductions in these imbalances in the years immediately ahead," it said. "Indeed, according to many forecasts all three imbalances could widen again in 1990.

The BIS conceded that it underestimated the good growth performance of the industrial countries in the last part of the 1980's, saying it was mainly due to lack of any "unfavorable external shocks."

"The general political climate improved with the relaxation of East-West tensions (and) exchange rate uncertainties were reduced," it said. Inflation was under control and the prospect of a single European Community market by 1993 "has undoubtedly been an important spur to business investment in Europe." But there are still several unfavorable trends for the future, the BIS warned:

- Unemployment remains "chronic" in some countries,
- Inflationary pressures "have not been eradicated in any of the industrial countries" and in some cases have become greater despite lower oil prices,
- The outlook for the U.S.-Japan imbalance "is not bright,"
- Exchange rates remain "volatile ... In spite of the regularly reaffirmed commitment of the major countries to coordinating their policies with a view to fostering adjustment and greater stability,"
- "Worries about the fragility of financial markets in general are growing" with rising debt ratios and more restrictive monetary policies,
- Only containment" has been achieved in resolving the high commercial bank debt of middle-income developing countries, and
- "The poorest developing countries are falling further behind."

WOODS HOLE, MA (JUNE 11) UPI - The Coast Guard scurried Monday to pump fuel from four tanks on a crippled 617-foot cruise liner that threatened to spill 112,000 gallons of oil into waters off Cape Cod.

Water pressure apparently was all that was keeping the No. 6 fuel oil from flowing out of damaged tanks on the Bermuda Star, which went off course and ran aground on rocks Sunday with more than 1,000 passengers and crew aboard.

The Coast Guard hoped the weather on Buzzards Bay would remain calm until the tanks could be emptied and the 90-foot-by-2-foot rupture could be patched, said Lt. Peter Keane "We're not comfortable with the situation," Keane said. "We're bringing in extra (absorbent) booms and resources until we can start pumping."

Keane was unsure how long it would take to repair the damage. He estimated the ship lost 500 gallons of fuel overnight, to go with the 1,000 to 1,500 gallons it lost after hitting rocks Sunday morning.

"If the weather got worse and the ship started rolling, that would kind of destablize it. Right now we don't see any extreme changes in the weather. So we're just hoping for the best at this point," he said.

The cruise ship hit the rocks Sunday about 8:20 a.m. about seven miles south of the entrance to the Cape Cod Canal. The vessel was shrouded in dense fog at the time and was about a mile east of the channel leading to the canal.

The Coast Guard Office of Marine Safety was investigating why the vessel was so far off course. Blood and urine samples were taken from crewmembers responsible for navigating the boat but it did not appear from initial obeservations that alcohol or drugs contributed to the accident, Lt. Scott Graham said.

Nearly 700 passengers - on a cruise from New York to Nova Scotia - were evacuated from the boat to a ferry and dropped off at Billy Wood's Wharf in New Bedford, Mass., Sunday evening. There were about 380 crewmembers aboard.

A few hours later, the Coast Guard managed to float the ship off the rocks and pull it to safe water by using tugs. It was not until then that divers were able to see the lengthy gash. Before then, authorities believed there were just two small holes in the hull, each one inch by one foot.

The fuel oil that leaked from the cruise liner caused slight environmental damage but the ship's operator, Bermuda Star Lines of Teaneck, N.J., was charged with violating the federal Clean Water Act.

The violation carries a civil penalty of up to $5,000 or a criminal penalty of up to $50,000 and possible imprisonment for those responsible, Graham said.

The grounding was the second major cruise line mishap along the East Coast in three weeks. The Regent Star, returning to Philadelphia from a cruise to the Bahamas, ran aground in the Delaware Bay last month when an electrical fire knocked out its power. The 900 passengers were kept aboard nearly two extra days.

Visibility at the time of the Bermuda Star accident was only 40 yards. A local navigator was aboard at the time, Graham said. The channel leading to the canal is marked by buoys, and it is common for ships to wait for fog to clear before proceeding, officials said. The ship was headed to Halifax, Nova Scotia, after a scheduled stop in Provincetown on the tip of Cape Cod.

The 687 passengers aboard were put on buses and taken to Pennsylvania, New York, and Boston, where they caught flights home or checked into hotels pending flights home.

(JUNE 11) UPI - South Korean students battled police today to protest the reopening of a U-S cultural center. The South Korean News Agency says about 500 students in Kwangju, 170 miles south of Seoul, rallied and fought riot squads when they were blocked from leaving campus for a street demonstration. The center closed 13 months ago after a series of attacks by dissidents. It reopened today on a new site.

Gasoline prices are the highest they've been in one year. Industry analyst Trilby Lundberg says gas prices are an average of one dollar 18 cents a gallon. That's the highest price since last June. Lundberg says the higher pump prices reflect increases in wholesale gas prices during the same period. The peak driving season, July and August, is approaching. The increased demand often buoys retail prices... whether or NOT wholesale prices dip.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 11) UPI - The European Community's executive Commission Monday proposed a 53 billion European Currency Units ($63.6 billion) budget draft for 1991, an increase of 13.3 percent over this year.

The share of agricultural spending would remain at slightly below 55 percent, similar to 1990. A rigid policy of curbing supports to farm prices and production since 1984 has brought down the share of farm spending, which had been approximately two-thirds of the EC budget.

EC funds for regional, social and agricultural reform programs will for the first time exceed 25 percent of the overall budget with 13.9 billion ECU ($16.7 billion).

The EC has stated it is committed to a single integrated market by the end of 1992, and wants to offer better opportunities to regions lagging behind in economic growth or faced with high unemployment, as well as rural areas struggling to compete in agricultural markets.

The proposed draft budget also earmarks 838 million ECU ($1 billion) to assist Central and East European countries in their efforts to adapt to a free market economy, and 777 million ECU ($932 million) to help Mediterranean, Asian and Latin American countries overcome economic problems.

The Commission said the budget represented about 1.05 percent of the gross national product of the 12 member states. The budget has to be approved in two readings by the EC council of finance ministers and by the European Parliament.

(JUNE 11) UPI - The Coast Guard today begins an all-out assault on the fire aboard the burning oil tanker Mega Borg in the Gulf of Mexico southeast of Galveston, Texas. WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - U.S. economic activity will shift to the Sun Belt in the final years of the 20th century, bringing growth in personal income, jobs and population to the West, the government said Monday.

By the turn of the century, California will lead the nation in personal income, population and job totals, said the Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis.

Connecticut will still boast the highest per capita income by the 21st century, according to the BEA's projections, which were based on economic trends.

As economic activity continues moving toward the Sun Belt, Florida, Utah,

California and Hawaii also are projected to show rapid growth.

The BEA's report predicted that the nation's total personal income will grow 26.2 percent between 1988 and 2000.

The region with highest total personal income growth between 1988 and 2000 will be the far West - California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington, with 32.9 percent.

New England and BEA's Mideast region - Delaware, Washington, D.C., Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania - will have the lowest total personal income growth, 21.6 and 21.3 percent, respectively, followed by the Great Lakes, with 22 percent.

In Nevada, total personal income will grow 46.2 percent over the same period. In the year 2000, Nevada will be the 36th largest among the states and Washington, D.C., up from 39th in 1988.

In Arizona, personal income is projected to increase by 40.6 percent, and the state will be the 22nd largest by total income, up from 25th in 1988.

In contrast with the Sun Belt states, Alaska, West Virginia and Wyoming will have the lowest total personal income growth in the nation between 1988 and 2000, 15.6 percent, 16.1 percent and 16.5 percent, respectively, the BEA statistics showed.

By the year 2000, four states - California, New York, Texas and Florida - are projected to account for one-third of the nation's total personal income, $4.1 trillion in 1982 dollars.

California's personal income, at $568 billion in 1982 dollars, will represent about 14 percent of the nation's total personal income. Total personal income is projected for New York at $330 billion, Texas at $250 billion, and Florida at $226 billion, all also in constant 1982 dollars.

The nation is expected to create 18.9 million jobs between 1988 and 2000, a 14.3 percent gain, the bureau noted. Of the total, California is projected to gain 3.4 million jobs, one of every six, while Florida and Texas are projected to have increases of more than 1 million jobs each.

In Nevada, the number of jobs will increase by 31.5 percent by the year 2000, and in Arizona by 26.7 percent.

By the turn of the century, Connecticut is projected to have the highest per capita income, exceeding the national average by 34 percent.

According to the BEA, two-thirds of the states are projected to have per capita incomes below the national average, and eleven states - predominantly in the South - are projected to have per capita incomes that are 20 percent or more below the national average.

Mississippi should have the lowest per capita income in the year 2000, about half of that projected for Connecticut.

The nation's total population is projected to expand 8.9 percent between 1988 and 2000, the Bureau of Economic Analysis said.

Population in Nevada is projected to increase the fastest during the period, 29.8 percent, followed by Arizona and Florida, 21.4 percent and 18.2 percent, respectively.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - Manufacturers' after-tax profits totaled $28.6 billion in the first quarter of the year, down 4.9 percent or $1.5 billion from the final quarter of 1989, the Commerce Department said Monday.

After-tax profits averaged 4.2 cents on the dollar of sales in the first three months of the year, a decline of 0.2 cents from the previous three months, the department's Census Bureau said.

Sales in the January, February, and March totaled $683.5 billion, a gain of 0.4 percent or $2.9 billion from October, November, and December, the department said in its quarterly report. The figures were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

Food and printing businesses contributed to a significant decline in first-quarter profits for the makers of non-durable goods, the Commerce Department said. Textiles also declined.

"Petroleum was also down," the government report said. "Fourth-quarter profits benefited from downward adjustments to federal tax provisions not applicable to this quarter." But quarterly after-tax profits were on the rise for the makers of rubber products, paper, and chemicals, the department said.

In the category of durable goods - expensive items made to last three or more years, from aircraft to washing machines - there were large increases in the profits of manufacturers of transportation equipment, primary metals and fabricated metals.

But quarterly after-tax profits for stone, clay, and glass businesses declined sharply, as did profits for makers of electrical machinery and non-electrical machinery, the Commerce Department said.

The annual rate of return on stockholders' equity for manufacturers, after taxes, dipped to 10.9 percent in the first quarter from 11.3 in the fourth quarter of 1989 and 15.3 percent in the first quarter of last year, the report also indicated.

BISMARCK, ND (JUNE 11) UPI - Between 120,000 and 160,000 of North Dakota's nearly 483,000 eligible voters are expected to cast ballots in Tuesday's primary election, state election officials said.

Voters will decide the fate of an initiated measure to boost the state's sales tax rate from five percent to six percent. If the measure is passed, most of the nearly $42 million expected to be raised over one year would go to primary and secondary schools in North Dakota.

Voters in a special election in December defeated a similar sales tax increase and two other measures that would have raised state income and motor fuels taxes. About 253,000 voters turned out for the December election. Three constitutional measures are also on Tuesday's ballot:

- A measure to remove the lieutenant governor as presiding officer of the state Senate.
- A measure to place the Resources Trust Fund created by state law into the state Constitution. It authorizes the state Legislature to dedicate a percentage of oil tax revenues for water projects and energy conservation.
- A measure to allow some coal severance tax money to be spent for lignite research, development and marketing.

Voters also will choose among three candidates for state labor commissioner and challengers trying to defeat endorsed U.S. House candidates. Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., is seeking his sixth two-year term this year. He faces a primary challenge from Gerald Kopp, a farmer who is a supporter of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche.

Republican-endorsed Edward Schafer of Bismarck faces a primary challenge from Avone Kukla of Grassy Butte. Both Dorgan and Schafer are expected to win their primary election contests and face each other in November.

Republican-endorsed Craig Hagen of Williston and Democratic-endorsed S.F. "Buckshot" Hoffner of Bismarck are challenging incumbent state Labor Commissioner Byron Knutson.

Knutson, 60, failed to get the state Democratic Party's letter of support for the non-partisan post following allegations of departmental mismanagement in the processing of wage and hour claims.

Hagen, 24, is a political novice, and Hoffner, 66, has been the state's Centennial Commission executive director since 1985. Hoffner also spent 18 years in the state Legislature and ran unsuccessfully for Congress, state agriculture commissioner and the state Public Service Commission.

The top two finishers in Tuesday's contest for labor commissioner advance to the November general election.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday let stand a ruling that barred the city of Burlington, Vt., from placing a Jewish religious symbol in a park in front of city hall during the Christmas season.

The court, without comment, refused to hear the case brought by the city seeking review of a ruling by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The case stems from permits the city issued to a Jewish group to place a 16-foot high menorah, a nine-pronged candelabra associated with Chanukah, in City Hall Park for a week in December in 1987 and 1988.

Residents, including a local rabbi, challenged the practice charging it violated the First Amendment's prohibition against entangling church and state.

The Supreme Court in recent years has banned such practices. In a series of rulings, including one last June, the court has said such religious symbols as a menorah or a nativity scene constitute government endorsement of religion. However, if the symbols are part of a larger display including such seasonal items as a Christmas tree or a Santa Claus and reindeer they are constitutionally acceptable.

Federal courts, following those precedents, ruled the Burlington menorah was impermissible endorsement of religion.

Seeking high court review, the city called on the justices to ''provide a clear standard regarding religious expression.''

Citizens who began the suit argued against review.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday refused to decide whether Lyndon LaRouche was denied due process of the law when he was indicted on mail fraud charges and tried a month later.

The court rejected arguments by the three-time presidential candidate that his constitutional rights for a fair trial were violated when his case was ''rushed'' to trial.

LaRouche was indicted October 1988 on 12 counts of mail fraud conspiracy in connection with unpaid loans to three corporations and with one count of conspiracy to impede the Internal Revenue Service.

Lawyers said they were denied adequate time to prepare for trial in November 1988. They also argued that LaRouche failed to get an impartial jury because he was a presidential candidate at the time of the indictment in Alexandria, Va.

His lawyers asked the high court to review a lower court ruling that found LaRouche was provided a fair trial and unbiased jury. The Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals held that district court did not ''abuse its discretion'' in denying LaRouche's motion for a continuance.

The LaRouche organization, under the umbrella of the National Caucus of Labor Committees, formerly the U.S. Labor Party, includes a political action committee, an intelligence consulting service and several publications.

Estimates place membership, in the United States and Europe, from 1,200 to several thousand.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 11) UPI - The European Community Monday proposed a phased integration of textiles, by volume, into the free-trading rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The EC proposal, to be presented to GATT talks Tuesday in Geneva on Tuesday, would phase out textile restrictions from existing levels in order to "guarantee present access conditions" during a transition period to free trade.

However, the United States, said a senior official of the EC executive Commission, wants to begin the liberalization process at the more restrictive levels of two or three years ago.

"What we're saying is, 'Don't bring under restraint things that are not under restraint,"' the official said. "We say to go forward from where we are now."

During the transition period, GATT participants could still negotiate bilateral agreements under the EC proposal, but only on products currently under restraint.

The length of the transition period, as well as the length of each phase, was not specified in the EC proposal, although a transition period of ten years has been previously mentioned. Significantly, the EC also wants the Geneva negotiators to establish "a list of products which could be immediately integrated into GATT."

World trade in textiles and clothing has for many years been regulated by the multi-fiber agreement, which limits annual exports from developing countries, where labor is cheap, to the industrialized nations.

A phasing out of the multi-fiber agreement, and reintegration of textiles into the 96-nation GATT, is one of the main issues at the Uruguay Round of GATT talks.

The GATT round, named after the country in which it began, has been stalled over agriculture and textiles, with the EC and the United States in sharp disagreement over both issues. U.S. and Canadian negotiators want the per-product and per-country multi-fiber agreement to be replaced by a system of global quotas.

During each phase of the EC proposal, a certain percentage of the volume of restraint levels would be eliminated. GATT participants would choose how to meet that volume target - by phasing out restrictions by fiber, product or country, or by the liberalization of certain types of trade.

The EC said its new proposal moves toward the position of developing countries, but stops short of those countries' desire to have a priority list for the lifting of restrictions on certain products - including children's wear, some hand-loomed items and pre-spun wool.

"If you want to construct a credible phase-out program, we felt that was not a practical thing to do," the EC official said. "We felt it was closer to the realities of trade to just fix a number, a certain percentage of the volume to be phased out." For example, Canada has import restrictions on clothing but not raw textiles, he said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) UPI - Keith Mondello, the accused ringleader in the racial slaying of a black teenager by a white mob in Brooklyn, was sentenced Monday to the maximum term of 5 1/3 to 16 years in prison.

As state Supreme Court Justice Thaddeus Owens imposed the sentence, a cheer went up from the victim's family and friends.

Mondello, 19, was cleared May 18 of murder and manslaughter charges in the fatal shooting of Yusuf Hawkins, 16, but convicted of riot, unlawful imprisonment, menacing, discrimination and possession of a weapon.

''Mr. Mondello was the captain, he started all this,'' Owens said. ''Without Mr. Mondello, there would not have been a death of anyone.''

His co-defendant, Joseph Fama, 19, was convicted May 17 of second-degree murder for shooting Hawkins, and was to be sentenced later Monday.

Mondello and Fama were the first of eight young men to be tried in the killing of Hawkins, who had ventured into the predominantly white Bensonhurst neighborhood of Brooklyn to look at a used car.

The gang of baseball bat-wielding white youths attacked the four because they apparently thought they were among a group of blacks and Hispanics invited to a party in the neighborhood.

The Aug. 23 slaying of Hawkins sparked months of protest marches and vigils and and inflamed racial tensions in America's largest city.

Mondello stood before the judge showing no emotion. His attorney, Stephen Murphy, pleaded with the judge to make the sentences concurrent, which could have resulted in a minimum sentence of 1 1/3 to five years.

He told Owens that consecutive sentences ''would be tantamount to overturning a jury verdict.''

But Owens was unmoved. He told the courtroom that if Mondello felt menaced about rumors of a group of blacks and Hispanics coming into the neighborhood, ''all Mr. Mondello had to do was go home and call the police.''

As he was led away in handcuffs, Mondello looked over his shoulder at his father, Michael, and swallowed hard.

Prosecutor Paul Burns asked Owens to impose the full sentence on Mondello, saying he played a ''pivotal role in the organizing and inciting of a riot that led to a senseless and unprovoked death of Yusuf Hawkins.''

He reminded the judge that Mondello had been convicted of racial discimination and said Hawkins had been ''denied free access to the street because of the color of his skin.''

''That is a mindset that simply cannot be tolerated in any civilized society. it is a Neanderthal way of thinking,'' he said.

''Send a message that we will not tolerate senseless and unprovoked racial violence.''

Fama and Mondello were tried together before separate juries because of incriminating statements one made about the other, but the two panels came to strikingly different verdicts following an identical period of deliberations - 11 days.

The prosecution of both men was hampered by the lack of cooperation from witnesses.

Five other defendants are scheduled to stand trial in the racially explosive case. They included Joseph ''Joey Babes'' Serrano, 20, who was accused of passing the gun to Fama; Pasquale Raucci, 20; James Patino, 24; Steven Curreri, 19; and Charles Stresskerm 22.

A trial date has not yet been set for John Vento, 22, a good friend of Mondello's who was accused of marshalling the mob of bat-wielding white youths on the night Hawkins was shot.

Vento initially agreed to be a government witness, and then changed his mind and was indicted.

The Hawkins slaying sparked a series of protest marches through Bensonhurst, including weekly ones held after the Mondello and Fama trials in May, during which black activists repeated their call for witnesses to come forward and testify.

The marchers' demands were often met with taunts from Bensonhurst residents, some of them wearing Ku Klux Klan T-shirts, waving watermelons and shouting racial epithets.

But last week, the black activists vowed to halt their marches after an accord was reached with white Bensonhurst leaders aimed at promoting racial harmony.

SEABROOK, NH (JUNE 11) UPI - The Seabrook nuclear power plant Monday reached 50 percent of its operating capacity, the highest level the $6.5 billion plant has attained so far, a Seabrook spokesman said.

At 50 percent, Seabrook produces 515 megawatts of power for the New England power grid, sufficient to supply 450,000 homes. The plant reached that level at 7:35 a.m.

"This is the most significant milestone yet for Seabrook because the plant has now reached the halfway point to full-power operation," said spokesman Ron Sher.

Sher said Seabrook will remain at its current level for a week or two. "After testing at 50 percent power we'll be shutting down the reactor and completing an on-going self-assessment," he said. "We'll be providing that information to the (Nuclear Regulatory Commission) and then proceeding with tests at the 75 percent power level."

Sher said the plant's turbine, which had forced a shutdown of more than a week last month, was operating without problems. He said Seabrook has been operating continuously since the middle of last week.

The plant is expected to reach 100 percent later this summer. It will be placed in commercial operation when utility regulators in each New England state approve the inclusion of Seabrook-related charges in customer bills.

The controversial Seabrook plant received its full-power license in March, capping nearly 20 years of protests, court challenges and appeals by opponents who believe that the plant is unsafe and too expensive. The cost of the project led to the bankruptcy two years ago Seabrook's lead owner, Public Service Co. of New Hampshire.

PSNH, which owns 35.6 percent of the plant, has been taken over by Northeast Utilities of Connecticut as part of a bankruptcy reorganization plan.

GALVESTON, Texas (JUNE 11) UPI - Firefighting efforts on the burning tanker Mega Borg were delayed for more than two days pending the arrival of powerful foam-spraying equipment not readily available in the United States.

The giant cannon-like boom and other equipment flown to Galveston from Rotterdam, Holland, is capable of spraying 10,000 gallons of foam a minute over a long distance.

''The foam was available locally. What was needed was the equipment to deliver large quantities of foam and to shoot it a long way,'' Coast Guard Rear Adm. William Merlin said Monday.

Once the foam is spread over the flames, firefighters intended to board the ship from the front and use hoses stuck in barrels to pump more foam inside the crew quarters and the engine and pump rooms, where the fire was still raging.

Six commercial firefighting vessels were slated both to spray foam, which looks like dishwashing suds, to smother the fire, and to spray water to protect the firefighters on the open deck.

Galveston city officials anxiously waited to see if the problem would be resolved or if the spilled crude oil would reach area beaches during peak tourist season.

The last time Galveston beaches were blemished with spilled oil was August 1984, when 2.6 million gallons of heavy crude escaped from a British flag tanker.

The Mega Borg contains 38 million gallons of light Angolian crude oil.

Both the oil industry and the Coast Guard maintain that it would be too costly to keep all the necessary spill containment and firefighting equipment stockpiled at every U.S. port in case of spills.

''The pumps that were brought in from Europe - there's just not that many of them in the world,'' Merlin said. ''Perhaps it's a testimony (to the fact) that we don't have this type of fire that often (in the United States).

''The contractors go where the business is. It's the marketplace that determines where they are going to put that gear,'' Merlin said, adding the equipment is usually in the North Sea or the Persian Gulf.

Smit America is the contractor responsible for putting out the fire. A corporate spokesman was unavalable for comment on Monday.

One source within the salvage industry, who asked not to be identified, said money is the main reason why all necessary equipment is not kept available on the U.S. coast.

''The equipment that is available here is designed to fight oil well fires. This tanker is a different situation.

''We can put a guy on the moon, but we have trouble cleaning up an oil spill. That's a fact of life that people don't realize. The technology just doesn't exist. No one hates the dirty beaches more than I do,'' the source said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) UPI - Donald Trump's major bank creditors have tentatively agreed to give the beleagured dealmaker a cash infusion and grant him a moratorium on interest payments, the Wall Street Journal reported Monday.

In return for the cash lifeline and grace period, Trump put up various assets as additional collateral on the $2 billion in loans involved in talks over the past two weeks with money center bankers, the paper said.

The banks included, in order of their loan exposure to the tycoon, Citicorp, Bankers Trust New York Corp., Chase Manhattan Corp. and Manufacturers Hanover Corp. The Journal said Trump may also have signed over an equity interest in some of his properties to clinch the deal.

The pact was to be tested Monday, when its terms would be outlined to Trump's smaller creditors, which include New Jersey's Midlantic National Bank and some Japanese banks in Trump loan syndications, it said.

The deal could enable Trump to make a critical interest payment this week on bonds issued to build his Trump's Castle casino in Atlantic City, the paper said, averting default and possible gambling license withdrawals.

Once seemingly immune to cash crunches, Trump became squeezed this spring by the crushing $350 million annual interest payments on his $3.2 billion high-rise debt. His revenues failed to keep pace, while a soft property market meant heavy losses if he sold assets to raise cash.

Trump denied early reports of debt-service difficulties. But two weeks ago he engaged into nonstop talks with bankers in his corporate headquarters on the 26th floor of the Trump Tower he erected on Fifth Avenue.

He also ordered a round of layoffs at the Taj Mahal, the Atlantic City casino he opened this spring at a cost of $800 million while dismissing doubts as to the viability of the glitzy gambling operation.

His $30 million yacht and other "Roaring Eighties" trappings were said to be on the block. But there was no talk of his selling the jewel in the crown of the Trump empire, the Plaza Hotel on Central Park South.

(JUNE 11) UPI - The nation's highest court struck down a law banning desecretion of the U-S flag. In a 5-4 ruling, the Supreme Court struck down the anti-flag burning law enacted by Congress last year. Writing for the majority, Justice William Brennan says the law is inconsistent with the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech. He was joined by justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry Blackmun, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy.

At the White House, President Bush says he'll again push for a constitutional amendment to prohibit flag burning. Bush told reporters- ''I will continue to press for what I strongly believe is in the best interest of this country.'' House Speaker Tom Foley promised last year that he would put a constitutional amendment before members within 30 days if the court struck down the statute.

The convicted ringleader in the slaying of a black teen-ager by a white mob in Brooklyn was sentenced by a New York judge to the maximum of five and one-third to 16 years in prison. Friends and family of the victim cheered as State Supreme Court Justice Thaddeus Owens imposed the sentence on Keith Mondello. Mondello was convicted in May in the slaying of 16-year-old Yusef Hawkins. Co-defendant Joseph Fama is scheduled to be sentenced later today.

Firefighting efforts on the burning tanker Mega Borg are delayed by the lack of powerful foam spraying equipment NOT available in this country. The vessel contains 38-Million gallons of crude oil. Coast Guard officials say the vital equipment must be flown to Galveston, Texas, from Rotterdam, Holland, causing a delay of more than two days. Six commercial fireboats are slated to begin spraying a mixture of foam and water on the ship burning in the Gulf of Mexico southeast of Galveston.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The Supreme Court, in a ruling that gave police broader power, held Monday that an anonymous tip may provide law enforcement officers with justifiable cause to stop a car even though it may be insufficient to support an arrest or search warrant.

''Reasonable suspicion can arise from information that is less reliable than that required to show probable cause,'' Justice Byron White said in delivering the 6-3 opinion.

''Because only a small number of people are generally privy to an individual's itinerary, it is reasonable for police to believe that a person with access to (incriminating) information is likely to also have access to reliable information about that individual's illegal activities '' White said.

The ruling stemmed from a case in Alabama in which a woman was convicted on drug possession charges after police, acting on an anonymous tip, stopped her car and found marijuana during a consensual search. Cocaine was found in her purse after her arrest.

The state appellate court reversed her conviction on possession charges, saying the trial court should have suppressed the marijuana and cocaine evidence because the officers did not have justifiable cause to stop her car.

The high court reversed the lower court ruling, saying reasonable suspicion, like probable cause, ''is dependent upon both the content of information possessed by police and its degree of reliability.''

''... If a tip has a relatively low degree of reliability, more information will be required to establish the requisite quantum of suspicion than would be required if the tip were more reliable,'' the high court ruled.

But Justice John Paul Stevens, in a stinging dissent joined by Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, said the ruling lowers the standard for a justifiable stop and ''makes a mockery'' of the Fourth Amendment's intention to protect citizens from unscrupulous police officers.

The Alabama case began in 1987 when police received an anonymous telephone tip that a woman would be leaving an apartment at a certain time and would be going to a particular motel in possession of cocaine.

Police went to the apartment building, followed a car matching the caller's description and stopped the woman en route to the motel. Police in a consensual search of the car found marijuana, and after the woman was arrested, cocaine was discovered in her purse.

''Millions of people leave their apartments at about the same time every day ... heading for a destination known to their neighbors,'' Stevens wrote. ''Anybody with enough knowledge about a given person to make her the target of a prank, or to harbor a grudge against her, will certainly be able to formulate a tip about her.

''In addition,'' he said, ''under the court's holding, every citizen is subject to being seized and questioned by any officer who is prepared to testify that the warrantless stop was based on an anonymous tip. ...''

''But the Fourth Amendment was intended to protect the citizen from the overzealous and unscrupulous officer. ... This decision makes a mockery of that protection,'' Stevens said.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (JUNE 11) UPI - In a darkened shop on Broad Street, where the power has been out for days, a white-haired man called Mohamed sits counting the French designer socks he sells, or used to sell, for the equivalent of $15.

''I have sent my wife and younger children to Beirut,'' he says. ''It is safer there.''

He looks around in the hot gloom, his pale Lebanese skin shining damply, and turns his palms up in a Middle Eastern shrug.

''What can a man do?'' he asks. ''We cannot just leave our businesses. We must hold on here and hope that things change.''

There are thousands of Lebanese shopkeepers in the Liberian capital. Most of them, with the same grim sense of humor, have done the same as Mohamed, sending their families to the ''safety'' of Beirut while Africa's latest civil war lays waste to their adopted country.

There is a stir in the blackness at the rear of the shop and Mohamed's grown-up son comes out from where the men's suits hang, mostly Italian and French. He is surprised to see a Westerner.

''Why haven't you gone?'' he asks. ''Everyone wants to go to the U.S.A.''

The words, falling into the airless humid dark of a tropical noon, sound like an epitaph for Liberia, the state founded just 169 years ago by American philanthropists who wanted to give freed slaves their chance to go ''home.''

Everyone wants to go to the U.S.A.

Up from the tin-roofed shanties that run down to the blue Atlantic on the edge of the Monrovia peninsula comes the blare of a radio playing country and western tunes.

The police officer smiles shyly and fingers his uniform.

''Yes,'' he says. ''This is from the New York Police Department.''

The taxi driver jerks his head at the long line outside the U.S. Embassy, where there is a rush for visas.

''They are too late,'' he grins and swerves the yellow cab to dodge a chicken.

It has been nearly six months since a disgraced government official in dark glasses launched a surprise cross-border attack on Liberia one steamy Christmas Eve.

Since then, Charles Taylor and his ''black scorpion'' rebels have swelled their numbers from a few hundred to a few thousand and pushed the government troops of President Samuel Doe back through the jungle to the very gates of Monrovia. Not that Monrovia has any gates.

Both sides, say refugees living in church compounds in the capital, have made Africa's latest civil war one of the continent's most vicious conflicts. Horror has come to town, and the body that lay Sunday out by the bridge to the mainland was its concrete expression. It was among hundreds reported killed in the past week in Liberia and perhaps 1,000 since the coup attempt was launched in December.

There were flies everywhere when the photographers pulled the sheet off. The stomach was swollen in the blazing heat. Someone had put a gun to the man's head, tied his hands behind his back, and blown most of the top of his skull off. His brains had spilled out onto the tarmac.

He had no name, and no one knew why he had died. No one seemed to care much. It was out of their hands.

So, the feeling goes, is everything else in Liberia today.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 11) UPI - Consumer gasoline prices have risen nearly 2 cents since mid-May to about $1.18 a gallon, the highest average price since June of last year, an industry analyst indicated.

The price, which includes taxes, has risen almost 7 cents a gallon since the beginning of the year, Trilby Lundberg, director of the Lundberg Survey, said Sunday.

A check of some 13,000 retail gaspline outlets nationwide June 8 revealed an average increase of 1.91 cents per gallon to 117.96 cents.

Lundberg said the higher pump prices reflected increases in wholesale gas prices during the same period.

Wholesale price increases slowed in the last of three weeks since the last survey, in part because of oversupplies in some regions. But retailers continued to pass on earlier price hikes to their customers.

Recent drops in crude oil and gasoline prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange after industry reports of rising inventories does not necessarily portend a drop in the pump price, she said.

The peak driving season, July and August, is approaching and the increased demand often buoys retail prices even as wholesale prices dip.

The average price per gallon, weighted to reflect the market shares of the different pricing categories, was the highest since June 8, 1989, when it also neared $1.18 a gallon.

At self-service pumps, the average price per gallon of regular unleaded was 106.50 cents, premium unleaded was 123.65 cents, and regular leaded was 106.18 cents.

For full service, regular unleaded was 132.40 cents, premium unleaded was 146.01 cents and regular leaded was 128.60 cents.

(JUNE 11) UPI - East German leader Lothar de Maiziere has a historic White House appointment today. President Bush ordered a red carpet welcome for the first East German leader to visit the White House in 40 years of Cold War. Topping the agenda of talks between Bush and de Maiziere is the future military status of a unified Germany... and how to persuade the Soviets to accept its NATO membership.

French police are reporting a major breakthrough in the month-long investigation into the desecretion of a Jewish cemetery in the southern town of Carpentras. Officers today arrested four youths at their homes in a posh residential area of the city. Police say the youths are from well-off families and are NOT skinheads connected to neo-Nazi movements in southern France like the other suspects arrested and then released in the case.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - President Bush and his four predecessors plan to attend the dedication next month of the Richard M. Nixon Library and museum in Nixon's birthplace of Yorba Linda, Calif.

Also attending the July 18-19 celebration will be former first lady Lady Bird Johnson. There has been no word on whether Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis will attend.

Gerald Ford, who succeeded Nixon as president and pardoned him in the Watergate scandal, Jimmy Carter, who defeated Ford in 1976, and their wives are scheduled to be at the dedication. Ronald and Nancy Reagan, who are fellow Californians, have sent word they are planning to attend, friends said. First lady Barbara Bush is scheduled to attend.

Nixon's ailing wife, Pat, who has rarely been seen in public in recent years, and their children, Tricia Cox and Julie Eisenhower, and four grandchildren also will be on hand for the occasion.

A spokesman for the National Archives said that the Nixon library is a private project and is being funded by the former president and outside donations at Nixon's behest. Unlike the nation's eight presidential libraries, which are maintained by the National Archives and government funding, the Nixon library will also be maintained by private contributions.

In addition, Nixon's official presidential papers by statute and court orders following the Watergate scandal are the property of the federal government and stored by the National Archives. His library and museum will mainly house his pre-presidential and post-presidential documents and mementoes.

Also members of Nixon's Cabinet and other administration officals are expected to attend the dedication. Some of the officials were convicted of involvement in the Watergate scandal, which eventually led to Nixon's resignation from the presidency.

Many of the ex-Nixon aides have stayed in contact and met annually in Washington in what has been called the ''February Club.''

The celebration will be a two-day affair with a private viewing and reception on July 18 and the formal ceremonies on July 19. The celbration concludes with a black-tie dinner at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

The Yorba Linda site was decided on after Stanford University turned down a proposal to locate the library on its campus.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) UPI - Elizabeth Taylor's spokeswoman said Monday that news stories about a romance between the actress and a 23-year-old Detroit man were a hoax engineered by a woman who intercepted messages from the publicists's answering service.

Chen Sam, Taylor's publicist in New York, said the Oscar-winning actress was not "romantically linked" to Julian Lee Hobbs. "The whole thing is a hoax and a sick one to boot," Sam said. "It's sick people doing this." "Ms. Taylor has never heard of him," Sam said. "Nobody seems to know who this Julian Lee Hobbs is - he seems to have appeared out of nowhere."

Sam said a woman identifying herself as Lisa Flowers had gained access to the publicist's telephone answering service, using a secret code, and returned telephone calls, giving out the false information to reporters, including those from United Press International and The Associated Press.

The woman told reporters that Hobbs flew in from Detroit and spent the weekend at Taylor's side, helping with the depression that had hindered her recovery. She said the couple planned to go to Taylor's home in Switzerland when she was released from the hospital.

"There's a lady by the name of Lisa Flowers who is going around to all the media and stating that she works for my office," Sam said. "I don't have such a person in my office. She's going to such lengths to give out this information that she is even using my answering service exchange number."

Sam said that the woman apparently called the service to pick up messages, saying she worked for the publicist's company, Chen Sam Associates Inc., and used a numerical code to identify herself as an employee.

"She's saying she's Lisa Flowers and works for Chen Sam Associates and giving them my answering service exchange number so she can get my answering service to take messages from the media," Sam said. "They thought she worked for me - I do have a Lisa Del Favero," Sam said. "What we're trying to find out is how she found out the (code) number."

Sam said an investigation was under way through Taylor's attorneys to track down the woman. Sam also said that the report that Taylor, 58, underwent an abdominal biopsy also was false.

"They also stated yesterday that she had another biopsy, which is also untrue," Sam said. "She's doing extremely well and going home in two weeks time."

Asked about the actress's reaction to the story, Sam she she was non-plussed. "Ms. Taylor doesn't even listen to all this," said Sam, who said her office was deluged with telephone calls from news organizations.

Taylor was admitted to St. John's Hospital and Health Center April 16 after being transferred from another hospital where she had been undergoing treatment since April 9 for a sinus infection and high fever.

Taylor's health problems date back to her childhood, when she was injured in a fall from a horse while filming the 1945 movie, "National Velvet." She nearly died of pneumonia in the early 1960s and has admitted to a long dependence of alcohol and such drugs as Demerol and Valium.

She won best-actress Oscars for "Butterfield 8" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and has been married seven times, twice to the late actor Richard Burton. She was linked to publishing magnate Malcolm Forbes, who died recently, and Sam said she had been seeing Larry Fortensky, 35, who works in the the construction industry in Los Angeles, for a year and a half.

NOKOMIS, IL (JUNE 11) UPI - A van driven by an 73-year-old woman plowed through the middle of a church picnic in a central Illinois park Sunday, killing two people and injuring seven others, police said.

Authorities said they were not sure of the exact cause of the accident that happened about 12:30 p.m. as several members of the First Baptist Church of Nokomis were picnicking in sunny, 80-degree weather at Memorial Park.

"Most of the people when I arrived were basically in shock, a lot of them milling around," said Officer Jim Rickman. "The preacher is rather distraught. It's a little hard."

The two people killed were 17-month-old Nathan Patet and Thelma Oller, 57, both of Nokomis. The victims, both members of the church, were prounced dead at Hillsboro Hospital due to internal injuries shortly after the incident, said Montgomery County Coroner Rick Broaddus.

The 73-year-old driver and member of the church, Dorothy Yarbrough, was hospitalized in stable condition at the Hillsboro Hospital but the extent of her injuries were not known. Five other people were injured and treated at the Hillsboro hospital but none of their problems were life-threatening hospital officials said.

A 6-year-old girl was brought to St. Vincent Hospital in Taylorville at about 1:15 p.m., a nursing supervisor said. The girl was treated and released for minor bruises.

The Montgomery County sheriff's department had said Yarbrough lost control of her van because she stepped on the accelerator instead of the breaks but Rickman - whose office is handling the investigation - said the exact cause was not yet known. He said he did not think alcohol or drugs were a factor in the crash.

"Hopefully we'll have some answers," Rickman said. "We're going to have to have the van looked at. We have to talk to some more witnesses and determine what did cause the accident."

The park is located about 40 miles southeast of Springfield. Yarbrough was apparently pulling out of a pavilion at the park when the the accident occurred, Montgomery County sheriff's officials said.

Rickman said Yarbrough had not yet been questioned about the accident. "The lady was pretty shook up at the time - beyond the point of being questioned," Rickman said. "It is difficult to press people at this time."

The accident Sunday in Nokomis is similar to an incident May 5 in the Chicago suburb of Riverside, where a man with a heart condition lost control of the wheel of his car and drove into a bench of a Little League baseball players at a ballfield. Three youngsters were killed in that accident.

GENEVA (JUNE 11) UPI - Nuclear and conventional arms control is moving far too slowly given the disappearing cold war, some top scientists from the West and the East said Monday.

The group, meeting at an annual gathering of East and West scientists, was especially critical of the summit between Presidents Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev earlier in June, which produced what the scientists called ''useful but modest'' results.

In a statement ending their two-day meeting, the scientists and scholars said the United States and Soviet Union are not doing enough to scale back long-range weapons. They said superpower START negotiations are headed toward cutting only obsolescent systems and reducing them only around 25-35 percent, instead of the 50 percent originally ''advertised,'' the group said.

''It seems that many military and political leaders remain mired in old ways of thinking about arms control,'' even as the cold war is dissipating in Europe and the world at large, the group complained.

''The remarkable changes in East-West relations have all but eradicated the political and ideological bases for the cold war,'' the group's 36 participants, who include many nuclear weapons authorities, said in a statement.

''Measured against the size of the task, however, the dismantling of the East-West military confrontation has barely begun,'' their statement said.

''There is still no START agreement, no treaty on conventional forces in Europe, and no formal restraint on nuclear forces with ranges below 500 kilometers,'' they wrote.

''There is no comprehensive test ban ending nuclear explosions, no chemical weapons convention, and no prescription for protecting the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty against erosion by pursuit of new cappabilities in space weaponry,'' it complained.

The East-West meeting, which participants attended as private citizens, was held just before the resumption Tuesday of U.S.-Soviet strategic nuclear arms negotiations and of multilateral talks on a chemical weapons ban.

It was the 19th in a series of workshops on nuclear arms limitation convened by the Pugwash organization, created in 1957 at Pugwash, Nova Scotia, to bring Eastern and Western scientists together.

''The accomplishments of the recent summit meeting as regards the unfinished arms control agenda were useful but modest,'' the group stated.

It welcomed superpower agreement on cutting chemical weapon stockpiles, but said plenty of stockpiles will remain. A total global ban is ''still some years away,'' the group said.

The meeting also warned against reading too much into the Bush-Gorbachev agreement on the basic framework of a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty to be completed by year's end.

''Awareness of the growing inadequacy of progress in arms control is likely to increase sharply in the months ahead with growing recognition that the imminent START agreement will accomplish much less than has been advertised and believed,'' the statement said.

''Far from the advertised 50 percent cuts in numbers of strategic nuclear warheads, the START ceilings are more likely to produce reductions of only 25 to 35 percent in these numbers compared to 1990 levels.

''The weapons to be eliminated are, for the most part, those due to retirement on grounds of obsolescence ... and most kinds of strategic force modernization contemplated by both sides will be allowed to go forward,'' the meeting charged.

The conferees conceded that the projected START agreement will ''provide a launching point'' for a START II treaty that should aim at much deeper reductions and cover all weapons without exceptions.

Participants at the Pugwash workshop included such military experts and academicians as Paul Doty of Harvard University, Catherine Kelleher of the University of Maryland, former U.S. Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, Jack Ruina of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the former director of advanced research projects at the Defense Department and Soviet arms experts Valerian Mikhailov, Lt. Gen. Mikhail Milstein, Oleg Olkhov and Vladimir Pavlichenko.

#90162u1535 06/11/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The following are excerpts from Monday's 5-4 Supreme Court ruling striking down the federal flag-burning law.

In an eight-page majority decision, Justice William Brennan was joined by Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry Blackmun, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy.

''The government concedes in this case, as it must, that appellees' flag-burning constituted expressive conduct ... but invites us to reconsider our rejection in (Johnson vs. Texas) of the claim that flag-burning as a mode of expression, like obscenity or 'fighting words,' does not enjoy the full protection of the First Amendment. ... This we decline to do.''

''Although the Flag Protection Act contains no explicit content-based limitation on the scope of prohibited conduct, it is nevertheless clear that the government's asserted interest is 'related to the suppression of free expression,' and concerned with the content of such expression. ... Although Congress cast the Flag Protection Act in somewhat broader terms than the Texas statute at issue in Johnson, the act still suffers from the same fundamental flaw: It suppresses expression out of concern for its likely communicative impact. ... The government's interest cannot justify its infringement on First Amendment rights. We decline the government's invitation to reassess this conclusion in light of Congress' recent recognition of a purported 'national consensus' favoring a prohibition on flag-burning. ... Even assuming such a consensus exists, any suggestion that the government's interest in suppressing speech becomes more weighty as popular opposition to that speech grows is foreign to the First Amendment.''

''Government may create national symbols, promote them, and encourage their respectful treatment. But the Flag Protection Act goes well beyond this by criminally proscribing expressive conduct because of its likely communicative impact.

''We are aware that the desecration of the flag is deeply offensive to many. But the same might be said, for example, of virulent ethnic and religious epithets ... vulgar repudiations of the draft ... and scurrilous caricatures. 'If there is a bed-rock principle underlining the First Amendment, it is that the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable.' ... Punishing desecration of the flag dilutes the very freedom that makes this emblem so revered, and worth revering.''

In a six-page dissent, Justice John Paul Stevens was joined by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Byron White and Sandra Day O'Connor.

''The court's opinion ends where proper analysis of the issue should begin. Of course 'the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable.' None of us disagrees with that proposition. But it is equally well settled that certain methods of expression may be prohibited if (a) the prohibition is supported by a legitimate societal interest that is unrelated to suppression of the ideas the speaker desires to express; (b) the prohibition does not entail any interference with the speaker's freedom to express those ideas by other means; and (c) the interest in allowing the speaker complete freedom of choice among alternative methods of expression is less important than the societal interest supporting the prohibition.''

''To the world, the flag is our promise that we will continue to strive for these ideals (of liberty and equality). To us, the flag is a reminder both that the struggle for liberty and equality is unceasing, and that our obligation of tolerance and respect for all of our fellow citizens encompasses those who disagree with us - indeed, even those whose ideas are disagreeable or offensive.''

''The freedom of expression protected by the First Amendment embraces not only the freedom to communicate particular ideas, but also the right to communicate them effectively. That right, however, is not absolute - the communicative value of a well-placed bomb in the Capitol does not entitle it to the protection of the First Amendment.''

''The symbolic value of the American flag is not the same today as it was yesterday. ... Moreover, the integrity of the symbol has been compromised by those leaders who seem to advocate compulsory worship of the flag even by individuals whom it offends, or who seem to manipulate the symbol of national purpose into a pretext for partisan disputes about meaner ends.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 11) UPI - A single rocket booster was rolled from NASA's assembly building to launch pad 39B Monday in a shuttle shuffle to make room for the grounded Columbia, scheduled for rollback to the hangar early Tuesday.

Columbia and its mobile launch platform, carried by a squat crawler-transporter, were scheduled to begin the 3 1/2-mile trip back to the Vehicle Assembly Building at 4 a.m. EDT Tuesday for repairs to fix a hydrogen fuel leak that has delayed the ship's astronomy mission until mid-August at the earliest.

Once the shuttle is inside the cavernous building, engineers will unbolt Columbia from its external fuel tank using a giant overhead crane. The veteran spaceplane then will be moved into a nearby hangar Friday for inspections and repairs.

Columbia originally was scheduled for launch May 30, but the ship was grounded by a massive hydrogen leak somewhere in a 17-inch-wide fitting where the primary fuel line enters the belly of the shuttle.

The 17-inch ''quick disconnect'' fitting could not be repaired at the launch pad and, given the need to roll the ship back to the VAB, NASA managers decided to proceed with plans to launch the shuttle Atlantis from pad 39A around July 13 on a secret military mission.

Assuming the leak repair work goes well, Columbia will be launched in mid-August.

The decision to roll Columbia back forced NASA to stage a sort of shuttle shuffle to make room for the spaceplane in the VAB, which only has two ''high bays'' where shuttles can be assembled for launch.

In one bay was the shuttle Atlantis, scheduled for rollout to pad 39A early Saturday. In the other was a completed booster scheduled for use later this year.

To make room for Columbia, the unfinished booster set was hauled Monday to launch pad 39B, where it will be exposed to the elements but shielded by the pad's lightning protection system.

Columbia was scheduled to be back inside the VAB by around noon Tuesday and,if all goes well, Atlantis will be hauled to pad 39B starting at 12:01 a.m. Saturday. Launch on the fourth of eight shuttle missions now planned for 1990 is scheduled for around 8 a.m. July 13.

BY LAURIE WATSON - UPI

OTTAWA (JUNE 11) UPI - Attempts to keep the French-speaking province of Quebec a part of Canada are destined to fail, no matter how vigorously the country's political leaders champion the unity cause.

Quebec's 6.2 million French-speaking people have never considered themselves part of Canada, but have sought restively since becoming a partner in confederation in 1867 to be their own nation.

The Meech Lake accord, a constitutional amendment that recognizes Quebec as a distinct society and gives it the power to promote and preserve the French language and culture, will provide only a temporary lull in Quebec's search for sovereignty.

The accord was endorsed Saturday by nine of the 10 provincial leaders and the federal government after a week of marathon negotiations and continued threats by Quebec to secede if all of its conditions were not met.

But its fate hinges on the Atlantic province of Newfoundland, whose leader Clyde Wells, said he could not support an agreement negotiated at Quebec's gunpoint.

Quebec already considers itself a separate entity having little in common with the other provinces.

''People in the rest of Canada should stop thinking of Quebec as a simple province. They should accept it as being not only a distinct society, but a nation,'' said Claude Morin, a leading Quebec academic. He was a minister in the separatist Parti Quebecois government that ruled the province from 1976 to 1985.

The Meech Lake accord, Morin says, will not satisfy Quebec's demands. But the emotional negotiations over the distinct society clause and the special powers it confers on Quebec will serve as a useful prelude to a new relationship with the rest of Canada, one in which commercial ties are maintained between the two, but little else.

That is hard for English-speaking Canadians to accept, mainly because Canadians hate anything that upsets the status quo.

Even with their heads in the sand, however, a lot of Canadians have come to resent being held prisoner to nationalistic yearnings from Quebec.

This will continue, says acclaimed University of Calgary historian David Bercusson, unless Canada is willing to ''face its demons.''

''The question of Quebec's independence must be squarely faced if we are to have constitutional peace, with Quebec or without it,'' he said.

Until then, he added, Quebec will be fully in the driver's seat. It will demand concessions and get them, threatening, like a truculent schoolboy, to collect its marbles and leave.

If negotiations last week illustrated anything, it was the deep mistrust and cynicism between the two founding cultures.

Canada's western provinces, which form a stronger economic region than Quebec, have grown increasingly dissatisfied within the confederation, mainly because the two largest provinces, Quebec and Ontario, have the greatest influence over the federal political process and get the lion's share of Ottawa's goodies.

They are tired of a province that wins concessions by threats.

Calgary lawyer John Webb said the common response to Quebec's demand for favors is, ''Don't threaten us any more.''

Eventually, English-speaking Canada must realize it cannot negotiate constitutional matters with Quebec because there will only be one party offering to bargain in good faith. When the constitutional talks began Sunday, Quebec made it clear it would never accept changes in the Meech Lake accord.

Conservative Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, a Quebecer, worsened the situation by endorsing Quebec's position and vilifying provinces who suggested the accord should be amended.

Ultimately, it may not even matter much if Quebec secedes, given the fact that Canada is being drawn inexorably toward decentralization and that all provinces will become so autonomous that only commercial ties and currency flows will hold them together.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday ruled that school boards and other state entities are not immune from lawsuits brought in a state court by individuals alleging federal rights violations.

The high court, in a unanimous opinion, held that state courts have a duty to enforce federal law and may not deny a person's federal rights when the individual is before it.

As a result, an individual asserting his or her constitutional rights were violated by state agencies - and extending to municipal, county or school district officials - have the right to bring such lawsuits in a state court.

The ruling stemmed from a Florida case brought by former high school student Mark Howlett against Scott Rose, superintendent for Pinellas County schools, and members of the county school board.

Howlett, a 17-year-old senior at St. Petersburg Senior High at the time of the 1986 incident, sued the school board in county court after school officials broke into his car to find out who owned it.

Howlett's lawyer, Gardner W. Beckett Jr., said school officials wanted to move the Volkswagen to make room for a truck. They found empty wine cooler bottles inside his car and suspended him for five days.

The Pinellas County Circuit Court dismissed Howlett's case in 1987, saying the state and its agencies have immunity from such suits. The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Lakeland, Fla., upheld the decision in early 1989.

But the high court reversed the lower court, saying there was no merit to the argument by school officials that a federal court lacks power to compel a state court to hear such a claim.

The court said individual states may not rely on ''their own common law heritage'' to exempt from federal liability officials that Congress subjected to liability.

''The fact that a rule is denominated jurisdictional does not provide a court an excuse to avoid the obligation to enforce federal law if the rule does not reflect the concerns of power over the person and competence over the subject matter that jurisdictional rules are designed to protect,'' the court ruled.

SUMMIT, MS (JUNE 11) UPI - When Otis Bardwell and Johnny Reeves went bass fishing, they snatched a 60-pounder: a 60-pound deer, not a fish.

The two outdoorsmen spotted the tiny doe struggling far from shore in the floodwaters of South Mississippi's Lake Mary last week.

''The waves were lapping over its head,'' Reeves said Monday. ''We could tell it was short-lived. It was 3 miles from the nearest dry land.''

The two middle-aged outdoorsmen maneuvered their boat over to the deer, pulled it out of the water, and ''hog-tied it,'' fearing it would kick, Reeves said. The doe was so exhausted, however, that it simply lay in the bottom of the boat, its eyes closed, during an hourlong trip back to land.

Reeves admitted that thoughts of venison crossed his mind, but he quickly pushed them aside. Bardwell swears he never even considered eating the out-of-season deer.

''We're pretty well past our bloodthirsty stage,'' Bardwell said. ''We pretty much hunt by the book.''

(JUNE 11) UPI - President Bush says he still believes that a constitutional amendment is needed to protect the American flag. The president's remarks came after the Supreme Court today struck down an anti-flag burning law enacted by Congress last year. By a 5-4 majority, high court justices said the law is inconsistent with freedom of speech guarantees in the U-S Constitution.

The Supreme Court handed police broader powers by ruling that an anonymous tip may provide law enforcement officers with justifiable cause to stop a car. In a 6-3 ruling, Justice Byron White says ''reasonable suspicion can arise from information that is less reliable'' than may be needed to get an arrest or search warrant. The ruling comes in a 1987 Alabama case in which a woman was convicted of drug possession when police, acting on a tip, stopped her car and found marijuana.

A New York judge slapped Keith Mondello with the maximum prison term in the slaying of a black youth by a white mob in Brooklyn last summer. Mondello was sentenced to five and one-third to 16 years in prison for his May conviction on charges of riot, discrimination, menacing, UNlawful imprisonment and posession of a weapon. Co-defendent Joseph Fama is to be sentenced later today. Yusuf Hawkins was killed when he went to a predominantly white neighborhood to buy a used car.

It never happened during 40 years of Cold War, but President Bush met East Germany's leader at the White House today. Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere has been in office for only two months and may also be the last leader of a separate East Germany. Bush and de Maiziere are to discuss the planned July 2nd social, economic and monetary union of East and West Germany... and the UNcertain timetable of political integration and all-German elections.

MOSCOW (JUNE 11) UPI - The presidents of the three Baltic republics planned a joint meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Tuesday to discuss their independence drives, a Latvian spokesman said Monday.

The announcement of the planned meeting came as Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene was in Moscow Monday to discuss the Soviet economic blockade of her republic with Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov.

Algis Cekuolis, spokesman for the Lithuanian mission in Moscow, said Ryzhkov told Prunskiene by telephone last week that a May 31 Lithuanian government offer to suspend laws implementing of the republic's independence declaration was ''more or less an acceptable basis for talks.''

Previously the Soviet leadership had demanded that Lithuania rescind or suspend the actual March 11 declaration of independence, a demand the Vilnius government has steadfastly refused to meet.

''The very fact that they are willing to talk on the basis of not revoking the March 11 declaration is movement (by Moscow),'' Cekuolis said.

Latvian government spokesman Pauls Raudseps said by telephone from Riga that Latvian President Anatoljs Gorbunovs, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis and Estonian President Arnold Ruutel would travel to Moscow Tuesday for a meeting of Gorbachev's Federation Council that groups the leaders of the 15 Soviet republics.

Raudseps said in addition to attending the Federation Council meeting, the three Baltic presidents had scheduled a private meeting with Gorbachev to discuss their republic's independence drives.

The three Baltic presidents met Monday in the Lithuanian town of Panevezys to discuss strategy for their visit to Moscow Tuesday, Lithuanian government spokesman Edward Tuskenis said. Details of their talks were not released.

Cekuolis said Prunskiene and Algirdas Brazauskas, deputy prime minister of the republic and head of its independent Communist Party, were to meet with Ryzhkov Monday evening, explaining that the Soviet Prime Minister had been delayed in a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee.

The mission said there were no plans for Prunskiene and Brazauskas to meet Gorbachev, who cut off oil, most natural gas and other supplies to Lithuania in an effort to force the republic to rescind or suspend its March 11 declaration of independence.

Prunskiene met with Gorbachev May 17 to offer a compromise under which the republic would suspend all acts implementing independence but not the declaration itself during negotiations on secession.

Gorbachev rejected last month's offer, saying it did not go far enough and that no negotiations were possible while the March 11 declaration remained in force.

Monday's meeting was to focus on the economic situation in the republic, where the cutoff of energy supplies has forced the closure of many businesses and caused serious economic problems.

''The aim of the visit is to discuss a number of problems, mainly of an economic character, that have arisen in the relationships between Lithuania and the Soviet Union,'' Brazauskas told the Soviet news agency Tass.

Brazauskas said the Lithuanian leaders brought a response from the republic's government to Gorbachev's demand, once again offering to suspend all actions resulting from the declaration of independence but not the proclamation itself.

SEATTLE (JUNE 11) UPI - Two demonstrators who burned American flags to protest a federal anti-desecration law said the Supreme Court's decision Monday to overturn the statute was unsurprising and vowed to fight expected efforts to give the flag constitutional protection.

''I wasn't surprised,'' said Jennifer Campbell, 23, one of four Seattle defendants arrested for challenging the new law last October by burning flags outside a post office.

Campbell, who was present when the case was argued before the high court last month, vowed to lobby and demonstrate against anticipated attempts by President Bush and Congress to pass a constitutional amendment or a new anti-flag-burning law.

''People are using the flag as a blindfold,'' Campbell said. ''There are bigger, more important things to protect. Freedom is more important than the flag.''

Campbell predicted the American people ''won't stand for Congress passing an amendment. They will not let it pass.''

Carlos Garza, another of the four Seattle defendants, said: ''I hope we get more support from the people, because the battle has just begun. We have to fight against a constitutional amendment.''

The 5-4 split among the Supreme Court justices Monday was the same as in a June 21, 1989, decision reversing, on First Amendment grounds, a flag-desecration conviction under a Texas law.

That case provoked President Bush and conservative members of Congress to launch an unsuccessful attempt to pass a constitutional amendment protecting the flag from desecration. Congress instead eventually passed the anti-flag-burning law.

Within minutes of its taking affect on Oct. 28, nearly 500 demonstrators swarmed Seattle's Capitol Hill Post Office. Several American flags were torched in view of police and FBI undercover agents. Similar demonstrations occurred in Washington, D.C., and other cities.

A federal judge in Seattle in February threw out the charges against the four Seattle defendants, saying the freedom of expression guaranteed under the First Amendment took precedence over penalizing an odious political act.

That decision was among those appealed to the Supreme Court in the case decided Monday.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Monday it has approved the application of banking giant NCNB Corp., of Charlotte, N.C., to acquire a savings and loan association in Tyler, Texas.

The acquisition of Interim Eight NCNB Texas, formed to take over assets and deposits at East Texas Savings and Loan, will be completed through NCNB's Dallas banking subsidiary, NCNB Texas National Bank, the Fed said. NCNB Corp. has total assets of $63 billion while the thrift has assets estimated at $319.6 million, the Fed said.

"NCNB and all of its bank subsidiaries currently meet all applicable capital standards and, upon consummation of the proposed transaction, will continue to meet all applicable capital standards," the Fed said.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (JUNE 11) UPI - A white mine official has been arrested in connection with a bomb blast that wrecked an office of the black National Union of Mineworkers in the racially tense mining town of Welkom, threatening a fragile peace between feuding miners, authorities said Monday.

The 30-year-old mining official, who reportedly belongs to an extreme right-wing group, was arrested Sunday, 24 hours after the blast in the empty building, Police Commissioner Gen. Johan van der Merwe said Monday. Investigators also seized a quantity of explosives from the suspect, a statement from van der Merwe said.

The Star newspaper said the man was a mine captain and member of the white-supremacist Afrikaner Resistance Movement, or AWB, which has mounted white vigilante action against blacks in Welkom. The group claimed its supporters have the right to ''protect themselves'' because President Frederik de Klerk's reforms of the nation's apartheid policies are a threat to white-minority rule, the Star reported.

White Security, the AWB affiliate group in Welkom, Monday denied any complicity in the blast, which came the same day a six-person U.N. delegation arrived in South Africa for a 10-day visit to report on the state of apartheid under de Klerk.

The official parliamentary opposition, the far-right Conservative Party, said Monday it would not meet the U.N. group, whose mission it regards as ''blatant interference'' in South Africa's affairs.

Cyril Ramaphosa, general secretary of the black mineworkers union, representing some 500,000 miners nationwide, had called the blast a ''provocative outrage'' that would test police sincerity ''by their commitment to bringing the culprits to justice.''

''Unless the minister (Adriaan Vlok, minister of law and order) gives immediate satisfaction and disarms all right-wing vigilante groups of their guns and bombs, we shall call upon our members to decide on how best to protect their union,'' Ramaphosa said.

White Security in early May fired up smoldering racial tension in ultra-conservative Welkom with a series of assaults on blacks. Emotions exploded in a clash between white mine security officials and black miners May 16 at the President Steyn gold mine. Two guards were killed and 12 workers were injured.

Police sealed off the flashpoint No. 1 Shaft at the mine, but black and white worker groups staged sporadic strikes elsewhere, each accusing the other of intimidation and violence. The NUM charged police were doing little to curb the white vigilantes.

Tension peaked again May 20, when police shot dead 11 black protestors in Welkom's Thabong township after a mass meeting called to decide whether to end a two-week consumer boycott of white stores. The boycott was aimed at forcing whites to act against right-wingers.

Vlok directly intervened in Welkom at least three times, speaking to NUM officials and representatives of the AWB and White Security to try to calm the atmosphere. But particularly at the No. 1 Shaft, whites and blacks have been working together only uneasily.

The troubles in Welkom, a medium-size province town of 55,000 whites and 150,000 blacks in Orange Free State, have been called symbolic of a growing right-wing backlash against de Klerk's racial reforms.

De Klerk in February launched his sweeping reforms in a bid to normalize the political climate and draw blacks into talks over a post-apartheid constitution, and has sparked an outrcy from the Conservative Party and its allies.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry entered its second week of jury selection amid reports that the mayor might announce he will not seek a fourth term.

The Washington Times and WRC-TV reported that sources said Barry would withdraw from the race during a Monday evening appearance on ''Evening Exchange,'' a public affairs program on Howard University's WHMM-TV.

But officials at WHMM said Barry was not previously scheduled to be on the program, and that by noon Monday they had receive no request from the mayor's office to include him.

Barry's press secretary, Lurma Rackley, said there were ''no plans'' for the mayor to make an announcement Monday night, and Barry's attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy, agreed.

But Barry, asked during lunch break at his trial if he would appear on the television program, replied: ''Tune in.''

Some of Barry's own allies, most prominently Jesse Jackson, have urged him to announce he is out of the race, saying the mayor then could expect a more lenient plea agreement with federal prosecutors.

But Stephens has said a Barry resignation or announcement that he will not run for office again is irrelevant to the charges or to plea negotiations.

''I don't think his re-election plans have anything to do with the defense '' Mundy agreed, adding that the mayor is prepared to go through the trial.

''We're not clamoring for a plea,'' he said during a break in proceedings. He later said there were ''no plea negotiations going on. ... This thing about a plea bargain is the press's imagination.''

Barry, 54, is being tried on 14 drug and perjury counts. He could face 26 years in prison and $1.85 million in fines if convicted on all counts.

The charges stem from Barry's Jan. 18 arrest at the Vista International Hotel in downtown Washington, where he was videotaped allegedly smoking crack cocaine in a sting operation run by the FBI and Washington police.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson expects jury selection to continue throughout the week, with a jury to be sworn in and sequestered June 18.

One potential juror questioned Monday said that ''sleaze has rubbed off on everyone'' involved in the Barry case. Another woman was excused after she pronounced: ''I think he's guilty already.''

The American Civil Liberties Union has asked Judge Jackson to reject any plea bargain which includes a provision - written or not - involving Barry's political career, on the grounds that such an agreement would usurp the city voters' right to choose the mayor.

There are already five Democratic candidates vying for the party's nomination in the Sept. 11 primary: Del. Walter Fauntroy, the city's non-voting member of Congress; City Council Chairman David Clarke; council members John Ray and Charlene Drew Jarvis; and former electric company executive Sharon Pratt Dixon.

Barry, who was arrested just days before a scheduled launch of his candidacy for a fourth term, has since refused to say whether he would seek re-election. He would have until July 5 to file as a candidate in the Democratic primary.

Under city law, Barry would be barred from running only if jailed after a felony conviction.

More than 80 percent of the city's voters are registered Democrats, and the primary in the past has been seen as the real race for mayor.

But former city police chief Maurice Turner, a popular native of Washington, is running as a Republican in the Nov. 6 general election after joining the party last summer.

According to recent polls, Barry remains the top mayoral choice of about one-fourth of the city's Democratic voters despite his legal problems.

FORT WORTH, TX (JUNE 11) UPI - American Airlines officials said Monday they are pleased with an agreement reached with their flights attendants over the hiring of staff from Eastern Air Lines to work American's new Latin American routes.

But the officials said they cannot discuss the details until the leaders of the flight attendants union have presented the agreement to their members.

The airline officials also declined to comment on the recommendation by the public counsel of the Department of Transporation that the highly sought after Chicago-Tokyo route authority be granted to American.

The lucrative non-stop Chicago-Tokyo route, if granted to American, would be a big setback for American's main rival, United Airlines which is headquartered in Chicago.

American spokesman Al Becker said the agreement with the flight attendants was reached last week. "All I can say is that we reached an agreement and we are pleased with it," he said. "It will provide for expanded international flying for our (Association of Professional) Flight Attendants and allow us to achieve full utilization of the attendants from Eastern. "But we can't discuss it because the union wants to take the details to its membership," Becker said.

The dispute, which subsequently led to lawsuits being filed by both sides, arose from American's purchase of the Latin American routes from Eastern Air Lines.

Under terms of the acqusition, American said it was required to hire some 160 Eastern attendants who had been serving those routes. But American's flight attendants union opposed the hiring, apparently because the Eastern attendants, mostly foreign nationals, were not its members.

American insisted the Eastern attendants would not have access to the rest of its route system and would fly only between Miami and the Latin American destinations. It said the hiring would not result in the elimination of any jobs under the union's jurisdiction. In fact, American said, the Latin American expansion would create 1,700 new jobs at its Miami hub.

American is scheduled to begin the service July 1 with daily non-stop service between Miami and Buenos Aires, Argentina; Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, Brazil; and Santiago, Chile.

On the route authority, Becker said the recommendation in favor of American by DOT public consel Thomas Mahoney would be for daily non-stop flights between Chicago and Tokyo as well as San Jose, Calif. and Tokyo. "We are not commenting on it because this is only the first substantive step," he said.

Becker said the recommendation would be considered by an administrative law judge who will then issue his own recommendation to the Secretary of Transporation. The Secretary's decision must finally be approved by President Bush.

If American wins the two routes, they will go a long way in serving American's strategy of becoming a major international airline. The Chicago-Tokyo route will give American a dominant presence at the nation's busiest airport and allow it to compete with United on the latter's home base. American's only flight to Tokoyo at present is a daily non-stop service from the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

LIMA, Peru (JUNE 11) UPI - Political leaders Monday awaited signals from political novice and president-elect Alberto Fujimori on what policies he will follow and how he intends to form the political alliance he needs to govern.

Fujimori, 51, an agricultural engineer and son of Japanese immigrants, came from obscurity just a few months ago to win an upset victory in Sunday's runoff election.

Novelist Mario Vargas Llosa, the opposing candidate of a center-right coalition, conceded defeat less than three hours after the polls closed. Vote projections by public opinion research companies gave Fujimori about 56 percent of the vote to 36 percent for Vargas Llosa.

Fujimori's unexpected last-minute surge to the presidency has upset traditional political alignments, leaving neither his Change '90 party nor any other party holding a majority in Congress.

The new government will inherit an inflation rate that soared to 2,775 percent in 1989 and to 350 percent in the first five months of 1990. As many as one-third of the country's approximately 22 million people live in poverty, according to the outgoing government.

Fujimori was highly critical during the campaign of Vargas Llosa's proposed economic ''shock'' plan to tame hyperinflation. But his own proposals for pulling the economy out of its tailspin were vague.

''It is his turn now to make proposals and for the political parties to analyze and evaluate them to see if they are coherent with the organization's own programs,'' said Sen. Gustavo Mohome, of the United Left coalition.

He said the United Left had supported Fujimori in the vote as the only alternative to Vargas Llosa and the right, but ''this does not mean a blank check'' for the new president.

When Fujimori takes office on July 28, his birthday, he will receive a country that is bankrupt, its reserves spent by outgoing President Alan Garcia.

Peru has also been cut off from international lending organizations since Garcia halted nearly all payments on the country's $20 million foreign debt after taking office in 1985.

Political anaylyst Fernando Rospigliosi said Fujimori's campaign was ''total improvisation. He has nothing. He has no team.''

Fujimori will have to align with Garcia's American Popular Revolutionary Alliance in order to govern, said Rospigliosi, a sociologist and political editor of Caretas magazine.

Luis Alva Castro, general secretary of APRA, said, ''On our part, there will the best disposition for a national accord'' government.

Fujimori called after his election for a national unity government and said no political party would be excluded. He also said his economic program was ''open for discussion with the country's principal political and productive forces.''

Several senior leaders of Fujimori's Change '90 party said he would propose using silver to mint Peruvian money, would gradually raise the price of gasoline that is far below market level and would sell off some state-owned businesses.

But Fujimori has promised his economic revival program would be gradual and not hurt the poor as he charged Vargas Llosa's anti-inflation package would.

Fujimori also criticized the militarization of the anti-cocaine effort in Peru. The country is the world's largest producer of the coca leaf, from which cocaine is produced.

''We cannot continue in the form in which we have been operating,'' he said, calling for the opening of markets for Peruvian crops in an apparent reference to a crop-substitution plan.

He also said that direct participation by foreign troops would not be allowed.

To battle the Shining Path guerrilla movement, Fujimori proposed economic development of rural areas, where the group is strong, to cut off their base of support from poor peasant farmers.

There was relatively little violence during the election despite the Shining Path's call for a boycott. Ten deaths were reported in various parts of the country.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - President Bush met with his top advisers Monday to review the administration's budget negotiations with members of Congress.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater called it an ''internal meeting to analyze the meetings so far.''

Those meetings, he added, ''have gone well ... in confidence building.''

''We're getting close to starting to deal with various options,'' Fitzwater said.

Responding to questions, Fitzwater refused to set a deadline for reaching a budget compromise, but expressed hope that there would be one before Congress takes a summer recess in August.

He said budget director Richard Darman, House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and members of the administration and congressional delegations were meeting often.

The budget talks are scheduled to resume on Wednesday.

Fitzwater said the July 15 deadline for the six-month economic review and approaching deadline to reduce the deficit in accordance with the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law was impetus to get the negotiations moving.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings balanced budget law, passed in 1985 and rewritten in 1987, is aimed at shrinking the federal deficit every year and eliminating it entirely by fiscal 1993. It includes provisions to force automatic across-the-board spending cuts if Congress and the president fail to agree on their own spending plans to meet the annual deficit reduction goal.

Under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, the deficit reduction schedule calls for reductions to $136 billion for fiscal 1989, $100 billion in fiscal 1990, $64 billion in fiscal 1991, $28 billion in fiscal 1992, and zero in fiscal 1993.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - A Japanese couple living in New York agreed to pay $99,703 to the Securities and Exchange Commission Monday to settle charges of insider trading in stock of the John O. Butler Co., a Chicago manufacturer of oral hygiene products.

Jiro Yamazaki and his wife Ikuko Sekiguchi-Yamazaki were required by the SEC to surrender $45,500 in profits, pay $8,703 in interest, and also pay a $45,500 penalty, according to a SEC litigation statement released Monday.

The SEC had charged that Yamazaki learned nonpublic information about Butler while employed with a major international bank that was helping to finance a tender offer for Butler by the Sunstar Corp. of Japan. The SEC did not disclose the bank's name.

Specifically, Yamakazi allegedly learned about the tender offer prior to its announcement and relayed the information to his wife, who proceeded to buy 4,000 Butler shares in early March for about $13 a share.

Sunstar announced a $25 a share tender offer for Butler stock on March 21, and the couple tendered their shares in August, realizing a profit of $45,000. The SEC had filed a civil suit against the couple Monday in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - Korean Air Lines Monday contracted for 23 long-range Boeing 747-400s, including spares and training, for a $4.8 billion purchase expected to help shrink the huge U.S. trade deficit with South Korea.

Engines for the planes are under negotiation with three companies, KAL Vice President Y.H. Cho told a news conference after signing the contract with Boeing Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Frank Shrontz.

Delivery of the airplanes to the South Korean airline will start in 1994 and continue through the 1990s, Shrontz said. He noted KAL's contract is one the largest single orders ever placed with the Seattle-based manufacturer. All KAL planes are firm commitments, making the deal Boeing's third largest single order, and the second largest for the 747-400.

GPA Ltd., an Irish leasing company, placed a firm order for $9.4 billion worth of jets on April 18, 1989. Eight days after the GPA deal, United Airlines placed firm orders for $7.1 billion worth of jets.

KAL already has ordered nine 747-400s, bringing the airline's total for that particular model to 32. That makes KAL the second biggest customer for the newest model of Boeing's jumbo jet behind Japan Airlines, which has ordered 40 of the 747-400s to date.

Shrontz said the magnitude of the order is a reflection of KAL's 15 percent a year growth in passenger traffic, "exceeded by a 23 percent growth in cargo last year," and the rising importance of South Korea in world trade.

He contended the KAL order will not force Boeing to accelerate the production rate of the company, which is already on a rate hike every six months to cope with a demand growth that peaked in 1989. After the banner year of 1989, Boeing sales are not expected to keep up with the last three years, Shrontz said.

The 747-400s will carry as many as 392 passengers each in a three-class seating arrangement. The planes, capable of operating at non-stop ranges of more than 8,000 miles, would connect South Korea to Europe and North America. Boeing noted that the airplane can carry a full payload non-stop between Seoul and New York or between Seoul and London.

According to Cho, KAL will play a role in the 747-400's manufacturing by building wing tip and flap parts, which will allow South Korea to acquire technological expertise.

Yet there is no direct "offset" of plane orders against parts, and KAL will have to compete for Boeing orders with "price, quality and delivery," he indicated.

The announcement was made within the context of a South Korean business trade mission in Washington to negotiate purchases of U.S. goods to reduce the $6.2 billion trade deficit the United States had with South Korea in 1989.

The group's chief, former Trade and Industry Minister Jin-ho Kum, nevertheless admitted that South Korean department stores are pulling from their shelves U.S.-made luxury goods, including furniture and glassware, as a reaction to a "social atmosphere" unfavorable to imported goods.

(JUNE 11) UPI - A federal judge in Washington, D-C, today sentenced John Poindexter to six months in prison for his role in the Iran-Contra scandal. The former national security adviser was convicted April 7th on five felony charges, including conspiracy and lying to Congress. Because of Poindexter's huge legal fees, the judge did NOT impose a fine.

The Supreme Court, in a slim 5flag burning law that was enacted last year by Congress. Justice William Brennan says the law is NOT consistent with the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech. Today's decision rekindles the call for a constitutional amendment to counter last year's Supreme Court ruling allowing flag burning as a form of protest.

In another decision, the court ruled that an anonymous tip can provide police with justifiable cause to stop a car... even if it might NOT be sufficient to support an arrest or search warrant. The ruling stems from an Alabama case in which an appellate court reversed a drug conviction because evidence from a car search was used in the trial.

Two fireboats began an all-out effort today to put out a raging fire aboard an oil tanker in the Gulf of Mexico off the Texas Coast. The fireboats began spraying chemical foam at the ship, but within minutes a new stream of flaming oil started gushing from a pump house, forcing one fireboat to move back and delaying the effort.

The tanker Mega Borg is 57 miles southeast of Galveston, and has been burning since an explosion Saturday that killed two crew members and left two others missing and presumed dead. More explosions followed yesterday.

The accused ringleader in last year's racial killing of a black teen-ager in Brooklyn was sentenced today to the maximum term of five and one-third to 16 years in prison. Keith Mondello was cleared last month of murder charges in the killing of Yusuf Hawkins, but he was convicted of riot, UNlawful imprisonment and other charges.

DALLAS (JUNE 11) UPI - A new treatment appears to be effective in reversing potentially life-threatening reactions to overdoses of the commonly prescribed heart drug digitalis, researchers reported Monday.

A substance known as ''digoxin-specific antibody fragments'' appears to safely and rapidly reverse digitalis toxicity, which can kill, the researchers said.

Digitalis, a derivative of the foxglove plant, has been prescribed in various forms since the late 1700s to treat congestive heart failure and certain heart rhythm irregularities. But high blood levels of the drug can cause the heart to beat too quickly or too slowly.

Digoxin is the most frequently prescribed form of digitalis. The new treatment is made from antibodies that are produced by the immune systems of sheep and specifically respond to the drug.

In the current issue of the American Heart Association journal Circulation researchers from 20 U.S. medical centers report the results of a 12-year study in which the treatment was tested on 150 patients.

Seventy-five patients had taken digitalis as long-term therapy, 15 had taken a large dose of the drug accidentally and 59 took an overdose during suicide attempts. Twenty-five patients were children.

The scientists said 119 patients who received the experimental treatment recovered completely from all signs of digitalis poisoning. Fourteen improved and 15 showed no response. Only 14 patients had adverse reactions possibly related to the treatment.

The treatment appears to be superior to conventional treatment because of its ability to home in on drug molecules circulating through the body, said Dr. Elliot Antman of Harvard Medical School.

''The lower molecular weight of the fragments allows them to get to the point where they're needed a lot faster,'' he said.

The therapy is approved only for individuals with potentially life-threatening digitalis intoxication. But investigators are looking at milder forms of digitalis toxicity, which some experts estimate effects as many as 15 percent of the people who take the drug.

Antman also pointed out a major difference between the latest study and one conducted earlier by French physicians involving digitalis-induced heart failure deaths.

''All nine - 100 percent - of those patients in the earlier study whose hearts stopped beating due to an overdose of digitalis did not survive hospitalization,'' he said. ''In our study, only 26 our of 56 who experienced cardiac arrest, or less than 50 percent of these patients, died.''

The U.S. study was not a randomized controlled trial, where some patients receive a phony, useless substitute.

''There were serious ethical concerns about using placebo therapy on a group of patients suffering from an illness associated with a high mortality rate,'' Antman said.

Before receiving the experimental therapy, the patients had received standard treatments including pacemaker insertion, direct-current defibrillation, CPR and drug intervention.

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) UPI - The Hoverspeed SeaCat, a product of Sea Containers Ltd., Hoverspeed Great Britain and International Catamarans, roared into New York Monday on the first leg of its attempt to set a new trans-Atlantic speed record.

Sea Containers and subsidiary Hoverspeed introduced the fastest wave-piercing catamaran ferry in the world, en route to its challenge for the prestigious "Blue Riban" Hales Trophy, a maritime award for speed records set by passenger ships crossing the Atlantic Ocean.

The ship left Hobart, Tasmania, on May 7, crossing the Australian channel with its crew of ten in a record time of just under 24 hours and arriving in New York via New Zealand, Tahiti and the Panama Canal.

"We crossed the Pacific Ocean at half speed in a little over 15 days, without refueling," said Robert F. Clifford, sailing master. "We were careful of the fuel all the way. "There are no places to fill her up out in the Pacific," Clifford joked.

The ferry is scheduled to begin year-round commercial service across the English Channel June 28. But first the sleek, futuristic-looking ship, built for $15.4 million and measuring 242 feet with a twin-hull design, will depart New York Harbor on Tuesday for Nantucket Buoy to begin her challenge for the Hales Trophy across the Atlantic.

The award is presented to the owners of a passenger ship that crosses the Atlantic at the highest average speed in either direction between two points on the customary channels for any six runs.

On most runs, the western point is Nantucket Buoy, off the Massachusetts coast. Bishop Rock Lighthouse, off the southwest coast of England, is the eastern point on most of the runs, John Lloyd, master, foreign going, explained.

"Hoverspeed aims to complete the voyage in three days and six hours at an average speed of 35.7 knots per hour and will depart Tuesday, June the 19th," Clifford said.

"But we are capable of 40 knots, and if we do not break the record this time, we will attempt another run in a few months."

The craft features four 16-valve, wave-piercing diesel engines, producing 14,400 kilowatts of power, that were designed by Ruston as well as the latest Riva Calzoni water jets, which enable the craft to cruise at well over 35 knots through ocean waves rather than rise over them.

Built in Tasmania by International Catamarans Tasmania and launched there Jan. 28, the ferry is the first of four such craft ordered by Sea Containers' Hoverspeed unit. All will carry the "Hoverspeed SeaCat" name, Lloyd said.

Robin Wilkins, Hoverspeed's managing director, said he has "every confidence in the pedigree of this revolutionary design." The vessel, Wilkins said, "is well capable of breaking the record and winning the Hales Trophy for Britain."

In 1935, Harold K. Hales of Great Britain created the Hales Trophy for the Blue Riband of the Atlantic. A member of Parliament and an avid sailor, he hoped the award would encourage further innovation in oceangoing passenger transportation.

Technically, the first ship to win the trophy was the Italian liner Rex. However, in August 1935, before the trophy was ready to be presented, the Rex's crossing time was beaten by another ship, the Normandie.

In 1936, the Queen Mary beat the Normandie's record, but directors of the Cunard lines refused the award, stating the Queen Mary was not taking part in ocean racing because it would have been inconsistent with the company's safety policies.

On July 7, 1952, on her maiden voyage from New York to Southampton, the liner United States broke the old record in a time of three days, ten hours and 40 minutes, averaging 35.6 knots over a distance of 2,942 nautical miles.

The four-foot, 602 troy ounce silver trophy has been in the U.S. more than 37 years and is presently displayed in the American Merchant Marine Museum in Kings Point, N.Y.

"There are currently 50,000 advance bookings for the Hoverspeed, which will ferry 450 passenger and 84 autos between Portsmouth, England, and Cherbourg, France, in about two hours and 40 minutes daily," Wilkins said. Roundtrip fares will be $43 for adult passengers and $110 for two adults and a vehicle. A typical roundtrip airfare between London and Paris is about $325 and takes about one hour.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 11) UPI - Egypt officially remained silent Monday on the prospect of a hawkish new government in Israel, but Cairo newspapers criticized Israeli acting Premier Yitzhak Shamir for playing with fire in an already volatile region and Palestinians called the possible new government ''a war Cabinet.''

President Hosni Mubarak would not comment on the possible return to power in Israel of the hard-line Shamir, who presented an extemely conservative government to the Israeli Knesset, or Parliament, on Monday.

The Egyptian silence bolstered the contention by diplomats that Iraq has apparently replaced Egypt as the Palestinians main backer in the Arab world, primarily because Cairo is seen as unable to use its ties with the Jewish state and the United States to gain concessions. Egypt is the only Arab country to have signed a peace accord with Israel.

Mubarak did however ask President Bush not to break off talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization in the wake of an aborted raid on an Israeli beach by a PLO faction, Cairo-based Western diplomatic sources said.

The PLO attempted to remedy measures Monday by condemning military attacks against civilians but failed to mention's last month guerrilla raid, Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported.

The Israeli military thwarted the May 30 raid when it captured two rocket-equipped speedboats heading toward Tel Aviv area beaches, killing four guerrillas and capturing 12.

Abul Abbas, leader of the Palestine Liberation Front and a member of the PLO executive committee, claimed responsiblity for the attack but said PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat had not been informed of his plans.

Arafat renounced terrorism two years in order to start the U.S. dialogue, which he hoped would eventually lead to direct contacts with Israel.

The PLO reacted strongly to Shamir's proposed coalition government, calling it a ''war Cabinet.''

Palestinian sources in Jordan warned that the policies of a new Israeli Likud government would ''promote terrorism in the region.''

Prominent West Bank Palestinians said Shamir's aim of crushing the Arab intifada, or uprising, would promote even greater bloodshed.

Shamir has indicated he no longer interested in international efforts to have Israeli-PLO talks.

The government-supervised daily Al Akhbar said in an editorial Monday that Arabs should mobilize world public opinion ''to prevent Shamir and his fellows among the radical religious parties from playing with fire in an area needing only a rash spark to set off a powder keg,'' Al Akhbar said.

Shamir's government ''must serve as a warning to the Arab nation of difficult times ahead, either with respect to the process of housing the largest possible number of Soviet Jewish immigrants, or escalating the savage methods which so far have failed to crush the Palestinian uprising '' it said.

(JUNE 11) UPI - East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere today met with President Bush at the White House... where NO other East German leader has been invited in 40 years of Cold War. Bush says the meeting demonstrates the ''magnificent'' changes of the past year. He and de Maiziere are expected to discuss German reunification.

The Coast Guard says the fuel leak from a cruise ship that ran aground yesterday off of Cape Cod is 10 times worse than originally thought. Officials say the Bermuda Star lost about 15-thousand gallons of oil. Bad weather has forced crews to abandon repairs on the ship, as the oil slick spreads to southwest shores.

The drug and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry enters its second week amid reports that the major may NOT seek re-election. A Washington report says Barry will announce his withdrawal from the race on a local T-V show tonight. Barry's news secretary says there are NO such plans.

A Palestinian Liberation Organization spokesman today condemned military action against civilians in the Israeli-occupied territories, but did NOT go as far as to mention last month's raid on Israeli shores by a P-L-O faction. The United States had demanded the organization condemn the aborted sea attack.

NASA engineers today rolled out a rocket booster at its assembly building to make room for the grounded space shuttle Columbia. Technicians will bring the Columbia into the shop for repairs tomorrow. The ship originally was scheduled for launch May 30th, but was grounded by a massive hydrogen fuel leak.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - In a sign of just how much the postwar order has changed, Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere was welcomed Monday to the White House, where no other East German leader had been invited in 40 years of Cold War.

De Maiziere, who has been in office for only two months and may be the last leader of a separate East Germany, discussed Germany's role in NATO and an undivided Europe during a meeting and working lunch with President Bush.

Afterward, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said de Maiziere responded positively to U.S. proposals designed to allay security concerns driving Soviet opposition to having a unified Germany remain in NATO.

De Maiziere told Bush he was aware of the assurances Secretary of State James Baker has broached with the Soviets ''and felt that they were very helpful to the Warsaw Pact countries as they consider their future,'' Fitzwater said.

Nevertheless, he said, ''It is clear that this is going to a gradual process, one of convincing the Soviets that it is in their interests to see this happen and that NATO provides no security threat to the Soviet Union.''

''We do feel that progress is being made,'' Fitzwater added.

Bush accorded de Maiziere a Rose Garden greeting and conversation over a working lunch in what he earlier predicted would be ''a good meeting'' centered on de Maiziere's vision of the new political landscape of Europe.

Erich Honecker, the hard-line communist leader ousted last year in East Germany's peaceful revolution, tried for years to wrangle an invitation to the White House to legitimize the division of Germany. De Maiziere's visit underscored the inevitability of the unification Honecker thought impossible.

His arrival continued the hectic East-West diplomacy that Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev set into motion at their Washington summit, which over the last week alone has seen the ''German question'' surface - but remain unanswered - at meetings of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, NATO foreign ministers and Warsaw Pact leaders.

The NATO foreign ministers endorsed a nine-point U.S. formula offering the Soviets the prospects of a less threatening NATO military posture, an institutionalized role for the 35-nation CSCE, guaranteed borders and constraints on the size and power of the German armed forces to win their acceptance of a Germany in NATO.

On the basis of the Bush-Gorbachev summit talks, which recorded little progress on the German issue, and follow-up discussions last week between Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, Fitzwater said the U.S. proposals ''seem to be having some impact.''

Bush and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl reaffirmed their demand after a White House meeting Friday night that Germany remain a full partner in NATO. De Maiziere shares the view that linkage to NATO could be a stabilizing force.

Kohl spoke Friday to Soviet fears of a resurgent Germany - rooted in the loss of 27 million citizens in World War II - by noting a firm tie to NATO would leave Germany ''bound in'' to the alliance and not ''in any way'' free to pursue a potentially threatening independent foreign policy.

Kohl alluded to possible limits on the Bundeswehr in telling reporters: ''The strength of the future German army is not a private matter to be decided only by Germans. It's a question which is of enormous importance for the overall security configuration of Europe.''

The Soviets, who have gone from demanding neutrality for Germany to hinting they might accept NATO membership under certain conditions, have tried to use their 380,000 troops in East Germany as leverage in those talks. West German officials have said the Soviets would be permitted to maintain a troop presence of yet-unspecified size and duration there after unification.

East German Defense Minister Rainer Eppelman said Saturday that East Germany will leave the Warsaw Pact the day unification is completed.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA (JUNE 11) UPI - Gov. Bob Martinez claimed credit Monday for sparking a crackdown against the rap group 2 Live Crew, as authorities prepared to charge a third band member with violating the state obscenity law.

Broward County sheriff's deputies arrested two band members early Sunday, shortly after the band finished a live performance in Hollywood, Fla.

Martinez, a Republican facing a potentially tough re-election race this year, asked statewide prosecutor Peter Antonacci in February to mount a racketeering and obscenity probe of the group's album ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be,'' saying sale of the sexually explicit recording to minors ''violates all conceivable standards of decency.''

Antonacci declined, saying local prosecution made more sense.

''I think the local jurisdictions took him (Antonacci) at his word,'' Martinez said in Tallahassee. ''I think this (album) is a form of, in this case, audio pornography.''

The album has been declared obscene in south Florida and in at least eight other counties across the state.

Broward Sgt. Bob Faulkner said authorities planned to issue a notice to appear charging band member Mark Ross with the first-degree misdemeanor, punishable by up to a year in jail and a fine of $1,000.

Faulkner said a fourth band member, David Hobbs, would not be charged because he did not recite the controversial lyrics during the performance.

2 Live Crew was not expected to return to south Florida from Phoenix until Tuesday, said Bruce Rogow, the band's attorney. The band flew to Phoenix Sunday for a performance there.

Authorities had planned to arrest all four band members following the weekend concert, but failed to nab Ross and Hobbs after they left the club in a separate car.

Authorities decided Monday not to issue warrants for their arrest.

''With a warrant, you have to hunt the subject down. A NTA (notice to appear) is just like a traffic ticket,'' Faulkner said. ''They have to sign the bottom.''

Rogow said band members would cooperate.

''These people were never looking for trouble, and they are not looking for trouble now,'' he said.

Band leader Luther Campbell, 29, and member Chris Wongwon, 26, were arrested Sunday without incident several blocks from Club Futura.

Broward deputies acted under the authority of a civil ruling issued Wednesday by a federal judge in Fort Lauderdale.

U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez ruled that ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be'' was legally obscene by south Florida standards because its lyrics vividly depicted sexual acts and lacked any redeeming social value. His ruling applied in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

On Friday, Broward authorities arrested record store owner Charles Freeman for selling the recording to an undercover deputy.

Freeman said Monday he chose to risk arrest in order to challenge the law.

''If I sit down, and Peaches and Q records, they don't stand up to these people, nobody will, and we'll lose our rights one by one, slowly but surely, and I'm not going to stand for it at all,'' he said.

Freeman said, however, he would stop selling ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be'' for now, on the advice of attorneys who fear he could face a racketeering charge for repeated sales.

''I don't want the Broward County sheriff's office to come in here and confiscate my business and tie it up for two or three months,'' he said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 11) UPI - A Delta rocket carrying a hard-luck $80 million Indian communications satellite was cleared Monday for a predawn liftoff Tuesday, one year after the relay station was damaged in a $10 million launch pad mishap.

The slender $50 million Delta rocket, equipped with nine strap-on solid-fuel boosters for extra takeoff power, was primed for launch at 1:52 a.m. EDT Tuesday from launch complex 17 at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station adjacent to the Kennedy Space Center. Air Force meteorologists called for an 80 percent chance of acceptable weather at launch time.

The flight plan called for the solar-powered INSAT-1D satellite, the fourth in a series of Indian communications stations, to be ejected into a preliminary orbit about 24 minutes after takeoff.

"Once it is in orbit it will be in service for India and it will be a great day for us because there, up in the sky, will be something for which both of (our) nations can be proud of," said Abid Hussain, India's ambassador to the United States.

"It's advantages to us are many. We in India believe science and technology can be put into the service of the people, especially those people who have been so far deprived of some of the advantages of (modern communications)."

If all goes well, an on-board rocket motor will fire Wednesday to boost the high point of INSAT's orbit to 22,300 miles up. Additional rocket firings will cicularize the satellite's orbit at an altitude of 22,300 miles above the equator.

At that altitude, satellites take 24 hours to complete one orbit and thus appear to hang stationary in the sky, eliminating the need for costly, steerable ground antennas. INSAT-1D is to be stationed over the equator at 83 degrees East longitude.

Built by Ford Aerospace of Palo Alto, Calif., INSAT-1D will replace an identical but aging satellite already in orbit to provide telephone, television, and weather forecasting service to India. Two other INSAT relay stations are no longer operational.

Launch originally was scheduled for last June, but just ten days before takeoff, a frayed cable snapped and a 75-pound hook on a launch pad crane fell onto the satellite's "C-band" radio antenna.

As a result, the spacecraft had to be removed from its Delta booster and shipped back to the factory in Palo Alto for extensive repairs that cost some $10 million, according to Fred Stang, an official with Ford Aerospace.

Stang said insurance covered the cost of the repairs, along with another $150,000 in damage caused during the San Francisco earthquake last October when several solar cells were broken. The repair work pushed the total value of the satellite to some $80 million.

India's Department of Space bought insurance to cover the satellite from the moment of launch through orbital checkout. Once checked out and in operation, INSAT-1D will provide data and voice communications between 31 ground stations in India and provide high-power direct broadcast television signals to thousands of low-cost TV, radio, and disaster warning devices across the nation.

"In India, we've got 800 million people," Hussain said. "A large majority of them are still not exposed to education. Through this new satellite we would like to spread education and knowledge, science and new culture to hundreds of thousands of those who have been out of the mainstream of life."

The multi-purpose satellite also will be used to monitor weather patterns to improve forecasting and to relay meteorological data to various ground stations for analysis.

INSAT-1D is equipped with 12 high frequency transponders, each one capable of handling 1,000 one-way voice or data channels or one television signal. Direct broadcast television signals will be beamed down to more than 100,000 receive-only ground terminals, most in rural areas.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 11) UPI - A Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman condemned military action aimed at civilians Monday but did not specifically mention last month's unsuccessful raid on an Israeli beach by a PLO faction, Egypt's Middle East News Agency said.

''A Palestinian official spokesman in Tunis said that the Palestinian position has been, and still is, against any military action aimed at civilians, no matter what the nature of this action,'' the official Egyptian news agency reported.

The United States had threatened to end its 20-month dialogue with the organization if the PLO did not condemn the May 30 sea attack by the Palestine Liberation Front, a faction of the PLO.

The raid was thwarted when the Israeli military captured two rocket-equipped speedboats heading to Tel Aviv area beaches.

Front leader Abul Abbas, the reputed mastermind behind the Achille Lauro hijacking and a member of the PLO executive committee, claimed responsiblity for the attack but said PLO Chairman Yassir Arafat had no prior knowledge of the raid.

Arafat denounced terrorism two years ago as a prelude to beginning a dialogue with the United States he had hoped would lead to direct talks with Israel. Israeli leaders have said the raid is evidence the PLO still backs terrorist activities.

At the State Department in Washington, spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said Monday the United States was ''pleased to see that they are denouncing military action against civilians, but we are disappointed that they have not explicitly condemned the Tel Aviv raid and refrained from any public comment on Abul Abbas.''

Tutwiler declined to say whether the United States would end contacts with the PLO or say when such a decision might be made.

She said Robert Pelletreau, the U.S. ambassador to Tunisia, had met during the weekend in Tunis with representatives of the PLO, but also declined to give details about those discussions.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said in an address earlier in the day to the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee in Washington that President Bush was still undecided whether to break off U.S. talks with the PLO.

The Palestinian News Agency WAFA quoted the PLO spokesman in Tunis as saying the developments come ''at a time when the crimes of Israel against children, women and the Palestinian people are increasing,'' Egypt's Middle East News Agency said.

''These (Israeli) crimes are escalating on a daily basis as a result of the protection provided by the U.S. veto (in the United Nations) and the U.S. aid to Israel.''

The official in Tunis criticized Israel for balking at negotiating with the PLO prior to the raid, saying Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir ''has rejected all international peace initiatives in the Middle East.''

''We are still committed to work with all regional and international powers to achieve lasting peace in the area,'' the spokesman was quoted as saying.

Arafat has come under increasing pressure from radicals because of the lack of tangible results from his almost 20 months of talks with the United States and his renunciation of violence two years ago.

CHICAGO (JUNE 11) UPI - Aggressive professional buying rallied corn and soybean futures to session highs late Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Closing prices were higher to sharply higher with the exception of oats.

The market had been depressed early in the day by favorable weather conditions during the weekend and predictions of good weather for another couple of days.

Light follow-through selling soon gave way to professional buying with a prominent firm as the major player. Some of the demand was attributed to short-covering.

Gains were limited by indications that farmers made good progress with their corn and soybean planting during the weekend, although the weekly crop reports were expected to show the pace continued behind normal.

Wheat futures rallied on spillover from corn and were moderately higher at the close.

There was very little news on the export front, and European markets were quiet.

Country movement was described as light.

At the close, corn was up 3 to 5 1/4, soybeans up 4 1/2 to 10 1/2, wheat up 1 1/4 to 4 and oats down 1 cent in every contract.

GDANSK, POLAND (JUNE 11) UPI - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa rejected an offer Monday to lead a new centrist party, saying that taking such a position would unfairly throw off a balance among new political parties in the country.

''I am a supporter of the center,'' Walesa said following a meeting with a 20-member delegation from the new Center Party, led by his aide Jaroslaw Kaczynski.

''I cannot be linked with you, because the center would be too strong,'' he said when the offer was made to lead the party.

A source close to Walesa, who asked to be anonymous, said that the union leader wanted to remain above the political fray.

If Walesa had accepted the leadership of the Center Party, it would become the largest political party and create an imbalance among new political forces in Poland, the source said.

''Such a situation would have nothing to do with democracy,'' the source said.

The meeting took place one day after a group of 90 Solidarity intellectuals and union activists meeting in Krakow failed to sufficiently iron out agreements to form a party in opposition to the Center Party, which also includes Solidarity supporters.

Walesa has said a new party is needed to compete with the Center Party.

''I am waiting for the consolidation of the group,'' Walesa said.

He also said the competition of two parties with Solidarity roots would be benefit Poland because they would encourage Poles to be more active politically.

The Center favors election of a president this fall to replace Communist President Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and the ouster of hundreds of former Communist managers from key job in various industries.

Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki has been against implementing policial reforms so quickly, earning some criticism from Walesa.

The Krakow group has sided with Mazowiecki and opts for holding of the elections next spring.

SEATTLE (JUNE 11) UPI - The Boeing Co.'s ability to keep pulling in multi-billion orders surprises analysts and even company executives, but many within the industry wonder how much longer the trend will last for the world's No. 1 airplane builder.

Boeing's latest huge order came Monday from Korean Air Lines, which announced an agreement in Washington, D.C., to buy 23 747-400 jumbo jets worth approximately $4.8 billion, which includes spares and training. The order is the third largest in the company's history, and the third multi-billion agreement within as many weeks.

The value of the KAL deal is topped only by an April 18, 1989, order from GPA Ltd., an Irish leasing company, for $9.4 billion worth of jets, which was followed eight days later by a United Airlines order for $7.1 billion worth of planes.

The Korean order also followed a May 31 order from China's civil aviation agency worth $2 billion, and another order May 24 from Japan Airlines worth $3.1 billion.

To date, Boeing has garnered orders for 214 airplanes worth approximately $19.3 billion since Jan. 1, and now has a backlog of orders for 1,760 jets worth about $91 billion, enough to keep the company's production lines busy through the end of the century.

"I'm just amazed at the strength of the order trends for Boeing," said Jerry Cantwell, an analyst with Wertheim Schroder & Co. "It just seems to be well beyond what the airline expansion or replacement needs are for the next five years.

"I think airlines are ordering in case traffic continues to growth strongly through the 1990s. But I think there is also a bit of a frenzy - they are thinking, 'We better get in line or we won't get airplanes in 1995 or 1996 or 1997."'

Last year was the blockbuster for Boeing, which in 1989 signed agreements to build 887 planes valued at $46.7 billion. Analysts pointed out, however that 1989 figures were skewed by the giant orders in April from GPA and United, and predicted that orders would begin falling off this year.

"My forecast looks for real cuts in orders this year," said Peter Aseritis of First Boston Corp., who predicted orders for about 430 jets this year for Boeing. "I am looking for the backlog to peak this year."

Yet so far, Boeing is having an impressive year. While 1990's numbers have not bulged with orders the size of GPA's or United's, Boeing could still easily surpass 1988, when it received orders for 632 planes worth $29.6 billion.

Bill Whitlow, of Dain Bosworth Inc., said while orders for huge numbers of planes may subside, Boeing may still get high-value deals because of large numbers of 747s being ordered by Asian airlines for trans-Pacific routes.

A single 747-400 costs $135 million or more, almost double what an airline would pay for Boeing's second most expensive plane, the 767-300ER, which can run about $78 million.

Cantwell said Boeing continues to draw many customers for two big reasons. First, it offers the right products at the right time, and gives airlines the "commonality" of a family of planes that saves on crew training time. Secondly, the competition - particularly Airbus Industrie and McDonnell Douglas - is "not really doing well in terms of production rates."

"Boeing can't deliver planes fast enough, but they can deliver them faster than the competition, and I think there is more confidence on the part of airlines that the delivery dates will be met," Cantwell said.

Cantwell also said Boeing could get another big boost if it starts getting orders this year for its proposed 777 jet, a 350-passenger plane designed to fill a market gap between the 747 and the 767.

But despite its impressive performance, analysts believe Boeing's orders may peak in the next year or so, and revenues will begin to flatten out by the mid-1990s.

"I've been wrong before and so has Boeing about this slowing down, but I would be surprised if this continues," said Whitlow. "It's got to slow down pretty soon."

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA (JUNE 11) UPI - The president of Bolivia's Coca-Cola Co. was kidnapped from his car Monday morning by unknown assailants who wounded his chauffeur, police said.

Coca-Cola spokesmen in Bolivia refused to comment on the reported kidnapping in downtown La Paz of Jorge Lonsdale, one of the most prominent businessmen in the South American country. Spokesmen at the parent company's Atlanta headquarters also had no immediate comment.

Witnesses and police said the 61-year-old executive, former president of Bolivia's Confederation of Private Businessmen, was seized a few blocks from his office at 9 a.m. when a red Volvo swerved in front of his cherry-colored BMW.

Gunmen from a Volkswagen Passat trailing Londsdale's car rushed out, waving pistols and a submachine gun, the witnesses said.

''I heard the shots as I walked along (Otero de la Vega Street),'' said a middle-aged man who asked not to be identified.

''I saw them struggling with and kicking Lonsdale as they put him in the trunk of the Volvo,'' he said. ''They couldn't start the car right away. People were able to take down the license numbers of the two cars they used because of this delay.''

The witnesses said it appeared that about five people took part in the abduction and said one of the vehicles was driven by a woman. Some of the kidnappers wore masks, but not all of them, the witnesses said.

The chauffeur, identified as Fernando Medina, was shot and wounded.

''He was hit by two bullets, one of the right leg and the other of the left arm,'' said Dr. Susana Hurtado of the Boston Clinic, where Medina was treated.

The gunmen, who broke two windows of Lonsdale's car, left it on the street with blood stains on the driver's seat.

Lonsdale's overcoat and a small suitcase were in the car and an airplane ticket had fallen to the ground, indications that he may have been planning to travel later that day.

CARPENTRAS, FRANCE (JUNE 11) UPI - Police arrested four youths Monday in what they said was a major breakthrough in the monthlong investigation into the desecration of a Jewish cemetery in the southern French town of Carpentras.

The four youths are from well-off families and are not skinheads connected to neo-Nazi movements in southern France like the other suspects arrested and then released in the case.

The four were picked up at dawn at their homes in a posh residential area of Carpentras and were being interrogated by police.

''It is a good lead, much better than the other ones, but it would be premature to say that we are coming to the end'' of the investigation, a police investigator said.

A police spokesman said the four youths would be held overnight while the investigation continues.

''This is justified so that we can verify certain things,'' the spokesman said. ''Nothing so far has been established'' as evidence.

Thirty-four tombstones at the Jewish cemetery in Carpentras were vandalized May 10 in an action that shocked France and led to a period of soul-searching about the nature of French society.

It was first reported that the body of an 80-year old man had been impaled by the vandals, but last week the prosecutor investigating the case concluded that the incident had not taken place.

The prosecutor, Monique Guemann, said a stake had been discovered near the exhumed corpse of Felix Germon, leading investigators to think that the body had been impaled.

''The intention was to do so,'' Guemann said last week, ''That is what is important.''

The desecration at Carpentras was followed by similar actions at other Jewish and Catholic cemeteries in France, Canada and Israel.

Police said Thursday the four youths arrested appeared to belong to a band that regularly met at the cemetery to get drunk.

Until now police, and almost everyone else in France, had believed the vandalism at the Carpentras cemetery was carried out for political reasons by a group of well-trained persons who had carefully prepared the operation.

The French politicians, from the ruling Socialists to the traditional right-wing opposition, immediately blamed extreme right-wing National Front leader Jean-Marie Le Pen for creating what they called a climate of racism and anti-Semitism that allowed the desecration at Carpentras to take place.

Some 200,000 people, including President Francois Mitterrand, marched in Paris May 14 in a silent demonstration against racism.

In the month since the event, Le Pen's National Front has been banned from holding political meetings in numerous French towns and cities and there have been suggestions he be banned from appearing on radio and television.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 11) UPI - The Israeli Parliament Monday approved by a vote of 62-57 a Likud-led government of right-wing and religious parties, one of the most hard-line coalitions in the country's history.

The vote, taken after nearly six hours of debate, ended a three-month government crisis and put the Likud Party in power for the first time since 1984 without the center-left Labor Party as a partner.

The coalition, led by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, has pledged to place the immigration of Soviet Jews on the top of its agenda and to pursue the Middle east peace process.

''Israel is a strong state full of confidence,'' Shamir told the 120-member Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, before the vote. One Knesset member abstained.

Immediately after the vote, Shamir and the 18 members of his new Cabinet took the oath of office and proceeded to sit at their places at the government table in front of the Knesset podium.

The four Likud bloc faction members who had threatened not to support the government in the end voted with their party. Avraham Verdiger, whose Agudat Israel party supported Labor, was the only Knesset member to abstain.

When presenting the government, Shamir pledged his continued support for his 1989 peace initiative that calls for elections in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. He said the peace treaty with Egypt and the Camp David Accords remain the cornerstones of the peace process.

''We are prepared and interested to have a dialogue with the legitimate and elected representatives of (the West Bank) in order to enhance their position and autonomy,'' he said.

The right-wing Likud-led coalition rejects giving up the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and direct or indirect talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Many partners also support tougher measures to crush the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation.

Shamir called upon Arabs in the territories not to heed the calls for violence.

''Disturbances and strikes will not enhance their situation and won't further their chances,'' he said. ''Those who are using them for their own sake, they are the terrorists of the PLO.''

Shamir also told the Knesset the coalition represented the majority of Israelis and was made up of experienced government leaders.

''I believe what unites this government is the notion that the land of Israel has moral value and is not just a piece of land.''

He also repeated that the absorption of new immigrants was the top priority of the new government.

Labor Party chairman Shimon Peres spoke next and said his party would not support what he called Shamir's ''strange government'' and blamed Likud for halting the peace process.

''I voted for Camp David. You abstained. I was in favor of getting the army out of Lebanon. You were against it. I worked for an understanding with Jordan. You destroyed it,'' Peres said. ''We did for peace more than you did. Don't preach to us. We did more for security than you did.''

Peres charged the Likud had prevented Israel from becoming ''deeply involved'' in the peace process.

''The intellectual slogan of Mr. Shamir is 'What's the hurry?''' Peres said, adding that the coalition was the creation of Likud hard-liner Ariel Sharon.

The six-party coalition, which Shamir finally put together last Friday, is one of the most right-wing in Israel's history and already has drawn severe criticism from the center-left Labor Party and Palestinian leaders.

Labor leader and former Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told Israel Radio Monday that the Likud-led government would cut Israel off from the peace process. He said it was ''a pale copy'' of the 1981 Likud government that ended the peace process with Egypt and launched the 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

Deputy Foreign Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, a Likud leader, told Israel Radio the criticism was unfounded.

''We are going to renew our peace plan,'' he said. ''We going to hope that for a change, there will be some takers on the Arab side.''

On Friday, after 42 days of political bargaining, Shamir signed a coalition agreement and guidelines with the six parties. He then informed President Chaim Herzog he had enough support to form a government.

DENALI NATIONAL PARK, AK (JUNE 11) UPI - An ailing Japanese climber died close to the summit of North America's highest mountain and even closer to rescuers rushing to help him, the National Park Service said Monday.

Hiroaki Ito, 38, of Hyogo, died Sunday night about 1,000 feet below the summit of 20,320-foot Mount Mckinley. Two rescue efforts, from above and below, closed in on Ito, but it was too late when they reached him.

Ito becomes the 62nd climber to die on McKinley, the first this year.

A seven-member Japanese climbing team started up the mountain May 25, and decided to make a fast, final push for the top Saturday from 17,200 feet, where they left their gear in order to travel light.

At 19,300 feet, Ito began suffering altitude sickness and was unable to forge ahead to the summit. His six companions left him, without a tent or any survival gear, park service spokesman John Quinley said.

The other six reached the summit but split into two groups coming down. The group of four found Ito in bad shape, bivouaced with him Saturday night - with no gear - and radioed for help Sunday morning, Quinley said.

Three climbers headed down for help. The one remaining with Ito learned by radio that the park service dropped oxygen 200 feet above the stricken climber.

Ito's companion climbed up for the life-saving oxygen, but when he returned Sunday night, Ito was dead. Another rescue team was 500 feet below Ito when that word came. Military helicopters from Anchorage also were preparing a risky high-altitude rescue when Ito died, Quinley said.

The quickest cure for altitude sickness is to go down or to get oxygen. But Ito was too sick to go down on his own and too heavy for his companions to carry, Quinley said.

Two of the climbers who camped high on the mountain with Ito during the ordeal suffered serious frostbite to their toes and feet and helicopters were to fly the men off the mountain Monday.

As for the team going the last stretch without gear while leaving a sick companion alone, and without a tent or any other protection, Quinley said, ''In hindsight, they probably would have chosen to do things differently.''

INDIO, CA (JUNE 11) UPI - For the third time in five weeks, a bomb ripped through a night deposit box Monday at a Coachella Valley bank, igniting a fire that destroyed the building, police said.

The explosion at the Security Pacific National Bank branch on Highway 111 hit at shortly after 3 a.m., igniting a fire that burned out of control until about 7:30 a.m., police Officer Garry Heckman said.

''The fire completely engulfed the structure. It was big fireball,'' Heckman said.

Only the bank's vault survived the flames, he said.

The FBI was investigating.

Investigators said the bomb had been placed in the night deposit box at the rear of the 10,000-square-foot, single-story building. The explosion scattered cash, bank documents and sections of the rear wall for several hundred feet.

Heckman said it had not been determined whether the structure of the building fueled the fire, or whether the bomb was more powerful than earlier devices left in night deposit boxes at two other desert-area banks.

The earlier explosions damaged Provident Savings in Rancho Mirage on May 21 and a Bank of America branch in Palm Springs on May 7. Like the most recent bombing, the two previous incidents occurred on a Monday.

Police sealed off the surrounding neighborhood for several hours to search for two reportedly suspicious men seen running through an open field about a quarter-mile from the Security Pacific shortly after the explosion.

No one was found, and no arrests have been made in any of the bombings.

Chuck Lemoine, a spokesman for the bank, said all customer funds ''are safe'' and that ''the vault is intact and safe deposit boxes are secure.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The Supreme Court struck down Monday the anti-flag burning law enacted last year by an outraged Congress and lawmakers promptly vowed to change the Constitution to protect Old Glory from desecration.

Justice William Brennan, writing for a 5-4 majority, said the law - passed in response to a 1989 Supreme Court ruling - was inconsistent with the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech.

''We are aware that desecration of the flag is deeply offensive to many,'' Brennan said in his brief eight-page ruling. ''But the same might be said, for example, of virulent ethnic and religious epithets, vulgar repudiations of the draft, and scurrilous caricatures.''

Brennan then quoted from his ruling a year ago that struck down a Texas anti-flag burning law:

''If there is a bedrock principle underlining the First Amendment, it is that the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable.''

The dissenters, led by Justice John Paul Stevens, maintained the government has both the right and the duty to protect ''the symbolic value of the flag.''

But at the same time, Stevens expressed dismay that the flag's value has been ''compromised by those leaders who seem to advocate compulsory worship of the flag.''

At the White House, President Bush told reporters he would renew his campaign for a constitutional amendment to prohibit flag burning.

''I've not in any way pulled back from my conviction that that is what we need,'' Bush said, noting he had predicted the law would not pass constitutional muster. Bush allowed the the Flag Protection Act of 1989 to become law without his signature.

''I will continue to press for what I strongly believe is in the best interest of this country,'' the president said.

The flag, which was a major symbol in the 1988 presidential campaign, is certain to be an issue in this fall's congressional and state elections.

An amendment to give Congress and the states the power to prohibit flag desecration will go before the House Judiciary Committee June 19 and could be on the House floor before the end of the month. The amendment, sponsored by Rep. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., and House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois, is backed by Bush.

Montgomery told reporters he expects a tough time winning the two-thirds majority needed in Congress to send the amendment to the state legislatures for approval.

''It's not going to be easy,'' he said, adding, ''We're going to have to hear from the people of this country who want to stop this flag burning and desecration of the flag. ... And the veterans organizations are going to have to go to work. If they don't, I'm not sure we can get a two-thirds vote.''

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas also introduced an amendment in the Senate and ran into immediate opposition from Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine.

Mitchell, a former federal judge, said the Bill of Rights is the ''most concise, the most effective and the most powerful of civil liberties devised by man.''

While saying ''I deeply and strongly condemn the burning of the flag,'' Mitchell said it would be a ''grievous error'' to change the First Amendment in ''haste and the heat of controversy.''

Mitchell also bitterly criticized Dole for suggesting opponents of the amendment are ''putting their money on the flag burner instead of the men and women who served in the military services.''

Such accusations serve ''no useful purpose other than to gain temporary tactical advantage,'' he said. ''No such choice is before the Senate and House or the country.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - John Poindexter, Ronald Reagan's national security adviser, was sentenced to six months in jail Monday for masterminding the effort to cover up White House involvement in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Poindexter, 53, is the first person to receive a prison sentence in the scandal.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene said Poindexter should be imprisoned because he was ''the decision-making head of the Iran-Contra operation'' in the White House.

Greene sentenced Poindexter to six months in prison on each of five felony counts, but allowed the sentence to run concurrently.

Because of Poindexter's huge legal fees, the judge did not impose a fine. But the retired Navy rear admiral was required to pay a standard $50 court assessment for each of the five counts.

Poindexter was convicted April 7 of conspiring to deceive Congress, making false statements to lawmakers and obstructing congressional inquiries into the Iran-Contra scandal.

Although Poindexter is the last of the original Iran-Contra defendants, a special prosecutor is still investigating the case and new indictments are still possible.

What Poindexter did when he lied to Congress was ''not a part of the normal political process,'' said Greene.

The judge said Poindexter, Lt. Col. Oliver North and others in Reagan's White House tried to ''nullify'' a decision by Congress to cut off aid to the rebel Nicaraguan Contras.

Congress is elected by the American people, Greene said, and its decision cannot be "nullified by appointed officials." Furthermore, he said, Poindexter and North ''engaged in the destruction of evidence on a large scale.''

Poindexter headed the White House effort to subvert Congress, Greene said, and a ''meaningful'' penalty was necessary to deter future activity by public officials.

''It was not an effort by the executive branch of government, but people who were working in the executive branch of government,'' Greene said.

Poindexter stood stiffly as Greene imposed the sentence. But he smiled at his chief lawyer, Richard Beckler, who said he would appeal.

Poindexter was accompanied by his wife, Linda, an Episcopal priest who wore her clerical collar, and his large legal team. He remained free, pending his appeal.

Beckler had asked Greene not to send Poindexter to prison, saying ''he has served his country for 33 years'' and made no personal profit from his actions in the Iran-Contra scandal.

''There is absolutely no doubt, your honor, that this man has suffered,'' Beckler said.

''The world is a somewhat different world today than it was when John Poindexter entered the White House,'' Beckler said. ''The world is safer '' terrorism is on the decline and there are free elections in Eastern Europe, Beckler said.

Before imposing the prison sentence, Greene asked Poindexter if he wanted to say anything. Poindexter stood up and said softly, ''Your honor, I don't have any comment.''

Chief prosecutor Dan Webb asked Greene to put Poindexter behind bars, saying he and ''a very misguided and confused Marine lieutenant colonel'' - North - ''operated a private war in the nation of Nicaragua.''

They kept that war hidden from Congress, Webb said, through a deliberate campaign of lies, deception and obstruction.

America's system of constitutional democracy cannot function, Webb told Greene, unless there is a ''free flow of truthful information'' between the various branches of government.

''There have to be some checks and balances in place,'' Webb said. Poindexter ''unfortunately accepted the principle that the ends justified the means,'' Webb said.

That is a ''dangerous and frightening prospect for a constitutional democracy,'' Webb said, that could ''render meaningless'' the rule of law.

''This was a sustained, protracted and prolonged course of conduct to obstruct Congress,'' Webb said. It was well-planned and conceived, the prosecutor said, and, ''John Poindexter was never on the sidelines.''

LONDON (JUNE 11) UPI - A cockpit windshield that blew out at 23,000 feet above the English countryside, almost sucking the pilot out of the plane, had been replaced two days before the incident occurred, British Airways said Monday.

When the windshield of the BAC 1-11 fell off Sunday, the rush of escaping air caused a swift pressure drop that sucked Capt. Tim Lancaster out of a lap seatbelt, lifting his head and upper body through a three-foot gap.

''He said it did cross his mind, only for a moment or two, that he might die,'' a British Airways spokesman said.

As freezing fog filled the cockpit, two quick-thinking crew members clung to Lancaster's legs for about 15 minutes while a co-pilot brought the plane carrying 81 passengers from Birmingham, 118 miles northwest of London, to Malaga, Spain, down safely in an emergency landing at Southampton.

Buffeted by the wind, Lancaster fractured an elbow, wrist and thumb. One hand was frostbitten in sub-zero temperatures, and he suffered shock, a British Airways spokesman said.

Lancaster, 41, was in satisfactory condition at Southampton General Hospital, a BA spokeswoman said. ''He's making good progress, he's cheerful.''

He was visited by the crew members who had saved his life.

The windshield was recovered intact in a field.

The Department of Transport's Air Accident Investigation Branch studied the design of the windshield and maintenance records of the BAC 1-11 to see what caused it to blow out of the aircraft, British Airways said.

A BA spokeswoman said the cockpit windshield had been replaced as part of general maintenance Friday, two days before the incident occurred.

British Aerospace, which manufactured BAC 1-11s, said the windshields of all its planes undergo standard impact resistance tests, including ones simulating bird strikes.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported the windshields must survive having frozen chickens fired at them at 200 mph.

After the incident, all British Airway BAC 1-11s were inspected and cleared by maintenance staff, the spokeswoman said. The aircraft involved in the incident was grounded while the investigation continues.

INGLEWOOD, CA (JUNE 11) UPI - Pat Riley, whose slick hair and elegant suits epitomized the Showtime play of his Los Angeles Laker teams, resigned as coach Monday after four NBA titles in nine seasons.

Milwaukee Assistant Coach Mike Dunleavy will replace Riley despite never having been a head coach in the league. Announcement of the move was made at a news conference by General Manager Jerry West.

Riley, whose motivational speeches and critical comments wore thin with many of his players, had two years remaining on a contract that paid him $650,000 plus incentives in 1989-90.

He is said to be joining NBC as an NBA analyst. Riley recently met with the network that will televise league games the next four seasons. An NBC source hinted Riley was to join the network, which does not plan to name its analysts until after the NBA Finals.

''It's premature to link one with the other,'' the source said of Riley's resignation and the NBA position. ''But Pat Riley's availability is interesting, to say the least.''

Riley leaves with a 533-194 record. His winning percentage of 73.3 is the best in NBA history and his 102 playoff triumphs are also a league standard. The Lakers won an NBA-high 63 games this season and Riley was rewarded with his first Coach of the Year honor. But Los Angeles was eliminated in five games by Phoenix in the Western Conference semifinals.

Dunleavy, a former NBA guard, last played regularly in 1984-85. He was activated three times during the past two seasons for 10-day stretches.

West was impressed with Dunleavy's basketball knowledge and rapport with players. The general manager sought someone from outside the organization when Riley's decision to quit was final.

Riley's nine seasons with the Lakers left him second in tenure with the same team. Denver's Doug Moe has coached the Nuggets for a decade.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (JUNE 11) UPI - Foreign Minister Enrique Dreyfus and Central Bank President Francisco Mayorga, returning from a European fund-raising trip, said they now have enough foreign aid to restart Nicaragua's troubled economy.

"We will use these resources to give the Nicaraguan economy stabilization and a new period of prosperity," Mayorga said on returning from a conference of donor countries in Rome.

He said the Nicaraguan delegation received $184 million in financial aid from various Western countries - $116 million of it in immediate aid and another $68 million that will be available in 1991.

Combined with the $300 million aid package the United States approved and another $200 million in U.S. aid that is expected for the 1990-91 fiscal year, the total is still short of the $900 million Mayorga said is needed "to restabilize the economy."

Nonetheless, he said, pledges from the donors in Rome were "sufficient, combined with our own forces, to begin the reconstruction plan of our country."

Mayorga pointed out that some countries, like Japan, have pledged assistance but have not yet decided on an amount. He said the most financial assistance came from an unlikely source - Venezuela, which is facing its own extreme financial problems.

The Venezuelan aid, Mayorga said, came in the form of a gift of 20 percent of the oil that Nicaragua has agreed to purchase from Venezuela beginning this month. He estimated the value of the donated oil at $20 million. The two European countries that pledged the most money were Finland, with $16 million, and Sweden, with $15 million, according to Mayorga.

Dreyfus, at a morning news conference at Sandino International Airport, said that the financial aid will help Nicaragua in the short term but that "the future of Nicaragua depends on us."

Also Monday, the newspaper Barricada reported the Sandinista front would begin Saturday a year-long "internal process of profound democratization" to reshape the goals and structures of the party. Barricada said the goal of the revisions would also be to "preserve the unity of the Sandinista Front."

The Sandinistas ruled Nicaragua for more than a decade before Ortega's surprise defeat to opposition candidate Violeta Chamorro in Feb. 25 elections. The Sandinistas still wield considerable power in Nicaragua, particularly in the army and among the blue-collar work force, and they have vowed to return to governmental power and continue the revolution they started in 1979.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - Most teachers interviewed in a Gallup poll released Monday think the quality of education in public schools needs substantial improvement and teachers could make a difference if given the chance.

Pollsters interviewed 230 semifinalists in a ''Thanks to Teachers'' program honoring outstanding public school teachers.

Of the 230 teachers, 63 percent said the public school system is essentially sound but the quality of education needs substantial improvement. Another 19 percent said the system is not sound and fundamental change is needed before the quality can be improved.

Along those lines, 53 percent said schools do an ''only fair'' job teaching complex reasoning and decision-making skills, while 26 percent rated it good; 19 percent, poor; and just 2 percent, excellent.

The poll found a better perception of teaching basic skills - 67 percent rating it good, 15 percent only fair, 12 percent excellent and 6 percent poor.

''These teachers are saying the school system needs a substantial overhaul a change, a restructuring,'' said Donna Rhodes, executive director of the National Foundation for the Improvement of Education, a co-sponsor of the poll.

But while Rhodes acknowledged the ''disappointing'' results, she said the teachers feel optimistic they can make changes if given the chance. Yet chances are few, she noted, because of difficulties finding a substitute to teach while the teacher attends task forces and other meetings.

Sixty-three percent of those polled said they feel they could influence change in the educational system a great deal, while 35 percent felt they could influence change a fair amount.

And teachers, by an overwhelming 96 percent, said they would like to see teachers' roles expanded to include designing curriculum and scheduling. And they said they want more say in allocation of school funds (86 percent), selecting and hiring a principal (69 percent) and teacher and administrative salaries (78 percent).

And, reflecting a growing trend, most teachers believed more student testing is not a critical factor in meeting national educational goals. Fifty-eight percent said they thought more testing is not necessary, while 38 percent see it as helpful but not essential.

The poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 6 percentage points.

HOUSTON (JUNE 11) UPI - If there should be a major oil spill from the burning oil tanker Mega Borg, it would come during the peak nesting season for thousands of gulls and terns that live along the fragile Texas coast.

Officials are keeping a watchful eye for the first signs of environmental damage.

''We still haven't received any reports that we've seen anything dead,'' Coast Guard Cmdr. Frank Whipple said.

The timing of the oil slick is of primary concern to bird experts, said Ted Eubanks Jr., president of the Texas Ornithological Society and immediate past president of the Houston Chapter of the Audubon Society.

''The difficulty right now, and the danger, is that this is the peak for the nesting season for the colonial water birds,'' Eubanks said.

''Gulls and terns that breed along the Texas coast have young right now. If the oil enters the bay system, the effect on the colonies would be tremendous.''

Birds nesting on the spoil islands in the bays are at the most risk, he said, because their young are not yet old enough to fly. Although many of the birds on the coast now are residential, a few migrants are present, he said. Many birds fledged on the Texas coast migrate to Central and South America, he said.

Should the tanker sink and begin seeping oil over a extended period of time, the number of birds that could be affected would multiply dramatically, he said. By July, the Texas coast will be teeming with wintering birds from the Southern Hemisphere.

''Bolivar Flats is a major wintering site and it's totally exposed,'' Eubanks said.

The area is host to a colony of 120 piping plovers, an endangered species. In addition, he said, the bay system has colonies of royal and sandwich terns.

''We can have 25,000 in a single colony,'' he said. ''Strangely enough, it's the birds that stay in Prince William Sound that are returning.''

Prince William Sound was the site of the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill, which devastated wildlife along the Alaskan coastline.

Although the oil slick is still more than 50 miles off shore, environmentalists and state officials say they are ready should the spill hit Texas beaches.

Bill Stranksy, wetlands protection chairman of the Sierra Club's Houston Group, said environmental groups could mobilize between 200 and 400 volunteers to rescue birds and other wildlife.

''We're just watching it on the news right now. There's not a lot we can do, but we would have a lot of help from volunteers,'' he said.

Eubanks agreed that preparedness was not so much a question of having enough volunteers, but rather one of how well equipped those volunteers will be with materials such as de-oiling chemicals, tubs and pots.

Eubanks said that the Audubon Society has been working with the Wildlife Rehabilitation Coalition on contigency plans for oil spills.

''It's important to note, though, that we've never dealt with one of this magnitude,'' he said.

Stransky predicted that Texas environmentalists would probably contact the California Sierra Club for advice, since they have had more experience with oil spill rescues.

In addition to danger from being coated by oil, birds could be harmed by ingesting fish contaminated by the spill.

David Sager of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin said that the light crude oil carried by the Mega Borg is no more difficult to clean up than other types of crude oil, but that it does have a more toxic effect on birds and wildlife.

''We're more concerned with direct toxic effects with fish and shell fish '' he said. ''And we always have concern for the sea turtles.''

Several different species might be harmed by ingesting the oil and inhaling its vapors, but Sager expressed most concern for the endangered Kemp's Ridley sea turtle.

Sager said his department is monitoring the spill and will work with other state and federal agencies should the situation worsen.

''The ship is anchored far enough off shore to give adequate response time '' he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - George Bush, one of the most vigorous presidents in American history, as well as one of the oldest, turns 66 Tuesday.

And like Barbara Bush, who turned 65 on Friday, he planned no celebrations. Instead, the fit and trim commander in chief, one of just 13 senior citizens ever to hold the job, intended to face a routinely long day.

Bush, who is normally in the Oval Office shortly after dawn, was to spend his birthday meeting with congressional leaders and Amata Kabua, president of the Marshall Islands. He was also to hold staff meetings and attend a Republican dinner.

''George Bush is indefatigable,'' marvels U.S. Chief of Protocol Joseph Reed, who grew up with Bush in Greenwich, Conn. ''He has always been this way. In school, he was always the first one out for recess, ready to play ball.''

At 11:40 a.m. on June 3, just 10 minutes after he said ''goodbye and good luck'' to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev at the close of their four-day summit, Bush was again playing ball, this time on the White House tennis court.

''He's an A-player,'' said Reed. ''Highly competitive.''

At 64, Bush was the fourth-oldest person ever inaugurated as president. The three older were: Ronald Reagan, 69, William Henry Harrison, 68, and James Buchanan, 65.

Overall, just seven of the nation's 40 previous president were eventually older than Bush. They were: James Monroe, who left office a month before his 67th birthday; Andrew Jackson, who completed his term at 69; Harrison, 68; Buchanan, 69; Truman, 68, Eisenhower, 70, and Reagan, 77.

Despite his years, Bush generally is not considered an old leader.

Maybe it is because the athletic president looks and acts so much younger. Or maybe it is because he succeeded the oldest president, Reagan. Or perhaps it is because of the changing times.

At the turn of the century, the life expectancy of someone born in the United States was less than 50. Today, it is more than 70.

President and Barbara Bush are among an estimated 31 million Americans over age 65. And Bush is also among the 25 percent who are still working.

Many many factors can affect the aging process, like a person's overall health, diet, exercise habits and whether he or she smokes or drinks heavily.

Bush, a tennis player, golfer, and jogger, gets plenty of exercise and doesn't smoke. He does enjoy an occasional volka martini, though, and prefers pork rinds and some other snack foods to vegetables, particularly broccoli.

''George Bush's lifestyle seems to agree with George Bush,'' said Susan Denman, director of the geriatrics facility at Francis Scott Key Medical Center in Baltimore.

To White House staffers, the 41st president seems tireless.

''He's in (the Oval Office) every morning at 7 a.m. and doesn't leave before 6 at night. And he takes a briefcase full of papers home with him '' said White House deputy press secretary Alixe Glen.

''When he makes a request of you, you feel like, wow, if he can do so much you better be able to handle it,'' Glen said. ''He puts everyone to shame - people half his age.''

Up until recently, Bush, a former Yale first baseman, jogged regularly. But a nagging knee problem prompted an order from his doctors to cut down.

Regardless, Dr. Burton Lee, his personal physician, proclaims Bush to be in ''excellent health'' and says the president's tall and lean body appears to be at least a decade younger than its years.

Another possible factor in the aging process is stress, and Bush appears to handle it nicely.

During the U.S. invasion of Panama, he went on a long Christmas vacation in Texas and Alabama where he golfed, hunted quail and went bass fishing.

Prior to the superpower summit, he spent the Memorial Day weekend in Kennebunkport, Maine, where he went golfing daily between fishing, tennis and rides in his speedboat.

Bush, who shoots golf in the 80s and can drive a ball better than 250 yards, says sports clears his mind and recharges his batteries.

''George Bush is an ageless ball of energy,'' said Ken Raynor, the golf pro at the Kennebunkport's Cape Arundel Golf Club, and Bush's frequent golfing partner. ''It's part of his personality. It's him.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 11) UPI - Joseph Fama, the alleged triggerman in the racial slaying of a black teenager by a white mob in Brooklyn, was sentenced Monday to the maximum possible sentence of 32 years, eight months, to life in prison.

The sentence was greeted by cheers and applause from the family and supporters of the slain teenager, Yusuf Hawkins. A young cousin of Fama's cursed them with obscenities and lunged toward them before she was restrained by court officers. Fama's mother, Josephine, tears streaming down her face and cursing in Italian, was escorted from the courtroom.

Fama, 19, was convicted May 17 of second-degree murder in the fatal shooting of the 16-year-old Hawkins last Aug. 23 in the mostly white Bensonhurst neighborhood.

A normally outspoken State Supreme Court Justice Thaddeus Owens refrained from comments characterizing Fama's convictions in the controversial case as he read the sentence: 25 years to life for second-degree manslaughter, and seven years and eight months for riot, unlawful imprisonment, menacing and discrimination.

Earlier Monday, Keith Mondello, the accused ringleader in the mob attack on Hawkins, was sentenced to a maximum term of five and a third to 16 years in prison.

The slaying of Hawkins sparked months of protest marches and vigils and inflamed racial tensions in America's largest city. Prosecutor Edward Boyar said the Fama sentence sent a signal to the city. "The sentence shows racial crimes will not be tolerated," Boyar said. "Let's hope that this is the last of these types of cases."

Fama's attorney, David DePetris, said he planned an appeal. "I wasn't surprised at all by the consecutive sentences that the judge meted out," he said. "I told the family to expect it."

Outside the courthouse, Yusuf's mother, Diane Hawkins, and stepfather, Moses Stewart, talked to reporters. "It's a small joy for myself, but a great victory for black people across the state, like the people who stayed out here," Stewart said, gesturing to the crowds in Columbus Park in front of the courthouse. Diane Hawkins added, "It won't bring my son back, but I'm glad that Joey Fama is going to serve his time in jail. The pain will never leave me."

Mondello and Fama were the first of eight young men to be tried in the killing of Hawkins, who had ventured into the predominantly white Bensonhurst neighborhood of Brooklyn to look at a used car.

The gang of baseball bat-wielding white youths attacked the four, allegedly because they apparently thought they were among a group of blacks and Hispanics invited to a party in the neighborhood.

Mondello, 19, was cleared May 18 of murder and manslaughter charges, but convicted of riot, unlawful imprisonment, menacing, discrimination, and possession of a weapon. As he sentenced him, Owens said, "Mr. Mondello was the catalyst. He started all this. Without Mr. Mondello, there would not have been a death of anyone."

Mondello stood before the judge, betraying no emotion. His attorney, Stephen Murphy, pleaded with the judge to make the sentences concurrent, which could have resulted in a sentence of one and one-third to five years. He told Owens that consecutive sentences "would be tantamount to overturning a jury verdict" acquitting Mondello of murder.

But Owens was unmoved. He told the courtroom that if Mondello felt menaced about rumors of a group of blacks and Hispanics coming into the neighborhood, "all Mr. Mondello had to do was go home and call the police."

As he was led away in handcuffs, Mondello looked over his shoulder at his father, Michael, and swallowed hard. Six other Bensonhurst youths were scheduled to stand trial in the case.

Jury selection began Monday for the trial of John Vento, 22, a good friend of Mondello's who was accused of recruiting the mob of bat-wielding white youths on the night Hawkins was shot. Vento initially agreed to be a government witness, and then changed his mind and was indicted.

On Monday, his attorney, Gerald DiChiara, asked Owens to postpone the trial, arguing that starting so soon after Mondello's and Fama's trials "is unfair and not in the interest of justice." Owens denied the motion, ordering the trial to begin next Monday, if jury selection is completed.

The judge also set trial dates for the other five youths. Charles Stressler, 22, was given a Sept. 17 court date. Joseph Serrano, 20, accused of passing the gun to Fama; Pasquale Raucci, 20, and James Patino, 24, were scheduled to go on trial Nov. 5. Trial for Steven Curreri, 19, was set for Jan. 3, 1991.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Backers of a proposed constitutional amendment barring flag-burning got a boost today when the Supreme Court struck down an anti-flag burning law that was supposed to eliminate the need for an amendment.

The court ruled 5-4 that the statute enacted by Congress last year is NOT consistent with the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech. Justice William Brennan said the government canNOT bar expression of an idea- in his words- ''simply because society finds the idea itself offensive.''

The law was an attempt to counter last year's Supreme Court ruling allowing flag burning as a form of protest. The Flag Protection Act of 1989 was supposed to eliminate the need for a constitutional amendment.

But backers of an amendment, notably President Bush, say today's ruling only underscores the need for such action. Bush says he will keep pushing for the amendment that he says is ''in the best interest of this country.''

In other action, the Supreme Court gave police broader powers by ruling that an anonymous tip can give them justifiable cause to stop a car.

The court also ruled that the federal government has the power to order state National Guard units to active duty in foreign countries.

The alleged triggerman in last year's racial killing of a black teen-ager in Brooklyn was sentenced today to a maximum of 32 years, eight months- to life in prison.

The sentencing of Joseph Fama was greeted by cheers and applause from the family and friends of the slain teen-ager, Yusuf Hawkins. Fama's mother, Josephine, began crying and was escorted from the room in New York State Supreme Court.

Fama was convicted May 17th of second-degree murder in the fatal shooting of Hawkins on August 23rd in the mostly-white Bensonhurst neighborhood.

Earlier today, Keith Mondello, the accused ringleader in the white mob attack on Hawkins, was sentenced to a maximum term of five and one-third to 16 years in prison.

Mondello was cleared on May 18th of murder charges in the killing, but he was convicted of riot, UNlawful imprisonment, discrimination and other charges.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - Many beauty products, such as anti-aging creams, are classified as cosmetics because of their marketing claims and are escaping the more stringent regulation of similar products that are considered drugs, a congressional report said Monday.

The Congressional Research Service report said the line is blurring between over-the-counter beauty products - an $18 billion industry regulated on the basis of advertising claims - and drugs, which are regulated under the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act and require pre-market safety testing and clearance by the Food and Drug Administration.

''The cosmetic-drug classification controversy has led marketers to rely on their own interpretations of cosmetic labeling standards and has produced a case-by-case examination of many articles in the stream of commerce,'' the report said.

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., said the report presents ''further proof'' of the need to update the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

''This major health and safety statute is more than 50 years old and was written when 'cosmeceuticals' and other state-of-the-art health products didn't even exist,'' he said. ''Products that purport to alter the body's cell structure are being regulated by Madison Avenue and that is not in the public interest.''

The key element in determining a product's classification is its ''intended use.'' A cosmetic is intended to beautify, cleanse, promote attractiveness or alter one's appearance, while a drug is intended to cure mitigate, treat or prevent disease or affect the structure or function of the body.

The report said the ''cosmeceuticals'' that are falling between the cracks of the two types of products include anti-wrinkle creams, sunscreens, anti-aging creams, dandruff shampoos, soaps with disease prevention claims antiperspirants, deodorants, moisturizers, astringents and skin firmers.

For example, a skin lotion that claims to physiologically remove wrinkles would be considered a drug under current law, while an identical lotion that just claims to ''beautify'' the skin would be considered a cosmetic and free from FDA safety and accountability regulation.

Likewise, an antiperspirant claiming to halt perspiration - a bodily function - would fall under FDA scrutiny, while a deodorant with the same ingredients claiming to mask perspiration odor would escape the tough regulation.

''Proper and consistent classification of these articles is desirable and literally determines the extent of their regulation,'' the report said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Monday that 23 foreign countries now have confirmed or suspected chemical warfare programs and that Iraq is producing missiles capable of reaching Israel.

''Ten years from now, in the year 2000, the number of developing countries producing their own ballistic missiles is expected to be up to 15,'' Cheney said in a speech to the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee.

''Included among the 15 are such countries as Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria and North Korea,'' Cheney said, noting that such missiles can carry a variety of warheads, including chemical, biological or nuclear.

''As for chemical and biological weapons, 23 foreign countries have confirmed or suspected chemical warfare programs, and 10 have, or may have biological warfare programs,'' Cheney said. ''Once again, that would include Iran, Iraq, Syria, Libya and North Korea.''

Israel also has a missile program and is suspected of having a chemical weapons program.

Pentagon officials declined to list all 23 countries, saying the information from the Defense Intelligence Agency was classified. However, 23 would appear to be an increase over previous public estimates.

In congressional testimony in February 1989, CIA Director William Webster said that ''as many as 20 countries may be developing chemical weapons,'' and Director of Naval Intelligence Thomas Brooks listed these 13 ''Third World'' nations as developing or having chemical warfare progams:

Iraq, Iran, China, North Korea, Taiwan, Burma, India, Pakistan, Syria, Israel, Egypt, Ethiopia and Libya.

The United States and Soviet Union agreed last week to begin destruction of chemical weapons stockpiles. Britain also has chemical weapons and France is suspected of holding some, as are some other nations.

Cheney noted that Iraq recently televised a test of a first-stage booster rocket that appeared to be made up of five short-range missiles.

''Together, the rockets could give the booster a range of about 1,000 kilometers (600 miles),'' Cheney said.

''Baghdad television has claimed that Iraq has developed two missiles with ranges of 2,000 kilometers (1,200 miles). Although we do not believe that claim, it is a fact that Baghdad is now producing missiles that can reach Israel,'' Cheney said.

''One of the reasons I am such a staunch supporter of the Strategic Defense Initiative (the Star Wars program) is that SDI will be able for the first time to give protection against ballistic missiles,'' Cheney said.

The envisioned high-tech anti-missile system offers ''the best hope of being able to defend the United States and our friends and allies against the proliferating Third World ballistic missile threat,'' he added.

Answering questions after his speech, Cheney defended planned U.S. arms sales to Saudi Arabia, saying the Saudis ''have legitimate security interests, given their location and given the fact that some of the nations in the region that have from time to time constituted a threat to Israel may also wish Saudi Arabia problems in the months and years ahead.''

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

(JUNE 11) UPI - Yitzhak Shamir, a leader seen by many as an obstacle to peace in the Middle East, heads a narrow Likud Party-led, hard-line coalition government that he says is dedicated to peace with the Arab world.

''This government, as all the former governments of Israel, wants peace,'' the 74-year-old former Jewish underground leader told supporters before unveiling the fourth government he will head and one of the most right-wing Israeli coalitions ever. ''The only way to get this peace is to sit down around the negotiating table.''

But it was Shamir's refusal to approve a U.S. plan for Israeli-Palestinian talks that led to the March 13 collapse of a ''national unity'' coalition with the Labor Party. A vote of no confidence two days later brought down the government.

Shamir unwaveringly stresses Israel's historical ties and strategic reasons for retaining the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. He opposes an independent state for the 1.7 million Palestinians in the territories or giving up any territory. Instead, his 1989 peace initiative offers a plan of limited autonomy for Palestinians.

Supporters admire the 5-foot, bushy-browed Shamir for his unswerving stand on the territories. They trust that he will not bend in peace talks with his Arab neighbors. Critics charge Shamir has obstructed the peace process while appearing to support it.

In any case, Shamir is likely to have difficulty advancing the peace process because of the right-wing parties within the new coalition that favor annexing the territories and aggressively expanding Jewish settlement.

But the peace process is not at the top of Shamir's agenda for the new government. Taking priority is settling a wave of Soviet Jewish immigrants.

''The main effort of the government will be given to the most important issue in our lives today: the mass immigration flowing to the states and its absorption,'' Shamir told his coalition partners at the Friday signing of the government guidelines.

Shamir, who came to Palestine in 1935, sees the Arab world's opposition to the settling of Soviet Jews in the occupied territories as a sign of its continuing hostility.

Despite the show of Likud unity in forming the new government, Shamir also must contend with ambitious younger members of the party, such as Ariel Sharon, who are eager to succeed him.

Born Yitzhak Yazernitsky in Ruzinoy, Poland, on Oct. 15, 1915, Shamir is a former underground leader, Mossad spy master, foreign minister and admirer of Mao Tse-Tung. He attended Hebrew high schools and then Warsaw University, studying law.

Like his Polish-born mentor, Menachem Begin, whom he succeeded as prime minister in 1983, Shamir led an underground band of terrorists fighting for Israeli independence from Britain.

After many years in Israel's Mossad intelligence network, he entered politics late in life. He joined the Herut Party in 1970 and quickly rose in the hierarchy of the right-wing camp. In 1973, he was elected to Israel's Parliament, the Knesset, and in 1980 he obtained the foreign minister's office under Prime Minister Begin.

As foreign minister, Shamir advocated quiet diplomacy and initiated contacts with African nations that had cut ties with Israel after the 1973 Yom Kippur War. He gained the prime minister's office in 1983 when Begin resigned after the death of his wife and under political pressure from the Lebanon war.

In 1984, Shamir's right-wing Likud joined the left-center Labor Party of Shimon Peres to form a ''national unity'' government after neither party could create its own ruling coalition.

The pair rotated the offices of prime minister and foreign minister, with Shamir governing as prime minister for the last two years.

In December 1988, the Knesset approved a second national unity government led by Shamir after inconclusive national elections.

In May 1989, Shamir unveiled a peace initiative calling for elections in the occupied territories so that Palestinians could select representatives to negotiate with Israel on limited autonomy.

Based on that initiative, U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in October presented a five-point plan aimed at achieving Palestinian-Israeli talks. Shamir's inability to move the peace process forward led to the dissolution of the second national unity government in March.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - The Office of Thrift Supervision said Monday it has issued a temporary cease and desist order against two former executives of the failed United Savings Bank, of Paterson, N.J. The agency said the order was issued June 5 against Donald Moskowitz, United's former president, and Ronald Rudd, the thrift's former controller.

The order prohibits the executives from withdrawing funds from the thrift or from its successor, United Savings Bank FSB, which was chartered in May after the government placed United Savings into receivership.

The OTS said it entered into a consent agreement on April 27 with United's board of directors that resulted in the dismissal of Moskowitz and Rudd.

(JUNE 11) UPI - East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere today strolled through the halls of the White House, where NO other East German leader has gone in 40 years of Cold War.

President Bush called the historic visit ''just one more step that demonstrated the magnificent changes'' in the past year.

Bush gave de Maiziere a Rose Garden greeting. Conversation during a working lunch focused on German unification.

Specifically, the two discussed a united Germany's future military status and how to persuade the Soviet Union to drop its opposition to German membership in NATO.

After the meeting, White House news secretary Marlin Fitzwater says de Maiziere responded positively to U-S proposals to ease security concerns about a German-NATO alliance.

The session comes only weeks before East and West Germany are set to enter into economic, monetary and social union.

So while de Maiziere is the first East German leader in four decades to visit the White House, he may also be the last.

President Bush and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari today agreed to open preliminary talks on a free-trade agreement that eventually could lead to creation of a North American Common Market.

White House officials say formal negotiations could begin after the completion of multilateral trade talks in December.

Bush and Salinas issued a joint statement today calling free trade ''a powerful engine for economic development.''

The statement also said both leaders share a commitment to forge a U-S-Mexican partnership.

For now, talks will NOT include the hot issue of cross-border movement of Mexican workers.

That issue has been of prime concern to American labor leaders who are worried about a flood of migrant workers streaming across the border in search of American jobs.

(JUNE 11) UPI - Tens of thousands of opposition supporters poured into the streets of Bulgaria's capital today to protest an apparent election victory by the ruling communists.

The demonstrators besieged the sprawling Palace of Culture complex where returns from yesterday's polls are being processed.

Official results are NOT due out until tomorrow at the earliest.

But independent vote counts indicate a decisive victory by the communists... who have re-named the party to distance themselves from 45 years of monopolistic rule.

Protesters say the results are fraudulent and are calling for new elections.

But if projections pan out, Bulgaria could become the only Eastern European country to return communists to power.

In another hemisphere, Peruvian leaders are awaiting word from president-elect Alberto Fujimori on what policies he plans to pursue.

The 51-year-old son of Japanese immigrants rose from obscurity just a few months ago to win an upset victory in yesterday's elections.

His new government will inherit economic headaches, including an inflation rate that soared to nearly three-thousand percent in 1989.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 11) UPI - President Bush asked Congress Monday for $300 million in special assistance for Eastern Europe to help the former communist countries make the shift to free-market economies.

Of the funds, $230 million would be used for bilateral assistance and $70 million would be made available for the U.S. subscription to paid-in capital for the European Bank for Reconstruction and Redevelopment.

The legislation also provides technical languaage to provide a program limitation for the Inter-American Development Bank.

It also specifies language that would enable the Defense Department to pay National Guard and Reserve military personnel for activities in support of law enforcement agencies in anti drug work.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (JUNE 11) UPI - The ruling Communist Party of the Yugoslav republic of Serbia proposed Monday merging with an allied socialist organization in a cosmetic change of name and image in an apparent bid to retain power in as-yet unscheduled multi-party elections.

Leaders of Serbian opposition parties said they will hold a protest rally in Belgrade Wednesday to press the Communists to announce a date for elections as soon as possible.

The opposition groups object to plans by the Communist Party of Serbia, the largest of Yugoslavia's six republics, to ratify a new constitution before the election is held. The groups say the constitution, which would outline provisions for multi-party elections, should be left to a new government.

Multi-party elections are banned under the present constitution, which has secured Communist rule of the republic since 1945. The Communists agreed to hold a multi-party vote under pressure from pro-democracy forces in the country and to meet a requirement for closer economic cooperation with Western Europe.

''We would be the happiest if Serbia could enter the multi-party system with carnations just like in Czechoslovakia. Nobody among us in the opposition wants Romania,'' said Vuk Draskovic of the Serbian Movement of Renewal, referring to last year's bloody overthrow of the Communist regime of Nicolae Ceausescu.
